Therefore, Mr. Speaker, in the midst of what appears to be plenty, we have millions of people—including many, many veterans who fought for better—living in shacks and slums which are a disgrace to the American way of life. These human beings, Mr. Speaker, are living in places—no one could call them houses or homes—in which it would be unlawful in most States to keep farm animals. Of course, the reason for the enactment of State laws for the protection of farm animals is clear. Kept in filthy surroundings, the animals which give us meat and milk would contaminate and destroy us.

But what about human beings? Are we as much concerned about the way the slums contaminate our cities? I say to you—if we do not destroy our slums, they will destroy us. Oh, I know some of you are thinking that if we would only pass sanitary housing laws in our States and cities similar to those we have for animals, that the problem would be met. There is a very important difference, however. Every bottle of milk, every pound of meat we buy, has included in the price an amount sufficient to keep the animals under sanitary conditions. The cost of cleanliness for farm animals is borne by all the people.

We do now, in many cities, have laws to protect housing. There is only one trouble. They cannot be enforced to any great extent. If they were, the cost of housing to the people who live in the slums would be so great that it would rob them of necessary food, clothing, and medical care. I know that some of you are probably thinking of the much publicized Baltimore plan—a plan which has been misrepresented by the realestate lobby as being the solution to the slum problem. Listen to this editorial from the Baltimore Sun:

Baltimore's housing-law-enforcement drive is an excellent one and deserves wide recognition. The city can blush with fitting pride at the publicity given its efforts by the home builders. But no one should assume that Baltimore is doing anything more than making a few dilapidated buildings a little more inhabitable. Housing-law enforcement is not slum clearance, and nothing will make it so.

The solicitor of the city of Pittsburgh testified before the Joint Senate-House Committee on Housing:

In the city of Pittsburgh during the last couple of years we had committee upon committee from the hill district come to us and say health conditions were so intolerable—the plumbing, the ordinary, decent facilities were such it was unsafe to live there. They have asked the city to force the landlords to keep these properties in condition so they can live there. The result of a 2-year effort in that direction—and I think it bears on the basic problem you are considering—all the landlords who have property in the slum area are just milking those properties of all they can get and are not putting any money into repairs. These properties are so old that rehabilitation is impossible, and none of these private industries, who have milked the property and put nothing back in it, have made any effort to solve the problem.

We have a problem of human beings who have nowhere to sleep. When a building gets into such condition that there is fear of killing the people in the building and killing the passersby in the street, we condemn the building and tear it down, but in any way where our inspectors find they can still stay another month, another 2 months, we cannot be so soulless as to forget the needs of our people and put them out on the street, just to penalize the landlord. We would be glad to padlock the houses and penalize the landlord, but we cannot penalize our citizens.

We can enforce our sanitary laws for farm animals, because we, all the people—not the animals—pay for their decent surroundings. As I have already pointed out, the people living in the slums cannot afford to keep themselves in absolute minimum food, clothing, and medical care—let alone pay any more for housing.

And yet, Mr. Speaker, as proven to us over and over again by city officials, health and law enforcement officers, judges, welfare workers, and the clergy, the danger to our society of contamination from the slums is even greater than that from tubercular cattle.

The slum is the breeding place of physical and social disaster. How can children be brought up in the slums to their full potentialities as American citizens?

The children first encounter the cops when they are playing in the streets and get chased, or when they are having a ball game in a narrow alley and a home run crashes through a window. To them, the law means torment and oppression—not justice and protection.

The children never have a chance of growing up in their homes. Their lives are ones of constant escape from the mean surroundings. Where do they turn? The dreary beer joints, the dingy poolrooms and dance halls. Yes; and the houses of prostitution. These are their places of escape.

I could go on and on, with volumes of unquestioned testimony, as to the direct relationship of the slums to health, to juvenile delinquency, to infant mortality, to crime, to mental disorders—testimony given in city after city and by county officers in rural areas. But why must I do this? There cannot be a single Member of this body who does not know these plain facts. The only question, as I see it, is whether we will do something—or nothing.

What we must do is clear. We must rid the Nation of its slums and see that ultimately every American family lives in a dwelling which he can, in decency and dignity, call a home. I freely admit that we cannot do this all at once. It will take years to accomplish. The 500,000 public-housing units provided in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill together with what we have already accomplished, is a good start.

I do not see how in common decency and humanity we can pass any bill without the slum-clearance and public-housing provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Seven congressional committees over the Seventy-eighth, the Seventy-ninth, and Eightieth Congresses have come to the same conclusion. Twice the Senate has enacted slumclearance and public-housing legislation. Mr. Speaker, we are a Congress dedicated to the welfare of all the people-and we must act in the interest of all the people. With all the earnestness I have, from the bottom of my heart I ask this body to set us on the road toward a good America—an America with homes fit for Americans.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the housing situation is one of our most vexing problems, I regret that the housing legislation we are now considering is woefully inadequate as a means in remedying present conditions.

For the past several years, family life in America has been shadowed by the lack of suitable living quarters for millions of our citizens. This fact has been continually called to our attention by the newspapers of the Nation, even though it has been common knowledge to all of us.

I have made frequent inquiries during the Eightieth Congress in an effort to obtain information as to when we would have the opportunity to consider housing legislation. Each time I made such an inquiry I was assured we would get a housing bill that would satisfy the needs of the American people.

The Senate considered and passed its version of housing legislation. Yet, the dying days of the Eightieth Congress were upon us and still the House had no opportunity to consider this pressing problem of the shortage of housing facilities.

These delaying tactics, although they may have been sincere, aroused many of us to the realization that delay meant disaster; and to avoid the spectacle of the Eightieth Congress failing to present a solution to the housing problem, I joined many other Members of the House in signing the discharge petition placed in circulation for the purpose of making certain that we would take action on the Nation's housing problem before adjournment.

Today we are being asked to consider a housing bill, which, while it contains some necessary provisions, is far from satisfactory. This bill does not go far enough in seeking a solution to the housing problem.

I am sure there are many of you who are as disappointed as I am in being denied the opportunity to discuss and amend the present bill. Instead of liberalizing its provisions, we have been given but one choice—either to vote for or against the bill. We have no other alternative, despite the fact that we know deep in our hearts that this bill will not accomplish the objectives of a real housing bill. It is simply a question of casting a negative vote and be accused of being against some of the necessary and desirable features in the bill, or voting for the bill and realizing that we are calling a job finished that is only half

Under the circumstances, like many of you. I have no choice but to vote for this bill; but in so doing, I assure you it is a vote cast with great reluctance. It was my fervent hope the past several months that we could perfect a real housing bill that would convey to the average American citizen that we meant business in our efforts to cope with the housing situation.

While we try to point with pride to the activity in the building industry and quote figures on the number of housing units being made ready for occupancy, families continue to live doubled up simply because the average citizen cannot afford to pay housing prices, since they are far beyond his means.

Thousands of veterans are camping out or living in trailers because they have not the income to permit them to raise their families in a typical American frame house.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat my assertion that I am voting for this bill with marked reluctance. It is said "a half loaf is better than none," but this is not true with respect to providing a solution to America's most critical problem-the housing situation.

It is too great a problem to attack with halfway measures, and I regret that we can be charged with short-sightedness in trying to solve the housing shortage in a half-hearted manner.

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I regret that under suspensions of the rules Members of the House are precluded from offering amendments to this phony housing bill. If we were operating in a democratic manner this afternoon I would offer an amendment to change the title of this monstrosity to read "The Pent Housing Act of 1948."

We have before us today a choice between two housing bills—H. R. 6959, and S. 866, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Normally, of course, we would have expected a Senate-passed bill to be reported out with such amendments as the committee felt desirable. However, on an analysis of the provisions of H. R. 6959 I can well understand why it was not deemed appropriate to report these provisions out as an amendment to S. 866. For it certainly would be a travesty to consider the provisions of H. R. 6959 as an amendment of the provisions of S. 866. In fact, it would be a travesty to consider it as a housing bill at all.

In analyzing the provisions of H. R. 6959, I think that the approach that would be most helpful and significant would be from the point of view of who would be helped by it. Or to put it more succinctly-who counts under its provisions.

Obviously, under H. R. 6959, it is not the farmer who counts. For the bill provides absolutely no aids whatsoever to meet the farm housing needs of our rural Not only are the modest population. provisions in S. 866 completely omitted but there is no attempt whatsoever to provide even the semblance of an alternative program.

Obviously, also, our low-income families do not count. As in the case of the farmer, H. R. 6959 makes this crystal clear not so much by the fact that the S. 866 provisions were omitted as by the fact that H. R. 6959 does not bother to include provisions of any nature whatsoever for the relief of our families and their children who through no fault of their own are now consigned to living in slums.

Obviously, also, under H. R. 6959 our moderate-income families do not count either. While the bill does condescend to include the yield insurance program. it does not contain, except in a drastically modified and aborted form-and even then only on a 9-month basisthe necessary programs to extend FHA mortgage insurance to meet the needs of families of moderate income-and this is true both in connection with home ownership and rental housing. wise, H. R. 6959 completely and cavalierly ignores the necessary long-range research programs contained in S. 866 which are effectively designed to help reduce construction costs and so help bring home ownership and rental housing costs within the reach of the pocketbook of our middle-income families.

It is further clear, Mr. Speaker, that H. R. 6959 is wedded to the premise that our local communities do not count. Certainly, no one would deny that one of the most serious threats to both the social and economic welfare of our communities today, large and small alike, is presented by the extensive slum conditions and blight that our communities have found themselves completely unable to cope with. Again, H. R. 6959, in distinct and disheartening contrast with S. 866, contains absolutely no provision to give our cities and towns the aids they need in this connection.

And if it is any solace to our farmers, and our low-income families, and our moderate-income families, and our communities, if they do not count under H. R. 6959, neither does the veteran. It is very interesting to note in this connection that the very first two titles of H. R. 6959, as does also its title VI, contain provisions purporting to give special preferences to veterans that are not contained in S. 866.

But what kind of help is it to the millions of our veterans who need housing aid to provide, as does title I of H. R. 6959, for an occupancy preference in connection with any additional dwelling accommodations that may happen to be provided by remodeling of dwellings with FHA title I loan insurance?

What kind of aid is it to our veterans to provide-as does title II of H. R. 6959for first preference to veterans in the disposition of permanent war housing when such preference has been in operation by administrative action since last August? What kind of aid is it to the veteran to authorize FHA to use its title VI program to insure mortgage loans on veterans' cooperative projects up to 95 percent of long-term value, when nonveterans can get a loan of 90 percent of necessary current costs?

Clearly these provisions in H. R. 6959 pay only lip service to the needs of our veterans. Yet, in return for these paltry aids, H. R. 6959 would deprive the lowincome veteran who, under S. 866 would have first preference to the low-rent housing provided by that bill, of all hope for decent housing. Likewise, H. R. 6959, in return for its paltry aids, would deprive the veteran, who would get preferential treatment under the farm-housing title of S. 866, to give up his hopes for obtaining decent housing.

Even so, Mr. Speaker, the real tip-off as to how definitely the veteran does not count under H. R. 6959 is not its paltry and shabby provisions supposedly in aid of the veteran. The fact is that the necessary effect of the provisions of H. R. 6959 would be to deprive the veteran even of those aids he now has under existing law. I say this because H. R. 6959 while providing a secondary market program for FHA-insured loans, specifically refuses to provide such a program for GI first-mortgage home loans. this because, while H. R. 6959 authorizes an increase in interest rate on FHAinsured loans if required by the mortgage market, specifically refuses to authorize such an increase in connection with GI home loans.

Mr. Speaker, if a secondary market is necessary in connection with the FHA program where the Government insures 100 percent of principal, why is it not necessary in connection with GI home loans where the Government guarantees only 50 percent? If an increase is necessary in connection with the interest rate on FHA-insured mortgages, why is not an interest-rate increase equally necessary on GI home-loan mortgages? And let me ask this very pertinent question that surely did not escape the sponsors of H. R. 6959, What financing institutions will, if H. R. 6959 is enacted, care to make a GI loan when it has no secondary market protection and has to be made at a 4-percent-interest rate when they will be able under H. R. 6959 to make loans under the FHA program with secondary market protection and at an interest rate 25 percent above what it can get on the GI loan? There can be only one conclusion drawn from the provisions of H. R. 6959—that they represent a deliberate attempt to sabotage the GI home-loan program.

So then, Mr. Speaker, under H. R. 6959 the farmer does not count, the lowincome family does not count, the moderate-income family does not count, the local community does not count, and the veteran does not count. Who then does

First of all, there is the speculative builder, for H. R. 6959 would continue the FHA title VI program for another year under which the Government takes the risks and the builder takes the profit. I, too, believe that an extension of title VI is necessary, or perhaps I should say, a necessary evil. But it is one thing to provide for an extension to that title in combination with other programs which will restrict its inflationary effects and facilitate a transition from the program of emergency aids to a stabilized permanent program of housing as S. 866 does. It is quite another thing to provide for an extension of the title VI program on a basis where the primary beneficiaries are the speculative builders and the high-income families.

Who else counts? Pretty clearly also those in the high-income-tax brackets. The best indication of this is the program contained in H. R. 6959 providing for an especially high depreciation al-lowance on rental housing which plan would be beneficial only to those in the very high income brackets. Likewise, the 1-percent increase in interest rates provided in the bill as compared with the one-half of 1 percent increase authorized in S. 866 would not, I take it, be particularly distasteful to those who have the money to invest. And, of course, it would be the high-income families that would benefit because it would be for them that housing could continue to be Finally, of course, it is the lobbies who count under H. R. 6959-the lobbies who have so brazenly succeeded in stifling any decent housing legislation for 4 years now and who have had the audacity to make clear before the Banking and Currency Committee that they distrust the Congress because it may desire to onsider the public interest.

Mr. Speaker, we have a choice between a bill that is a housing bill, and a bill that is no housing bill at all. We have a choice between a bill that is designed to provide help to those who need the help and a bill which would help those who need help the least. Let us put an end to the mockery and enact S. 866.

Mr. BLATNIK. Mr. Speaker, the Taft-Eflender-Wagner housing bill is one of the most important legislative proposals introduced in the House during the entire life of the Eightieth Congress. It is important for two reasons. reason is found in the magnitude of the need in America for decent housing. The current housing shortage, the millions of substandard homes, and the slum conditions existing in most large cities, makes housing the No. 1 social problem in the United States. The Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill is also significant in that it presents a positive and constructive Federal program to correct the present acute housing shortage, and to meet America's long-run housing requirements.

I will use the few minutes at my disposal to discuss the general housing situation in the United States, and to present facts and figures to prove conclusively that Congress is obligated—in the interests of the general welfare-to approve the T-E-W housing bill. For the purpose of analysis, it is necessary to divide the housing problem into two categories: First, the immediate or emergency housing shortage; and, second, the long-run housing problem in the United States. I will begin by discussing the immediate critical housing shortage.

THREE MILLION NEW HOMES NEEDED IMMEDIATELY

All official reports indicate that America needs to build 3,000,000 new homes at once in order to place a roof over the heads of our people. Although World War II ended over 3 years ago, the housing shortage remains most criticalthere are just not enough homes available to provide shelter for all the families in the United States. According to a recent estimate of the Housing Expediter, there are nearly 3,000,000 American families who are unable to find homes of their own, and are therefore forced to live doubled up with relatives and friends. The situation becomes doubly tragic when you realize that about 40 percent of these homeless families belong to veterans of World War II.

This shortage exists in nearly every metropolitan area throughout the 48 States. It is especially acute in a number of cities in my district. In Duluth, for example, there are several thousand families without homes, and it has been estimated that 20 percent of all GI families are now living doubled up with other families. Hibbing needs 800 additional housing units in order to shelter its population-a required increase of 16 percent over its present housing facilities. In Virginia, Minn., where 1 family out of every 8 is living with relatives or friends, there is a need for 500 new homes.

This lack of adequate housing prevails all over the country, and at the present rate of private home construction, it will take about 4 years for the housing supply to catch up with demand. It is upon the basis of this evidence that I maintain that Congress should enact into law the T-E-W housing bill. This bill would stimulate the building industry and speed up home construction right now when our people need additional housing so desperately.

GENERAL HOUSING CONDITIONS ARE DEPLORABLE

The general housing situation in the United States may be characterized as being most deplorable. This conclusion is supported by the evidence presented in the various housing surveys, and is backed up by the weight of authority. According to the 1940 housing census, there are some 37,000,000 dwellings in the country. Of these 37,000,000 homes, some 7,000,000, 19 percent, need major repairs; 17,000,000, 46 percent, had no private baths; 8,000,000, 22 percent, had neither gas nor electricity; 11,000,000, 30 percent, had no refrigeration; and nearly four and one-half million had neither central heating nor stoves.

Although the condition of city homes throughout the country is somewhat above the national average, yet we find two-fifths of all nonfarm dwellings are definitely substandard-38.3 percent of them either need major repairs or lack running water and other sanitary facilities. On the other hand, housing conditions in rural areas are decidedly worse than in the cities. Less than 50 percent of the 6,500,000 farm dwellings in the United States have electric lights, and only 25 percent of them have running water. According to the former Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, about twothirds of all rural homes are substandard. and some 25 percent of them are beyond repair.

As a Member of Congress from Minnesota, I regret to report that the housing situation in Minnesota follows the national pattern. Only 75 percent of Minnesota's city homes have central heating, and less than 52 percent of them have refrigeration. Ten percent of these homes need major repairs at the present time, and about the same proportion lack running water. Rural housing in Minnesota, according to a University of Minnesota agricultural survey, follows the national rural housing parallel. Only 12 percent of the farm homes in my State have running water, less than 20 percent of them have central heating, less than 10 percent of them have refrigeration and 27 percent of farm homes need major repairs today.

A FEDERAL HOUSING PROGRAM IS NEEDED

Mr. Speaker, the conditions which I have described are real-they picture the deplorable state of American homes in which we, who are citizens of the richest Nation in the world, are forced to They also emphasize the crying need for the Federal Government to take concrete action to meet the housing needs of the American people. This need has been estimated by the national authority as at least 15,000,000 homes to be constructed during the next 10 years-12,600,000 homes to eliminate urban substandard housing, and to provide for our increasing population, and at least 2,500,-000 new homes to establish minimum housing standards for our farm population.

Of course, the real-estate lobby and other selfish interests will tell us that a Government housing program is neither necessary nor practical. They will argue that the housing field is not the proper sphere for Government activity, and that "if private enterprise is only left alone, then the private building industry will provide all the homes necessary." But these calamity howlers ignore past experiences and the lessons of history. They forget that the rate of private construction follows the general business trend, and that while construction increases during boom periods, it falls during depression years. They ignore the fact that the private construction industry has never been able to build more than 900,000 new homes during any 1 year, and that the 1910-40 average was less than 500,000 homes per year. Even during 1947 only about 800,000 new housing units were constructed by private enterprise-at this rate it will take about 4 years to alleviate the current housing shortage.

I am not condemning the private construction industry itself for the present housing situation. But I do maintain that private enterprise cannot provide decent housing for all Americans by its own efforts, and that it needs the assistance of the Federal Government in order to do the job. This is the underlying assumption of the T-E-W bill—to provide Government financial assistance to help the private building industry construct decent homes for all Americans.

T-E-W HOUSING BILL IS MUST LEGISLATION

I am convinced that the T-E-W housing bill offers the only practical and constructive solution to America's housing needs. To furnish our people the new housing units needed to correct the present housing shortage, the bill would, if enacted into law, result in the construction of several million homes within 2 years. By providing for the construction of 15,000,000 homes during the next 10 years, it offers a plan of meeting our long-run housing needs.

In brief, this is what the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill-(S. 866 as passed by the Senate-provides: First, the authorization of $2,000,000,000 for mortgage-insurance and FHA loans to finance rental housing and privateowned homes during the next year through long-term, low-interest loans; second, the authorization of Federal funds to construct 500,000 public lowrent housing units during the next 5 years; third, the authorization of $50,-000,000, in RFC loans to finance the manufacture of prefabricated homes; fourth, the authorization of $268,000,000 in loans and grants to improve substandard farm homes, with additional funds being made available for financing new farm homes and to eliminate rural slums; and, fifth, the authorization of Federal funds to finance city slumclearance programs.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the T-E-W housing bill, as passed by the other body, provides a broad and constructive program to meet the housing requirements for America. It will provide 15,000,000 new homes during the next 10 years. It will furnish low-rent public housing for those who cannot pay rents at inflated rates. It will eliminate farm slums by furnishing funds to raise rural housing standards and build several million new farm homes. It will go far to eliminate city slums through its slum-clearance program. In my opinion, this program which the bill sets forth is the only logical answer to the housing problem in the United States.

THE COST OF FAILURE

My economy-minded colleagues tell us that America cannot afford to spend a few billion dollars for additional American homes. I say that we cannot afford not to build enough homes to furnish decent and healthy homes for all our people. Few people realize the important role that housing plays in the physical and social well-being of the Nation, nor do they realize how much less juvenile delinquency, disease and crime there is in modern housing projects as compared to slum areas.

I will mention a few statistics to prove my point. For example, the pneumonia death rate in slum areas is three times as great as it is in normal residential areas, the infant mortality rate is six times as great, and the tuberculosis rate is ten times greater in the slums than in areas where decent housing prevails. I might also mention that the crime rate in slum areas is five times greater than in the better residential areas. Although city slum areas contribute but a small part of the cities' real-estate revenues, the cost of police protection, fire protection, health and other local government services, is much greater in slum areas than in other parts of the city.

In other words, bad housing and slum conditions mean that society pays a terrific price in terms of disease, crime, and other social costs. It means that our veterans cannot find homes for their families, and that our entire population must endure the inconveniences and threats to their health which substandard housing represents. I say that America must accept the goal of a minimum standard of housing for all its people, and that the Federal Government must take the lead in achieving this goal. The cost of failure to do this is too high, and we cannot afford to pay the social costs.

CONGRESS FAILS THE PEOPLE

When the other House finally passed S. 866 on April 22, all supporters of decent housing for America were overjoyed. We were further encouraged when the House Banking and Currency Committee reported favorably on a similar housing bill last Friday, June 11, after a 14 to 13 vote. These events seemed to indicate that at long last relief for the 40 million ill-housed Americans was in sight, and that there was a good chance that Congress would enact into law the kind of housing legislation that the people need and want.

But our hopes for decent housing were short-lived—we had not taken into account the reactionary, antisocial attitudes of the Republican leadership, and the influence of the real-estate lobby upon the policies of the majority party. For yesterday's developments make it clear that the GOP leadership is not interested in any kind of housing legislation, and is now resorting to every parliamentary trick and device to block action upon the T-E-W housing bill. This is the only possible interpretation of the high-handed action of the House Rules Committee in refusing to permit this important measure to come to the floor for debate. This explains why the committee now comes forward with this emasculated housing bill (H. R. 6959) as a substitute for genuine housing legislation.

In sponsoring this so-called housing bill H. R. 6959, my Republican colleagues, claim that it is a substitute for the T-E-W housing bill. An examination of its provisions, however, show that this claim is deceitful and that the bill is a fraud and a sham. All the major provisions of the T-E-W housing bill—the public housing, slum clearance, urban development, veterans' housing, and housing research features have been eliminated from this measure now under debate. This bill does nothing more than increase the authorization for FHA mortgages for the benefit of the real-estate interests and includes a few minor changes in existing law such as permitting the sale of war housing and modification of housing credit terms.

This bill is only acceptable to the selfish real-estate lobby-certainly the common people of America and the veterans who are now living in slums, shacks, trailers, or crowded into spare rooms and sleeping porches have no reason to rejoice. This bill cannot furnish our Nation with the homes we need and want. The Republican majority, in sponsoring this measure, is attempting to convince the people that the GOP is interested in housing legislation without doing anything constructive about the housing problem. In doing this, the Republicans are guilty of political fraud-they are breaking their pledges to the veterans, and they are betraying the welfare of the people in favor of selfish real-estate interests.

I refuse to become a part of this gigantic hoax—I will not support this measure that represents a sell-out of the common people whose housing needs are being neglected

I call upon the Members of the House to vote down this sham so-called housing bill, H. R. 6959, and demand that the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, as passed by the Banking and Currency Committee, be brought up for consideration and final vote.

Mr. TOLLEFSON: Mr. Speaker, the last section of H. R. 6959 removes for 1 year the duty on imports of plywood. I am strongly opposed to this provision because I feel that it will result in discrimination against the plywood industry. If the duties were removed it would make it impossible for the plywood industry of my State to compete with foreign plywood industries because of the great disparity in costs. Furthermore, the suspension of the duty is unnecessary and inadvisable in view of the domestic industry's increased and increasing production to meet domestic requirements. It is estimated that where heretofore the industry production was 29,000,000 feet per week it has currently been increased to 35,000,000 feet per week. When new plants now being constructed are completed it is estimated that the production will be 40,000,000 feet before the end of this year. This should relieve any existing shortages of plywood for housing purposes.

Under the suspension of rules I appreciate that the bill cannot now be amended. It is my hope that this section of the bill will, therefore, be removed in conference.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I shall vote for the housing bill now under considera-

As I have indicated for some time, and as the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] well knows because of my conversations with him, I favor the enactment of housing legislation embodying the principle incorporated in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. I can agree somewhat with the position of the gentleman from Michigan with respect to relying upon private industry to build the great majority of homes which are needed so badly. However, I would call to his attention, and I would like to emphasize that Federal aid to States and municipalities to construct decent living quarters for persons in the low-income groups and in slum areas is nothing new.

It appears that the bill before the House, which unquestionably has much merit, will be the only housing measure to come before the House. It does not look as if we will have an opportunity to vote on the provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, nor does it look as if there would come before the House the Rogers bill, the Veterans' Homestead Act, which was approved unanimously by the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs. This is regrettable. Both of these measures are worthy of consideration by the Congress.

Notwithstanding the fact that private industry is now building houses in unprecedented numbers, unless private builders are able to construct habitable living quarters which can be rented at reasonable rates, then the Congress must at the next session meet this issue and enact necessary legislation to provide such homes.

The veterans throughout the country living in temporary makeshift housing projects want decent homes in which to live—I know whereof I speak because in my district there are probably more veterans in these projects than in any other district in the United States. Unless homes are forthcoming, these veterans will look to the Congress at the next session for the immediate passage of adequate legislation which will provide sufficient housing.

MILLIONAIRE BONUS HOUSING BILL WITHOUT HOUSING

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, this bill should not be called a housing bill. It might better be called the millionaires' bonus housing bill, without any housing. It is a subsidy bill for the real-estate interests, with tax exemptions and bonuses that have no place in this bill. There is not a word in the bill that will even tend to clear a single slum area or build a single multiple dwelling for the housing of low-income groups.

The manner in which this bill is foisted upon this Congress is a travesty upon our American traditions.

A bill providing for public housing and slum clearance, both rural and urban, and for housing research, was reported out of the Banking and Currency Committee by a majority vote, and the committee chairman instructed to obtain a rule from the Rules Committee to bring the matter before the House for consideration and action. Instead of following the instructions of the Banking and Currency Committee, its chairman urged the Rules Committee to prevent consideration of the bill. When the Rules Committee by a vote of 6 to 2 acceded to his request he then conceived the idea of foisting this bill upon the Congress.

The bill was introduced on the 16th of June. At 8 o'clock that night some of the members of the committee were advised of an executive session to be held at 9 o'clock the following morning, and other members did not get notice until after 9 o'clock on June 17 that the committee was meeting in executive session to consider this bill. Although at least a half dozen members of the committee sought recognition for various purposes, including the offering of amendments to the bill, the chairman could hear and see no one except the member with whom he had arranged in advance to present a motion to vote the bill out. The motion was entertained and forced through without permitting anyone to say a single word about the bill. Not only was no discussion called for, but none was permitted. And now we are asked to pass this bill under a suspension of the rules of the House, permitting a total of 40 minutes of debate, 20 minutes of which are controlled by the chairman of the committee and without any right to offer a single amendment to the bill or a motion to recommit the bill. Those tactics alone warrant the defeat of a motion to suspend the rules and to pass the bill.

In my district, city, and State the public-housing and slum-clearance provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill are not political issues. They have the almost unanimous support of every person in every walk of life, regardless of their political leanings.

Borough President John Cashmore, Mayor William O'Dwyer and Governor Thomas E. Dewey, have all indicated their all-out support for those provisions. Every veteran, religious, and fraternal group in my State favors the enactment of such legislation. Yet a small handful of men in this Congress are preventing the Congress from considering and acting upon those measures, and are arrogating to themselves the powers of a dictator.

If there was merit in their opposition, and if they genuinely felt they were right, they would have no hesitancy in letting this Congress debate the issues and vote upon them. The entire Republican Party, unfortunately, must be compelled to bear the consequences of this ill-considered action on the part of its leadership in this House.

The American public is too smart to be fooled by the passage of a bill labeled a housing bill, that is not a housing bill, that is nothing more nor less than a rich man's subsidy bill and which denies the American public the relief to which it is entitled.

Mr. CARROLL. Mr. Speaker, I came to Congress with the purpose of assisting, in every way possible, in the passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. For 2 years, week after week and month after month, I have been meeting and conferring with other Members of this body, who also are interested in the passage of a proper housing bill. It therefore comes as a grave disappointment to me that we have only this type of a housing bill before us.

Many of us have had intimate knowledge of the powerful forces lobbying against the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill but having set ourselves to the task, we were able to overcome their influence in the Committee on Banking and Currency, where this legislation has been sleeping for the past 3 years.

Just a few days ago a majority of the Banking and Currency Committee-yes, all of the Democrats and three Republicans-reported a bill incorporating the provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill out of that committee. The forces blocking this legislation for 3 years were given a tremendous set-back. That fine housing bill then proceeded in the normal manner to the Rules Committee, where we had every reason to expect that in the normal course of events a rule would have been granted and the bill soon would have been brought forth on the floor for debate and vote. How foolish we were to expect that the opponents of this measure would cease their fight. Their activity increased, and great pressure was brought to bear upon the Rules Committee itself. As a matter of fact, the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, Mr. WOLCOTT, of Michigan, the chief opponent to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, led the fight in the Rules Committee against the majority report of his own committee.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the opponents were successful for I am reliably informed that by a vote of six to two, the Rules Committee refused to grant this splendid housing bill a rule, and back it went to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Another amazing part of this story is that the chairman of that committee, the same Mr. Wolcott, then brought forth his own bill and submitted it to the committee for consideration. This bill is the bill which has the approval of the powerful lobby of which I have just spoken. As Mr. Wolcott, the chairman, presented this watered-down housing bill to his committee, the Democratic members were prohibited from amending or objecting to the present bill in any manner whatsoever. The debate on this measure reveals that the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee refused to recognize any of the Democratic members during the entire session of that committee. Hence we have the bill before us in its present form.

But that is not all, Mr. Speaker. Does the present bill come to us through the Rules Committee? Does it come to us under a rule permitting the membership of this great body either to amend it on the floor of this House or as a last resort to move to reconsider this measure? The answer is clearly "no." answer is "no," Mr. Speaker, because the chairman of that committee and the Republican leadership who support this legislative maneuver do not want the people to know where they stand on the vital items which have been stricken out of this bill now under consideration. They do not want to go on record as showing where the Republican Party stands or each Republican Member of this House stands on the questions of rural housing, slum clearance, and public housing.

So, here we are again, Mr. Speaker, voting an important measure under a suspension of the rules which neither permits an amendment nor a motion to reconsider. In my opinion this is the rankest kind of political cowardice.

I can appreciate a difference of opinion on this important subject and I do not condemn those who may not agree with me, but I have an utter contempt for any individual who is unwilling to record his stand for the information of the people.

Mr. Speaker, I shall vote against this procedure in the hope that the leadership of this body will be compelled to bring forth the housing bill recommended by a majority of the Committee on Banking and Currency. Clearly, if this present bill is voted down, there is ample time for the Republican leadership and the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency to do one of two things. As I have indicated, they may again present to the Rules Committee the bill which was first reported out by a majority of the Committee on Banking and Currency or, and of equal importance, they may take the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill which was passed recently by the Senate and is now in the Committee on Banking and Currency. I repeat, there is ample time for either of these bills to be presented to this body before adjournment, should the pending measure be voted down.

Mr. Speaker, the people of this Nation want a housing bill. They are entitled to a housing program. If given an opportunity the Members of this body will join with the Senate of the United States in giving them a housing program. Only political and legislative chicanery will prevent the enactment of adequate housing legislation.

The present bill is a fraud and a subterfuge. It adds nothing to a program for housing legislation. Actually, the important provisions of this bill already have been passed by this body. These other housing bills now are resting in the Senate. The reason for that is that the Senate has incorporated most of their provisions in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, which was passed by the Senate with a substantial majority. It is that bill of which I have spoken which now rests in the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. Speaker, there has been entirely too much talk about socialism in connection with the housing bill. Everyone of any intelligence knows that Senator TAFT, whatever else he may be, is not a Socialist. Certainly Governor Dewey is not a Socialist. In fact, most of the outstanding leaders of this Nation are in favor of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Therefore, let us stop this childish talk about the danger of traveling along the road to socialism. Mr. Speaker, I should like to call to your attention that a proper housing program can lend strength to the moral fabric of this Nation. The lack of proper housing facilities not only has cost this Nation billions of dollars in the suppression of crime, juvenile delinquency, etc., but great moral problems have arisen from the increase in divorces which, too, has a bearing on the problem of juvenile delinquency.

And fundamentally, there is that problem of satisfying the needs of our people and overcoming the bitter resentment of veterans—two or three millions of them who have been looking for homes now for almost 3 years.

If this pending measure passes, those of us who have worked so hard and so long can only hope that the Republican leadership in the Senate of the United States may strike from this bill all below the enacting clause and include the original provisions of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, eventually reporting the same to this body for a record vote. Mr. Speaker, the responsibility rests with the Republican leadership and unless a proper housing program is forthcoming from this Congress, it will be an issue you will have to meet again and again in the coming campaign.

HOUSING BILL A FRAUD

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, this socalled housing bill is a fraud on the American people which alone is enough to insure defeat for the present Republican majority in Congress at the hands of an aroused country.

Furthermore, the ignominious methods used in jamming the bill through the House prove the utter and cynical bankruptcy of the Republican leadership.

The malodorous deal is proof irrefutable that there is no Republican Party, but only a collection of factions struggling for the privilege of outraging public interest.

The House Republican faction has disowned the Senate leadership flagrantly, publicly, and maliciously, by the instrumentality of this bill. The political implications are obvious, and to Democrats hilarious.

But to 12,000,000 Americans seeking shelter at prices within their reach, this farce is rank tragedy.

The bill makes it impossible for a private real-estate operator to lose money.

It makes it equally impossible for the ordinary ex-GI or common citizen to gain a decent place to live.

Mr. LOVE. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to socialized housing in this country, and I shall support this bill which, in my opinion, will be a great aid to private construction.

The improvement of our critical housing situation should not be crippled by a nationalized building program, This legislation increases mortgage insurance authority by $1,600,000,000, which should encourage increased building by individuals and help thousands of veterans as well as other individuals to finance their own homes.

Since the Eightieth Congress removed controls from building materials some 835,000 dwelling units were completed in 1947, which is almost double the number constructed in 1946. Three hundred and fifty-six thousand homes were started the first 5 months of this year and every indication points to the construction of 1,000,000 homes this year which will be an all-time record.

I am sure that this legislation will be particularly helpful in the solving of our housing problem.

Mr. FOOTE. Mr. Speaker, I regret very much that the proposed housing bill does not include any provision for low-rent public housing or slum clearance. As a matter of simple justice, I cannot be satisfied with a housing program which would aid all groups of our citizenry except the very one most in need of it. On July 24, 1947, the Congress, by Concurrent Resolution No. 104, created a Joint Committee on Housing with instructions to conduct a thorough study and investigation of the entire field of housing. This committee was composed of seven Members of the House and seven of the Senate, appointed from the respective Committees on Banking and Currency. This committee during the summer, fall, and early winter of 1947 conducted hearings in all the principal cities from Boston, Mass., to San Francisco, Calif. I recall attending the hearing held at Boston and the one in New Volumes of testimony Haven, Conn. have been taken concerning the situation and hardly a week passes that one does not receive the printed record of the proceedings held in some city in this country. The joint resolution provided that this committee should report to the Congress not later than March 15, 1948. the result of its finding, and on that day, the gentleman from New York, Hon. RALPH GAMBLE, chairman of the committee, submitted a final majority report, which is a matter of record. In this report certain conclusions and recommendations were made, and I particularly call attention to recommendation No. 13, reading as follows:

Provision should be made now for Federal aid to local communities to enable them to undertake the clearance of their slums and blighted areas so as to make such areas available for redevelopment with the active participation of private enterprise. For this purpose, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator should be authorized to undertake a program of loan and subsidy assistance to communities. This program should be wholly distinct and separate from the lowrent public-housing program. The subsidy should be on a capital-grant basis and should involve a sharing of the net costs of slum clearance between the Federal Government and local communities on a 2to-1 matching basis. As an initial program, the Administrator should be authorized to make, over the next 5-year period, $1,000,000,000 in loans, repayable with interst, and $500,000,000 in subsidy commitments, at the rate of $100,000, a year. Such a program should be authorized immediately in order to make posible the preparatory steps necessary in connection with such a program. And recommendation No. 14, reading as follows:

Provision should be made for assistance to local communities under the United States Housing Act of 1937 for the provision over a period of the next 5 years of a maximum of 500,000 units of low-rent public housing for families of low income with (1) additional safeguards written into the act to increase local responsibility, make sure that tenancy restricted to low-income families, and avoid any competition with private housing;
(2) preference to the families of veterans and servicemen for a period of 5 years; (3) revision of the applicable cost limitations, which have not been revised since the original act of 1937, so as to bring them in line with current housing costs; (4) shortening the period for the payment of annual contributions from 60 years to 40 years; (5) an increase of the rate of maximum Federal contribution by 1 percent per annum of development cost, which increase will be more than compensated for by the shortened period over which Federal contributions can be paid; (6) provision that, in the event of a major default by a local authority in its con-tractual obligations, the Public Housing Authority may take over a low-rent housing project until such default is cured, and may continue to pay annual contributions not in excess of the original amount contracted for; and (7) revision of the present $800,000,-000 borrowing authorization of PHA to make it clear that amounts repaid are available for reloaning.

(It is believed that with the aid of the financing amendments recommended above it would be possible for local authorities to sell bonds to private investors covering substantially the entire cost of low-rent projects and at a substantial saving in interest costs as compared with the cost of borrowing from the Government. The reduction in interest rate, estimated to be approximately one-half of 1 percent per annum, would permit more rapid amortization of bonds, and combined with the shorter period during which bonds are outstanding, should result in a very great decrease in total interest costs.)

Attention was called to the undisputable fact that in the spring of 1947 there were 2,800,000 families living doubled up with other families, the vast majority forced to accept unsatisfactory living arrangements because of the acute housing shortage. An additional 500,000 families are living in temporary housing, trailers, rooming houses, and other make-shift accommodations. The committee stressed the urgency of the housing shortage and the necessity for prompt and effective action by the Congress. The note of urgency so deeply pervaded the local hearings held by this committee that no summation or analysis of these hearings would possibly be considered an accurate reflection of them without clear-cut emphasis of this fact. This was true whether the testimony was with respect to our northern, southern, eastern or western communities; our urban or rural areas; the needs of our veterans, minority groups, or our people generally; or the needs of our low-income or middle-income families.

The committee also recognized that this problem was one that could not be solved by State and local governments alone, and that Federal financial assistance to our communities was imperative, and stated as follows:

This note of urgency, struck over and over again throughout the course of the hearings, indicates clearly that the housing situation has been so serious in our communities generally, and that the pressures upon our State and local governments to act have therefore been so great, that there can be little doubt as to the intense desire and determination of our local communities and officials to assist in meeting the housing problem to the best of their abilities. They are especially concerned with two major problem areas—the clearance and redevelopment of slums and blighted areas and the provision of decent housing for low-income families now living in slums. Nevertheless, these matters are en tirely beyond their control and beyond their financial capacities. Senator Wagner's report summarizes the ample evidence attesting these facts. It is clear that we cannot deal effectively with these deep-rooted phases of the housing problems without adequate Federal financial assistance to our communities for such purposes. It is clear also from the overwhelming evidence that these phases of the housing problem are of such magnitude and seriousness that adequate solutions depend on treating them as part of the housing problem.

Whether it be with respect to Boston, or New York, or Jacksonville, or Birmingham, or Cleveland, or Chicago, or Louisville, or Seattle, reports from source after source have been almost monotonously similar. The well-being of our local communities is threatened by the excessive fiscal and social costs of our slums and blighted areas. The hearings and studies of this committee have served only to corroborate the evidence of survey after survey made over the years, national and local alike, that the bad-housing areas, the social-problem areas, the areas of relatively high municipal costs, and the areas of relatively low returns, are practically identical.

The committee concluded that-

Local self-government is a cherished part of our democratic process. From this fact, however, it is entirely specious to argue that the problems of housing for families of low income and slum clearance must be the responsibility of our localities alone, with the Federal Government in the role of an onlooker. The simple fact is that it is largely because these special problems have proved so entirely beyond the capacity of our local governments that the situation has become as acute as it has.

This joint committee also concluded that it was evident that the home-building industry is providing homes which only the higher income families can afford and seems to indicate that the only feasible solution of this question is by the Federal subsidy.

In Connecticut we have a particularly severe housing problem because of our greatly increased population, particularly in the former defense industrial areas, and this is particularly true in New Haven in my congressional dis-Thousands of persons who came to Connecticut to be employed in defense industry during the war remained as they liked our State so well. During recent months in Connecticut, the problem has rapidly become even more serious. In 1946 an estimated 25,000 new housing units were needed. The need today is estimated at some 40,000. In New Haven alone, there are some 1,400 families who are seeking shelter in lowrent housing units. While private industry has done a great job, at the same time it is evident that it is now providing homes which only the higher income families can afford and this seems to indicate that the only feasible solution to this question is by Federal subsidy.

It has been suggested most sincerely that federally financed low-rent housing and slum clearances are "socialistic." I cannot agree. If this is so, then the majority of the Members of Congress comprising the Joint Housing Committee have gone socialistic. I doubt very much if it will be accepted by the veterans and the persons who are without a roof over their heads at the present time. Nor do I believe that they will be very much impressed by the argument of the excessive cost of such a program. In this connection we have recently embarked upon a program for the relief and rehabilitation of the peoples of 16 foreign nations wherein we will build shelter for them and even furnish them with tobacco and it has not been suggested that this is socialistic or that it is un-American.

I shall vote for the Wolcott bill, not because I am satisfied with it, but so that we may have a housing bill that will go to the Senate for conference in the hope that as a result thereof, the conferees may agree on a housing bill which will establish a long-range housing policy, and relieve the intolerable conditions which now prevail.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr Speaker, certain groups in this country have been demanding enactment of the so-called Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill. I could not support that measure in the form that it reached the House for the reason that it is based on socialistic principles.

Mr. Speaker, I was very glad to lend my support, however, to the Wolcott bill, H. R. 6959, which in my opinion will meet the pressing demands for housing in the American way. Clearly, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill would put Government in the housing business to the detriment of private enterprise which has a building record unsurpassed in the history of this country. The basis for the Taft bill is, in my opinion, socialistic in that the Government would take over and superimpose itself upon private building if the building industry fails to meet a given situation which would arise in the minds of the bureaucrats administering the program.

Mr. Speaker, it is extremely interesting to note that private enterprise last year built 835,100 units and it is estimated that it will build more than a million units this year. When the Government was in the building business under the so-called Wyatt housing program and controlled all of the items that went into housing and with several billions of dollars from the Government it produced only 437,800 units. It is a further fact that when the Government had the power to command the channeling of every inch and every ounce of building materials that went into the home-building field its record for building homes was a miserable one. It cannot be said that private enterprise in the building field has failed. In fact it has an unbelievable record of achievement; it is building many homes today

Mr. Speaker, as I understand the provisions of H. R. 6959 the bill contains provisions which make it possible to build houses to meet a continuing emergency without calling upon the Government to finance public projects to the extent of some $6,000,000,000. It has been rightfully said that a Government housing program would be expensive for the taxpayers, it would raise the cost of houses where the so-called little man could not purchase them, and it would certainly add to the inflationary spiral.

And further, Mr. Speaker, if we are to adopt the principles of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, which are based upon a socialistic principle that Government must step in when private enterprise does not meet a situation, it is reasonable to believe that once Government monopolized the building field it would be justified to move into any field where shortages occur on the theory that private enterprise had failed. Today there is a shortage in automobiles. Is it contended that Government should step in and take over the automobile industry of this country? There is a shortage of coal. Does the same principle apply there? Many other instances might be cited but certainly we have not reached the point in this country where we must resort to socialism; when government steps in to meet production shortages. Such a program is un-American. In effect, the Wolcott housing bill says to the building industry of this country: "Go ahead and do this job; we will lend whatever assistance we can in the field of financing, but the job is yours." The general purposes of the bill are designed to meet the needs for low-cost housing, rental housing, and continuance of veterans' preference under title 6 of the National Housing Act, and in the disposition of Governmentowned permanent war housing. Further, it provides a secondary market for insured FHA mortgages and GI guaranteed home loans.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill and meets the problem in the good old Ameri-

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Okla-homa [Mr. Monroney].

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, there are two real and cogent objections that must be lodged against this bill being brought in today in this comprehensible way. In the first place, the methods being used to gag and bind not only a legislative committee of this Congress, but the entire membership by forcing this bill through without amendment, without dotting an "i" or crossing a "t," and to deny the legislative Representatives of the people of America even to stand up and be counted on such a vital issue as housing alone would be reason enough for defeating this bill.

The dictatorial methods, used by the Republican leadership, and the usurpation of authority belonging to a legislative committee by the Republican controlled Rules Committee, should be enough to defeat this use of the most vicious form of "gag" rule being practiced on the House in bringing this legislation to the floor under rules suspen-

That should be enough to defeat this bill, but even a greater and more compelling reason for defeating it is the plain fact that it is a complete phony, as far as housing legislation is concerned.

I want to elaborate on that. The only thing in this bill that will actually and genuinely help get houses for the millions in this country who are crying desperately for a place to live is title VI of FHA. Title VI has passed this House long ago and has been pending in the Senate since March 24 of this year. The bill can be passed by the Senate today or tomorrow and become law. That extends $2,000,000,000 worth of FHA insurance under title VI, which the chairman of the committee will admit has been the most useful instrument of getting housing. The other portion of this bill is the sale of Lanham war permanent housing, which also passed the House and has been pending in the Senate since June 19, 1947. So almost three-fourths of this bill, the part that will get housing, has already been passed by the House.

It is not going to do any good to pass it two times or three times or four times through the same House. It has to go through the other House before it becomes a law.

The main issue before the House is the question of what Federal aids are going to be given to the housing, Federal aids in the nature of a subsidy, if you please.

By dictation of the Republican leadership of the House and by dictation of the Republican control of the Rules Committee of the House they have decided that the poorest and most underprivileged class of people in the United States, the people who hopelessly live in America's slums, cannot get any subsidies to improve their housing conditions, even under a locally managed program administered by the cities themselves.

So they have killed out all the subsidies to these underprivileged peoplethose for decent farm housing and veterans-but have left in the bill the subsidies for the people who are best able to pay their own way-these investors.

There is not one dime of subsidies that will reach the underprivileged but there are millions if not hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of subsidy that will go to the rich investors. Let me elaborate. This bill contains the best worked out tax dodge I have ever seen come before If you are a wealthy this Congress. man, you can insure a $500,000 apartment house built under FHA insurance up to 90 or 100 percent of its actual cost. Thus the wealthy investor is protected by this insurance at about 100 percent. Then what tax advantage do you give on that $500,000 house? Get this clear. You write off $250,000 of depreciation on the $500,000 investment in 5 years under tax exemptions for fast depreciation. That is in the report. Have you ever seen a better tax dodge than that? This is what the Treasury says it amounts to. If you have an income of $500,000 a year you have a tax dodge of better than $41.-000 a year, $210,000 in the 5-year period, out of Uncle Sam's pocket. Subsidies? No subsidies for the underprivileged people in the slums but a nice fat subsidy for the "barefoot" millionaires that are looking for a way to beat Uncle Sam's You get 100-percent insurance on your investment and then a write-off of 50-percent depreciation during 5 years.

This bill also contains a so-called yield-insurance provision, further designed to subsidize the big investor, as well as guaranteeing him against loss. No subsidies for the slum dweller, but always for the investor.

One of the strangest and most unusual procedures, however, is contained in the so-called FHA mortgage support market under the Federal National Mortgage Association. For several years this agency furnished a secondary market, where holders of mortgages could sell them, at par, to the Government corporation. The operation has netted a big profit to the Government.

But under this strange section, for the first time I believe in our history, the Congress is deliberately depressing the market on Government-insured mortgages. Instead of offering a secondary market for FHA or GI loans at par, this bill announces to the world that they are only worth 98 cents on the dollar. They will not be purchased by the Government for what the Government insurance says they are worth-for Congress under this bill says they are worth to us only 98 cents on the dollar.

Already this hastily conceived and illconsidered move has caused a wholesale withdrawal of investors from the home mortgage market—as well as threaten many builders with bankruptcy.

The net effect of this 98 cents on the dollar provision is the same as if the Federal Reserve banking system announced tomorrow that it would support the Government bond market at only 98 cents on the dollar. Do any of you think that the market would not immediately decline to the figure that Government itself set?

Thus it will be with this provision, which wrecks, instead of helps, the market for Government-insured FHA title VI loans.

Other provisions of this same section. changes without notice, financial aids which builders have for the past two or more years relied upon to build largescale housing projects.

Conscientious builders, who heeded the Government's plea for large-scale production of housing, now find themselves faced with bankruptcy because the bill here denies them access to a ready Federal market.

This bill provides that unless a mort-gage was insured after June 19, these Government-guaranteed mortgages cannot be marketed. With the confusion created by the introduction of this bill existing in the mortgage market, insurance companies and other investors have stopped buying title VI mortgages. Why should they, when the Congress is depressing the value of their mortgages by legislative action?

And so these builders, who relied on our good faith in building these houses, now find themselves heavily indebted to banks on short-time interim financing for construction, without a market to rely on when the house is completed.

This is a dangerous provision and one that you will live to regret. Already it has set the housing program back heavily—and if this bill becomes law, will further retard home financing.

In addition, it is certain to force up by 1 or 2 percent the cost of financing these veterans' homes because of the uncertainty that has already been created.

In the bill killed by the Republican leadership yesterday, and on which you in the House were denied the right to vote upon, provision was made for a secondary market for GI home-building loans under the GI bill of rights. The bill here today strips away this help for the veteran and throws him a crumb.

Only an infinitesimal amount of help is given him on his financing problem—that of being able to have his second-mortgage GI loan eligible for the Federal secondary-market support. This, under the FHA combination loan, amounts to only 10 percent of the cost of his house.

Unless the veteran's house is built in a large community or in a neighborhood acceptable to the FHA authorities, he is denied completely any help on this score. The net effect of striking this valuable veterans' provision from the original bill, as was done in this new bill, is to deny any Government help to the veteran who wants to build on the farm, or in the small rural community. This is completely a housing bill for the cities and the rural people of America are being left out completely from any help in their housing problems.

All in all, this bill is so bad that it should be overwhelmingly defeated. There is still time to enact a general housing bill—one that will help all—the slum dwellers, the farmers, and veterans, as well as investors who ask tax subsidies to build our much-needed housing.

More than $6,000,000,000 in housing insurance has been provided for city dwellers—but the record does not reveal where one house has been so aided on a farm or in the small rural communities.

The issue here today is, whether you want to pass one-sided legislation to help only investors, or whether you want a genuine all-around housing bill.

If this bill is voted down under suspension of the rules, it can be brought back immediately under a rule, and can be open for amendments to correct the glaring defects. The tax dodge can be taken out, and help for farm and slum housing written in. And above all—the Congress can be counted on a roll-call vote so that everyone can see just where every Member stands on providing effective, rather than phony, housing legislation.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Brown].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I expect to support this bill. I am supporting it because I know that unless this bill passes we will have no housing legislation. There are some things in the bill to which I am opposed. I was one of the most active advocates, as a member of the Banking and Currency Committee, seeking to bring to the floor of this House a comprehensive bill involving practically all of the main issues relative to meeting the housing shortage. I think the Members of the House were entitled to have these matters thoroughly discussed, so by amendment they could add other provisions to the bill seeking to help solve the housing shortage or strike out any unwise provisions. Public housing and slum clearance have been an issue for some time, and I think the Members on the floor of this House should have an opportunity to settle this issue once and for all. It is regrettable that this bill cannot be amended in any form, under the rule by which it is being considered, nor can a motion be made to recommit the bill, but this is water over the dam, and to vote against the bill, as I have stated, means the end of housing legislation this session, as I see it.

Over in the other House, under the rules of that body a Member may offer an amendment and speak as long as he desires on it, so by voting for this bill there is a chance of getting some bill that would aid in solving the housing problem.

The housing problem affects every family in the United States directly or indirectly, and with the chance of this bill remedying the housing shortage I do not see how I could vote against the bill. I must say that I am certainly against the procedure under which this bill reached the floor of the House. original Wolcott bill was reported out of the committee by a vote of 14 to 13, and the Rules Committee refused to give a rule. Then the Banking and Currency Committee was reconvened and the present Wolcott bill was voted out by the committee and none of the Democrats were given a chance to offer any amendment.

The present bill extends title VI of the Federal Housing Administration under which more than 40 percent of our housing has been constructed during the last year, and we will at least get this much out of this bill, and if amended in the Senate, it may be perfected to be more effective in solving the housing problem and a chance for the House to express itself on slum clearance and public housing. I think the question of taxes raised in this bill is bad and probably this will be eliminated in the other body or if brought to a conference.

Title III of the bill is not very effective for a secondary market, especially for GI loans. I advocated and introduced the first amendment in my committee in 1946 which became a law creating a secondary market for GI loans in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. I offered an amendment to the first Wolcott bill which was adopted, and the entire bill was adopted later on by the committee, and this is the bill that the Rules Committee tabled. I had an amendment prepared yesterday to this effect and intended to offer it when the present Wolcott bill was considered, but I was not given an opportunity to present it. This proposed amendment was fair and equitable. It involved no cost to the Govern-It meant that the promises contained in the GI bill of rights could be kept. It was approved not only by the House Banking and Currency Committee in H. R. 6888 but by the Veterans' Affairs Committee of the House.

A united veterans' organization was earnestly asking our support of this provision. Are we going to say that the promise made by this Government in 1944 to the men and women fighting for this country is an empty promise? It will be unless a secondary market is created for the GI loans. Since July 1, 1947, when the secondary market was withdrawn, it has been very difficult for the veterans to secure loans to build houses in many places of this country. So I say that in hope of the other body or the conferees of both bodies improving the situation I do not see how I could afford to vote against the present bill. Without it there would be no other chance of any housing bill at this session.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Buchanan].

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker. have before us a conglomerate collection of previous titles that we have already sent over to the other body. For example, H. R. 5854 and H. R. 3492, and S. 2287-now Public Law 548. A good many Members here today have been led to believe, and a member of the committee who spoke before me has said that in order to have a continuation of title VI you would have to support this legislation, H. R. 6959. We have passed and sent to the other body the bill H. R. 5854 for the sum of $2,000,000,000. In this legislation today the difference between a temporary extension of some $400,000,000 that was cleared through the other side, and which is now a public law, was deducted from the so-called Wolcott bill, H. R. 6959, now under consideration. So do not be deluded into believing that if you do not vote for this bill you will not have an extension of title VI. The other body has had this legislation before it. It has not acted as yet. Just because you happen to vote for this legislation again today does not necessarily mean that they will take up this particular legislation. The gentleman from Oklahoma has pointed out to you the feature known as the fast tax amortization plan. That, of course, is a plan that will be of benefit to speculative builders. The guise is, of course, the offering of an opportunity to dodge the tax. If we were operating under an open rule we could question whether or not it is germane. Then we have another comeon in this legislation known as the yield insurance, which is a come-on for financial institutions or insurance companies to build in a particular price class.

To present this bill as a housing bill is a travesty. It is in reality a bill to offer financial aids to private enterprisers in the building business. It is a boon to home financing, with Government subsidy. Who will benefit by this legislation? Certainly not the farmer-not the communities, not the low-income families-not the moderate income familiesnot the veteran. The provisions for these groups are shabby and paltry. The bill frustrates one who appreciates the needs of the Nation for an over-all comprehensive housing program. But it certainly appeals to the speculative builders and those in the high income-tax brackets. and especially the real-estate lobby. All the "fat cats" of the industry will benefit. Those who need the help will benefit least, and those who need help the least will benefit most.

It is a shallow gesture at housing legislation and a mockery on this House.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Boggs].

Mr. BOGGS of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, this bill is a sham and a delusion. To pass it would be a vain and futile thing. To begin with, its principal provisions have already been passed by the House of Representatives and are pigeonholed in the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

If we pass it this afternoon, one of two things will happen. It will either be repigeonholed in that committee or it will be brought up on the floor of the Senate where S. 866 will be substituted therefor. So the net result of all the debate, the net result of all the hard work by the joint committee, made up of the House and Senate, seven Senators and seven Representatives, is that the veterans of this country, the people of this country, the farms of this country, and the cities of this country, when this Congress adjourns tomorrow night, will not have any housing legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the chairman of the Banking Committee and of the Rules Committee for their success in denying to this House the opportunity to vote on a comprehensive housing bill. Last Thursday the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee stated that a majority of this House would vote for a comprehensive housing bill if it was presented to them. He stated that the only hope was that the Rules Committee would refuse to let the House vote on such a bill. He has succeeded in his maneuver. I think the Members of this House will want to know just what is included in the comprehensive bill which the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee and the Rules Committee have so successfully blocked. Every Member ought to know what the American people think of this bill-in terms of their needs for homes in which to live as Americans should, in which children can get a fair start in life and which will provide the aspirations which all of us must have to make life worth living. I am thinking of the needs of nearly 3,000,000 families who do not have any homes at all, but are crowded in, most of them involuntarily with their in-laws and other families and of the 500,000 families living in trailers, rooming houses, temporary housing and other makeshift accommodations. I am thinking of the needs of more than 5,000,000 families in cities and surrounding areas, whose homes fall below decent standards for living. I am thinking also of the families on the farms whose homes are shacks which should be replaced or, at a minimum, need major repairs in order to make them livable. I am not even counting the great majority of farm homes which do not have the sanitary facilities which have become so essential for safe living in our cities, even though I deplore the lower housing standards we seem to accept for farm people.

Not even the best housing legislation we could enact is going to solve the housing problem for 10,000,000 families overnight. That is why we must consider legislation that looks ahead into the future, and not try to solve a long-range problem with short-run emergency measures. It is obvious that when you extend the solution of present problems into the future, you are also going to have to take into account the future increase in demand, losses in supply and the deterioration of additional housing to the point where it should be replaced. And finally, in order to bring about a normal relationship between needs and supply, it is important that there is a sufficient amount of housing available for rent or sale to give American families some flexibility within their price range and to make it possible for them to move about without having to be plagued with the difficulties of obtaining housing or being separated for long in-

Now what are the facts about housing needs? I know of no better place to turn to than the majority report filed just last March by the Joint Committee on Housing which was created by this Congress to study the housing problem. I think this House should know that while a few members of the committee dissented on a few of its recommendations, there was no disagreement with the findings reached after executive hearings in Washington and 32 other cities, after careful studies by individual members. I should add that these findings corroborated earlier conclusions reached by other committees, particularly the Senate Subcommittee on Housing and Urban Redevelopment in 1945 and the Senate Banking and Currency Committee in 1946 and 1947, and that its estimates of need were determined after careful consideration of other estimates from a variety of sources. Data obtained from the Bureau of the Census reports as to population and housing inventory provide the basis of these estimates of need.

Putting aside farm needs for the moment, America will need 15,441,000 new homes by 1960 to provide decent homes for the 39,500,000 families which the Bureau of the Census estimates we will have by that time. That means 1,285,000 homes a year. Discounting the considerable number of farm dwellings that can be rehabilitated, we shall need 200,000 farm homes a year, bringing the total up to 1,500,000 new houses annually.

It will take over 7,000,000 nonfarm homes, or more than 600,000 units a year, just to bring the present supply up to the shelter requirements of American families, and to provide a 4 percent effective vacancy rate. Before the war, real estate people used to think the supply was normal when 5 percent vacancies existed That is about all we have been doing in this country for the last quarter of a century. Over the long pull, housing construction has just been keeping ahead of the increase in number of fam-We have done practically nothing to replace the slums, to replace the losses from fire, demolition, and floods. is all we will do during the coming years if we do not make a comprehensive attack on the housing problem through effective legislation. If that is all we do, we will have more, instead of fewer slums, for houses wear out every year. As one witness before the Banking and Currency Committee observed, a house begins to deteriorate the minute it is finished.

If we really meet America's housing needs, if we really want to eliminate the slums that imperil the health and morale of several million of our people, we are going to need another 8,000,000 homes during the next 12 years, or nearly 700,000 homes a year, to provide replacements for urban and suburban slum dwellings which are presently, or will become, substandard, for dwellings lost by fire, demolition, and floods and for temporary dwellings, most of them built during the war for only short-time use.

This Congress will be neglecting its responsibility to the American people if it does not create the tools for reaching the larger housing goal set forth in the joint committee's report. We can no longer tolerate, in this Nation, bad housing conditions which are a financial drain on the communities, which sap the energies of the people, which deprive them of the incentives that a wholesome home life provides and which create conditions in which crime and delinquency are bred.

Despite the findings of the joint committee and of other congressional committees, there are still those who say we can solve this housing problem without enacting comprehensive housing legislation. Despite the record of festering urban slums and dreary rural shacks, there are those who say that if Government will just let things alone—except provide a little credit assistance—everything will work out all right.

I am conscious of the record that the private building industry has built up since the war. I hope that private builders will start a record-breaking million homes this year, as everything seems to indicate. I am in favor of the credit aids from the Federal Government which are contained in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill which will help them achieve and maintain that record.

But I see nothing in the present situation that offers the hope that even with these credit aids, the private building industry will be able to achieve and maintain the production necessary to fill the enlarged goals that have been envisioned by the Joint Committee on Housing. Neither does the joint committee.

Let us take a look at the record. The previous peak in home building was reached 23 years ago, way back in 1925, when 937,000 dwelling units were started. Then construction began to slide down, helping to take the whole economy with it, until, in 1933, 93,000 homes, only 10 percent of the peak volume, were produced. Conditions in 1925 were very similar to what they are today. Homes were being built at prices and rents which only a small portion of American families could afford to pay. limited demand was filled, and when people who had overextended themselves in a desperate search for homes became unable to meet mortgage payments, home building started down the toboggan slide. The result was that average housing production during the two decades before the war was only 500,000 homes a year, just enough to keep up with the increase in families and not enough to take worn-out and other bad houses out of use and send them to the junkyard.

This example which all of us remember characterizes the history of home construction and this history will not change until one fundamental characteristic of the industry as it existed then and exists today is changed. That characteristic is that not enough people can afford new housing at the prices and rents at which it is made available to permit a sustained production sufficient to meet American needs. There are two ways of assuring enough housing for the American people-one is through a vast public housing program, the other is to bring the costs of private housing down, in relation to incomes, so that will be enough demand to sustain the high rate of production which America needs. I think our emphasis should be on the latter. I think the Government should utilize its resources fully to help private enterprise get its costs down. I would like to see this filtration theory we hear about work, but it will work only if you pour in enough new houses to crowd out the slums at the

It is hardly germane to say that the costs of housing have not increased any than other prices, although there is good evidence that building costs, and the selling prices of both new and used houses, have exceeded the general rise in the costs of living and income. What is important is that new houses cost too much today to sustain production at the levels needed, just as they did in the thirties and the twenties.

What is needed is for the home building industry to catch up with the modern industrial parade. It needs to develop mass production methods to serve the mass markets awaiting for it. It needs to have the shackles of outmoded building codes and restrictive practices removed. The Federal Government can help in two principal ways. It can adapt its credit aids to the needs of builders using modern production methods. And it can inaugurate a program of research into new methods, materials, and techniques and to encourage their adoption. The authority would be, and should be, broad enough to permit the Government to cooperate with home building in all aspects of housing, from the improvement of production methods in the factory down to the modernization of building codes. Congress will have ample opportunity to control the extent of these activities from year to year through the appropriations procedure.

I would be amazed at the shortsighted opposition of some of the leaders of the home-building industry to this research program if the same sort of thing had not happened before. It took years of actual experience, for example, before home-financing institutions came to recognize the benefits to their own business of the FHA system of home financing. The Government undertook the mortgage insurance program of the FHA because no single segment of the home-building industry had sufficient resources to assume the risks it involved. The Government will have to assume leadership for a broad research program, because no element of the home-building industry has the resources with which to do the kind of a job that needs to be done. Those who fear the socialization of the housing industry should be the first to support this kind of a program, for the best way to avoid socialization of this or any other industry is to maintain the confidence of the people that private enterprise is serving their needs. This research program will help private enterprise serve the housing needs of the American people.

I am hopeful that with the improved credit aids to private industry and a broad program of research, private enterprise will, in time, be able to take care of the housing needs of most of the American But I do not believe that with these aids private enterprise will be able to assume the burdens unaided of clearing out the festering slums in our cities. The changes in methods of production and distribution which we hope to see accomplished will not be sweeping or rapid enough to permit any early solution, by private enterprise, of the problems of low-income families living in urban slums or in the bad housing in our rural areas. Any comprehensive housing program must deal with these problems, too. if it is to accomplish decent homes for all American families. So the modest programs in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill of Federal assistance for slum clearance and public housing and of direct credit and subsidies for the improvement of farm homes are essential parts of that bill. I would like to remind this House that these are modest programs, limited to 5 years, during which private enterprise may demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the Congress, whether it intends or will be able to take care of the needs of lower income families.

I have heard it said that the way to clear slums is to get rid of them, but nobody has ever explained to me how private builders are going to be able to buy up slum land at its present costs, remove the old houses, and then replan and redevelop the areas with homes which people can afford to buy. Private builders will do as they always have done, and do their building on raw, inexpensive land. The essence of the urban redevelopment program contained in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill is for the Government to share with local communities the excessive costs of acquiring and clearing slum areas so that the cleared land can be made available, primarily to private builders at prices which represent a fair value at its new use.

Neither has anybody ever explained to me how private builders are going to provide decent homes at prices and rents which present slum dwellers or other low-income families can afford to pay. The people who have talked so glibly about the fine workings of the filtration theory have recently come along with some figures which, assuming certain things happened, purported to show that private enterprise was building for low-income families. I am sure those figures are small comfort to the lowincome veteran looking for a place in which to live, or to the low-income family huddled together in a decaying tenement. They certainly are not believed by 90 percent of governors, mayors, and prominent individuals, including a majority of those connected with the homebuilding industry, who, according to a report issued by the Joint Committee on Housing, said that private enterprise would not be able to provide decent homes for all low-income families within the foreseeable future. If, as opponents of housing legislation attempt to prove, 20 percent of the houses built last year finally were priced at $4,500 or less, they are not in localities of greatest housing need or else they are shacks which are substandard to begin with or soon will There are certainly no such numbers of decent homes in Washington or in my home city at that price. A recent Census survey indicates that the average prices at which new homes are being sold today in Washington is $13,000 to $15 -This is beyond the means of fourfifths of the families in Washington.

There is only one way I know of at the present time to hope that these families will have decent homes in which to live, and that is through public assistance.

The only other argument against public assistance for slum clearance and public-housing programs that deserves serious consideration is that these are problems that the local communities can and should solve. The fact is that most cities cannot afford to take on the additional burden and that the few cities which can will be able to handle only a part of the problem. 'The governors and mayors who replied to the joint committee questionnaire sent out by Senator WAGNER agreed that the cities and States could not take care of all the needs of low-income families, and only a few thought they could go beyond local tax exemption for public-housing projects. Their judgment is sustained by the report, Coordination of Federal and State Taxes, filed by Senator BRICKER. This report describes the financial strains being imposed upon the cities and States by higher costs of services, by the necessity for making up for wartime postponement of replacements, maintenance work, and new construction, and by the inflexibility of their principal source of revenue, real-estate taxes. It is sustained by the heavy bond flotations of municipalities and by the increase in interest rates on such issues. It is obvious that if we leave the problem of slums and bad housing exclusively to the local communities it will not be solved. I believe that the Federal Government, together with the local communities, has a responsibility for the people's housing needs. I think it has some responsibility of seeing that children start out in life with the equality of opportunity that only decent homes can provide.

So I urge passage of a comprehensive housing bill. We need to retain and improve the financing aids to private industry which this Government has been supplying since the middle thirties. We need to institute a program of research to help private industry do a better job of supplying the Nation's housing needs. And finally we need to provide financial assistance in those areas in which private enterprise is unable to operate. Only by a program containing all these measures will this Nation be able to work toward a solution of its entire housing problem.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time, 1 minute, to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAY-BURN].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I impugn the motives of nobody, but if I were to vote for this bill under these conditions, I would feel that I was perpetrating a fraud upon the American people, for the simple reason that I think I know that this means there will be no housing legislation at this session of Congress. I think we should show our resentment of this procedure and this kind of a bill by voting down this motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for 12 minutes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I think the issues in respect to housing have been crystallized to the point where almost everyone's position is known.

I was a little amazed that the gentleman from Texas, my exceptionally good friend, the minority leader, would make a statement which is in effect that we cannot provide shelter in America through private sources; that the Government has got to build the houses. I do not think my esteemed friend from Texas wants to put himself in the same category of those many witnesses who came before the Committee on Banking and Currency and admitted that the provisions of the bill, which was rejected by the House Committee on Banking and Currency yesterday morning, were socialistic in purpose. The very basis of socialism is that the Government shall take over when private enterprise has failed to meet a demand or a production program. I do not call anyone a Socialist in respect to this legislation. There has been so much loose talk about it, so much demagoguery about it, so much misunderstanding, and so few facts.

However, let me call attention, after making the statement that almost every one of the witnesses for the proponents of this legislation, predicated the necessity for public housing on the ground that private enterprise had failed, although private enterprise had built 835,100 units last year, and this year will build more than a million units, in face of the fact that when the Government did at one time have control over this subject in 1946, the Government, with all the power at its command to channel every inch and every ounce of building materials into the home-building field, produced only 437,800 units.

Now, has private enterprise failed? If private enterprise has not failed, then this House has no business turning this program over to the Government.

There was a very honest-minded, serious, conscientious Socialist who testified before our committee. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] asked him to define the differences, to point out the differences between the different political parties, and he did; and on page 776 of the hearings he said:

The Socialist Party-

Have in mind this is a Socialist, the mayor of Milwaukee, Mr. Zeidler—

The Socialist Party or the Socialists as a whole, and they are well represented all over the world, particularly by that element in the British labor movement, conceive the function of government to be democratic in its essence and feel that wherever there is a basic activity or a basic production method which is not being met or which is not being carried fully by the private-enterprise system, that there it is a responsibility of the community to step in and try to meet that need.

I do not say that this is a socialistic program; the Socialists themselves say that it is a socialistic program.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. WOLCOTT. No, I cannot; I am sorry.

The bill which you have before you is a bill which will provide and will assure that every ounce and every inch of available building materials and every minute of available labor will be utilized to the fullest extent in the next 12 months, making possible a program of building more units than have ever been built in a comparable period of time by any country under the canopy of God's heaven.

We should be proud of this Government of ours, and I am; and whatever I have done and whatever those of us who have sincerely since 1939 opposed socialized housing, whatever we have done has been in the interest of preserving the American system. If we have sinned in that respect we have sinned in accordance with and not in defiance of the Constitution of the United States.

A coalition of constitutionalists in this House in 1939—and the gentleman from Oklahoma was one of them then—on this floor by a good substantial majority defeated a rule for the continuance of this program. The principle of this program was before us at that time.

I wish some of your Members who are here now and who voted on that rule would turn to the record before you vote in order that you will not be in the inconsistent position of bravely and conscientiously voting against public housing then and now because you see in it some political advantage voting for socialized housing.

Let us be careful of what we do here. We are setting a precedent, perhaps, we are setting a precedent.

If private enterprise has failed to produce enough houses to justify the Government's taking over, then does the same philosophy apply to the failure of private enterprise to produce enough automobiles, enough shoes, at reasonable prices, enough food at reasonable prices? You have identically the same thing involved.

Is the next step to ask the automobile industry to move aside and let the Government get into the production of trucks and automobiles? Are you going to Brockton and other towns in the New England States and say that because shoes cannot be bought in the United States for less than $10 that the Government must step in and manufacture your shoes? Are we going out on the farms and say to the farmers: "Because you cannot produce enough food at low enough cost, the Government must come in and operate your farms?" In the rural provisions of this bill which we refused to report out of the committee, there was the socialistic provision that the Government should step on to each and every farm which asked for relief under that bill and virtually operate the farm by setting up the standards under which that farm should be operated, the crops that should be put in and so forth.

That, Mr. Speaker, is socialism. I do not care who it is that goes along with it, he has got to answer to the people. He has got to reconcile the position which he takes on this bill with the definition of socialism. I have tried to do so. Now, if there is any doubt at all, let us resolve the doubt in favor of the American form of Government which has resulted in a production effort during the war and since the war which is the envy of every socialistic country in the world.

This bill will make it possible to build houses to meet the emergency. If you had adopted the provision we struck out of the bill on public housing, you would have superimposed a public housing program, a Government project, on top of the present demand, amounting to something like $6,000,000,000 which, of course, would have resulted in further inflationary tendencies, making the cost of houses so high that nobody could possibly afford to buy any houses whatsoever. It was inflationary. Government housing is inflationary. One of the sponsors in the other body said that to permit the spending of $7,000,000,000 at the present time is the most inflationary thing that we could do.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. I know the provisions in the bill before us and I think they will do much to help the housing problem. I wonder if the gentleman would not sketch through what those are, very briefly.

Mr. WOLCOTT. You are all familiar with title VI. I am glad the gentlemen who are seemingly opposed to this bill have found so many good things in it that should be enacted into law. The continuance of title VI is one of them. Title VI makes possible the organization of veterans' cooperatives and they may have the financing of the cooperative ventures insured up to 95 percent. We make possible the building of thousands of multiple-dwelling units and apartment houses in cities through accelerated depreciation.

You will understand that we are not robbing the Treasury of anything in that particular provision of the bill because if the houses are not built, then, of course, the Treasury will get no revenue whatsoever incident to the production of the houses. All taxes stem from production. If the houses are built the Government's revenue will ultimately increase. Without this provision we may expect very little risk capital to venture into the field of multiple-apartment buildings. At today's high prices few builders will take a chance on realizing on their investment. The alternative is Government subsidies which in the end would be very costly to the American taxpayers. With the provision, revenues to the Government will materially increase and we will get the production of much-needed housing in the big-city areas.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the House should pass this bill and houses will be built under it. We want to adjourn tomorrow night and I may say with reasonable certainty that this is probably the only housing bill which we can get through.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Gladly. Mr. KEOGH. Section 603 (b) of the pending bill amends section 608 (b) (3) (C) of the National Housing Act to permit the Administrator to increase to $9,100 per family unit the amount of the mortgage when, in his discretion, cost levels so require. Will the gentleman express his opinion as to whether this amendment will permit the Administra-tor to hold that the construction of a family unit in excess of 41/2 rooms, for example, to 51/2 rooms, will so affect the cost level as to justify increasing the amount of the mortgage to $9,100 per family unit of 51/2 rooms in any approved project?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I can assure the gentleman that the Administrator may increase the insurance to $9,100 per unit regardless of the number of rooms. We have removed the limit per room and put the limit on a unit basis. In directly answering the gentleman's question, I be-lieve I can give him better than reasonable assurances that, under the example cited, the Administrator would not only be justified in using this discretionary authority but it is our intent that he do so, especially in the case of veterans' rental projects.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill. Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered. The question was taken; and there

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

THE HONORABLE HAROLD KNUTSON. CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include a resolution offered by me and unanimously adopted by the Committee on Ways and Means with respect to the Honorable HAROLD KNUTSON.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, the following resolution was offered by the Honorable ROBERT DOUGHTON on June 17, 1948, and was unanimously approved by the Committee on Ways and Means:

RESOLUTION OF THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE COM-MITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS, UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Whereas the Committee on Ways and Means during the first and second sessions of the Eightieth Congress has made definite progress in the enormous task of converting the wartime Federal tax structure to a simplified, equitable, and permanent peacetime basis: and.

Whereas extensive hearings and studies on tax revision have been carried on simultaneously with fulfillment of the other responsibilities of the committee in the fields of social security, tariff, and reciprocal trade, customs, and the public debt; and

Whereas the effective coordination of the work of the committee and its subcommittees has been attributable largely to the diligence, persistence, and guidance of our able, courageous, and distinguished chairman, Hon. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota; and

Whereas the aforesaid chairman has consistently conducted the deliberations of the Committee on Ways and Means as to provide an amiable atmosphere for the prompt consideration and expeditious disposition of committee business, thereby earning the highest esteem and regard of the members of the committee, regardless of party: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the membership of the Committee on Ways and Means, United States House of Representatives, hereby express our appreciation for the forceful, courageous, tireless, and able statesmanship and service of Hon, Harold Knurson as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means during the Eightieth Congress, and that an engraved copy of this resolution be presented to the chairman as a tangible token of our gratitude.

TRIBUTE TO HON. HAROLD KNUTSON, CHAIRMAN OF THE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that each member of the Ways and Means Committee may be permitted to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD in reference to Hon. HAROLD KNUTSON, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, the members of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives met on June 18, 1948, in the Capitol to pay a well-deserved tribute to the present Chairman Harold Knutson, of Minnesota. A resolution was introduced by Hon. Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, accompanied by appropriate words of praise for the excellent record made by his colleague. The resolution was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted by the committee.

I wish to express my heartfelt appreciation for the many courtesies and kindnesses received at the hands of my chairman. He has now entered the Ways and Means Hall of Fame of the illustrious men who have attained to the chairmanship of this powerful committee of the greatest legislative body in the world, the House of Representatives of the United States of America.

I am inserting at this point a brief historical sketch of the House Ways and Means Committee and the distinguished members thereof who later in life filled other important Federal positions. In some instances the State in which a member was born appears rather than from the State from which he was elected:

BRIEF HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

Article I, section VII, of the United States Constitution provides: "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives."

The House of Representatives since the beginning has adopted the system of committees to carry out its public affairs program. In fact, there are a few committees which are as old as the House itself. Historically, some even antedate the United States Constitution.

In May 1785 the Continental Congress had a committee, of which George Washington was chairman, "to consider ways and means to supply these Colonies with ammunition and military stores." This committee of "ways and means" functioned as a select committee up until 1802. As early as 1796, Mr. Gallatin moved that a standing committee on Ways and Means be appointed to watch over the national finances. But it was not until January 7, 1802, that the committee became an organization of the type which we now know.

Originally the Ways and Means Committee considered not only the methods of raising the revenues of the Nation, but the committee also made whatever appropriations were necessary to make the money available for public expenditure. In 1865 the business of initiating appropriations was transferred to the Committee on Appropriations and certain other classes of bills which originally had been considered by the Ways and Means Committee were referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The jurisdiction which the Ways and Means Committee now has is extended (outside the consideration of duties on imports and the raising of internal revenue taxes) to such related subjects as: transportation of dutiable goods; the organization and definition of collection districts; ports of entry and delivery; customs unions; reciprocity treaties; seal herds and other revenue producing animals of Alaska; the revenue relations of the United States with Puerto Rico; the revenue bills relating to agricultural products generally; and the tax on outure sales of cotton and grain; social security and other activities.

In addition, the committee has jurisdiction over bills relating to the Treasury of the United States and the deposit of public moneys. It also reports the resolutions giving recommendations of Presidents' annual messages to the appropriate committees of the House.

The following list shows former members of the Ways and Means Committee who have risen to the office of President, Vice President, became members of the Cabinet, served as Justices of the Supreme Court, or were elevated to the Speakership of the House of Representatives:

WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN FROM NEW YORK

G. Crommelin Verplanck

Mr. Verplanck was a New Yorker, the son of a clergyman, a graduate of Columbia in law, a man of much travel and a professor of the Evidences of Christianity in the General Theological Seminary before he took to politics. He was a Democrat of the school of Andrew Jackson and made his first appearance in Congress in the term which began in 1823. After that, was out of the House until 1831, when he was returned to the Twenty-second Congress, in which he was chairman of Ways and Means. This term was his last appearance in Congress, but not in politics. He was defeated for mayor of New York in 1834, but seems to have spent most of the remainder of his life in one or another compensated public pursuit, dying as vice chancellor of the University of the State of New York, of which he had been a regent for 45 years.

Churchill C. Cambreleng

Mr. Cambreleng was chairman of Ways and Means in the Twenty-fourth and Twentyfifth Congresses. He was born in Washington, Beaufort County, N. C., October 24, 1786; attended school in New Bern, N. C.; moved to New York City in 1802, where he became a clerk and subsequently engaged in the mercantile business; elected as a Democrat to the Seventeenth and to the eight succeeding Congresses; unsuccessful candidate for reelection in 1838 to the Twenty-sixth Con-gress; appointed United States Minister to Russia by President Van Buren, and served from May 20, 1840, to July 13, 1841; member of the State constitutional convention, 1846; retired from active business pursuits; died at his residence near Huntington, Suffolk County, N. Y., April 30, 1862; interment in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Millard Fillmore

Mr. Fillmore was chairman in the Twentyseventh Congress. He was born in Locke Township (now Summerhill), Cayuga Township (now Summerhill), Cayuga County, N. Y., January 7, 1800; was admitted to the bar in 1823; member of the State assembly, 1629-1831; elected as a Whig to the Twenty-third Congress; elected to the Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth, and Twenty-seventh Congresses; declined to be a candidate for renomination in 1842; unsuccessful Whig candidate for Governor in 1844; elected State comptroller in 1847, and served until his resignation in 1849; elected Vice President of the United States on the Whig ticket headed by Zachary Taylor in 1848; became President upon the death of President Taylor, and served from July 9, 1850, to March 3, 1853; unsuccessful Whig candidate for President in 1852 and as the National American candidate in 1856; died in Buffalo, N. Y., March 8, 1874; interment in Forest Hill Cemetery.

Fernando Wood

Fernando Wood was chairman in the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Congresses. was born in Philadelphia, Pa., June 14, 1812; moved with his father to New York City in 1820, was engaged in business as a shipping 1820, was engaged in business as a simpling merchant in 1831, was elected as Tammany Democrat to the Twenty-seventh Congress, unsuccessful candidate for reelection in 1842 to the Twenty-eighth Congress, appointed by Secretary of State John C. Calhoun dispatch agent for the State Department at the port of New York, reappointed by Secretary of State James Buchanan and served from 1844 to 1847; unsuccessful candidate for mayor of New York City in 1850; mayor of New York City in 1855-58, 1861, and 1862; elected Democrat to the Thirty-eighth Congress; unsuccessful candidate for reelection to the Thirty-ninth Congress; elected to the Fortieth, and each succeeding Congress, including the Forty-seventh, until his death at Hot Springs, Ark., February 13, 1881, before the beginning of the Forty-seventh Congress; interment in Trinity Cemetery, New York City.

Sereno E. Payne

Sereno Payne was chairman from the Fifty-sixth to Sixty-first Congresses, inclusive. He was born in Hamilton, Madison County, N. Y., June 26, 1843; attended the Auburn Academy and was graduated from the University of Rochester, N. Y., in 1864; studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1866, and practiced in Auburn, N. Y.; city clerk of Auburn in 1867 and 1868; supervisor in 1871 and 1872; district attorney of Cayuga County, 1873-79; president of the Board of Education of Auburn, 1879–82; appointed a member of the American-British Joint High Commission in January 1899; elected as Re-publican to the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses; elected to the Fifty-first Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Newton W. Nutting; reelected to the Fiftysecond and to the 11 succeeding Congresses, and served from March 4, 1889, until his death; had been reelected to the Sixty-fourth Congress; died in Washington, D. C., December 10, 1914; interment in Fort Hill Cemetery, Auburn, N. Y.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, the resolution of commendation of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, my good friend, HAROLD KNUTSON, is a sincere expression of the esteem in which he is held by all the members of our committee. I appreciate this opportunity to speak from the heart the personal satisfaction that I have enjoyed in serving with the gentleman from Minnesota on the Committee on Ways and Means. When I came to Congress Mr. Knutson had already served more than a score of years. He was then a militant leader of the minority, but he has ever been willing to make available to me his kindly and experienced counsel.

When I became a member of the Committee on Ways and Means in 1942, this friendship became firmly cemented in the bonds of day to day association in the disposition of common problems.

Notwithstanding his heavy load of increased respnsibilities during the Eightieth Congress as chairman of the committee, I have felt free to consult and confer with him on any matter pending before the committee—whether on taxes, reciprocal trade, or social security. It is because of this close friendship and constant association that I am so much aware of the diligent, devoted statesmanship and public service of Hon. Harold Knutson in the interests of the taxpayers of the Nation. I trust that we may share many more happy and fruitful years together on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with those who are paying respect to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota, the Honorable HAROLD KNUTSON, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

The resolution which was on yesterday passed by the Ways and Means Committee was presented to that committee by the distinguished former chairman, Mr. Doughton. As we all know, he is one of the most highly respected Democrats in this House and is the oldest Member of this House and has the second longest record of service of any Member in the House. Mr. Doughton's action is significant in view of the further fact that Mr. KNUTSON is the oldest Republican Member in the House from the standpoint of service. Mr. Dough-TON is serving his nineteenth term and Mr. Knutson is serving his sixteenth term. Mr. Doughton served longer as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee than any man in the history of that great committee.

Mr. Knutson has been a member of the Ways and Means Committee for a great number of years and his service has been conspicuous. As chairman of the committee he has been very successful in leading this great committee in the preparation and passage of many measures of great importance to the Nation. The Knutson bill which passed in the present session of Congress will go down in the legislative history of Congress as a very important enactment. The bill was well drawn and met with the approval of the Members of Congress and of the coun-This is proved by the fact that this bill was passed by the House in spite of the veto of the President, Mr. KNUTSON has shown great organizational ability in the manner in which he has conducted the business of the Ways and Means Committee. He has the respect of all those who serve with him. I concur most heartly in all the sentiments expressed in the resolution.

Mr. FORAND. Mr. Speaker, as this Congress draws to a close, the members of the Ways and Means Committee have recognized in a small way the fine service of our chairman the gentleman from Minnesota, Hon. Harold Knutson.

Yesterday, the committee adopted a resolution of congratulation and commendation of our distinguished colleague, and I take this opportunity to say that I subscribe 100 percent to the expressions contained in the resolution and extend to our chairman my best wishes for good health, a well-deserved vacation, and a return to this great body if it is his wish.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, in order to render the best service to our country while serving as chairman of a committee in the House of Representatives, it is not sufficient to be a patriotic legislator who has the best interest of all the people in mind and who can weigh fairly the pros and cons of bills which may come before him, but it is also necessary to have the executive ability to delegate those duties that can be delegated to other members of the committee-to encourage them to cooperate and to engender in the committee that spirit of fellowship and teamwork which will result in legislation being reported with as much unanimity as is possible among any group with divergent political views. To find such a man is rare.

The record of accomplishment of the Ways and Means Committee during the Eightieth Congress is proof that in its chairman, the Honorable Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, we have a leader with these qualities.

During this past session the committee has been faced with the highly technical matters of tax reduction, tax revision, social security, reciprocal trade, and much other legislation of vital importance to the country. The fact that all bills reported out of the committee which have been voted on by the House have passed by overwhelming majorities is proof of the efficient work of the committee under his able leadership.

May our chairman give many more years of fine service to his country and his district in the Halls of Congress.

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, I wish to felicitate the gentleman from Minnesota, the Honorable Harold Knutson, upon the wonderful record he has made in his thirty-odd years as a Member of the House of Representatives; and especially to thank him for his leadership as the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee during the busy and difficult days of the Eightieth Congress.

The work of this great committee during the time this country has been adjusting from a war economy to a reconstruction and peacetime program has been difficult and tedious.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] has presided over our work with poise, dignity, and ability. His experience and farsighted statesmanship has guided and sustained us.

As a member of the committee of a different political faith, I appreciate his fairness, his kindness, and his desire at all times to serve his country first.

This veteran legislator and leader is loved and respected by us all.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure, indeed, to join with my colleagues of the Committee on Ways and Means in extending recognition and highly deserved praise of our colleague and good friend, the distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Minnesota, Hon. Harold Knutson, for his outstanding service as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means in the Eightieth Congress.

This is my first term as a member of the committee and I have been tremendously impressed by the sincere devotion to duty of the members of the committee and the good fellowship that prevails on the committee.

The good fellowship of this committee is exemplified by the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina, chairman for so many years prior to the Eightieth Congress, whose interest and leadership in the drafting and adoption of the resolution by the Committee on Ways and Means commending the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knurson] speaks for itself.

I am delighted and honored to have this privilege of joining in the recognition and commendation my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] so richly deserves.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to add my voice in commendation of the service performed by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. It has been a great honor to have had the opportunity to serve on this great committee. It has also been an honor to serve under its distinguished chairman. He has conducted its affairs in a most honorable and fair manner. His direction of the committee has been courageous and statesmanlike. service with him will always be one of my fondest memories.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I take great pleasure in joining with my colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee in the splendid resolution unanimously adopted by the committee honoring our chairman, Mr. Harold Knutson, It is fine recognition of the services rendered by the chairman in handling the legislation and the work of the committee in such an efficient and fair manner.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the Ways and Means Committee submits for the Record its written testimonial to its distinguished chairman, the Honorable Harold Knutson, of Minnesota. It is a testimonial to the man and to his work—to the outstanding service he has rendered as head of that important committee during the reconstruction days of the Eightieth Congress.

It is an honor and a privilege to serve as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means and also to join in this tribute to one of America's outstanding sons. HAROLD KNUTSON came to these shores as a very young man. The story of his life, of his years of experience in the school of hard knocks is a story that is typically American. HAROLD KNUTSON is a living example of the opportunities that awaited a poor immigrant boy who had the determination, the ambition, and the perseverance to forge ahead in the land of equal opportunity for all.

During his long years of service in the House of Representatives he has represented his people and the people of America faithfully and well. He has served them in many and varied capacities. He has previously served as chairman of two other committees of the House of Representatives. All of that service today is climaxed by his chairmanship of the Committee on Ways and Means. As our beloved friend and fellow Member from New York, the Honorable DANIEL A. REED, has pointed out, the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee has provided outstanding Americans for service in almost every capacity in the administrative branch of our Government, including six Presidents of these United States. That chairmanship was never in abler hands than it is in the person of Mr. KNUTSON.

It is so fitting and so representative of the unanimity and the nonpartisanship with which problems are approached by that committee that the resolution expressing the tribute of the members of the committee should have been brought forward by the Honorable Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, the ranking minority member, who himself served so illustriously as chairman of this committee for many, many years.

Twenty-four members of the Committee on Ways and Means serving under our beloved chairman, Mr. Knutson, are as one man in wishing for him a long and happy life, and in wishing for the people of America many, many more years of his valiant and illustrious service in the Congress of the United States.

CHAIRMAN HAROLD KNUTSON IS A GREAT AMERICAN

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, a resolution has been presented which reflects the sentiments of every member of the House Committee on Ways and Means. May I say that I believe that our beloved chairman, the Honorable Harold Knutson, merits every tribute expressed therein.

The story of the life of HAROLD KNUTson is typical of the American way. He came to this country as a boy from Norway. By hard work, determination, thrift, endurance, and perseverance he made a success in business. In addition, he has served his country in the Halls of Congress for all these many years. It is fitting that he should occupy one of the most powerful positions in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. Knutson espouses a philosophy that brings hope to every young American. He believes in a government that permits an individual to prepare himself, work, earn, save, and achieve. This philosophy is the hope for the young man who makes his own way. It is the ladder by which he can climb to success. It is the American way. Our beloved chairman is one of the foremost champions of that way.

TRIBUTE TO HON. HAROLD KNUTSON

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, in my opinion a Member of Congress must be judged by the ability, the courage, and the resourcefulness with which he represents the people of his district, his State, and his Nation, Although I have differed frequently with my friend, the eminent chairman, and often we have engaged in sharp debate, I can sincerely say that I have never felt, nor have I detected in him, any lingering rancor or resentment.

Our personal relationship has ever been cordial, and in the deliberations of the committee no member has received more fair, courteous, nonpartisan consideration than I.

Mr. Speaker, it is easy for a leader to be ever gracious and kind to those who always agree with him. But it takes a rare quality of statesmanship to be equally considerate of those in opposition.

Mr. Speaker, Chairman Knutson has demonstrated these qualities, and I want him and the membership of this House to know that I shall ever admire, respect.

and thank him for them.

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives yesterday passed a resolution praising the chairman of the committee, Hon. HAROLD KNUTSON, of Minnesota, for the manner in which he presided over our deliberations.

I wish to add my own word of appreciation. As a member of the Democratic minority, I can honestly say that he has upheld the high traditions of the Committee on Ways and Means and has, like his distinguished predecessor, Hon. Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, presided most fairly and impartially over our many and long sessions. Although a strong partisan Republican, he never in the years of his chairmanship, has permitted his partisanship to blunt his sense of fairness. He has given us, on the minority, a fair deal and a square deal.

The characteristic of Chairman Knutson that, in my opinion, is most outstanding is his unfailing sense of humor, no matter how rough the going may be at the time. Many times during heated discussions on some proposed legislation, when the tempers of other members of the committee were on edge, our distinguished chairman and our distinguished former chairman have engaged in humorous colloguy that relieved the tension and brought a new approach to the subject under discussion. I have no doubt that Harold Knutson's sense of humor has successfully carried him through many seemingly imponderable difficulties.

I wish him many years of health and happiness.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee in paying tribute to our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Minnesota, the Honorable Harold Knutson. Their tributes have been accurate and generous. I concur in what they have said.

Mr. Speaker, I have had the privilege of serving in this House with the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] for 28 of my 30 years of service here. No Member is more familiar with his character, his ability, or his motives in approaching the problems which daily face us. Those who know him best agree that before taking a stand on any question, he first determines whether or not the measure is for the best interests of the people generally throughout the Nation. If he believes it is, he supports it. If he believes it is not, he vigorously opposes it.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knurson] is endowed with high intelligence and a degree of patriotism not excelled by any individual. His service has been honorable, and it has been distinguished by an intense desire to represent his constituents in a way every constituency should be represented in this body. I congratulate the people who send him here and trust they will show their appreciation of his fine service by returning him to this House so long as he desires to serve.

Mr. GREGORY. Mr. Speaker, since I have had the honor of serving on the Committee on Ways and Means, it has been my pleasure to serve under two distinguished chairmen—our present chairman, the Honorable Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, and the Honorable ROBERT L. DOUGHTON, of North Carolina.

I am glad to join with the other members of the Ways and Means Committee in congratulating Mr. Knurson upon the outstanding record he has made in his long period of service to his country as a Member of the House of Representatives. His accomplishments and record as a first-generation American should be a beacon light to all American citizens. Particularly do I wish to felicitate him upon his leadership as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. As a member of the committee of a different political faith, I appreciate the difficulties of his task, his fairness, his wisdom. and his desire at all times to serve his country first.

I am delighted and honored to have this privilege of joining in this recognition of Mr. KNUTSON.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, my purpose in making a statement at this time is to place in the Record my hearty approval of the resolution offered by the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina, the Honorable Robert L. Doughton, commending the services of our chairman, the Honorable Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, which has received the unanimous approval of the Ways and Means Committee.

As a new member of the committee, it has been a most interesting experience to serve on this great committee, during the Eightieth Congress, under the leadership of Chairman Knutson.

Members who have served on the committee for a great number of years inform me that not in their memory has the committee accomplished so much in a single session in the way of major legislation. The tax-reduction bill heads the list of numerous bills in the public interest voted out of the committee. This in a very large measure is due to the courageous and able leadership of the chairman. I have found the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] to be eminently fair in his consideration of all questions. He is a stout-hearted fighter for the right; an able statesman and a great public servant. He is the type that built this Republic and is the type that will sustain it.

I wish for my friend and colleague, Chairman Knurson, many more years of health, happiness, and service to his country.

Mr. GOODWIN. Mr. Speaker, among the many treasured memories of legislative associations, there is none I shall cherish longer than that of serving in the Eightieth Congress under the inspiring leadership of Hon. Harold Knutson, as chairman of the Committee on Ways and

The duties of the chairman of this important committee are most arduous. The legislative subjects of taxation, tax revision, tax reduction, the tariff, reciprocal trade and social security are all highly technical and the handling of these and other matters just as involved, through the process of committee hearings, executive committee consideration, report, clearance for House consideration and conduct of debate call for the highest qualities of generalship. Harold Knutson has demonstrated his possession of these qualities in a high degree.

His distinguished service to the country marks him as a statesman worthy to follow in the footsteps of the illustrious and distinguished gentlemen who have preceded him as chairman of this great committee not the least of whom is his immediate predecessor, the beloved gentleman from North Carolina, Hon. ROBERT L. DOUGHTON.

I am honored to have the privilege of joining with my committee colleagues in wishing for him a full measure of health, happiness, and success for the future and a triumphant return to further distinguished service in Congress.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I am greatly privileged as a member of the Ways and Means Committee to join my colleagues in paying this merited tribute to our distinguished chairman, the Honorable Harold Knutson.

Any member of that committee, charged with the duty of preparing tax legislation, must recognize in the chairman one who from a maze of conflicting testimony is able to reach a correct conclusion. Once having reached the conclusion he believes right, Harold Knutson adheres to it unflinchingly until the final decision.

Early in the Eightieth Congress, our chairman, convinced as he was of the need for income-tax reduction, and believing firmly that the good of his country required it, introduced legislation to accomplish his purpose. Despite the utmost opposition which included two Presidential vetoes, Harold Knutson, never deviating an iota in principle, led his colleagues in Congress to final passage of his legislation.

His wisdom and courage are already proved—by his courage, perseverance and hard work, he thus raised his own monument in the minds and hearts of all American citizens.

Born in another land, our chairman has proved himself an honored and capable leader of his Nation's destiny. He has the courage and ability to meet the challenge of his times and as chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee, has become a guiding light in the government of the greatest Nation in the world.

In all ways fair and impartial as chairman of the committee, HAROLD KNUTSON has endeared himself to both the majority and minority members of that committee, by recognizing the importance and vital part played by the minority in truly representative Government, while adhering to his belief that the majority party should assume its responsibility. By his fairness he has strengthened representative government as exemplified in our committee. It is this quality which has made him a great leader and brought about the teamwork so essential for efficient committee action where constructive work is required by both the majority and minority of the committee.

HAROLD KNUTSON has proved himself qualified to take a place in the roster of other distinguished chairmen who have preceded him. I consider it a great honor to have worked with him, to have had the benefit of his counsel and cooperation and I look forward to future years in which our mutual associations will continue.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, of all of those who have risen to national prominence in the public service during our times, none is held in higher respect or warmer affection than is Representative HAROLD KNUTSON, present-day chairman of the House of Representatives Committee on Ways and Means. The high esteem in which he is held in the hearts and minds of his colleagues did not come by chance. Under every test to which a legislator can be subjected, he has been found worthy of the trust and confidence of which others have spoken so earnestly.

Because I, as a Member of the House of Representatives for 14 years and of the great Committee on Ways and Means for ten, have had an exceptional opportunity to appraise the works and measure the character of this great and good man, I have no hesitancy in joining the many others who have risen from their seats to honor him on this touching occasion, each one in his turn to proclaim him one of the great legislators of our times, one whose name and accomplishments will ever be written large in the annals of this Republic.

The steadfastness with which he adheres to that which he conceives to be right; the intelligence and driving force which he throws behind that which he considers good; the successes which he has achieved in the promotion of the general welfare, will mark him indelibly as a courageous, fearless, able and very efficient representative of the people. In his effective management of the public business, he commands the admiration of the entire membership, regardless of political affiliation.

But aside from all this, the elements of his character which have won for him so large a place in the hearts of his colleagues, are found in his, the lovable personality of an ingenuous man; his quick sympathy for the weak and oppressed; his helping hand which is ever extended to those who are troubled; his words of encouragement to the despondent; his spontaneous wit and rollicking good fellowship which is so quickly revealed as the dark clouds fade from the once troubled skies and good men can once again make merry. No one is poor who can claim such a man as his friend.

So I, with all of the others, am happy to rise and to salute Harold Knutson, the genial gentleman from Minnesota. There is not, there could not be, a finer, a better, a more lovable man. May his life be long and full of happiness; his public service, with success and honors great, for, indeed, no one is more deserving of these.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Speaker, membership on a major congressional committee entails much work and study. Membership on the great Ways and Means Committee, of which Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, is chairman, is no exception.

A chairman can do much toward making a record for the committee. We believe that Harold Knutson has set a new high mark in that capacity. Under his leadership the work of the Ways and Means Committee has been most effective and harmonious. In expressing its appreciation the committee on June 17, 1948, assembled in special meeting to tell our chairman our feelings toward him.

Mr. WEST. Mr. Speaker, it is with sincere pleasure I take advantage of this opportunity to commend the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Hon. HAROLD KNUTSON, of Minnesota, for his constructive work and aggressive leadership, as well as for the fair and impartial manner in which he has conducted the committee. His years of service as an outstanding statesman bears witness to his enterprise and initiative and industry. He has contributed much to the welfare of this Nation, giving a guaranty of a greater and more splendid future for our country.

It has been a real pleasure to work with Mr. Knurson, and I hope our paths may cross often in the future. He has my best wishes for his continued health, happiness, and success.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, the following is a statement made by me in presenting a resolution to the Committee on Ways and Means in honor of the gentleman from Minnesota, Hon. Harold Knutson, which was unanimously adouted:

Mr. Chairman, I have served as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means for about 24 years and was its chairman for 14 years. Prior to becoming chairman, I have served on the committee with the following chairmen: Hon. William Green, of Iowa; Hon. William Collier, of Mississippi; and Hon. Charles Crisp, of Georgia, who was acting chairman during the illness of Chairman Collier.

In my opinion our present chairman, Hon. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, is the equal of any chairman within my experience in point of ability and the fine service he has rendered as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means since the opening of the Eightieth Congress.

Mr. Knurson has also extended to me many personal courtesies and kindnesses which I shall always appreciate and I offered the resolution which was adopted unanimously, expressing our high estimate and profound appreciation of the wonderful record made by Chairman Knutson.

Mr. KNUTSON is not only an excellent chairman but a great legislator and an outstanding American citizen who is rendering most unusual service to our Nation.

Mr. KNUTSON. My friends, I am deeply touched by your action. No man is better qualified to bear testimony on the greatness of this wonderful country and the many opportunities it has to offer to those who are willing to work and strive for advancement than am I, who was born in a foreign land.

I well recall, as a small boy, how our beloved mother would gather her brood of little ones about her each night preparatory to being put to bed. Placing her arms about us she offered up the evening prayer and always that prayer included a note of thanksgiving to Providence for having permitted our family to come to this wonderful country where each and every one is free to carve out his own career. I learned at her bedside the great lesson of Americanism, and if at times it may have appeared that I am strongly nationalist it is altogether due to the fact that I love my country and am zealous of her welfare.

George Washington's admonition to us to avoid entangling alliances has ever had the force of a command from on high for me.

Being chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, an honor that had never before come to my great State, carries with it heavy responsibilities, as My sainted mother often impressed upon our young and plastic minds that life is like a bank account and we can draw on that account only as much as we put into it. It was a proud moment in my mother's life when I was first sworn in as a Member of Congress, but it was not the pride of position. Rather, it was pride that her son had been placed in a position where he could be of service to others, and during my long tenure here I have always looked upon my position as an opportunity to be of service to others. How well I have succeeded is not for me to say.

As chairman of the great Ways and Means Committee I have tried to be fair and helpful to my colleagues. I am happy to say that except when party issues were involved there has been little partisanship in our deliberations and in our labors. All were animated by the same lofty ideal—to render the best and greatest possible service to the land that we love and which has done so much for each and every one of us.

May I say at this point that the loyal and effective help of my old and most valued friend, Mr. Doughton, has contributed much to whatever measure of success I may have attained as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. His wise counsel has on more than one occasion smoothed the way for reporting necessary legislation. My friend places country above party, which is the hallmark of statesmanship. He has served longer as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means than any other—a fine tribute to c. fine gentleman.

Regardless of my future plans I shall ever cherish the memory of the friendships formed while a member of our great committee. To me the recollection of my service here will ever be a cherished memory.

In closing, let me again thank you from the bottom of my heart for the fine cooperation you have always given me. It was your helpfulness that enabled me to carry on and garner whatever success that has been attained. In return I wish for each and every one of you life's richest blessings, peace of mind, good health, happiness, and length of years.

COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION .

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 691, Rept. No. 2415), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

Resolved, That there is hereby created a select committee to be composed of five Members of the House to be appointed by the Speaker, one of whom he shall designate as chairman. Any vacancy occurring in the membership of the committee shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment was made.

The committee is authorized, empowered, and directed to conduct a study and investigation of the organization, personnel, and activities of the Federal Communications Commission with a view to determining whether or not such Commission in its organization, in the selection and appointment of personnel, and in the conduct of its functions and activities, has been, and is, acting in accordance with law and the public interest, including (but not limiting the foregoing authority) a study and investigation of the Commission's licensing and license-renewal activities; the Commission's power and authority, if any, to promulgate and issue its so-called Blue Book and the extent to which, if any, the same has been, or is being, used as the basis or excuse for regulation by the Commission, directly or indirectly, of radio-program content at licensed radio stations; whether the Commission has licensed, or proposes to license, any radio station or stations owned or controlled by persons who are members of, or affiliated with, subversive or Communist-front organizations or who might permit the facilities of such radio stations to be used contrary to the public interest; and whether there has been, or is, any concerted movement or effort to procure the concentration of radio-station licenses, including FM, AM, and television, in the hands of a limited class of persons or concerns rather than a distribution of such licenses on a geographical and equitable basis, as provided by the Communications Act of 1934, as amended.

The committee shall report to the House (or to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session) at the earliest practicable date, for during the first session of the Eighty-first Congress, the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations as it deems desirable.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee is authorized to sit and act during the present session of Congress at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, records, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued over the signature of the chairman of the committee or any member designated by him, and may be served by any person designated by such chairman or member.

POSTAL RATE REVISION AND SALARY ACT OF 1948

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6916) to provide for permanent postal rates and additional compensation for postmasters and employees of the field service in the Post Office Department.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act shall be cited as the "Postal Rate Revision and Salary Act of 1948."

TITLE I—ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION FOR POST-MASTERS AND EMPLOYEES IN THE FIELD SERV-ICE OF THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

POSTAL NOTES

SEC. 207. (a) The Postmaster General may authorize postmasters at such offices as he shall designate, under such regulations as he shall prescribe, to issue and pay money orders not exceeding $10, to be known as postal notes. The fee for insurance thereof shall be 8 cents each.

(b) Postal notes shall be valid for two calendar months from the last day of the month of their issue; but thereafter may be paid by the Postmaster General or refund may be made in case of loss, upon evidence satisfactory to him, under such regulations as he may prescribe: Provided, That no claim for the amount of a postal note will be considered unless filed within 1 year from the last day of the month of issue. Postal notes shall not be negotiable or transferable through endorsement.

REGISTERED MAIL

SEC. 208. (a) Mail matter shall be registered on the application of the party posting the same. The registry fees, which shall be in addition to the regular postage, and the limits of indemnity therefor within the maximum indemnity provided by this subsection, shall be as follows: For registry indemnity not exceeding $5, 25 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $5, 25 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $25, 35 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $25 but not exceeding $50, 40 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $75 but not exceeding $100, 50 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $75 but not exceeding $100, 50 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $300, 70 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $300, 70 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $300 but not exceeding $400, 85 cents; for registry indemnity exceeding $400 but not exceeding $500, $1; for registry indemnity exceeding $600, $1.10; for registry indemnity exceeding $600 but not exceeding $700, $1.20; for registry indemnity exceeding $700 but not exceeding $800, $1.30; for registry indemnity exceeding $800 but not exceeding $900, $1.40; for registry indemnity exceeding $900 but not exceeding $1,000, $1.50.

(b) For registered mail having a declared value in excess of the maximum indemnity covered by the registry fee paid, there shall be charged additional fees (known as "surcharges") as follows: When the declared value exceeds the maximum indemnity covered by the registry fee paid by not more than $50, 2 cents; by more than $50 but not more than $100, 3 cents; by more than $100 but not more than $200, 4 cents; by more than $200 but not more than $400, 6 cents; by more than $400 but not more than $600, 7 cents; by more than $600 but not more than $800, cents; by more than $800 but less than $1,000, 10 cents. If the excess of the declared value over the maximum indemnity covered by the registry fee paid is $1,000 or more, the additional fees for each $1,000 or part of $1,000 on articles destined to points within the several zones applicable to fourth-class matter shall be as follows: For local delivery or for delivery within the first zone, 11 cents; for delivery within the second zone, 12 cents; for delivery within the third zone, 14 cents; for delivery within the fourth zone, 15 cents; for delivery within the fifth or sixth zone, 16 cents; for delivery within the seventh or eighth zone, 18 cents.

(c) For insured mail treated as registered mail having a declared value in excess of the maximum indemnity covered by the insur-ance fee paid, there shall be charged addi-tional fees (known as "surcharges") as fol-lows: When the declared value exceeds the maximum indemnity covered by the insurance fee paid by not more than $50, 1 cent; by more than $50 but not more than $100, 2 cents; by more than $100 but not more than $200, 3 cents; by more than $200 but not more than $400, 4 cents; by more than $400 but not more than $600, 5 cents; by more than $600 but not more than $800, 6 cents; by more than $800 but less than $1,000, 7 cents. If the excess of the declared value over the maximum indemnity covered by the insurance fee paid is $1,000 or more, the additional fee for each $1,000 or part of $1,000 on articles destined to points within the several zones applicable to fourth-class matter shall be as follows: For local delivery or for delivery within the first zone, 8 cents; for delivery within the second zone, 9 cents; for delivery within the third zone, 10 cents; for delivery within the fourth zone, 11 cents; for delivery within the fifth or sixth zone, 12 cents; for delivery within the seventh or eighth zone, 13 cents.

(d) All such fees shall be accounted for in such manner as the Postmaster General shall direct. Mail matter for the official business of the Post Office Department which requires registering shall be registered free of charge, and pass through the mails free of charge.

RETURN RECEIPTS FOR REGISTERED MAIL

SEC. 209. Whenever the sender of any registered mail shall so request, and upon payment of a fee of 5 cents at the time of mailing or of 10 cents subsequent to the time of mailing, a receipt shall be obtained for such registered mail, showing to whom and when the same was delivered, which receipt shall be returned to the sender, and be received in the courts as prima facie evidence of such delivery: Provided, That upon payment of the additional sum of 26 cents at the time of mailing of any such registered mail, a receipt shall be obtained for such registered mail, showing to whom, when, and the address where the same was delivered, which receipt shall be returned to the sender, and be received in the courts as prima facie evidence of such delivery: Provided further, That no refund shall be made of fees paid for return receipts for registered mail where the fallure to furnish the sender a return receipt or the equivalent is not due to the fault of the postal service.

FEES FOR INSURED MAIL

SEC. 210. The fees for insurance, which shall be in addition to the regular postage, and the limits of indemnity therefor within the maximum indemnity provided by this section, shall be as follows: 5 cents for indemnification not exceeding $5; 10 cents for indemnification exceeding $5 but not exceeding $10; 15 cents for indemnification exceeding $10 but not exceeding $25; 20 cents for indemnification exceeding $25 but not exceding $50; 25 cents for indemnification exceeding $50 but not exceeding $100; 30 cents for indemnification exceeding $100 but not exceeding $200. Whenever the sender of an insured article of mail shall so request, and upon payment of a fee of 5 cents at the time of mailing or of 10 cents subsequent to the time of mailing, a receipt shall be obtained for such insured mail, showing to whom and when the same was delivered, which receipt shall be returned to the sender, and be received in the courts as prima facie evidence of such delivery: Provided, That upon payment of the additional sum of 26 cents at the time of mailing of any such insured article of mail, a receipt shall be obtained for such insured mail, showing to whom, when, and the address where the same was delivered, which receipt shall be returned to the sender, and be received in the courts as prima facie evidence of such delivery: Provided further, That no refund shall be made of fees paid for return receipts for insured mail where the failure to furnish the sender a return receipt or the equivalent is not due to the fault of the postal service.

FEES FOR COLLECT-ON-DELIVERY MAIL

SEC. 211. The fees for collect-on-delivery service for sealed domestic mail matter of any class bearing postage at the first-class rate and for domestic third- or fourth-class mail matter shall, in addition to the regular postage and any other required fees, be as follows: 20 cents for collections and indemnity not exceeding $2.50; 25 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $5; 35 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $2.50 but not exceeding $5; 35 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $25; 45 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $25; 55 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $100; 60 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $100; 60 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $150; and 65 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $150 but not exceeding $150; and 65 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $150 but not exceeding $200. The fee for notifying the sender or his representative of inability to deliver a collect-on-delivery article shall be 5 cents.

RESTRICTION IN DELIVERY

SEC. 212. The Postmaster General, under such regulations as he may prescribe, is authorized to collect an additional fee of 20 cents for effecting the delivery by carrier or otherwise of domestic registered, insured, or collect-on-delivery mail, the delivery of which is restricted to the addressee only, or to the addressee or order: Provided, That no refund shall be made of fees paid for this service unless request for refund is made and erroneous delivery of the article or articles was made by the postal service or nondelivery of the article or articles was due to some fault of the postal service.

REGISTERED COLLECT-ON-DELIVERY MAIL

SEC. 213. (a) The fee for collect-on-delivery service for registered sealed domestic mail of any class bearing postage at the first-class rate shall, in addition to the regular postage and any other required fees, be 55 cents for collections and indemnity not exceeding $10; 70 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $50; 90 cents for collections and indemnity exceeding $50 but not exceeding $100; and $1.15 for collections and indemnity exceeding $100 but not exceeding $200. The maximum amount of charges collectible on any registered sealed domestic collect-on-delivery article shall be $200.

(b) When indemnity in excess of $200 is desired, the fee for such registered sealed domestic collect-on-delivery mail shall, in addition to the regular postage and any other required fees, be $1.20 for indemnity exceeding $200 but not exceeding $300; $1.25 for indemnity exceeding $300 but not exceeding $400; $1.30 for indemnity exceeding $400 but not exceeding $500; $1.35 for indemnity exceeding $500 but not exceeding $600; $1.40 for indemnity exceeding $600 but not exceeding $700; $1.45 for indemnity exceeding $700 but not exceeding $800; and $1.55 for indemnity exceeding $800 but not exceeding $1,000.

SEC. 214. This title shall take effect on the first day of the second calendar month following the calendar month in which it is enacted.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, it is the purpose of this legislation to provide a permanent increase of $450 per year in the salaries of employees in the field service of the Post Office Department and to offset a portion of the increased cost by an increase in postal rates.

Title I of this bill is concerned with a salary increase for postal employees. Under the provisions of title I employees paid on an annual basis will receive a $450 permanent increase in their annual salary. Increases are provided for employees paid on an hourly basis in the amount of 25 cents an hour and for fourth-class postmasters of 25 percent. First-, second-, and third-class postmasters will receive the $450 annual increase given other postal employees.

The increase for fourth-class postmasters is provided on a percentage basis because, as you know, for many of these postmasters the return for their services from the Post Office Department is not the major portion of their income. Fourth-class post offices are the smaller post offices which have gross receipts varying from $100 per year to a top of $1,500 per year. Since fourth-class postmasters are paid based upon their gross receipts, you can see that it would be completely out of proportion to increase their salaries on other than a percentage basis.

The committee devoted much time and study to the problem of increased salaries for postal employees. Testimony presented to the committee by postal employees' national organizations stressed the necessity of a salary increase based upon the recent increase in the cost of

To offset part of the rising cost of living in the past, postal employees in the field service of the Post Office Department to whom this bill applies have been granted two substantial permanent pay raises. The first was the adjustment in salaries and classifications under Public Law 134, Seventy-ninth Congress, amounting to $400 annually for each postal employee beginning July 1, 1945. The second was under Public Law 386. Seventy-ninth Congress, which granted an additional permanent salary increase of $400 a year, effective January 1, 1946.

In connection with its efforts to secure a meeting of the minds between the executive and legislative branches with respect to this problem, the committee requested the Bureau of the Budget and the Postmaster General to submit reports concerning pay-raise legislation.

In his budget message to the Congress in January 1948 the President stated that he was not recommending cost-ofliving increases in pay for Federal civilian employees. The President stated:

The rapid increase in living costs during the last 18 months has placed a serious bur-den on these groups. Yet, to offset the costof-living increase since the last time pay or benefit rates were advanced for each group would add at least $2,400,000,000 to budget expenditures in 1949—apart from increases that would be paid from the trust funds. This large expenditure would add greatly to the inflationary pressure in our economy.

Further, the committee secured a re-port from the Bureau of the Budget, the right arm of the President, with respect to pay raises for Federal employees, dated July 1, 1947, which stated:

In view of the recent substantial increases in the base pay rates of Federal employees generally, it appears that these rates for the lower and middle pay brackets are now fairly well in line with salaries outside the Govern-

In an additional report, dated February 25, 1948, the Bureau of the Budget

In reply, you are advised that by reason of the position taken by the President in his budget message of January 12, 1948, on this subject, it is not believed that the enactment of the proposed legislation (salary increases for postal workers) could be considered, at least at this time, as being in accord with the program of the President.

At hearings conducted by the committee, the Postmaster General stated: We have to rest upon the President's budget message to the Congress.

As the Members of the House can see, the committee has had little cooperation from the executive branch with respect to working out a fair solution to pay increases for postal employees. Yet, our committee undertook to approach this problem realistically, and title I of this bill providing for a $450 annual increase in the salaries of postal workers is, in the judgment of our committee, the best solution to this problem.

In my opinion-and I am sure this view is shared by the members of the committee-our faithful postal workers richly deserve this permanent increase in their base salaries.

It is true that the cost of the bill will be approximately $211,000,000 annually. However, title II of the bill provides for recovering approximately $125,000,000 of this cost by moderate increases in postal rates and postal services. The $450 increase is probably not as much as the postal workers desire. However, it is a permanent increase; and taking into consideration the fact that the Congress has, within the past 3 years, approved increases amounting to $800 a year, the committee believed the increase is fair and equitable.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana, our majority floor leader. Mr. HALLECK. What is the estimated deficit in the post office for this year?

Mr. REES. I understand the estimated deficit is approximately $375,000,-000 at the present time.

Mr. HALLECK. I commend the gentleman and his committee on bringing in a bill that contains in it, in addition to the pay raise, a provision for raising at least a substantial part of the money, because obviously we cannot go on and on having deficits in the Post Office constantly increasing.

Mr. REES. The President in his budget message in January stressed the need for increased postal rates to meet the large deficit, presently running to $375,000,000 annually. I may say, how-ever, that the Post Office Department has suggested much larger increases in rates than are proposed in this legislation. However, our committee tried to be practical about this matter and to be fair to all parties concerned. For that reason we have brought in what we believe to be moderate rate increases in dealing with this problem.

The President in his budget messages in 1947 and 1948 has stressed the need for increasing postal rates to meet the large postal deficit. The Postmaster General on March 23, 1948, recommended to the Congress increases in postal rates which would have raised revenues of $243,970,000. In the opinion of the committee the rates recommended by the Postmaster General are more in some categories than should be imposed upon the users of the mail at this time. The rates contained in title II of the bill provide for increases for the considerably lower amount of $124,225,000. These increases for the categories of mail and postal services included in the bill are as follows:

Amount of proposed increas $9,850,000 1. Air mail (domestic) ____ matter, 2. Circulars, printed irculars, printed matter, seeds, etc., in parcels weigh-ing less than 8 ounces ing less (third-class mail) _____ 14,600,000 Parcel post_____ 2,400,000 4. 3,300,000

At the present time we are experiencing an annual loss of $18,000,000 in handling air mail. As I have stated, increasing the rate on air mail from 5 to 6 cents will increase the revenue by approximately $10,000,000.

THIRD-CLASS MAIL

Third-class mail is circulars, printed matter, seeds, bulbs, and so forth, sent in parcels of less than 8 ounces. A special rate is provided in this classification for seeds and bulbs. Also there is a special rate provided for bulk mailers sending more than 200 uniform items at one mailing. In this bill there is no change of the 1-cent minimum rate charged for these bulk mailings. The increase in this rate comes in the smaller mailings of third-class mail and an increase in the pound rate of 2 cents. The thirdclass mailers have expressed themselves as being favorable to H. R. 3519 and I believe I can say they have been quite generously treated in this bill.

FOURTH-CLASS MAIL

Fourth-class mail has several subcategories—parcel post, catalogs, books and library books. Fourth-class mail is required to pay its own way according to present law. The Postmaster General, under this law which still remains in effect, is directed to increase parcel-post rates through a procedure involving the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission whenever revenues do not equal expenditures for handling parcel We have been experiencing for the past several years a large loss in parcel post and I have brought this fact to the attention of the Postmaster General. It has been his position that since Congress has under consideration a revision in parcel-post rates he is delaying taking proper action under the law. I have noted that the Senate Committee on Appropriations has also brought this fact to his attention and requested that he take action. The loss in parcel post in 1947 was $41,000,000. The rates provided in this bill will increase revenues in parcel post by $60,000,000. We must consider, of course, at the same time, this bill is increasing cost to the postal service so that with the increased rates the revenues from parcel post should approximate the expenditures in this class of

There has also been a lot of controversy whenever the question of book rate increases is considered. In this respect I should like to point out that books are, after all, merchandise, and as a matter of fact they are carried under regular parcel-post rates. Books do not have a high time priority and in the majority of cases, could actually go by freight instead of expensive postal service. For this reason it does not appear that the Post Office Department should be carrying books at a great loss. The proposed increases on books leave them at a flat rate, that is, there is the same charge for sending a book across the country as there is for sending it into the next This flat rate is justified becounty. cause book printing is concentrated in a few areas and it is felt that this does assist in a wide distribution of books. Even with these increased rates on books, we will still be carrying them at less than cost.

Most of the other increases concern postal services. I do not believe there has been as much controversy over increasing these rates as over increasing rates for mail. Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Texas, one of the distinguished members of our committee who has worked very diligently in trying to work out this problem.

Mr. COMBS. First I want to say that in my judgment no committee of the House has done its work more conscientiously or more studiously avoided partisanship than the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. Our distinguished chairman has been patient and worked hard and every member of the committee, Republicans and Democrats, has worked hard to report out fair, well-considered bills for enactment. It is true, is it not, that a great deal of the deficit of the Post Office Department is occasioned by the fact that we use that Department as an agency to subsidize air mail and even the railroads in the carrying of mail. In other words, the money appropriated for the Post Office Department is not all used in expanding the mail service, but some in subsidies to build air lines and things of that kind.

Mr. REES. I thank the gentleman for his statement. I think he well knows that our committee has made a strenuous effort to separate those two proposals. We subsidize the air lines through the Post Office when we should subsidize them separately. We do have a policy that has been adopted whereby it is agreed that the air lines shall be supported in order to provide for commerce and national defense.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield again to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. HALLECK. I think it would be well for the RECORD if the gentleman would state the amount of that subsidy. Certainly it does not begin to amount to as much as the over-all deficit in the Post Office.

Mr. REES. As near as it can be figured out, the subsidy amounts to between 15 and 20 million dollars.

Mr. Speaker, I want to state that we are increasing air mail 1 cent. Third-class mail, which includes circulars, printed matter, seeds, and parcels weighing less than 8 ounces, is being increased. With reference to fourth-class mail, which includes catalogs and books, under the law as it now stands the rates on fourth-class mail should be sufficiently high so it will pay its own way. It is the responsibility of the Postmaster General to initiate such rate revision with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission. They have failed to act.

Mr. GWINN of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York.

Mr. GWINN of New York. Do you propose in this bill to fix rates without having had any hearings on those rates?

Mr. REES. I will say to the gentleman that we held hearings for weeks and weeks on these matters. This bill has been pending in the Committee on Rules for exactly 13 months.

Mr. GWINN of New York. Is that with reference to rates?

Mr. REES. We held hearings and the first-, second-, third-, and fourth-class mail people came in and testified. We have reams of testimony on this.

Mr. GWINN of New York. On rates?
Mr. REES. Oh, yes, indeed. We have them all in. We have full and complete hearings on this. It has been threshed up one side and down the other.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri, a member of our committee.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. I would like to state that all during the Seventy-ninth Congress, our committee held hearings on the question of increasing rates. We spent about 3 years trying to provide a means of fixing postal rates.

Mr. BREHM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, a former member of the Post Office Committee of the House.

Mr. BREHM. To answer the question of the gentleman from New York, hearings were held on this legislation when I was a member of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. To tell you the truth, I regret that I am no longer a member of that committee.

Mr. REES. I appreciate the gentleman's statement. The problem has been threshed out over and over again.

I want to pay tribute to the members of our committee on both sides, each and every one of them, for the splendid effort they put forth in trying to reach a solution of this very important problem. Some of the rates included in this bill perhaps ought to be adjusted. However, we did the best we could in an effort to bring equitable legislation to attention. We ask for your approval of this legislation.

Mr. BUSBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois, who has for some time been looking into this problem.

Mr. BUSBEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUSBEY. Mr. Speaker, I am surprised and disappointed to learn that the bill we have under consideration to increase the salaries of postal employees only provides for an annual increase of $450.

The Members of this House know I am just as economy-minded as anyone else and that I try to guard the tax-payers' money very diligently.

The facts are simply these: It has been a disgrace and a shame the lack of consideration that has been given postal employees for many, many years. They are a group whose patriotism has never been challenged. They stuck to their jobs through the war years when it would have been to their advantage to go into war plants where they could have made large salaries. Because of the low wage scale now paid postal employees, they have had to secure work on the outside after hours in order to make enough money to meet their family expenses. In many cases they could not hang on any longer because of the heavy ex-penses, notwithstanding the fact that they would have liked to retain their positions with the Post Office.

I say to you in all sincerity that if we can send billions and billions and then more billions of dollars to Europe, most of which is squandered and for which we shall never get any return or benefit, the least amount that should be granted the faithful postal employees is an increase of $600 per year.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MURRAY] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes

Mr. Speaker, as has been explained by the able chairman of our committee, this bill does two things: It provides a permanent increase of $450 per year to all postal employees except those employees who are paid by the hour, and to fourthclass postmasters. Those employees who are paid by the hour get a raise of 25 cents per hour. The fourth-class postmasters get an increase of 25 percent in their present compensation.

Second, the bill provides for an increase in postage rates. It affects all classes of rates except second-class mail.

The committee thought those rates for second-class mail should be increased, because at the present time the Post Office Department is losing $160,000,000 on the carriage of second-class mail. But be that as it may, the increase in the other postage rates in this bill will produce about $124,000,000 in additional revenue. The cost of the increase in salaries of the postal employees in this bill will be about $211,000,000 per year. There are approximately 480,000 employees in the postal service. So the revenue brought in by the increase in postage rates in this bill will be about $85,000,000 less than the cost of the increases in salaries.

Let me say in the beginning your committee brought in a bill which provided $585 temporary increase per annum for the postal employees, but the powers that be would not permit that bill to be considered, and we were required to bring in another bill, making the salary increase $450.

This increase is deserved. It is just. It is fair to meet the increased cost of living. From 1923 to 1945 our postal employees had no increases. On July 1, 1945, they were given $400 a year increase. In 1946 they were given another $400 increase. This increase of $450 now is certainly needed to help these employees pay their increased cost of living.

To my mind, there is no more faithful, no more just, no more loyal group of employees in our Government service than our postal employees. There is another bill pending in the House. It is H. R. 6917. It provides compensation to other employees of our Government, other than postal employees. There is a rule on this bill, and I trust that the majority leadership will permit consideration of this measure also.

Mr. Speaker, it would be grossly unjust, unfair, and discriminatory to increase the payments to postal employees and not to increase the pay for other Federal employees.

The Republican leadership has always been fair and considerate, and I implore the Republican leadership to permit this House, before the sun sets this evening. to pass H. R. 6917, increasing the compensation of other Federal employees gentleman yield?

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, will the

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I yield. Mr. COMBS. Is it not true that our distinguished chairman, when he origi-nally introduced the bill, had all Federal employees in one bill, and "the powers that be." to use your expression, required a separation?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. That is exactly correct.

Mr. SASSCER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I yield. Mr. SASSCER. I am happy to see these postal rates increased. I thoroughly agree in the gentleman's hope that this Congress will not adjourn until other classified employees, Government workers, are given this much-needed

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. JENNINGS. I wish to commend the very fine work the committee has done in bringing out this bill in behalf of the employees of the postal service, and especially my colleague from Tennessee who has rendered hard and meritorious work in a good cause.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman for his kind words.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. Love].

Mr. LOVE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of legislation providing for a permanent increase of $450 annually to our hard-working and very deserving postal workers.

As a member of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, I have received many requests from all parts of the United States asking that the proposed increase should be at least $800. I regret that it is not possible to reach this figure. However, I wish to call to the attention of all postal employees that they will receive a substantial incometax reduction as of January last. This reduction should amount to about $100 annually to the average letter carrier. Therefore, your raise will, in effect, be approximately $550 for those who pay Federal income taxes.

We have also amended the Civil Service Retirement Act to increase annuity benefits 25 percent, or $300.

In providing a permanent pay raise of $450, a greatly improved retirement system, and a substantial income-tax reduction, I, for one, am not ashamed of what the Eightieth Congress has done for our loyal postal employees.

This proposed legislation will cost the Federal Government approximately $203,000,000. The bill also includes increased mail rates to provide estimated additional revenue of approximately $124,000,000. During fiscal 1947, the United States Post Office Department operated at an approximate loss of $300,-000,000. It should be pointed out here, very clearly, that the Post Office Department is one of the few Government agencies that provides revenue. Since our Post Office Department should be considered partly as a great public service to our people and to our Republic, I do not believe that we should criticize it too severely if it does not pay its way in full. What Government agency does pay its way? We should also realize that it wav? costs money to service our vast amount of penalty and free mail. However, a large portion of the United States mails are used strictly for business and commercial purposes. This service should not be donated. Many rates should be increased to help decrease the deficit in the Department and to partially support a deserved increase for the postal em-

In fiscal 1947, air mail operated at a loss of almost $19,000,000. This bill proposes a rate increase from 5 cents to 6 cents, which would increase revenues by about $10,000,000. Parcel post lost $41,-000,000 in 1947 and the proposed rate increase of 28 percent would provide an additional $60,000,000. Money orders lost $32,000,000 and a 50-percent increase would add $17,000,000. COD service lost $6,000,000, and a 20-percent increase proposes revenues of more than $3,000,000.

Third-class mail, including circulars. seeds, and so forth, lost $74,000,000, and an 18-percent increase would provide some $14,000,000. Other rate increases, not including second-class mail, aggregate a total increase of revenue to some $124,000,000.

I repeat, in conclusion, that the United States Post Office should be considered as a great public service and that we should not expect it to operate entirely out of the red. However, insofar as strictly commercial postal rates are concerned. these rates should be increased as in the present bill to eliminate unjustified deficits in the Post Office Department and also to support increases to postal workers.

Mr. SADLAK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOVE. I yield.

Mr. SADLAK. I am heartily in favor of the immediate passage of H. R. 6916 under suspension of the rules and take this opportunity to commend the untiring efforts and persistence of our committee chairman, the likable, distinguished gentleman from Kansas [Mr.

Much deserving and meritorious legislation has emanated from our Committee on Post Office and Civil Service during the Eightieth Congress. Predominantly deserving, however, is this bill which will bring some needed economic relief to very loyal and devoted public servants, assure them that their employer is appreciative and make possible the retention of experienced employees as well as recent appointees who decided to make careers in the post office service. It will also provide an incentive to others who hesitate in making this selection because of the entrance salary. And, Mr. Speaker, with reference to the latter, the eligible registers in every large city post office bespeak the urgent need of a change in this respect or serious difficulties may arise.

'I am sure that it is well known that I worked for the passage of a larger increase of these salaries and that I also was active and deeply interested in all Federal workers and shall endeavor to get action on H. R. 6916. Knowing well the mechanics by which legislation is enacted, I urge the acceptance and approval of H. R. 6916.

Mr. EDWIN ARTHUR HALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LOVE. I yield.

Mr. EDWIN ARTHUR HALL. I wish to commend the gentleman at this time and to express the hope that it may be possible to bring out the bill for the other Federal employees before the session ends.

Mr. Speaker, last February I appeared before the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service through the courtesy of its chairman, and asked for the maximum of $1,000 salary increase which the postal workers of my district requested. I have publicly proclaimed my position again and again and flatly stated these deserving people must have first consideration.

The postal employees that I represent made it plain to me they want a larger raise than we are giving them today. I think they are right.

However, the time is late, the House is adjourning, and this important matter has been held up until the last minute. There is no chance to offer amendments to increase this proposed amount of $450.

Naturally, I am happy that this raise is presented and I gladly support it. I know all the post office people at home will be glad the increase has been brought up.

For some time I was apprehensive over the protests my office received from postal workers each time I returned home. They were honest protests from heads of families who find it difficult to meet the rising cost of living. They were righteous complaints from employees, long faithful to the Post Office Department, who had seen other departments get raises and yet got no satisfaction themselves.

I repeat I am glad to have a part in passing this pay-raise bill today. It is a step in the right direction and spells a measure of justice to our deserving postal workers.

The second part of the bill, I regret I cannot support. It has to do with raising rates of the parcel post. I think they are already too high.

Perhaps it is good politics, but I know many businessmen who will object to having these rates raised. Personally I do not think this rate increase is necessary and I have the right to my opinion. I regret no chance is given here to amend this section or I would certainly try to do so.

The postal pay raise is timely, well-deserved, and necessary. The men I know at home will be grateful and I have looked forward with great anticipation to giving them this lift. I take pleasure in voting for the postal employees' pay raise here today.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr.
Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Lyle].

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Speaker, I share with the splendid chairman and the outstanding members of the great Committee on Post Office and Civil Service the responsibility of bringing you well-considered legislation in an orderly and democratic manner. We are proud of our record. Unfortunately, we cannot be proud of this bill and, personally, I can accept no compliments from the leadership of the Republican Party for it. It is not a committee bill. We are but the instrument by which the majority policy committee impresses its ideas upon the House in this particular legislation. You, too, have been disfranchised and stripped of the power to offer your ideas as representatives of millions of American people-it cannot be amended. Those responsible for the bill saw to that.

I have always cherished orderly democratic procedure by which the majority may express its will. Such is not the case here, for this is the will of a few. In my judgment the arbitrary use of power by a small group, be it policy or otherwise, which renders a majority of the membership impotent, notwithstanding the character and integrity of the individuals involved, is contrary and harmful to the fundamentals of American representative government. Yet witness such at this hour.

At the beginning of the Eightieth Congress your committee began to study the advisability of increasing Federal salaries for postal workers and others. held extensive hearings and worked long hours attempting to arrive at justice for the Government and the employee. Many weeks ago your committee recommended favorably the passage of legislation increasing the salaries of postal workers and other Federal workers. The increases recommended were not in the amounts asked, nor were they equal to the increased cost of living. The bills the increased cost of living. were, however, carefully considered, and while they did not meet with my full approval, they did express the majority opinion of the committee. You have not had and will not have an opportunity to pass upon either of these measures. They lie dormant in the Rules Committee.

More than 14 months ago your committee, after months of careful and deliberate study, recommended postal rate increases. This bill represented the best thought of the members of a committee who had spent months, and many of them, years, studying the problem with no other purpose than the development of a postal system and service that could adequately meet the demands of this great country at rates the people can afford to pay, and with as little loss as possible to the Government. This bill is before the Rules Committee and has been for more than 1 year.

Your chairman and your committee, without political consideration, have attempted to discharge their responsibilities to you and to the people in a useful and helpful manner. I could not praise the committee membership too highly.

Does this bill before you today represent the work and thought of your committee? I regret to say that it does not.

Briefly, I will give you its story. It came as a surprise and a shock to me a very few days ago when it was placed on the doorstep of the committee with word, supposedly from the Republican policy committee—and I do not question its source—which was in the nature of an ultimatum: This or nothing.

It is quite popular, and has been, to use Federal employees as whipping boys. Unquestionably we employ more than are necessary. Unfortunately some are not worthy of their trust and responsibility and do not earn their pay. But I will not join with any demagogic harrangue against the hundreds of thousands of necessary, able, and faithful employees who make possible the orderly functioning of this great Government. They are entitled to the consideration that should be given to every faithful worker of private industry or public service. Hundreds of thousands of Government employees are suffering with millions of Americans as a result of the unprecedented, unchecked, and, assuredly, unfortunate spiral of living costs.

Federal employees must depend entirely upon this Congress for relief. They have no right to strike; they have no right to participate as a body or in groups in politics; they are limited to the interest, thoughtfulness, fairness, and consideration of you gentlemen. I feel constrained to compliment the employees, particularly those who have contacted me, for they have been courteous, patient, considerate, and reasonable and they have, under no circumstances, attempted to put pressure upon me, personally or through the mails. Mr. Speaker, this bill is not the bill that should be before the House.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LYLE. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMAS of Texas. I would like to compliment the gentleman from Texas for his very fine statement. I would also like to compliment the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Rees], chairman of the full committee, for reporting out two bills granting pay increases not only to postal employees but to all Federal employees. Had that committee been let alone, all Federal employees today would have had a good substantial pay raise which they all deserve.

Mr. LYLE. And in an orderly manner.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LYLE. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. I had not expected to ask the gentleman to yield to me, but I have been very much interested in what he had to say.

Mr. LYLE. I hoped the gentleman would be.

Mr. HALLECK. Does the gentleman agree with me that as costs increase in the Post Office Department of necessity and as a part of the over-all budgetary situation and the Federal Treasury, we have to pay some attention to rates?

Mr. LYLE. For 1 year we have urged the Republican policy committee to permit the consideration of the postal rate increase bill. This bill has been before the Committee on Rules since May 1947. The gentleman is just a year behind the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. I join with every Member of this House in a sincere effort to cut the expenses of Government, to reduce the national debt and to help bring about a sound fiscal policy for the Government. No reasonable or thinking man, however, can argue successfully that adequate salaries for Federal employees would be inconsistent with a sound fiscal policy.

All Federal employees are entitled, in my judgment, to increases in salary at this time. There is now a bill, intro-duced by the great chairman of my committee, ready for consideration but without the blessing of the leadership. It provides for salary increases for classified and other Federal employees. He and the other members of my committee join me, I am sure, in wishing that you might have an opportunity to pass upon it. And with all frankness, Mr. Speaker, if I have the honor of serving on the conference committee between the two Houses, provided there is one, I shall do my utmost to bring back to the House fair increases for all Federal employees. I shall also attempt to divorce postalrate increases from the salary bill. Postal rates are not properly made in relation to the salaries of postal employees. They cannot be. They should be considered separately and apart.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. LYLE. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. ALBERT. Why were not the users of second-class mail, who are responsible for the biggest deficit, included in the policy committee's statement?

Mr. LYLE. That is a question the answer to which will be somewhat embarrassing to the policy committee which omitted it from its ultimatum. The answer is, I believe, this: The Post Office Department is calculated to lose $160,-000,000 on this class of mail in 1948. In my judgment, nevertheless, they could not face the great newspapers and, perhaps, magazines, which would be affected by a change in second-class mail rates in a year of political campaigns.

Mr. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. LYLE. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. CHELF. The ultimatum was received notwithstanding the fact that better than 218 Members of this House, making up the majority and the minority, appeared before your committee and asked that this pay increase be granted?

Mr. LYLE. Unfortunately, this present bill failed to take into consideration the ideas of the membership of this

Mr. Speaker, I shall not object to the passage of this bill for I have hopes that it may be worked into acceptable legislation before it reaches the President's desk. I could not, in good conscience, refrain from this explanation to the House of the procedure by which it comes to you. Perhaps in frank discussion we may better understand each other and more admirably serve the people who have entrusted us with great responsibilities. We shall, I am sure, always cherish the advice of the leadership of both sides of the House, but seldom shall we, I sincerely hope, subject ourselves to the dictates of either, when by doing so we thwart the will of the majority of the United States Representatives.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. Williams.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the distinguished chairman of my committee-a committee of which I have been a member only about 2 months-fcr the splendid work that he has done and is doing. He has always had the interest of the Federal workers at heart; he has had the interest of the postal workers at heart His heart is right, but his hands have been tied by the uncompromising actions of his own party's leaders. I had hoped that a bill would be brought out that would provide for adequate permanent increases for postal employees. I thought it was the duty of Congress to do so. You know, this Congress is in a large part responsible for the chaotic economic conditions which we find prevailing at the present time. I think it is our duty to provide for our Federal employees in order to help them meet the increased cost of living for which we are to some extent, at least, responsible. I cannot say that I am proud of this bill. I concur with my colleague from Texas in that, and I am not proud of the manner in which it was brought about. I contend that this bill should come to the floor under an open . rule, giving the Members the opportunity to offer amendments. In this way alone could we formulate a measure that would meet the approval of most of the Members of this House.

Mr. CARROLL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. CARROLL. Did I understand the legislative history of this particular bill to be that the committee reported out a bill which included both postal as well as other Federal employees, in a greater sum than mentioned in this bill?

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is true, but that was done before I became a member of the committee.

Mr. CARROLL. But that was reported out by this committee?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes. I may that the bills previously reported reflected more nearly the views of the majority of the committee than does this This bill is brought to you as measure. the result of an ultimatum, as the gentleman from Texas told you a few minutes ago, from the Republican Policy Committee. The leadership of the Republican Party dumped it in our laps, and told us to take it or leave it. If we leave it, our postal workers do not get a raise at all.

Mr. CARROLL. They have divided the bill and reduced the salary increase? WILLIAMS. That is exactly

Mr. COLE of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COLE of Missouri. The bill as reported by our committee did not include the other Federal employees. The bill as introduced included postal employees and Federal employees, but the bill as reported out included only the postal employees, and then a separate bill pertaining to Federal employees was reported out.

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is my contention that the committee wanted to be more liberal. I regret that the high-handed action of the majority leadership has dictated otherwise.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee, Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE].

Mr. BATTLE. Mr. Speaker, I shall vote for H. R. 6916 and H. R. 6917, and I urge the Members of the House to pass these bills. I cannot oppose such legislation without denying to hundreds of thousands of faithful Government employees a well-deserved and hard-earned cost-of-living increase in salaries. However, I strenuously oppose the procedure used to bring these measures to you.

Although these bills are very important there were no hearings on H. R. 6916 or H. R. 6917 in the Post Office and Civil Service Committee or in any other standing committee of the House. The Post Office and Civil Service Committee which is presenting these bills to you was not even consulted about their construction.

On June 14 the Republican policy committee issued an ultimatum to our Post Office and Civil Service Committee to the effect that no salary increase bills would be passed unless they were in the form of H. R. 6916 and H. R. 6917. Other measures had already been reported out by our committee dealing with the same issues, which provided increases in salaries for postal workers, increases in postal rates, and increases in salaries for Federal employees-all based upon evidence produced during the hearings. These measures were recommended by our committee after much deliberation and in a general sense reflected the bipartisan views of a majority of the members of the committee. No action whatsoever was allowed on these measures by the Rules Committee.

H. R. 6916 is a combination of these committee bills which were previously reported out, minus very important and integral parts of these same bills. The ultimatum which eliminated vital aspects of this legislation and made substantial reductions in the salary raises usurped the prerogatives and responsibilities of your Post Office and Civi Service Committee.

I believe in upholding the basic principle that legislation reported out by a major standing committee should reflect the considered judgment of this committee, and not the coerced political expediency of an outside partisan policy committee. Mr. Speaker, this procedure is dangerous and alarming. If real democracy is to be preserved we must not resort to such tactics, and I hereby protest vigorously against this action.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may be permitted to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my approval of the action that has just been taken by the House in granting a pay increase to postal employees. It was altogether fitting that we do this as our postal employees are among our finest and most conscientious Federal workers. Upon them rests much of the responsibility of maintaining the well-being of our Nation and it is only fair that we recognize and reward their faithful service in a highly justified material way.

It is regrettable, however, that the postal pay bill was considered under a suspension of the rules and it was not possible to have an amendment considered for a general Federal pay raise. I sincerely hope that the Senate will take action in seeing that this amendment is added when the bill is considered by that body. I favor a pay raise for all Federal employees and I will support and vote for legislation that will bring this about

Mr. CARROLL. Mr. Speaker, I shall vote for H. R. 6916, although the pay increase involved is inadequate to meet the increase in postal employees' cost of living.

I desire to record a vigorous protest against the political maneuvers which have occurred in connection with the presentation of this legislation.

There was ample evidence before the Post Office and Civil Service Committee that postal employees and other Federal workers are in dire need of a salary increase adequate to meet the high cost of living. Witness after witness testified that it was imperative that these employees receive not less than a $800-peryear salary increase. Notwithstanding the overwhelming weight of this testi-mony, the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, for reasons best known to itself, reported out separate bills-one giving the postal employees a salary increase of $585 per year and the other granting all other Federal employees a salary increase in the sum of $468 per year. Even though those salary increases were insufficient, this represented, neverthless, a reasonable step in the right direction.

The debate on the pending bill discloses a situation revealing a shocking disregard for the welfare of Federal employees and the legislative findings of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Important members of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee openly have charged on the floor of this House that the Republican policy committee has used tremendous pressure to keep these bills from being brought to the floor of the House for debate and vote in the form originally presented by the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

The record now reveals that the bill concerning postal employees has been subjected to a salary cut from $585 to $450 per year. Moreover, the Republican policy committee has refused to consider any pay raise for other Federal employees. In addition to being subjected to this high-handed program, the Membership of this House now is forced to vote on the pending bill under what is known as a suspension of the rules. Many of the postal and other Federal employees do not understand the effect of this legislative maneuver.

Under a suspension of the rules, Members who are in favor of more equitable treatment of both postal and other Federal employees are prohibited from amending the present bill in any manner. In short, we must either accept or reject the bill in its present form.

Further, it is quite apparent to me that there will be no relief for other deserving Federal employees who are suffering from the increase in the cost of living.

There is no doubt in my mind that if the Republican leadership had permitted both bills to advance in the normal legislative process, the membership of this body would have passed the salary increase both for postal and other Federal employees with an overwhelming majority.

Mr. Speaker, the legislative history of these two bills clearly shows that there has been a denial of the democratic process in their consideration. Such action is detrimental to our system of civil service and will not inspire the confidence of Federal employees in the legislative branch of the Government. These employees are entitled to the same rights and to the same protection in meeting the increase in the cost of living as are those workers who are employed in and who have been given wage increases by private industry.

Mr. LEMKE. Mr. Speaker, I am voting for this bill, but I am not satisfied with it. I favor an increase of $300 for postal service and other Federal employees. The talk of economy comes with poor grace from those who voted and supported our foreign policy. It comes with poor grace for those who saddled $623,000,000,000 of debts and future commitments on our shoulders by voting and supporting the 15 years of global gifts and expenditures.

I feel that this increase is inadequate to maintain the American standard of living. These employees are not able to properly take care of themselves and their families with the present 30-cent dollar that they are getting. The cost of living has gone up at least 200 percent, if not more, since 1937, 1938, and 1939.

For example, on August 11, 1939, in Fargo, N. Dak., a pound of Land O' Lakes butter was 23 cents; eggs were 2 dozen for 23 cents, strictly fresh; a pound-and-a-half loaf of bread was 9 cents; pork loin, 12 cents, bacon, 12½ cents; spare ribs, 8 cents; crisp celery, 5 cents; two heads of lettuce, 13 cents; five bunches of radishes, 5 cents; three bunches of carrots, 10 cents; 3 pounds of coffee, 39 cents; and other food and articles and wearing apparel were on a par with these prices. Compare them with today's prices, and then compare the postal service employees' pay and the Federal employees in lower brackets pay increase with price increases.

I feel that an increase of $800 per year for postal service employees and the Federal employees in the lower brackets is a reasonable increase. I especially suggest to this committee that they should bear in mind that Uncle Sam will again step in and take $160 out of that $800, leaving an actual increase of only $640.

I am not criticizing Uncle Sam, but the old gentleman with the striped trousers and stovepipe hat never misses a bet. He takes from the needy as well as the wealthy.

In addition, may I suggest that since we have given directly or indirectly to foreign nations something like $27,000,000,000 since the war ended, and we are about to give another $17,000,000,000, it is about time that we take care of the people who are at home; people who are still proud of being Americans. Charity still should begin at home even though we have temporarily lost our better judgment.

SWEET CHARITY

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, the thousands of people who do the work of our vast Government faithfully and patiently have looked to this Congress for a self-respecting increase in pay which would enable them to live in decency.

I am not speaking now for the postal employees alone as covered in this bill, and for whom I have repeatedly and publicly demanded a salary increase of at least $1,000 a year to meet the fly-away prices which resulted from the scuttling of price controls by the Republican Party.

Other Federal workers face the same inflation.

I was prepared to offer amendments to bring the salaries to a livable level, had the measure been permitted to come up under regular procedure weeks ago, when the bill was just as ready as it is now.

I hope the House failure to provide a cost-of-living increase for Federal employees—and I mean the clerks, the typists, the secretaries, the girls in my own office, the laborers, and the minor executives—will be remedied by the other House.

I hope, too, that the majority leadership can be proud of this stale half loaf of charity. I could not be, were the responsibility mine.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I will vote for this bill H. R. 6916. I regret the raise is not larger, at least $800 which I supported in the committee. We must vote for this or nothing. I regret that it does not cover all Federal employees in the classified lists. I hope we may be able before we adjourn, to pass such a bill covering all employees. I urge that the raise be raised for such employees to $800 and I appeal to the leadership to present such a bill to the House for passage before we adjourn.

Mr. PRICE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am voting for H. R. 6916 but must say that it is a disgrace of this Congress to throw such a crumb to the postal workers of our country. It has been proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that the postal employees and all other Federal employees really need at least $800 per

It has come to the point where we have to vote for a $450 raise or nothing.

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Speaker, this bill is a crime committed against the Government workers of America. It marks another one of the many broken promises with which the Republican Party has paved its road to hypocrisy.

First, it does not give the postal workers what they were led to believe they would receive.

Second, it completely destroys the morale of all Federal workers at a time when a raise was desperately needed.

Third, in this campaign year it refuses to raise rates on periodicals because of pressure.

Lastly, an increase in postal rates has no place in the same bill as wage increase.

I repeat, this is a crime. We are constantly driving the workers of our country to the wall. Brutalizing them with the Taft-Hartley law, terrorizing with the Mundt bill, fooling them with a phony housing act, and finally refusing to stop run-away prices and refusing to raise workers' pay.

This sop to the postal workers will not fool them or all Federal workers in November.

Mr. SARBACHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. R. 6916, which among other provisions will increase salaries of postal employees. I wholeheartedly favor this particular phase of H. R. 6916.

A few months ago I testified before the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service in favor of an increase for these loyal Government postal employees—actually I supported a larger increase in salary than this legislation permits, but this is a step in the right

I am extremely pleased to see the rules suspended and its passage expedited by the House of Representatives today. shall vote for H. R. 6916 and continue to press for the final enactment into law of this much-deserved pay raise for postal employees Mr. PHILBIN. Mr. Speaker, while I am very glad that some measure to grant well-deserved and urgently needed pay raises to postal workers has been at long last presented to this House for action, it is most distressing that its terms are not more generous. I am of course deeply pained that no general pay raise bill granting increases to other Government employees has been brought before us for action before adjournment.

The chairman of the committee [Mr. REES] whom I greatly esteem, is exceptionally able and conscientious, and his committee is comprised of some of the best men in this House. The distinguished gentleman and his committee have labored long and faithfully on pay raise legislation and I deeply regret that in the pressure of the final business of the Congress, the full program of pay increases for all Government workers has not been submitted to this House.

I cannot express enthusiasm about the principle contained in the bill of binding pay raises to rate increases in certain categories because I think that the results are inevitably to confuse the budgetary position of the Post Office Department, and also place burdens inequitably and disproportionately upon various users of the postal system.

The bill provides some measure of relief, however, and grants substantial increases, which coupled with current tax reductions and an improved retirement system, justifies me in voting for it even though I would desire a better, a more generous bill and a sounder-based, better-devised budgetary arrangement to finance it.

Personally I have worked unceasingly to assist our faithful postal workers and other worthy and loyal Government employees to secure well-merited pay raises. I appeared in their behalf before the appropriate committees of both House and Senate and have worked in many other ways to help secure favorable consideration for them.

Without question the House will pass this measure under suspension of the rules and thereby place its seal of approval upon legislation which, if in some respects inadequate, will nevertheless aid and assist, in this period of skyrocketing prices and inflation, our loyal postal workers who, like all our citizens and particularly our working people, are suffering from current high-price levels. I will vote for the bill.

Mr. TOLLEFSON. Mr. Speaker, I have consistently supported legislation now pending in Congress providing adequate pay raises for postal employees and other Federal employees. I filed a bill which so provided. The Post Office and Civil Service Committee has reported out H. R. 6216. This is the only legislation covering this subject upon which the House has the privilege of voting. The bill is considered under a suspension of rules which permits no amendments. The amount of pay raises cannot therefore be changed during the present consideration of the bill. I shall therefore vote for H. R. 6916, although I would have preferred a larger pay increase. The Federal employees are entitled to a raise in pay. I regret that this legislation does not grant them more than it

Mr. ABBITT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in suport of H. R. 6916 which is a bill to provide additional compensation for the postal employees. These employees have not received the raises and increases in salary that others have. They have been left far behind in their compensation. They are not receiving adequate salary to meet the high cost of living of today. I have followed closely the various bills that have been introduced and open hearings which have been held in the committees. I had hoped that the Membership of the House would be allowed to consider a much larger salary increase than is provided in this bill, as, in my opinion, the raise provided for in this bill is not adequate nor sufficient to meet present conditions.

We, of course, realize that the leadership in the House has the authority to decide which bills will be considered and which will not. They have offered the present bill as the only one for our consideration. Therefore, not permitted the privilege of supporting a bill providing for a larger increase than the present one, I wholeheartedly support the bill under consideration which, while it is inadequate to meet the high cost of living of today, will afford these employees some measure of assistance which they are entitled to and so richly deserve.

It is my understanding that the postal employees have had only two increases in salary since 1925, which increases have been negligible, whereas the cost of living has soared sky high. I hope that if a larger amount of increases cannot be given that this bill will certainly pass. I desire to say now to the Members of this body that I now stand ready to support an amendment which increases to any reasonable extent the amount allowed in this bill. But I fully realize that under the present rules under which we are proceeding no amendments are permissible. Therefore, is is vitally important to pass this bill as it is now or there will be no raise.

Mr. Speaker, I am firmly convinced that all of the Federal employees are entitled to an increase in their compensation. The Federal employees' raises have in no way kept pace with the raises of other working people. Their remuneration is far behind those in like employment in non-Government work. It is my earnest desire and hope that this Congress will not adjourn until adequate provision has been made for the faithful employees of our Government. Many of them work long hours and ofttimes work overtime, for which they are not sufficiently paid. I desire at this time to lend my voice in support of the salary raise for all Federal employees, and I trust that the present leadership will see fit to allow this bill to go through, realizing that it is entirely up to the leadership of this body to say whether or not these increases will be made, as, under the rules upon which the House is proceeding from now until adjournment, only such matters as are cleared by the House leadership will be considered.

If an amendment was permitted to the pending bill whereby all Federal employees will be given raises, which I am sorry is not allowed, I would earnestly and to the best of my ability support it, and believe that the increase would be such as to be of real help to these people who so richly deserve the additional compensation.

Mr. YOUNGBLOOD. Mr. Speaker, today the Eightieth Congress passed legislation providing for a permanent increase for all post-office employees in the amount of $460 per year.

I want to state publicly that I voted in favor of passage of the bill and I also want to state that I supported this bill. and other bills, providing for even more liberal allowances in the Post Office and Civil Service Committee of the House, of which I am a member.

I think it appropriate to state at this time that if it had not been for the activities of certain members of the committee, particularly the Democratic members, this bill would have been reported out of committee and passed the House long ago. Despite the fact that I was in favor of a retroactive increase, the activities of certain members of the committee in emasculating the legislation which met my approval, and the approval of the chairman of the committee and some of the members on the Republican side, alienated some Members of Congress who otherwise would have voted for the bill. Under the circumstances and in view of the difficulties which we have met, I feel that this bill is just, fair, and equitable. Our postal workers are certainly deserving of an increase in salary and I hope and trust that the additional money which they receive will, to some extent, give them the additional incentive which they deserve and will add to their morale.

It is indeed unfortunate that this much-needed and beneficial legislation was not passed by the House long ago and it is equally unfortunate that the bill which was passed did not contain the retroactive feature which I hoped for; but I am pleased that I had the opportunity to vote for an increase in wages for these deserving men and women.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the Republican leadership has finally consented to let the House pass upon the bill now under consideration which provides for an increase in the salaries of all postal employees. I heartily approve of this legislation and have been for a number of weeks adding my voice to the voices of other Members of the House demanding action on this bill.

I regret exceedingly, however, that there is not included in this bill a substantial salary increase for the other faithful Government employees included in all of the classifications of the Civil Service. The cost of living has increased for them just as it has for all of us. It is manifestly unfair not to grant them also a reasonable increase in their salary so that they can meet the high cost of living.

I regret too that this bill has tied to it an increase in postal rates, especially in the third- and fourth-class rates. I say this because this means an increase in the cost of those things purchased by those of our people who live in rural communities and who must depend upon parcel post for many of the articles they buy.

It seems to me that if an increase in the postal rates were to be made they should have been made in a separate bill after careful consideration of all of the issues involved. Moreover, I can see no reason why third- or fourth-class mail rates should be raised when no raise in rates for second-class matter is provided. This seems especially strange in view of the fact that the main portion of the deficit from the operation of the Post Office Department comes from the second-class-mail matter.

It is my sincere wish, and, I trust, not a forlorn hope, that a bill raising the salary of our Civil Service employees will be passed at this session of Congress.

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Speaker, I appeared before both the House and Senate Committees on Post Office and Civil Service and advocated a flat and permanent increase of $1,000 for our postal employees. I felt that such an increase was not only justified by reason of the present increased cost of living but also because the general standard of living has been so elevated that it is unthinkable not to enable our loyal postal workers to retain that higher standard.

I was deeply disappointed when I heard that the committee had in the first instance approved a raise of only $585. To my mind that was bad enough but when the bill started to get a tossing around, so that no one knew whether it would ever reach the floor, even $585 became acceptable. But $585 was not to be had for postal employees either, for this bill, H. R. 6916, now comes before us with an increase of only $450.

I appreciate the time spent and effort devoted by the chairman of his committee on this subject, and I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Lyle] placing the blame for this reduced amount squarely where it belongs. I am truly sorry for the postal employees who are receiving such shabby treatment but I trust that we may hold out hope for a future increase when a new Congress is elected.

Although I feel that $450 is inadequate I shall support the bill for the reason that no amendment being possible under our present procedure, it is $450 or nothing.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Speaker, a wage increase for people holding civil-service positions is long overdue. I am glad this bill to provide more nearly adequate compensation for postal employees has finally been brought up. It deserves the support of every Member of this House.

However, it is regretted that we are not permitted to vote also for increased compensation to other civil servants who also find it virtually impossible to make ends meet. We should no longer delay action which is so sorely needed.

Let me urge every Member of the House to support this measure. In justice to our postal employees we must.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the pending bill. H. R. 6916, the postal employees salary increase bill may not provide all the salary increase which our postal employees deserve but the increase provided is far better than no salary increase legislation at all during this session. The $450 annual increase for postal employees in the field service is justly deserved. Likewise, the 25 cents per hour increase for hourly paid postal employees and the increase of 25 percent for our fourth-class postmasters is equally meritorious. There are no more loyal, faithful, and efficient employees in our Government service than our postal employees and I am pleased to support this legislation providing the increases for them enumerated. The present day high cost of living, coupled with the faithful and loyal service of our postal employees, makes the passage of this bill highly desirable. I urge support of this salary increase legislation for employees in the Postal Department.

Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I support this bill. I do so not because I think it entirely satisfactory, but because it is the only bill presented to us on the question, and I believe the postal workers had rather have this bill than no bill at all. This bill is presented to us under a move to suspend the rules which does not permit any amendment being offered. We must vote the bill up or down as it is written.

Mr. Speaker, I introduced a bill some months ago on the subject of salary raises for postal workers and my bill provided for a raise of $800. I have pushed that bill diligently. The bill presented to us today provides for $450. I do not think that is enough, but this is the bill which the Republican leadership has agreed on and presented to us, and we are presented with the choice of taking it or leaving it. Naturally I am voting for it.

Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed that the House leadership has not presented us a bill to also give some increase to other Federal workers. I note from newspaper reports that there is some hope that when this bill gets over to the Senate, an amendment will be offered to include other Federal workers. I hope this is so. It should be done.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, while this bill is not in the sum I would like, and while it is not entirely satisfactory in other respects, I am glad the House leadership has at last decided to let us vote on even this bill. The prospects for this legislation have been rather gloomy at times, and I am glad that the bill was finally presented. I hope it passes unanimously.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, I think it is high time that we in this House acknowledge the obligation which we owe to the faithful public servants in the Post Office Department. I think it is high time, Mr. Speaker, that we adopt this bill in order to provide them with increased compensation.

Mr. Speaker, these people are working for us. These people serve at our will, and because their pay is determined by us, we should no longer dodge the issue. I suppose this group of Federal employees is the largest group of workers within the country which is denied the right to strike for increased wages and better working conditions. They are entirely at our mercy. Not only is it just that we pass this resolution to increase their small incomes in this day of rising costs of living, but it is our public duty to do so before this session ends.

I regret that the Republican policy committee has not seen fit to include all Federal employees in this bill. It is no more right that postal workers receive this increase than it is that all other Federal workers be given increased compensation. I hope that when this bill goes to conference, if it does, that we in the House are given an opportunity to do the right thing, the just thing, the fair thing, and pay our Government workers salaries commensurate with the high cost of living.

Mr. MORRISON. Mr. Speaker, as a member of this committee, I personally was in favor of an $800 permanent increase for all postal workers including postmasters, postal workers, and so forth. I was also in favor of another bill for a pay increase for all Federal employees in the amount of $600.

This committee reported out a bill for an increase of $585 for postal employees, and a bill for a $450 increase for all Federal employees. There was not a dissenting vote, and both Democratic and Republican members of this committee voted unanimously for these two bills in those amounts. They were arrived at through a compromise in the committee.

It is very apparent that it will be impossible to secure an increase of more than $450, as is provided for in this bill now before the House. Notwithstanding the fact that I favor an increase of $800, I am going to vote for this increase for postal workers for $450 on the theory that when it is impossible to get a whole loaf of bread a half loaf is better than none at all.

I am appealing to the leadership here in the House at this time to bring up the bill providing for a pay increase for all Federal employees of $360. While it is true that I was in favor of a $600 increase, I am going to vote for the $360 increase on the same theory that a half a loaf is better than nothing at all.

I personally want to take this opportunity to commend the various witnesses who appeared before the committee on this legislation, and to thank them for their excellent work and cooperation in this pay-increase legislation.

Mr. DONOHUE. Mr. Speaker, I feel it only my duty to urge my colleagues' approval of this legislation. I have, as most of you know, repeatedly appeared before the House and Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committees to request their favorable action on the various bills providing for a substantial compensation increase to our postal and Federal employees. With particular reference to the postal employees, I submit that this faithful corps of public servants, by their industry and devotion to their work, deserve the gratitude, respect, and admiration of all our people.

The continued newspaper articles and editorials, urging compensation increases for them, is clear and convincing evidence of the practically universal recog-nition of their salary adjustment needs. They are compelled to pay for their own uniforms, where required, and their 1945 increase has been nullified by our ever-rising living cost.

It is not necessary for me to take your valuable time, at this hour, in recitation of the changing economic conditions which have cut down materially the size of the purchasing dollar in the hands of the wage earners of America; indeed, the committee hearings clearly reveal the existence of economic factors which seriously handicap our postal employees in their struggle to maintain a decent way of life for themselves and their family. There is pressing and urgent need for pay adjustment, to raise the living standards of our postal employees to a more equitable level, and I earnestly exhort you to pass this bill without delay. I regret exceedingly that the provisions debated here prevent the opportunity for considering and approving a more substantial increase.

I would consider myself remiss in my obligation if I did not, at this moment, urge the Members of the Rules Committee to allow us to act upon a wage increase bill, for all our Government workers, before adjournment.

A comparative study of the revised wage scales in private industry with the compensation levels of our Federal employees will emphasize the inequities currently existing. If this Government is to uphold the tradition of efficient service administered by capable personnel, it must offer the employees wages comparable to other occupations of the same nature. The best guarantee against a turbulent America in these critical times, is the extension of a fair living wage to all our workers both inside and outside of Government employ. Our Government workers, who cannot bargain collectively for increased compensation, or strike, must be provided for by congressional action. I again sincerely request the Rules Committee to enable us to consider and approve a bill for a substantial increase to all our Government employees to permit them to meet their personal and family obligations with confidence and a high morale.

Mr. Speaker, I know that this Congress has before it many pressing problems demanding attention, but, in my opinion, and I am confident that this opinion is favored by the majority of my colleagues, none of them are more deserving of our speedy consideration than that of approving a substantial and permanent salary increase for all our faithful and efficient Federal employees.

SALARY INCREASES FOR ALL FEDERAL WORKERS

Mr. BLATNIK. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to declare my support of this measure which provides a $450 pay raise for the employees of the United States Post Office Department. These workers are certainly deserving of such salary increases, and I am happy to see this legislation finally come to the floor. This measure should have been debated and passed long ago, and would have, had it not been for the obstructionist tactics of the enemy bloc who have stalled on this issue for many months.

The fact that I am going to vote for this bill, however, does not blind me to its deficiencies. For it is my opinion that an increase of $450 is little more than a token increase, and one that is wholly inadequate to affect the ever-increasing cost of living The following facts will support this position. Under prewar legislation establishing salary schedules for postal employees, the average median salary in 1941 was only $1,902. During the war, the salaries of postal employees were raised about $800-a 40-percent adjustment. The effect of this wartime pay raise brought the average salary for postal workers to about $2,700.

Although this increase appears substantial, it is wholly inadequate for several reasons. In the first place, the cost of living has risen about 60 percent during this period when salaries were in-creasing by only 40 percent, the effect of which has been a reduction in the real wages of the workers, and a general lowering of their living standards. In the second place, the postal workers' salaries have not kept pace with the wages of industry. During this war period, when postal workers were receiving 40-percent pay raises, the wages in durable-goods industries were increased by 61 percent.

Thus it becomes obvious that a 20percent salary increase over the average postal salary of $2,700 is necessary for postal workers to maintain their living standards in the face of rising living costs. It is likewise necessary to bring these workers' wages into harmony with industrial wage levels established during the war. Such a 20-percent increase amounts to $540, which is $90 above that which is provided by this bill.

But even this amount is not enough. I wish to remind the House that the industrial wage pattern is changing today, and the automobile workers, for example, are now obtaining another 10 percent pay raise. Using this as a standard, the postal workers deserve an additional $270, bringing the total increase to $810 per year. In other words, it would take this amount to give the postal workers the same take-home pay as they enjoyed in 1941, and to fit the Government's wage policy into the emerging pattern of industrial wage levels.

I also want to go on record as saying that I have favored a $1,000 pay increase for all Federal workers-both postal and classified-for some time, and that I introduced the $1,000 pay raise bill-H. R. 5526—in the House—the same bill which the gentleman from North Dakota IMr. Langer] introduced in the other body. I am still convinced that the thousanddollar pay-raise objective is desirable and equitable, and that it would go far to maintain the efficiency and morale of the Although I am sup-Federal service. porting this bill, it is my hope that the other House will increase the amount, and amend its coverage to embrace all Federal workers.

Mr. BEALL. Mr. Speaker, in January of this year I introduced legislation to increase the salaries of both postal employees and Federal employees generally. These measures called for increases of $800 per employee to offset increased living costs. I shall support the pending bill but must express my keen regret that all Federal employees are not included. To provide increases for one group and not for another is an obvious discrimination. I sincerely hope that the Sei -ate can provide a remedy and extend the salary increase to all Federal employees. All of them deserve this bene-

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see legislation finally come to the floor of the House to provide a long-delayed and much-needed salary increase for postal workers. On April 21, nearly 2 months ago, the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee reported out H. R. 5667, which provided a raise of $585 per year for postal employees. This bill also was retroactive by its terms to April 1, 1948.

I have on several occasions, since that bill was reported out by our committee, urged that the House take action to provide this salary increase.

After much uncertainty and apprehension regarding the fate of that bill, we are today taking final action in the House for salary increases to this group of Federal employees. I am glad that this bill by its terms will be permanent, rather than temporary. I regret that it does not provide a figure which will more adequately take care of the increased cost of living.

I introduced on December 17, 1947, H. R. 4772, which, if enacted, would provide a salary increase of $600 per annum for postal employees. At the time I introduced that bill, based upon a report furnished by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, it was my opinion that $600 would take care of the increase in the cost of living. I am disappointed that the raise provided in the bill now under consideration is $150 lower than the figure called for in my bill.

Under all the circumstances, inasmuch as it is a question of supporting this bill or nothing at all, I shall vote for it.

I take this occasion to say, however, that other Federal employees are also entitled to a salary increase to meet the present high cost of living, which they are experiencing just the same as postal employees.

I earnestly urge that legislation to provide such an increase for the other Federal employees be enacted either today or tomorrow, before this present session of Congress ends.

In my opinion the postal-rate increases provided in title II of this bill now under consideration should not be considered along with and as a part of the bill providing a raise for postal employees. The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee held extensive hearings regarding postal-rate increases. I am opposed to the increase in air-mail postage, and I am opposed to certain of the parcel-post and third-class mail rate increases. I voted against these rate increases when the postal rate bill was before the committee, and I would vote against these rate increases now if they were being considered on their own merits. They have been attached to this postal employees salary increase bill, and inasmuch as the two items cannot be separated under present procedure, I am voting for the bill as a whole. It is my earnest hope the conference committee may see fit to eliminate that part of the bill which relates to postage rates if this legislation goes to a conference committee.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I have consistently supported a permanent increase of $800 for all postal workers. I regret that this was not the amount of the increase in the bill we have just passed. However, the $450 raise will help some. I was surprised to raise will help some it was surprised to raise that this increase is the largest single one ever passed by any Congress for our postal workers.

It is the purpose of this legislation to provide a permanent increase in the salaries of employees in the field service of the Post Office Department and to offset a portion of the increased cost by an increase in postal rates.

Title I of the bill provides an annual increase of $450 in the salaries of postal employees in the field service of the Post Office Department who are paid on an annual basis. Increases are provided in the amount of 25 cents per hour for hourly employees and increase of 25 percent for fourth-class postmasters.

Based upon figures submitted by the Post Office Department and the Bureau of the Budget, the total cost of title I of the bill will be approximately $211,221,797. All of the 479,850 employees in the field service of the Post Office Department will receive pay increases under the provisions of the bill.

The committee devoted much study to this legislation and the hearings lasted from February 25 to March 17, 1948. Testimony presented by the postal employees' national organizations stressed the necessity for an increase in the salaries of postal employees because of the increased cost of living since July 1946. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the present cost-of-living index is 167.5 as compared with the index of 100 in 1939.

To offset part of the rising cost of living, according to the testimony, postal employees in the field service have been granted two substantial permanent pay raises. The first was by adjustments in salaries and classifications under Public Law 134, Seventy-ninth Congress, amounting to $400 for each postal employee, beginning July 1, 1945. The second was under Public Law 386, Seventy-ninth Congress, which granted an additional permanent salary increase of $400 a year for the postal employees, effective January 1, 1946.

On the basis of the foregoing, the committee believed that a pay raise of $450 per annum would be ample additional compensation to meet the rising cost of living.

Representatives of the Post Office Department and the Bureau of the Budget presented the views of their agencies to the committee. In general, these witnesses stated that in view of the President's budget message which did not include provision for increasing the salaries of Federal employees, they could not at this time recommend additional compensation in the salaries of the employees in the field service of the Post Office Department.

Mr. Speaker, from the above it is obvious that a Republican Congress has gone down the line for pay increases to this group of loyal and patriotic Federal workers even though the Post Office Department and the President were opposed to the raise. I applaud this action as meritorious and deserving, notwithstanding this official opposition.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York

[Mrs. St. George].

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Mr. Speaker, I merely want to say that I shall support and vote for H. R. 6916 with pleasure and confidence. This is the largest single raise that has ever been granted to the postal employees, and a well merited one. They receive this increase, and they have also received a substantial reduction in income taxes. This entire committee has labored ever since I have been in the Congress to bring forth some such legislation, and I think that we have good reason to be proud of it. I know that the postal employees are glad to have a permanent raise.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Albert].

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I will only have time in the 2 minutes allotted me to make a few brief observations on this bill. First of all I want it understood that I am in favor of an $800 permanent increase for both postal employees and other Federal employees. I also feel that the wages of wage board employees should be increased proportionately. Secondly, I want to point out that I am going to vote for this bill because I have no alternative. It is better that we give our deserving postal employees a few crumbs fhan to give them no legislation at all. Thirdly, however, I want to state that neither the postal pay legislation nor the postal rate legislation included in this bill is the legislation originally reported out by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

More than a year ago that committee reported out legislation recommending postal rate increases. I personally did not favor that legislation because I look upon the Post Office Department, as I look upon all departments of the Government, as an agency to serve the public and not as a money-making institution. Much less, however, do I favor the manner in which postal rate increases have been added to this bill.

In this bill we are not increasing the rates of these users of the mail responsible for the largest portion of the present deficit in the Post Office Department. On the contrary, the Republican policy committee has chosen to pick on those of least political influence. They have done this unfairly, because they have added to the postal-pay legislation postal-rate-increase legislation, making it difficult for those affected by such rate increases to come in and protest, since they recognize as over 200 Members of this House, testifying before our committee, recognized that there is a dire need for a pay increase for our postal and other Federal employees. It is unfair to tie up a part of our postal rate legislation with a part of our salary increase legislation and bring it back to the committee with the ultimatum that we take this or get nothing. I insist that both the postal-pay legislation and the legislation designed to increase postal rates should have come before the House on their own respective merits.

Lastly, it has been said that neither the President of the United States nor the Bureau of the Budget has recommended this legislation. May I call the attention of the House to the fact, however, that when the President said he did not favor increases in salary legislation, he hinged that statement specifically upon his recommendation that the Congress had to do something to control the spiral of inflation. The President was thinking in terms of the purchasing power of the money received by our Federal employees.

I am quite sure that since the Congress has failed to do anything about the rising cost of living, the President, as does every Member of the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, recognizes the need for salary increases for our postal and other Government employees. I have no doubt under these circumstances but that he will give his approval to legislation providing for such increases.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting this legislation even though it does not give sufficient relief to our postal employees. It is my understanding that we will not, during this session, have an opportunity to vote for an increase in compensation to Government employees, nor will we have an opportunity to vote for the larger amount in increase for postal employees. This I regret but I shall certainly vote that the postal employees receive something, rather than nothing at all for their faithfulness.

I want to quote from a telegram just received from one of the local federation of post office clerks in my district as follows:

Efficient postal service most important during peace or war, under Democrats or Republicans, whether rain or shine.

Gentlemen, none of us would deny that the above is true, for our postal employees have been faithful at all times and rendered efficient postal service.

I appeared before the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service months ago and urged that the increase in compensation legislation be reported favorably to the House in order that this body might have an opportunity to stand up and vote thereon.

None of us can deny that living costs have increased. I have been advised that many of our faithful and efficient postal workers must retire from Government service and seek employment with private industry in an endeavor to support their families, if they are not allowed an increase. In many instances the wife and mother has had to seek outside employment in an endeavor to supplement a salary paid her husband as a faithful employee, in order that the family might have, not the luxuries of life, but the necessities.

An increase of $800 would be more in keeping with the increase in living conditions and this amount is what I had hoped to have an opportunity to support.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of California. Speaker, I rise rather reluctantly to support this bill. I say reluctantly because I feel that it is entirely inadequate. The Committee on Post Office and Civil Service held extensive hearings, and with only one dissenting vote passed out a bill authorizing $585 a year increase in salaries for faithful postal workers. They passed out a second bill recommending $468 a year for classified workers in the Federal service. These measures are well merited. We had extensive testimony showing the cost of living and its impact upon faithful public workers. It was definitely shown to us that these people had to supplement their earnings with outside employment, and I submit that is not in the best interests of the Government, or they had to have their wives work.

What happened? These bills were reported from the committee about 2 months ago. They have reposed in the Committee on Rules since that time. They came out of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service with only one dissenting vote. They represent a compromise, because many of us felt that $585 was inadequate. They came out with one dissenting vote, a compromise between the majority and minority members of the committee. I submit that is the factual finding of the committee. Then what happened? Two days ago we were given this bill and told that we would have to take $450 or nothing. I cannot vote against the bill because I know the plight of these workers. I know the condition in which they find themselves. So I am constrained to take it. That is why I say to you I very reluctantly recommend the passage of the bill. The faithful public workers of this country asked for bread, and the Republican policy committee handed them a stonea stone, if you please, covered with the slime of partisan politics.

Mr. HEDRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of California. I yield.

Mr. HEDRICK. Does not the gentleman believe that with the high cost of living, these postal employees should have at least an $800 raise at this time?

Mr. MILLER of California. I am happy to concur in the thought expressed by my good friend, the gentleman from West Virginia, Dr. Hedrick. They should have an $800 increase.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of California. I yield to the distinguished chairman of the committee

Mr. REES. Of course, we were in the unfortunate, or whatever position you would like to call it, of getting no help from the Bureau of the Budget on this problem. The Post Office Department, as the gentleman knows, did not recommend any of this increase.

Mr. MILLER of California. I appreciate that, Mr. Chairman, but the Democratic Members of your committee without exception support this raise.

Mr. REES. I understand that

Mr. MILLER of California. We stand on the record that we support the raise and we now want the raise. We are not going to let you and the Republican policy committee hide behind the President's skirts. You could have followed him, sir, on the matter of retaining controls to hold down the high cost of living.

To stop inflation. You could have done

Mr. REES. Of course, if you are talking about the OPA, that is something else.

Mr. COMBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of California. I yield. Mr. COMBS. May I say that all members of our committee worked in harmony, Republicans as well as Democrats, and have done a splendid job, including the distinguished chairman. When the President's Budget Bureau suggested no Federal pay raise, he requested private industry to make no raises. That all had to do with the problem of inflation. Private industry now has had to raise wages because of the continued raise in living costs.

Mr. MILLER of California. I thank the gentleman from Texas for his pertinent observation.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remaining time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Vursell].

Mr. VURSELL. Mr. Speaker, first I want to congratulate our distinguished Speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN', and the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK] for having the courage and showing their interest in getting a pay raise for the postal workers by bringing to the floor of the House permanent legislation providing for a $450 a year increase for them in the face of the opposition of the President, the Budget Bureau, and of this administration, which is now in power in the executive branch. I want to congratulate them. Secondly, I want to say to those Democratic Members who have made a political issue out of this in the debate, that you are fooling no one, and certainly not the officials of the postal It is well organization employees. known that the men in high union positions representing all the workers, are much more pleased with this $450 a year permanent increase than if they had the bill you Members have been talking about providing for $585 temporary increases. Any of them will tell you that, and doubtless most of them have told you Members who are trying to make a political issue out of this, that they are extremely pleased with this bill and would rather have the $450 permanent increase than a $585 a year temporary increase. Why try to deceive the postal workers in your district by the statements you have made in this debate?

Third, let me suggest to you people that you are following the line that you followed on every bill to spend money since I have been in Congress. If you were not so thoroughly imbued with the idea of tremendous appropriations for flood controls along the Brazos River in the State of Texas—the State from which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Lyle] hails—and for flood control, and every other expense, and for the spending of billions and billions of dollars, much of it wasted, we would have more money to give to the postal workers.

From the well of this House I said to you people who were so insistent that we have $6,800,000,000 for the first year of the ERP to give to Europe that the postal workers were coming along; that we better save something for them and for Federal aid to education. Yet, you put into the bill every billion and every million possible. Your record has been to increase every appropriation. Your record has been one of such waste and spending that it is a wonder we have any money left to give any raise in wages for the splendid and deserving postal employees of this country.

Let me repeat, were it not for the fight for economy that the Republican Party has made for the past 5 or 6 years, and particularly the last 2 years, you would not have any money with which to raise the pay of these Federal employees.

This Republican Congress in this session has to its credit the enactment of the most liberal employees' retirement bill for all Federal employees in the history of this Government. It means almost countless millions in benefits to them now and in the future. This Congress has passed dozens of bills, all beneficial to postal and Federal employees, and most every one was reported out of our committee.

Let the undisputed record show that during this and the prior ression of the Eightieth Congress that more and better legislation has been passed in the interest of postal employees than was ever before passed by any Congress since the beginning of this Republic. No one can dispute this fact.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. VURSELL] has

All time has expired.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have permission to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, I have supported the pay raise for the hardworking postal workers whose living standards are so seriously jeopardized by the high cost of living, and I am very gratified that the House today will perform at least some part of this act of justice. I advocated a $1,000-per-year pay raise before the House Committee on Civil Service and Post Office and believe that this was needed. The House today is making a start in recognizing that because a man works for his Government does not mean that he is not worthy of his hire. On the contrary the Government should be the first to recognize the need for adjusting wage scales to costs of living because individual initiative of the employee in asking for a raise is so much more difficult with the Government. I hope that the next session Congress will again examine this question with a view toward seeing that its action is adequate to the need

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kansas to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 6916.

The question was taken; and twothirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the distinguished gentleman from Kansas (Mr. Rees), chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, for keeping his pledge to bring legislation before the House providing salary increases for postal employees and other Federal workers.

The House has just passed by unanimous vote the bill granting a permanent increase of $450 per annum for postmasters and postal employees. I do hope before the Congress adjourns we will pass a similar bill which is pending providing for a temporary increase of $360 per annum for other Federal workers.

Along with a number of my colleagues, I introduced last December bills which would provide an increase of $800 for workers in both of these categories. I believed then-and I still believe-that an increase in this amount would be fair and equitable and necessary in order to bring their income in line with the increased cost of living. It is regrettable that it has been determined that conditions will not permit at this time an increase larger than that which has been approved for postal workers and that which has been proposed for Federal workers.

Mr. Speaker, I earnestly urge and sincerely hope that during the congressional recess the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service will make a thorough study of the relation of the pay schedules of postal and other Federal employees to the rise in the cost of living since 1940, so that the Congress when it returns next January may provide for additional compensation for loyal and deserving Government workers. I shall strongly support a further increase.

FEDERAL ALCOHOL ADMINISTRATION ACT

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Ways and Means be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 5849) to amend the Federal Alcohol Administration Act, and for other purposes, and that the same be rereferred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

CONTESTED ELECTION CASE-WILSON AGAINST GRANGER

Mr. LECOMPTE, from the Committee on House Administration, submitted a privileged resolution (H. Res. 692) relative to the contested election case of Wilson against Granger, First Congressional District of Utah, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HARDY asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the Appendix and include some newspaper articles and other extraneous matter.

Mr. BEALL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a letter from a constituent.

AIR PARCEL POST

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6773) to provide for an air parcel-post service, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the rate of postage on mailable matter exceeding 8 ounces in weight, but not weighing more than 70 pounds nor measuring more than 100 inches in length and girth combined, when carried by air and including other transportation to and from air-mail routes, shall, except as otherwise herein provided, be determined on the basis of the eight postal zones established for fourth-class matter, as follows:

(1) For delivery within the first or second zones, 55 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 4 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(2) For delivery within the third zone, 60 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 8 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(3) For delivery within the fourth zone, 65 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 14 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(4) For delivery within the fifth zone, 70 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 24 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(5) For delivery within the sixth zone, 75 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 33 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(6) For delivery within the seventh zone, 75 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 45 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(7) For delivery within the eighth zone, which, with respect to air parcel post, shall include all offices located in continental United States beyond the seventh zone, 80 cents for the first pound or fraction thereof over 8 ounces, plus 65 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(8) For air parcels exchanged between offices in continental United States and offices in Territories and possessions of the United States in either direction, and between offices within such Territories and possessions, the applicable zone rate shown in paragraphs (1) to (6) of this section shall apply to and including the seventh zone: Provided, That for offices falling in the eighth zone the rate of postage for air parcels weighing in excess of 8 ounces shall be 80 cents for each pound or fraction thereof.

(9) Mailable matter of light weight in relation to size shall be subject to such surcharge as may be determined by the Postmaster General to be warranted by reason of the extra space and care required in handling and transporting such mail matter.

(10) The Postmaster General is authorized and directed to make such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the Civil Aero-nautics Act of 1938 (52 Stat. 973), as amend-ed, or any order, rule, or regulation made by the Civil Aeronautics Board thereunder, as may be necessary for the safe and expeditious transportation by air of mail matter weighing in excess of 8 ounces.

(11) The Postmaster General is further authorized and directed for the period of 2 years, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs (1) to (9), inclusive, of this section, to adjust from time to time the weight limit, size, rate of postage, zone or zones or conditions, or either, in order to promote the service to the public and assure the receipt of revenue from such service adequate to pay the cost thereof.

SEC. 2. The Postmaster General is hereby authorized, in the disbursement of the appropriation for domestic air-mail service, to apply a part thereof to the purpose of leasing suitable quarters at public airports for use in the handling and distribution of air mail at a reasonable rental to be paid quarterly or monthly, for a term not exceeding 20 years.

SEC. 3. Section 1 of the act of August 14, 1948 (Public Law 730, Seventy-ninth Congress, second session), entitled "An act to fix the rate of postage on domestic air mail, and for other purposes," is hereby amended to read as follows:

"The rate of postage on domestic air mail weighing 8 ounces or less shall be 5 cents for each ounce or fraction thereof: Provided, That the rate of postage on air mail of the first class weighing in excess of 8 ounces shall be the rate provided for air parcels but in no case shall be less than 3 cents an ounce or fraction thereof."

SEC. 4. This act shall take effect on the first day of the third month following the month of enactment.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the rules, the gentleman from Kansas is recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Tennessee for 20 minutes.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, it establishes initial rates for the carrying of parcels exceeding eight ounces and not exceeding 70 pounds by air. These rates are set up in accordance with the regular eight parcel post zones, and the committee has been assured by the Post Office Department that the rates provided will return to the Department sufficient revenue to pay the expenditures of this new service. Not only will this provide a fine new service to the people of the United States but will as well, utilize more than 20,000,000 ton-miles of space for which we are now paying but which the Post Office Department does not have sufficient volume of mail to use.

This unused space is a result of the practice of the Civil Aeronautics Board in establishing rates to the Post Office Department for carrying air mail based upon plane-mile and minimum-load factors. Under the plane-mile rate which applies generally to the feeder lines, the Post Office Department pays a fixed fee covering every mile a plane of a specific line travels. The air line is required to carry all of the mail presented for carriage by the Post Office Department. Because of the low volume of first-class air mail on feeder line runs, only a small portion of this space is used.

Mr. Speaker, this bill comes to the floor with the recommendation of the membership of our committee. I know of no objection to it. On two occasions it was objected to on the Consent Calendar, but I am informed by both these gentlemen that now they have no objection and will support this legislation.

If any of you have questions to ask as I proceed I shall be glad to try to answer them. In that way we may expedite consideration of this matter.

Mr. Speaker, this bill, H. R. 6773, will provide for an air parcel-post service.

The minimum load factor rate applies to the smaller trunk lines. Under this rate the Post Office Department is required to pay at a specific ton-mile rate for a minimum amount of mail whether that mail is carried or not. On a more limited scale this has the same effect as the plane-mile rate and a large volume of space is paid for by the Post Office Department because there is not sufficient mail available to fill th's space. This plane-mile and minimum-load factor is where a large part of the subsidy paid to the air lines is hidden.

This procedure permits the ton-mile rates to these respective carriers to be comparable. At the same time by raising the minimum-load factor, different air lines are paid considerably out of proportion to the service performed. I would like to make it crystal clear that the Post Office and Civil Service Committee does not agree with this manner of establishing rates. We have submitted a report. House Report No. 1958, in which it is recommended that the subsidy be separated from the air-mail pay and the Post Office Department be required to pay only for the service performed. However, since it is not within the jurisdiction of our committee to present legislation on this particular phase of our aviation policy, we are forced in establishing our air-mail rates and our air-mail programs to take into consideration the conditions which have grown up under the Civil Aeronautics Board

It is expedient under the present rates to establish this air parcel-post system and to do it at once—because of the large amount of space which is not being used by the Department for which it must pay, plus the fact that on May 8, 1948, the larger air lines were granted an increase amounting to $5,000,000 annually. Under the new schedule of increases these carriers will receive a reduced ton-mile rate if the volume is increased. It is more advantageous and economical at the present time to establish the carriage of this mail in the manner already provided for regular air mail.

There is a great demand on the part of the public for this service. Coastto-coast delivery of parcels will be advanced by 2 days. Delivery of parcels on shorter hauls will be advanced proportionately when sent by air. It is estimated that more than 50,000,000 parcels will be sent by air mail annually in order to take advantage of the advance date of delivery. A large portion of these parcels will come from new business which will be developed as a result of this time-saving transportation. Medicines, critically needed by communities, will be sent in this manner. Business experts have told us that this new service will be used for the shipment of packaged flowers, style merchandise, newspapers, and all manner of perishable products. This service will also be for replacement parts for farm machinery. In many instances this will eliminate delays of 1 or 2 days when these parts cannot be obtained locally and may mean the saving of crops of vitally needed foodstuffs.

In summary, favorable action on this legislation will provide the American public with a desired service and will, at the same time, result in a net saving to the Post Office Department of approximately $10,000,000 annually.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HOLIFIELD].

Mr. HOLIFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I wish at this time to thank my colleague from Tennessee [Mr. Murray] for yielding me 3 minutes. I shall try not to use the full 3 minutes. I have asked for this time for the purpose of telling the House that on January 8, 1945, when I was a member of the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads, I introduced the first air parcel-post bill. At that time I put quite an extensive amount of material in the Record substantiating the policy of inaugurating an air parcel-post service. This, of course, is a different manner of handling packages from the railway-air express as now handled by the air lines.

Air parcel post will provide a great deal of convenience to many people who have access to post offices but do not have access to railway express offices.

My bill was introduced in the first sesion of the Seventy-ninth Congress, January 8, 1945. At that time we were engaged in war and the Post Office Department after consideration of the bill expressed itself as being in accord with the principles of the bill, but in a letter addressed to me they said that during the war the burden of mail on the planes then available was too great to put an additional load on them.

The rates provided for air parcel post in this bill may be a little high. However, the important thing is to establish the principle of air parcel post as a part of our great post-office service. After a year's experience in the new field, a factual record of receipts and expenses will be available. The Post Office and Civil Service Committee can then review the rates and adjust them for the benefit of the public and the United States Post Office Department.

The original bill for air parcel post, H. R. 1173, which I introduced, contained a similar schedule of rates. They were purposely made a little high to prevent a deficit to the Post Office during the first trial year.

At the time I introduced the original bill the Post Office Department asked that my bill be considered after the wartime period was over. I am glad the committee has considered the matter and I am glad to see the bill on the floor at this time.

In addition to the mail privileges which it will give to a lot of American people, it will result also in the employment of a great many additional people in the airplane industry. One of the things that our air lines need at the present time is a stable freight income. This will help, I am sure, and I compliment the committee on bringing this bill forward.

I thank the ranking minority member of the committee, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Murray] for this time and I hope the bill passes without any objection.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Kennedy].

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H. R. 6773, not because I oppose the principle of parcel post being carried by air but because of the way this bill has been drawn. It is one of the greatest grabs from the American taxpayer that has ever occurred in the history of our country.

The fact is that parcel post under this bill will be carried according to the airmail letter rates instead of being carried according to the cargo rates. Here is the difference: According to the air-mail rates the Government pays 65 cents per ton-mile. According to the air-cargo rates it is 13 cents per ton-mile. The fact remains that due to the fact these big five airline companies have complained that they are suffering a deficit, the Federal Government has agreed to give them this tremendous increase to 65 cents per ton-mile. At the same time these airlines are able to carry cargo at 13 cents per ton-mile. If any one in the House can tell me why there should be the tremendous difference between carrying cargo per ton-mile and carrying air mail per ton-mile I would like to hear them.

Under this bill parcel post could very well fit into air cargo and should be carried, therefore, for around 14 or 15 cents per ton-mile instead of 65 cents that they are going to get.

My other objection to the bill is this: As you know, since the war has ended certain veterans coming back from the war have founded airlines. Not one of them has been given a certificate by the CAB; therefore, none of them are able to operate on a regular schedule. None of them can carry air mail, none of them are eligible under this bill to carry parcel post, only the big five air lines, United, American, TWA, Northwestern, and Eastern. All of the lines started by the veterans will be obliged to carry cargo only.

Mr. Speaker, I had two amendments which I proposed that would remedy this bill. The first one is as follows:

SEC. 4. This bill shall be construed to include the services of the noncertificated aircargo carriers holding letters of registration from the Civil Aeronautics Board for regular service and air-cargo carriers certificated for the transportation of property.

With that amendment, those veterans' lines would be included under this bill.

The other amendment I would have offered reads:

SEC. 5. The cargo carriers referred to in section 4 shall be compensated for the carriage of air parcel post at rates not to exceed by more than 5 cents a ton-mile the minimum air-freight rates prescribed by the Civil Aeronautics Board, this difference to compensate the carrier for the priority to be accorded by it to air parcel post.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that these veterans' air lines are willing to carry this parcel post for 20 cents; yet the bigfive air lines are to be given 65 cents. In other words, it is going to cost more to carry this air parcel post by the big-five lines than by the veterans' air lines, and for this reason the bill should be voted down.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Hinshaw].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I dislike very much to controvert the statements of the distinguished gentlemen from New York and Massachusetts. However, I think it is very needful to bring out some truth. As a matter of fact, when it comes to veterans operating air lines, there are thousands of veterans employed in the scheduled air lines, and there are others who are employed in nonscheduled air lines generally financed by persons other than themselves. It is a matter of employment more than anything else.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, that statement is not correct.

Mr. HINSHAW. I deny that. That statement is absolutely correct. The gentleman is misinformed.

Mr. KENNEDY. I am sorry, but I do. I have the whole list here.

Mr. HINSHAW. I know who finances those companies; some of the oil interests and some by other interests.

Mr. KENNEDY. Take Mr. Slick. Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Slick is in a different position. I will take it back as far as he is concerned. But there are plenty of others who are so financed. So far as the carriage of air parcel post is concerned, it is necessary for the Government to deal with the air lines on the basis of a minimum amount of mail to be carried, and space rates turn out to be pound rates. About 60 percent of the available capacity is now being used. It would be a great saving to the Post Office Department over-all to fill up the available space with parcel post. For that reason air parcel post would be a very fine thing. In addition, we are having great difficulty at the present time in keeping our scheduled air lines going. and they are very necessary to the welfare of the people and the national defense. Under another bill, H. R. 6501, we are making special provision for cargo carrier aircraft, to assist in the development of air cargo. The Post Office Department does not want to put this mail in the hands of the nonscheduled carriers because they must actually schedule the transport of mail. Whether it be first-class mail or other kinds of mail, they must know when the planes are to load and when they are due to arrive, so that they can be met. This nonschedule business of carrying mail, whether it is parcel post or not, is practically impossible for the Post Office Department to arrange for.

While I have deep sympathy, as these gentlemen have, for the veterans, and I know that thousands of them are employed in all of the air lines, both scheduled and nonscheduled, I trust that the House will approve of this measure as it is. It is a good measure and should be adopted.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver].

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. Speaker, since I will not be with you in the House in the next Congress, I wish to take a few minutes to express my deep gratitude to my colleagues for your friendship and for the constant spirit of cooperation and fair play you have always shown me during these 9 years I have been privileged to serve in the distinguished body.

While many times we have had our differences on issues, we have always respected and given honest consideration to one another's viewpoint. The work here in the House has been pleasant and inspiring to me; our decisions have been made and our tasks accomplished under the cold light of public scrutiny. This is the most remarkable body of people in the world. Think of it—435 patriotic people from every section of our country meeting to chart a legislative program for our Nation. Every viewpoint and every interest is considered. The end result is a policy and program made by the people through their own Representatives.

During the time I have been here I have served with more than 1,200 Members. I have never had reason to doubt the honesty, good will, or patriotism of any Member—and while we all have honest differences of opinion, I do not believe any Member has ever questioned my loyalty to our country.

The friendships one makes with people from all parts of our country is a great treasure for one serving in this body and I will always remember and cherish my association with you. In spite of the criticism hurled at Congress, I think there is no harder working, more intelligent, or patriotic group of people in the country.

The press endeavors to be fair in reporting our work here in Congress. A free Congress and a free press are the greatest bulwarks of our freedom. I regret though that too frequently the sensational things which occur in Congress make the news, rather than the tedious but most important labor of Members. Some newspapers ferret out this unsensational but necessary effort in making their appraisal of Members. I hope more of them will do so in the future.

Today we are in a critical period of our history. Beset with difficult domestic problems and faced with the fact of world leadership, we have rough and perplexing days ahead. But I know we are going to come through. I have great confidence in this Congress being able to steer the Ship of State through the troubled seas. This body is going to continue to protect the rights of the people. It is going to remain spiritually and materially strong. It is going to carry on a program that will give no ground for the growth of communism or fascism or any kind of ism in our country. Also I have full confidence that the Members of Congress by prayerful patience, sturdy strength, and consistent cooperation with other free peoples will win this struggle with Communist aggression, and will show the way to peace, stability, and order to the end that the world may be saved from a devastation too horrible to contemplate

In leaving I want you to know that my prayers will always be for you—God bless you—and our great America.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, my service with my distinguished colleague from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] and my association with him and his family, the charming Mrs. Kefauver, the two lovely little daughters and the one handsome son, have been sources of genuine pleasure and personal friendship. The recognition which has been given to the panish triotic and courageous service of my colleague stimulates pride in the hearts of his friends and, along with the many personal joys during his service with us, will, I am sure, occasion many pleasant memories and recollections for him as it will for me and his other friends in the United States House of Representatives.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman from Tennessee has made an outstanding record in the House, and the people of his district can well be proud of his service not only to them but to the people of his State and the Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that other Members desiring to extend their remarks in the Record on the services of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] may do so at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I sincerely regret that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] is leaving the House of Representatives. He has been a man of stature and a leader among us. The many valuable contributions he has made in helping to carry on the work of Congress will long be remembered. He leaves with my sincerest wishes for a bright and successful future.

I have just read an advertisement by Mr. Ed Crump, of Memphis, which unjustly defames my colleague the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER].

As a member of the Un-American Activities Committee and one of its former chairmen, I wish to state for the record that the forthright stand my colleague the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] has always taken in defending and preserving the civil liberties of citizens has in my opinion tended to strengthen the fight against un-American activities. The Un-American Activities Committee is faced with a problem of great import and complexity. There are many factors involved-not the least of which is the careful preservation of the rights of Americans under the Constitu-The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] has always been sympathetic to our committee and his cool and reasonable judgment has been most

While I am from Georgia it so happens that my district adjoins that of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER]. I know many of the people whom he has represented so well during his 9 years in Congress. They accord him the same high respect as his many colleagues and I do. The gentleman from Tennessee, ESTES KEFAUVER, is a fine American true to the ideals of the Constitution. He stands, and has always stood for the principles on which our great democracy was founded. I sincerely hope that the people of Tennessee will not be misguided in their appraisal of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] by the words of a political boss.

Mr. BECKWORTH. Mr. Speaker, as one who came to Congress about the time Representative Estes Kefauver came, I desire to pay tribute to him. Throughout the many years Estes has served in the House, he has been recognized as one of the most able, competent, and conscientious Members in the House. He is known for his hard work and sincere devotion to the principles in which he believes. In many ways, and often, he has demonstrated his courage and initiative. The people of his district have been fortunate to have been represented by so distinguished a person. We, his colleagues, shall miss him as a legislator and as a friend. We are not happy that he is leaving the House; however, we wish him every good fortune in his undertakings.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, the re-tirement from the House of the gentleman from Tennessee, Estes Kefauver, will be a great loss, particularly to the Committee on the Judiciary, on which committee it has been my privilege to serve with him. His keen legal mind has been of tremendous help to the committee. Mr. Kefauver has been quick to recognize restrictive measures in proposed legislation that might deprive the individual of his constitutional rights-rights which he has worked untiringly to protect. strengthen, and preserve. Mr. KE-FAUVER has been ever diligent in his efforts to further the opportunities of the ordinary man. This capable, personable gentleman leaves the House of Representatives, where he has so ably served his constituency and our Nation, with the best wishes of his colleagues, and we, as one, bid him good fortune.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, I should like to say that it has been a distinct pleasure and privilege to serve on the Committee on the Judiciary with the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee. He has served with marked ability and unusual fidelity to his duties. As a legislator and a good friend, we shall miss him.

May I express to the gentleman the hope, if the great State of Tennessee is to be represented in the other body by a member of the Democratic Party, as seems to be a reasonable, if not desirable prospect to contemplate, that the senatorial crown by action of the electorate may rest upon the brow of our colleague who will carry it with dignity and credit to those who select him.

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with other Members of the House in expressing appreciation for the services in this body of our colleague, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Ke-FAUVER] and in voicing our regret that he is leaving the House of Representatives.

The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] has given conscientious and faithful service to the Third Tennessee District, to the State of Tennessee, and to the Nation.

As a member of the Judiciary Committee he has been a close student of legislation and has assisted in the writing of important bills for that committee.

As he leaves the House now, voluntarily, I am sure the good wishes of his colleagues will go with him.

colleagues will go with him.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege to know the gentleman from Tennessee for many years before he became a Member of this House. I observed his activities as a civic leader and outstanding member of the bar of Chattanooga. I know of his high standing in the section of the South with which he has been identified. I appreciate his contribution to the solution of the great problems which have engaged us here. His splendid training as a lawyer, his studious disposition, his kind and generous treatment of those associated with him, and his qualities of progressive leadership have won the admiration of his colleagues and the appreciation of a multitude of American citizens.

Mr. EDWIN ARTHUR HALL. Mr. Speaker, I sincerely regret that ESTES KEFAUVER is leaving us. He is a man of outstanding ability and has been a pleasant, understanding gentleman to work with. His loss will be deeply felt by every Member of the House.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I can only say that the people of ESTES KEFAUVER'S district and of the State of Tennessee are losing a most capable, hard-working, and intelligent Representative. During the years we have served here together I have gotten to know ESTES KEFAUVER well. He has come before the Appropriations Committee many times. He always presents his case clearly and forcibly and he knows the facts of his case. I consider him one of the top-notch Members of this body. He is the type of man we need in public service, and I hope he may continue in the upper body.

Mr. HARLESS of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I have been privileged to serve with my colleague [Mr. Kefauver] on numerous unofficial committees. I regret that he is leaving the Congress, for he is a man of high ideals in the best American tradition. In times like these we need able men like Mr. Kefauver—men with fearless courage willing to grasp the complex issues before us and grapple with them until they are solved.

ESTES KEFAUVER has earned the high reputation he enjoys among us here by his hard work, sound judgment, and kindly consideration he has always had for the views and problems confronting his fellow colleagues. I wish him the utmost success in the future and want him to know that he will always carry my sincere best wishes with him.

Mr. BOGGS of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, it is with deepest regret that I say farewell to my friend and colleague, ESTES KEFAUVER. He is a sincere, hardworking American and it has been a great pleasure to be associated with him in Congress. ESTES has established one of the finest records of any man here and has been a real credit to his district, his State, and his country. I hope I have the pleasure of working with him for many years to come.

for many years to come.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I am sure many other Members share in my regreat that so valuable a Member of Congress as my colleague, Estes Kefauver, is leaving us. His work here has earned the respect of all of us. He is a man of clear judgment and outstanding ability. I have enjoyed working with him here in Congress and I look forward to his continued success in the future.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Speaker, I join with the many friends of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] in voicing my sincere regret that he is leaving the House of Representatives after having served so faithfully and ably not only his own district and State, but also the Nation.

He is a man of great ability and is highly regarded not only by the members of his own party, but also by the members of the majority party. He has contributed much in constructive legislation while in Congress.

A year ago it was my privilege to be his guest in Tennessee and to view the great Tennessee Valley Authority projects, for which he had worked so energetically ad capably. He has, as a Member of the House, consistently worked for and with the people of his district and State for legislation beneficial to his people. He has been in Congress a recognized leader of his party, an outstanding Member of the House.

We will miss him, not only as an outstanding legislator, but also as a sincere and lovable friend.

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. Speaker, may I join with the many other Members of the House in expressing my regrets that the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee, Estes Kefauver, has decided to leave us and seek the select and rarefied air of that great deliberative body on the other side of this building. Not only will we miss his warm and attractive personality, but the House of Representatives will lose one of its finest minds, its most energetic workers and one of its true and inspirational leaders. The gentleman from Tennessee has earned the respect and admiration of his colleagues here in the House, and by his accomplishments he has earned the right to represent the people of Tennessee in the United States Senate.

Mr. GRANT of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that all of us will miss the ready smile and hearty handshake of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver]. In leaving us he takes with him the best wishes of the membership. He has well represented his district, State, and Netton. Good luck Feter.

and Nation. Good luck, Estes.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, during my 6 years in Congress I have learned to love and admire the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver]. His ability, his sincerity, and his willingness to work early and late, and his genial disposition, endeared him to his colleagues. We will all miss him in the House, but we look forward to his well-merited promotion in the Congress by service in the Senate of the United States. I am happy to count him as one of my closest friends in the Congress.

Mrs. LUSK. Mr. Speaker, it has always been my policy to encourage my friends to seek the goal that will bring them the utmost satisfaction and that will provide an opportunity for the personal growth.

In this instance I am glad to know of Representative Kefauver's ambition to enter the Senate of the United States, and I do wish for him success in this effort. However, his fine record in the House is something of which he should be very proud. His devotion to the work of the House has earned for him the respect and confidence of every Member.

We shall all feel his absence keenly.
Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, I join with the many Members who have the highest praise for the invaluable service which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] has rendered during his years in the House. His diligence, great ability and excellent judgment has gained him the confidence and respect of all of us, including Democrats and Republicans alike. In addition, his unfailing courtesy has always been refreshing. All wish him good luck and success.

MR. CHELF. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to state that it has been a great pleasure and a source of inspiration to have had the opportunity to serve with my colleague and associate on the Judiciary Committee, the Honorable Estes KEFAUVER of the great State of Tennessee. His devotion to duty, his fair and impartial approach to all bills before our committee are all to his great credit. Estes has been kind, sympathetic, and understanding upon every occasion that have sought his friendship, consideration, and support. His ability as an attorney, his judicial mind, and his lead-ership shall be sorely missed when he voluntarily retires from the House of Representatives.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, it is a matter of genuine regret to me that Mr. Kefauver is retiring from the House. It so happens that he and I have been interested in some of our congressional problems and have cooperated one with the other. I have found him to be an earnest, intelligent and sincere legislator—the kind we all appreciate and admire. I hope he will continue in the service of his country.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, it is an uncommon privilege to serve in this House but a more rare privilege to work with a Member who measures up to the high caliber and is possessed of the sterling character and productive ability of the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER]. I remember when first he came to Congress for he made his impression early and well. Never to my knowledge has he failed to devote his intellectual attainments and his inexhaustible energies to the welfare of his constituents and his country. I shall miss him and his sound reasoning. His departure from this Chamber I trust precedes his graduation to the Senate where the Senatorial toga to drape his broad shoulders awaits him. He will contribute to that august body at the other end of the Capitol the same sound reasoning, help and virility that he so unselfishly and generously gave to the House. May the good people of Tennessee and of his district reward him for his patriotic service by promotion to the Senate of the United States.

Mr. FORAND. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to our friend and fellow Member, the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver].

Estes, as we affectionately know him, leaves this great body voluntarily. We are going to miss him. We will miss his sound counsel and advice.

But, while we grieve at his leaving the House we rejoice in the thought that he is waging a forceful campaign for election to the other branch of this Congress, and we wish him success in his race.

The gentleman from Tennessee has contributed much to the Government of our great country and it is my hope that, in or out of Congress, he will continue his fine service to his fellowman.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to say that, among all the outstanding men I have met in this House, none has impressed me more with his sincerity, his ability, his interest in mankind, and his loyalty to his country, his State, and his constituents than the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver]. We on this side of the aisle are losing a great colleague, a loyal Democrat. The House is losing a faithful servant. He has made a great record here. We have confidence that the high level of public service which he has rendered here will characterize his activities in his new undertakings.

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am one of many Members of this House who are genuinely sorry to know that the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] will no longer be with us.

All during my tenure of office in this body I have appreciated and admired the distinguished gentleman's ability, and statesmanship. He brought to this body an intelligence and integrity that contributed greatly to the deliberations of this body. It is such men as he that has enabled this body to carry on through the most difficult and critical times in the history of our Nation. His attributes are rare and shared by few. For this reason, I have held him in the highest esteem.

My earnest wish is that he will soon grace the other body, thus bringing to that body the high character and great qualities that he gave to this body.

Mr. REDDEN. Mr. Speaker, I regret to learn that the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. ESTES KEFAUVER, will not be a Member of this body next year. He has made an enviable record and no man in the House is regarded more highly by this body.

We wish him great success in all his endeavors, and should he become a Member of the other body I am sure the people of Tennessee will be well represented.

Mr. TRIMBLE. Mr. Speaker, when Hon. Estes Kefauver leaves the House of Representatives we lose one of the most able and outstanding Members of this body. He has been a forward-looking Representative of his people in every instance where their welfare might be in jeopardy. Our good wishes go with him as he leaves our midst.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, it is with regret that I hear my friend and colleague the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] state that he will not be with us in the House next Congress. It will be a distinct loss to this body to have him leave it. I regard my friend the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Kefauver] as one of the strongest Members here during my membership.

I have never seen or visited the physical plant of the great Tennessee Valley Authority, but I have gained a favorable impression of it. A large part of my knowledge of TVA and the good impression I have of it has been gained through the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER]. He has been a great friend and stanch defender of this highly important and controversial development. I know he will continue to support and foster this and every other significant and worthy cause for his State and Na-

Mr. LANHAM of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, it was not until the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] spoke his few brief words of farewell to the House a few moments ago that the realization was brought to me that he would not be a Member of the House during the next session of Congress.

Before I came to Washington as a Member of the Eightieth Congress I did not know Estes Kefauver personally although I had heard much of the splendid record he had made in the Congress. Since coming to Washington I have learned to love, admire, and respect him very much.

Mr. KEFAUVER is recognized by his colleagues as one of the ablest and most progressive Members of Congress; and when I say he is progressive in his thinking and approach to public questions I mean that he is progressive in the true sense of the word and in no sense a radical.

Mr. KEFAUVER is one of a group of the younger and more forward looking Members of Congress who have done a wonderful job in reorganizing and streamlining the Congress. I have read with interest and I trust with profit, his book entitled "Twentieth Century Congress." In that book, which should be read by every Member of Congress, as well as every person in America interested in seeing the Congress work more effectively and speedily in the public interest, Mr. KEFAUVER makes many recommendations and suggestions to speed up the democratic process. I am of the opinion that most, if not all of the things suggested by Mr. KEFAUVER in his book could well be adopted by the Congress in the interest of a more vital and effective functioning of our great democracy.

I have felt especially close to Mr. KEFAUVER because of the fact that he represents a district in the State of Tennessee which adjoins the great Seventh Congressional District of Georgia which I have the honor and privilege of representing. I have been proud to call him my neighbor and friend.

I can say without disparaging in any way the distinguished junior Senator who now represents the State of Tennessee and without passing upon the merit of the other candidate for the Senate from that great State that Estes KEFAUVER would be a most worthy and able representative of his State in the United States Senate.

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, one of the most important committees in the House of Representatives is the great and dignified Committee on the Judiciary, to which are referred more bills on more varied subjects than any other committee.

In the Seventy-sixth Congress I was assigned to that committee along with the Honorable ESTES KEFAUVER, of the Third Tennessee District. His keen mind, lofty character, and fine ability were instantly recognized by our chairman, and to him were assigned many of our most arduous and difficult tasks.

He is one of the best-educated lawyers in the House. Progressive in his views on modern problems, yet he is a stickler for the fundamentals and the recognized principles of law and government.

He is stalwart, both mentally and physically, and his 10 years' service to his people and to our country has been magnificent

His retirement from the House of Representatives will be a distinct loss to his committee and to the whole House. We will miss him greatly.

It is my hope that the people of his great State recognize his meritorious services, and I join his many friends in wishing him happiness in the years

Mr. JACKSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I know I voice the sentiments of the House of Representatives when I say that we shall miss the long and valued services of the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee, Estes Kefauver. However, I am sure that this loss will only be a temporary one because the people of Tennessee will select him to represent them in the United States Senate.

No one has been a more consistent champion of the development of the great resources of the Tennessee Valley than Estes Kefauver. The people of Tennessee are fortunate, indeed, in having such an able advocate in the Congress of the United States.

During his long service on the Judiciary Committee he has gained a reputation as one of the outstanding constitutional authorities in the Congress. He has always fought for and supported those measures which were in the public interest. It was my particular good fortune to have served with him during the past 7 years as a member of the House Small Business Committee. He has been a zealous guardian of the interest of the small-business men in America. He rendered an outstanding service to the country as chairman of the Subcommittee on Business Monopoly in the last Congress. The small-business men of America will not forget his tireless efforts in their

All of us join in wishing him many more years of public service in behalf of his country.

Mr. Speaker, I am Mr. POULSON. happy to join with the other colleagues of Estes Kefauver in paying tribute to this outstanding statesman. Here in Congress, we might be listed as Democrats or Republicans or of any other political faith, but among ourselves we have other standards, such as: Does he fight for what he thinks is right, has he ability, is he fair and honest, and does he respect the beliefs of others? My association with Estes has convinced me that he qualifies in every respect.

I also must state that TVA is losing in the House one of its great champions.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join my other colleagues in expressing my deep regret in saying farewell to my good friend and coworker, the gentleman from Tennessee, Congressman KEFAUVER.

I have, through these past 9 years that I have served with him, learned to have a deep respect for his ability, personality, understanding of governmental prob-

His help was tremendous in our effort to reorganize the Congress. The great contributions he made to bring about a better legislative branch will be long remembered. He is a genuine student of legislative government and his understanding has, and I hope will, continue to aid the Congress in improving its machinery and its procedures.

I have followed his voting record closely over these years and have admired and largely concurred with his carefully arrived at and courageous decisions.

The loss of Representative KEFAUVER from this body is a deep blow-one which I hope will be compensated, however, by his service on the other side of the Cap-We can ill afford to lose such an able Member when the Nation faces such grave problems as it does today.

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, the proudest term I know is the single word, "American." That word stands for many things in the eyes of the world-for courage, for kindness, for tolerance, for religious liberty, and political freedom.

Among the colleagues with whom I have had the honor of serving in this House who particularly deserve the highest praise for their genuine Americanism is the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER].

When it would have been easy for him to follow along with blind hysteria, he has stood firm for the American way. He has proved by his votes, even though he knew that they might cost him shortsighted support, that to him it was more important to be right than to seize a temporary advantage.

Estes Kefauver has supported good legislation consistently courageously, and militantly

He has applied the same qualities in opposing bad legislation.

His voting record in Congress could be taken as a guide for wise representation of his constituency. All of us might-do well to measure our own records against his.

He will be missed in this House.

Estes Kefauver is a man, and a Congressman, of whom Thomas Jefferson would have approved.

Mr. HUBER. Mr. Speaker, during the terms I have served in this House, many Members have come and gone. We have lost valuable Members through deaththe whims of politics-and those who have left to follow other pursuits.

I have listened to my good friend and colleague, the Honorable Estes Kefauver, say farewell to those with whom he has so ably served.

Tennessee has contributed many statesmen to our great democracy, and I know of none who gives more promise of emulating the greatest of these than the gentleman from Tennessee, Estes KEFAUVER.

Though he does not return as a Member of the House of Representatives, yet he will still be with us in spirit, and the contributions he has made to this body, will long be gratefully remembered.

Mr. GOSSETT. Mr. Speaker, as one who has served 10 years in the Congress and who has come to know the Honorable Estes Kleauver well, I wish to join with others in paying high tribute to him.

During this session of the Congress it has been my pleasure to serve on the Judiciary Committee of the House along with Mr. Kefauver. About one-third of all the bills introduced in the Congress in this session have been referred to the Judiciary Committee. Perhaps more useful and constructive legislation has come from this committee than any other. Mr. Kefauver is recognized as one of the most able members of this distinguished committee.

On a purely selfish basis we regret his seeking promotion to the Senate. However, for patriotic reasons we wish him much success in his current campaign. He would make a United States Senator of which all Tennessee could justly be proud.

At this time, however, I wish to refer to only one of the outstanding contributions Mr. KEFAUVER has made to the Congress. I wish to acknowledge with gratitude his sponsorship of electoral reform. Mr. KEFAUVER was one of the first and most effective advocates of a constitutional amendment to change the method by which we elect Presidents. House Joint Resolution 9, reported by the Judiciary Committee of the House without a dissenting vote, and Senate Joint Resolution 200, reported by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate with but one dissenting vote, currently known as the Gossett-Lodge resolution, was in large part the handiwork of Estes Kefauver. Through effective and able advocacy he has been able to create much support for this proposed amendment in the Congress. In the opinion of many of us, this reform is essential if American democracy is to survive. As a Member of the United States Senate, Mr. KEFAUVER can and will continue his able espousal of this cause. He can and will contribute materially to its early enact-

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, like all other Members of the House, I deeply regret the retirement from this body of the able and distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER]. During his service here he has commanded the respect and high regard of the House. Capable, aggressive, conscientious and forward-looking, he has consistently been a vigorous and able ad-vocate of every principle or measure that he sponsored and a worthy representative of his district. Of gracious and amiable manner he very naturally enjoys many warm friendships among us who will miss his presence in this body.

It is not surprising, therefore, that he has answered the summons of a higher responsibility, the quest for a greater public duty in perhaps a wider field of service. Our very best wishes attend him as he proceeds to achieve his aspirations and I am honored and happy to add my testimony to that of my colleagues in expressing regret upon the departure of such a distinguished Member and conveying to him my own sentiments that good will, good fortune, and success in the future may be his lot. May he enjoy higher flights and happier landings.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, I join those who contemplate with regret the departure from Congress of the Honorable Estes Kefauver. He has made a great record; a record which is symbolic of the devotion to ideals, the perseverance, and the splendid ability he has shown. His place here will not easily be filled.

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to publicly acknowledge my deep appreciation for the privilege of having sat side by side on the House Judiciary Committee with Representative ESTES KEFAUVER, of Tennessee. My assignment to the Judiciary Committee followed closely the assignment of Mr. Kefauver.

As revealed from the history of the Judiciary Committee of the House, as prepared by our colleague and fellow committeeman the Honorable Louis E. Graham, of Pennsylvania, many outstanding men have served there. Mr. Kefauver came to us with a splendid educational and practical background, well qualified for the many duties incident to his assignment. Strong of body, alert of mind, eager for work; no other member of our committee has done a better job.

The voluntary retirement of ESTES from the House leaves a vacancy which will be difficult to fill. By reason of his many sterling qualities, a strong bond of friendship prevails throughout the committee's entire membership regardless as to party lines.

I am sure that this humble expression of appreciation and loss by the retirement of Mr. Kefauver is shared in by our entire committee. May the Lord add strength and length to his already fruitful life.

Mr. DEANE. Mr. Speaker, when the gentleman from Tennessee, Hon. ESTES KEFAUVER, voluntarily retires at the end of the Eightieth Congress he will leave behind a most distinguished record of service. He was elected first to the Sixtyninth and each succeeding Congress by the people of his district by overwhelming majorities.

This decade of service to the people of Tennessee as well as the Nation is a record of painstaking, diligent, and unselfish work,

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that the people of Tennessee will continue to seek the opportunity to use the service of our sincere, honest, and faithful colleague.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, we have heard with regret of the voluntary retirement of Hon. Estes Kefauver, of Tennessee, from the House of Representatives. During his long tenure he has demonstrated marked ability and has won the respect of his colleagues by his fine service to his people. He has consistently supported the progressive legislation advocated by the Democratic Party during his service. His departure will be a real loss to the House and to the Nation.

Mr. STOCKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted that our colleague, Hon. Estes Kefauver, is offering his services to the State of Tennessee by reason of being a candidate to the United States Senate.

I have observed Mr. Kefauver's work in the House of Representatives for the past 6 years, and in my judgment he is one of the most effective Members of this body. He has been most diligent in carrying out the trust imposed on him by the people in his district in Tennessee, and I am confident if he is successful in his quest for a seat in the Senate, he will serve the people of Tennessee with honor and distinction.

I do not believe there is a Member of the House who is more admired and respected by his colleagues than is ESTES KEFAUVER, or one who has a better record of service to his country and to his State and district.

Mr. TAILE. Mr. Speaker, it is a matter of genuine regret to Members on both sides of the aisle that our distinguished colleague the Honorable ESTES KEFAUVER is retiring from the House. Industry, integrity, and ability have marked his record of service. I have learned to know him well in the decade we have served together in this Chamber, and I entertain for him affectionate regard. May good fortune and happiness attend him all the days of his life.

Mr. GORSKI. Mr. Speaker, in the closing hours of the Eightieth Congress we are turning our thoughts toward returning home and leaving our tasks here in Washington and at the same time parting with those whom we have been associated with in our committee work and in the Congress. At this time I want to express my regrets that we are not going to have with us on the Committee of the Judiciary one of our very good members who has served in the Congress for the past 9 years.

Congressman Estes Kefauver has been one of our hard-working Members. He was highly respected by the entire membership of the House and his opinions and judgment were eagerly sought on the many intricate problems which came before our committee. He has contributed a great deal toward the fine record made by that outstanding committee. He acted as chairman of the committee investigating the conduct of one Judge Johnson, who as a Federal judge was accused of misconduct. He applied himself very diligently to the work and as a result of the investigation which the committee undertook, the judge resigned from the bench. He was determined to see to it that if there was any malfeasance in office it should be uncovered and the guilty ones exposed. His work has been praised by the entire committee. He has spared no effort to see that justice be done. He is not seeking reelection to the House of Representatives but is a candidate for United States Senator. I wish him well. He has earned any ambition he may seek as a public servant. He has been tested and not found wanting. If elected to the Senate he will give the people of the State of Tennessee excellent representation. His experience in the House qualifies him for the office and Tennessee will have a very fine and outstanding Senator. I wish him well and hope that he will enjoy good health and many, many years of success and happiness.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, for some time it has been my privilege to serve with ESTES KEFAUVER on the Judiciary Committee of the House. We have worked together on such important matters as the Administrative Procedure Act, the Contract Settlement Act, and many others. Several years ago I was a member of a special committee, of which he was chairman, to consider impeachment proceedings against certain district judges in Pennsylvania.

As a result of this close association I have come to know ESTES very well. In my judgment, he is one of the most able Members of the House. He has an excellent legal mind, which enables him to go at once to the root of any problem. He is one of the hard working Members of the Congress, and possesses executive ability to an unusual degree. He has been very mindful of his obligations to his constituents and to his country.

I shall remember Estes as a worthy Member of Congress, a sturdy American, and a true friend.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time, and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Speaker, this is a bill which should have been presented to the Congress long ago. Air parcel post is badly needed in this country. I do not believe that anyone will insist that air parcel-post service should not be inaugurated at this time. I am sure the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. KEOGH] will agree with that statement. Their opposition to this bill stems out of the fact that the measure provides that air parcel post shall be carried by air-mail carriers. They contend that certain noncertificated cargo carriers should have an opportunity to carry this air parcel post. In my opinion, air parcel post can be carried effectively and efficiently only by regularly scheduled air-mail carriers. have an interest in these noncertificated cargo carriers. They have appeared before our committee. I have met many of them personally. I appreciate the great fight that they are making in the development of air cargo transportation. They now have an application with the Civil Aeronautics Board for a certificate. The application will be acted upon. If they are given a certificate, then they will be eligible to receive an air-mail contract and can then carry air parcel post.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I yield.
Mr. KENNEDY. The nonscheduled air cargo carriers, the veterans, have had their applications for certificates in for three years, and not one veteran air line has been given a certificate. That is why they want a regular route. The veterans can carry this mail 40 cents cheaper per ton mile than the other carriers.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I will say to my friend from Massachusetts that an application for a certificate is now pending before the CAB.

Mr. KENNEDY. It has been pending for three years.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Hearings have been held upon it. I understand that action will be taken at an early date. I appeal to you to pass this bill. It provides for the carriage of air parcel post by zone rates just like the zone rate for surface transportation. However, the rates are so high that they cannot be in competition with surface transportation, by train, for example. The railroads do not oppose it. The Railway Express Company does not oppose it. It is a service that is urgently needed for the shipment of perishables and medicine, for parts and other articles from one coast to another, and to all sections of the United States.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I yield.
Mr. KEOGH. The statement was made before that the present certificated air mail carriers are receiving payment for space that is not used.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. That is correct.

Mr. KEOGH. And that they will be able to utilize that space for this parcel post.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. That is correct.

Mr. KEOGH. The utilization of that space for parcel post will in nowise decrease air-mail payments; will it?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Certainly not.

Mr. KEOGH. If the gentleman will excuse me, did he answer that it will not? Therefore, in fact, they will be paid twice for the same space.

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. Let me tell the gentleman from New York this: At the present time, under the decisions of the CAB, the Post Office Department is paying for 20,000,000 tons that are not being used. Now, if those 20,000,000 tons are used for this new air parcel post, then it will not cost the Post Office Department one single penny for the carriage of the mail for this unused space. Let me tell you furthermore that on all small trunk lines the CAB has fixed a minimum load of 300 pounds. That is what the Post Office Department has to pay for; yet none of these lines carry over an average of 75 to 100 pounds of that The balance of around 200 300 pounds. pounds can be utilized in the carriage of air parcel post, and it will not cost the Post Office Department one penny to use that space.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. I wish the gentleman would permit me to finish first. I have already yielded to the gentleman and cannot yield at this time.

Mr. Speaker, the present bill if enacted into law will provide for the carriage of air parcel post to 400 cities. Two hundred other cities are now waiting for air service. They will also soon receive air parcel post if this bill becomes law. I ask my friends: How can noncertificated, nonscheduled carriers carry air parcel post? Air parcel post should go the same as any other kind of air mail.

Mr. KEOGH. Will the gentleman yield to me to answer that question as to how they can carry it?

Mr. MURRAY of Tennessee. It has to be carried on regular schedules, the same as any other mail. I trust the Members will vote for this bill.

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute to reply to those who have been defending the independent carriers.

I will say that our committee did give consideration to the problem they have discussed this afternoon. We gave it very careful consideration. As far as the chairman of this committee is concerned, he feels that the CAB has not probably been as fair as it might have been with respect to its treatment of the independent air freight carriers, but what we are discussing this afternoon is the question of the use of a great deal of space, some $10,000,000 worth of space, that is not being presently used. We feel it should be used.

I will say to the gentleman that consideration will be given to their problem. We expect to hold hearings in regard to it and try as far as we can to help them work out their problem. We are in sympathy with their contention, but we have had full hearings on this bill and recommended what we believe to be the best bill considering the circumstances.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. The veterans did present a bill to your committee that would have taken care of these problems, and it was turned down completely.

Mr. REES. Well, they did submit their proposal and the committee did not recommend it.

Mr. KEOGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEOGH. If the chairman expresses the thinking of his committee, has he not presented to the House the best argument for deferring action on this bill until that matter can be taken up?

Mr. REES. The chairman is speaking about his own thinking in regard to those people, but he does feel it is utterly improper for us to allow this $10,000,000 worth of space to go to waste. We think it ought to be used. I think the gentleman from New York agrees with me. We are not shutting anybody out. We are trying to use something that we have and have paid for and not presently using.

Mr. KEOGH. Anyone who knows the distinguished gentleman knows the standing he has with his committee.

Mr. SARBACHER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Kennepyl for his forthright statement in behalf of the veteran-operated cargo air lines. I know that he has made a detailed and careful study of this situation, especially in regard to the apparent inequity that now exists. I hope the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service will look into this situation further at the earliest possible moment.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES] to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and twothirds have voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was

Mr. REES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill S. 2281, being an identical bill with the bill just passed.

The Clerk read the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as fol-

Be it enacted, etc., That the rate of postage on mailable matter exceeding 8 ounces in weight, but not weighing more than 70 pounds nor measuring more than 100 inches in length and girth combined, when car-ried by air and including other transportation to and from air-mail routes, shall, except as otherwise herein provided, be deter-mined on the basis of the 8 postal zones established for fourth-class matter, as follows:

(1) For delivery within the first or second zones, 55 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 4 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(2) For delivery within the third zone, 60 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 8 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(3) For delivery within the fourth zone, 65 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 14 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(4) For delivery within the 5th zone, 70 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 24 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(5) For delivery within the 6th zone, 75 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of 8 ounces, plus 33 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(6) For delivery within the 7th zone, 75 cents for the first pound, or fraction of a pound in excess of eight ounces, plus 45 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(7) For delivery within the 8th zone, which, with respect to air parcel post, shall include all offices located in continental United States beyond the 7th zone, 80 cents for the first pound or fraction thereof over 8 ounces, plus 65 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

(8) For air parcels exchanged between offices in continental United States and offices in Territories and possessions of the United States, in either direction, and between offices within such Territories and possessions, the applicable zone rate shown in paragraphs (1) to (6) of this section shall apply to and including the seventh zone: Provided, That for offices falling in the eighth zone the rate of postage for air parcels weighing in excess of 8 ounces shall be 80 cents for each pound or fraction thereof.

(9) Mailable matter of light weight in relation to size shall be subject to such sur-charge as may be determined by the Postmaster General to be warranted by reason of the extra space and care required in han-dling and transporting such mail matter.

(10) The Postmaster General is authorized and directed to make such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the Civil Aero-nautics Act of 1938 (52 Stat. 973), as amended, or any order, rule, or regulation made by the Civil Aeronautics Board thereunder, as may be necessary for the safe and expeditious transportation by air of mail matter weighing in excess of 8 ounces.

(11) The Postmaster General is further authorized and directed for the period of 2 years, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs (1) to (9), inclusive, of this sec-tion, to adjust from time to time the weight size, rate of postage, zone or zones conditions, or either, in order to promote the service to the public and assure the receipt of revenue from such service adequate to pay the cost thereof.

SEC. 2. The Postmaster General is hereby authorized, in the disbursement of the appropriation for domestic air-mail service, to apply a part thereof to the purpose of leasing suitable quarters at public airports for use in the handling and distribution of air mail at a reasonable rental to be paid quarterly or monthly, for a term not exceeding 20 years.

Sec. 3. Section 1 of the act of August 14, 1946 (Public law 730, 79th Cong., 2d sess.), entitled "An act to fix the rate of postage on domestic air mail, and for other purposes," is hereby amended to read as follows:

"The rate of postage on domestic air mail weighing 8 ounces or less shall be 5 cents for each ounce or fraction thereof: Provided, That the rate of postage on air mail of the first class weighing in excess of 8 ounces shall be the rate provided for air parcels but in no case shall be less than 3 cents an ounce or fraction thereof."

SEC. 4. This act shall take effect on the first day of the third month following the month of enactment.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I wish at this time to bring to the attention of the House a radio broadcast by a Mr. Martin Agronsky recently over the American Broadcasting Company's network from New York which is so replete with false charges and propaganda against Members of Congress that it cannot go unanswered in all justice to all good Americans both in and out of Congress.

After this broadcast was made, I requested a copy of Mr. Agronsky's broadcast, which I received several days later. and after the gentleman had made several changes in his charges, which I discovered in checking his exact spoken words against the altered copy he sent me. You will note as I read these charges that the gentleman from New York the Honorable JOHN TABER comes in for criticism, but the truth is that at no time has the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] taken part in the subcommittee hearings on this bill for the 1949 fiscal year appropriation bill for the Department of the Interior, nor did he at any time make recommendations to the committee on language or on amounts in the bill, but simply gave his approval to the bill when it came before the full Appropriation Committee of the House, of which he is chairman. Consequently, to the members of the Interior Subcommittee of Appropriations, which I have the honor of being chairman, must go the blame or credit for the bill as reported to the House of Representatives May 26 last.

I invite everybody in America to examine the action taken by the committee and the Congress on this bill, a great part of which is for the orderly and more rapid development of our 17 Western States.

CHARGES

As the Presidential nominating convention draws near and the Eightleth Congress steps on the legislative gas to meet its June 19 adjournment deadline, it becomes increasingly difficult for the public to see through the obscuring clouds of political oratory exactly what's happening on the floor of the House and Senate to some of the most vital issues affecting our contemporary way of life.

This morning, because it's important that Americans, getting ready to elect a new President and a substantially new Congress, see clearly and very clearly just what that Congress is doing, I want to report in some detail on an obscure piece of legislation. This legislation consists of a series of amendments and riders attached by the House Appropriations Committee under the chairmanship of Republican Representative John Taber to the appropriation bill for the Department of the Interior.

ANSWERED

The purpose in his opening statements is to set the stage for an attack upon Republican handling of the Interior Department appropriation bill for 1949 in the House of Representatives. He refers to this bill and amendments as "an obscure piece of legislation" and to the debate upon the bill as "obscuring clouds of political oratory." He indicates that he, as a radio commentator reporting the news, will reveal the facts concerning Republican trickery in passing the bill.

"Obscure" means shaded, darkened, hidden, and remote from observation. Shadowy, mysterious, and unknown are synonyms. Interior Department appropriation bills are not "obscure" in any sense of the word. They are, each year, among the most important annual supply bills enacted by the Congress. During the last 2 years no legislation, including the Marshall plan, has received such exhaustive treatment and careful consideration.

The organization of the Congress under our two-party system prevents "obscure" legislation or "buried," "misleading" amendments from being enacted. The House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States, for the newscaster's information, are composed of Republican and Democratic members; their committees and subcommittees are each composed of Republicans and Democrats. The Republicans being the majority party have a majority membership; the Democrats being the minority or opposition party have a minority membership. The House Appropriation Committee is composed of 25 Republicans and 18 Democrats, and the Interior Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee is composed of 4 Republicans and 3 Democrats. The Democratic members attend and are as familiar with the hearings and with the bill as written and reported as are the Republican members. Each member. Republican or Democrat, has equal rights and privileges on committees. All members are entitled to be present at all committee meetings and to be present when a report is accepted or rejected and when a bill is drafted. Nothing can be hidden; nothing can be buried; nothing can be obscured. The Democratic members, or the representatives of the opposition party, have the responsibility to inform their leadership and party members of the contents of any and all legislation. They were informed concerning all details of this bill. They knew what was in it.

CHARGES

These obscure amendments and riders buried under misleading titles and literally rammed through the House in one afternoon's inconclusive debate last week, threatened to destroy the American Government's whole vast system of power and irrigation projects. They're important. They come into effect by passing the Senate, the Reclamation Act of 1902 brought into being by President Theodore Roosevelt, will be completely nullified and the exponents of power and land monopolies throughout this country will reign supreme.

ANSWERED

Amendments to the bill referred to by the newscaster as "obscure amendments" were printed in the report exactly as they have been printed in reports for years. There has been no change in procedure. Every Member of the House of Representatives is familiar with the make-up of a House Appropriations Committee report. His reference to an amendment "buried under misleading titles" is misleading itself. No one who read the re-port or bill could have missed the provision to which he referred. They might have objected to it, but they could not have missed it. Anyone who even casually read pages 45 to 49 of the committee's report and the bill itself would not have been misled by a mere editing error. He appears to have been the only person misled, for Members of the House-as the debate reveals-were well familiar with all its contents, including the legislative limitation which he claims was buried. Nothing in the bill destroys or threatens to destroy Federal irrigation or power projects. Nothing in the bill "nullifies" any provision of the Reclamation Act of 1902, and the newscaster submits no evidence to bear out these charges. The report of the committee insisting upon a reemphasis of reclamation constitutes one of the foremost steps taken within recent years to assure that the spirit and the letter of the 1902 Reclamation Act is fulfilled.

CHARGES

Now, what the House of Representatives did in approving by a voice vote, with not more than 100 Members present, this obscure bit of legislation was nothing less than practically insuring that the extension of public power shall eventually be brought to a dead stop and that the famous 160-Acre Act, which is aimed at blocking the provision of irrigation water from Government dams to farms exceeding 160 acres in size, shall be nullified.

ANSWERED

He charges that the House action on the Interior Department bill will bring "the extension of public power * * * to a dead stop" but does not support the charges with facts. His comments were obviously written without reference to the House hearings, the committee report, or the House debate. This man suppressed the fact that the Department of the Interior will have more money next year than in any previous year. The House committee would provide the Interior Department with $375,- 692,591 for the fiscal year 1949. This compares with $262,801,000 in 1948 and $258,985,716 available in 1947. The same is true of the Bureau of Reclamation for which the House appropriated $226,794,897 for use in the fiscal year 1949. This compares with $136,644,738 available in 1948, the previous peak level—Congressional Record, June 1, 1948, page 6751.

Of these huge sums, vast amounts were made available for projects in Western States which involve power as reclamation. The Bonneville Power Administration received $20,920,-000 exclusively for power developments; the Anderson Ranch Dam in Idaho, which is an irrigation and power project, will have $5,100,000 available for all purposes in 1949; $19,495,000 will be available for the Davis Dam project; $41,396,-000 for the Central Valley project; $19,-750,000 for the Colorado-Big Thompson project; $8,100,000 for the Hungry Horse project; $3,192,000 for the Fort Peck project; and over $54,000,000 for Missouri River Basin projects. Of the money made available for the Missouri River Basin project, approximately $4,000,000 was earmarked for transmission lines and substations alone. Millions of dollars were made available for the extension of Federal power in Western States. These facts completely answer this commentator's falsification that the "extension of public power" has been brought "to a dead stop." If, after making mil-lions of dollars available for power there is to be no progress, then this broadcaster should argue for a complete and full investigation of Federal power agencies rather than attack the activities and the motives of the House of Representa-

Nothing in the 1949 Interior Department appropriation bill as it passed the House related to the 160-acre provision of the 1902 Reclamation Act. No recommendation of the Interior subcommittee or of the full Appropriations Committee and no action taken by the House of Representatives in its consideration of the bill blocks or was aimed at blocking the 160-acre limitation in the 1902 act. This reporter's statement to the contrary notwithstanding, it is still the law of the land.

CHARGES

That 160-acre provision of the Reclamation Act was written with Teddy Roosevelt as its champion to prevent the growth of the land monopoly in this country and to insure the protection and existence of small farms. Everyone knows the aims of the Government power project, the basic ones being, of course, that more Americans can get cheaper power and the national power shortage so dangerous to the national defense shall be overcome.

ANSWERED

At this point the newscaster falsely assumes that providing consumers with power is a basic function of the Federal Government. For this information, furnishing consumers with cheap power is not today and has never been a function of the Federal Government, and the Federal Government does not have the authority to build a power project the primary purpose of which is to furnish consumers with cheap electricity, any more than it can set up a grocery store to sell food. Under the Constitution, as interpreted by the courts, the Federal Government can build reclamation, navigation, and flood-control projects, and, when economically feasible, can install powergenerating facilities to produce power as a byproduct. With regards to Interior Department projects, the function of government is to provide reclamation and irrigation, and not power. Water users are interested in cheap water. Cheap power means that water will cost relatively more, for in the West power is supposed to help pay the cost of reclamation. He failed to report the policy statement of the House Appropriations Committee which appears on pages 20-21 of Report No. 2038 on H. R. 6705, Eightieth Congress, second session:

The committee desires to reemphasize its statement in former reports on the bill, that the reclaiming of arid lands by the construction of reclamation projects is and always has been the primary purpose of the reclamation laws. Development of hydroelectric power is incidental to irrigation and is made as a means of financially alding and assisting such undertakings. This policy should not be departed from without specific periodiction by the Converge.

legislation by the Congress.

The Bureau of Reclamation should not use its power and authority or funds entrusted to its care to construct power facilities that are not essential to carrying out the purpose of the reclamation laws. It is unsound and against the principles of our form of government to appropriate Government funds for the construction of transmission lines, switchyards, substations, and incidental facilities where private capital is prepared to provide them.

At a time when it is so essential for the Government to stimulate the creation of taxable property, it is the opinion of this committee that private enterprise should be encouraged. Investment of private capital in tax-paying properties is greatly to the advantage of the Government. Public funds should be invested only where necessary to furnish adequate services or facilities that private enterprise cannot provide. Not only in regard to the production and distribution of electric energy, but also in small or big business enterprise, agriculture, professional services, and banking.

CHARGES

Well, what happened? The story starts with the descent on Congress of one of the most able, active, and influential group of lobbyists on Capitol Hill. These are the lobbyists of the private power companies. These gentlemen, the most prominent of whom is Purcell Smith, who makes $65,000 a year for his efforts and earns it—these gentlemen did yoeman work in the House of Representatives and earned their salaries to a fare-thee-well. Their approach, which the House vote indicates won the approval of the House majority, was to concentrate on legislation by appropriation, since they rightly feared the public outcry that would come if they attempted to change in the open the basic laws affecting power- and public-land policy in our country.

ANSWERED

The shopworn technique of using the so-called power trusts as a convenient political whipping boy with the implication that its lobby was able to unduly influence men of sincerity and integrity to vote against their consciences has lost its blackmailing sting by its repetitive use. In fact it has become a political "roar-back" because it will be interpreted by every right-thinking Member of Congress as a reflection upon himself personally and upon the constituents who placed their trust in his integrity.

During the debate on the floor of the House on this bill. I said:

We hear a great deal of talk about some of us being stooges for this or that organization for private utilities, and for other private interests. As I have said many times before, this committee, not a single member of it, Democrat or Republican, is stooging for anybody but the American people, the taxpayers of America—the good people of America. I resent any such accusation to the very limit of my feeling. I know every member of this committee feels the same way. I am sure there is not a member of the committee on either side of the aisle who has any other purpose than to do a good job for the American people and help develop the West in an orderly, businesslike manner. (Congressional Record, May 27, 1948, p. 6598.)

Representative ALBERT GORE, Democrat, of Tennessee, and a minority member of the committee had this to say during the House debate concerning the charge of utility influence and pressure:

I do not charge anyone with being improperly influenced. Indeed I have strong confidence that such has not happened. (Congressional Record, May 27, 1948, p. 6009.)

In the same breath this commentator also charges House leadership with passing legislation in an appropriation bill. This, for a change, was a correct statement. He fails to explain, however, why there was legislation in this bill. I explained the reason:

The reason we found ourselves compelled to put some language in this bill, to which the chairman of the Public Lands Committee has objected, is because of the fact that he, as chairman of that committee, has refused to act and to do something about bringing out the legislation that would correct those abuses. (Congressional Record, May 27, 1948, p. 6596.)

In other words, this was the only way to obtain legislative action to correct administrative abuses and malpractices within the Department of the Interior, abuses revealed as a result of extensive hearings not only this year but in previous years. Corrective action was in the interest of good administration and efficient government.

CHARGES

To start with, they were immensely aided by the House subcommittee on Interior Appropriations, headed by Republican Representative Jensen, of Iowa. This committee, in defiance, by the way, of the congressional reorganization act, decided to hold all of its meetings on Interior appropriations in executive session. That means in secret with no members of the press and the executive departments allowed to be present.

ANSWERED

There was no defiance of the Legislative Reorganization Act, an act which the broadcaster obviously did not bother to read. Section 133 (f) of that act—Public Law 601, Seventy-ninth Congress, approved August 2, 1946—provides:

All hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public, except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee by a majority vote orders an executive session.

Thus it is left to the standing committee whether or not its sessions will be open or executive. The full House Appropriations Committee duly considered the problem and voted to hold executive sessions, not only on this bill but on all appropriation bills, just as it has always done. In reaching this decision the full committee considered only how its task could best be accomplished. The newscaster overlooks the fact that while the hearings were in executive session, members of the minority or opposition party were present at all times and were completely informed as to the detailed contents of the bill and in a position to make their criticisms known at the time the bill was reported. In fact, minority members have the privilege of filing a minority report if they desire, but none was

CHARGES

Attempts by Bureau of Reclamation and Interior officials to get a hearing before this committee were all rejected. Attempts by Mr. Purcell Smith and his fellows to get a hearing were more successful. And here's how that worked. The Congress has already approved a number of appropriations for the Interior Department to increase its transmission lines and substations in various Government power projects in order to widen the access to the public in the various areas to cheap Government power and electricity. A Mr. James Black, the president of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., one of the most powerful private utilities in northern Callfornia, appeared before one of the Jensen committees executive session—that's secret session—and demanded that this planned extension of Government power in northern California be stopped. The committee, without hearing a word of rebuttal from the responsible interial—interior—officials of the responsible interial—interior—binding of the area, or from pro-Government power, farmers and citizens of the area, took Mr. Black's suggestion and approved it, writing into the appropriations bill as a rider that killed the extension of public power in northern Cali-

ANSWERED

This is irresponsible reporting. All told, there were 183 appearances by witnesses favoring the Interior Department's budget estimate. There were 21 appearances by utility witnesses. No utility witness testified against reclamation. They opposed Federal spending to build duplicating, or uneconomic transmission lines and related facilities.

The printed record of the hearing comprised 4,684 pages, the largest hearing in the history of the Appropriations Committee. The hearing lasted for approximately 12 weeks. Out of this total accumulated record of 4,684 pages, 2,147 pages related to testimony in support of the Department's power and reclamation program. There was in contrast 223 pages of testimony by utility witnesses.

As for the reference to Mr. James Black, president of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., the committee records show that he appeared and testified on April 7. There is nothing secret as to who appears and who does not appear. Prior to that date the committee heard testimony from the following Department officials:

Michael Straus, Commissioner of Reclamation, Kenneth Markwell, Assistant Commissioner of Reclamation.

Wesley R. Nelson, Assistant Commissioner of Reclamation.

A. R. Golzé, Director of Programs and Finance.

A. O. Babb, Chief, Division of Program Operation.

Walker Young, chief engineer.

H. F. McPhail, Director, Branch of Power Utilization.

J. W. Nixon, Director, Branch of Project Planning.

R. J. Newell, regional director, Re-

Harold Nelson, assistant regional director, Region I.

G. W. Lineweaver, Director, Branch of Operations and Maintenance.

C. W. Hamilton, chief engineer, Division of Power.

Following April 7, when Mr. Black appeared, the committee heard testimony from the following Department officials:

Michael Straus, Commissioner of Reclamation.

Kenneth Markwell, Assistant Commissioner of Reclamation.

G. W. Lineweaver, Director, Branch of Operations and Maintenance.

H. F. McPhail, Director, Branch of Power Utilization.

Wesley R. Nelson, Assistant Commissioner of Reclamation.

Richard Boke, regional director, Region II.

Ben Creim, power manager, region II.

J. A. Krug, Secretary of the Interior.

Oscar Chapman, Under Secretary of the Interior.

William A. Warne, Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

C. Girard Davidson, Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

CHARGES

Another specific example of the same exact kind is provided by the case of Mr. J. E. Corette, Jr., who is the vice president of the Montana Power Co. That's the most powerful private monopoly in that State. Mr. Corette told the committee, again in secret session, that he was against the Government's plan to extend the powerful facilities in his State by adding more transmission lines and substations to existing Government facilities, though in this case, too, Congress had already approved this plan and appropriated money for it, the project was also written out of the Interior bill by an obscure amendment. Again no—no witnesses who might disagree with the private power point of view were called.

ANSWERED

Mr. J. E. Corette, Jr., is revealed in the committee's records as having testified on April 6. Consequently the same department officials testified both before and after his appearance as before and after Mr. Black. Department witnesses had ample opportunity to state and restate their position with regard to any and all items.

CHARGES

The same kind of wrecking action was repeated by the committee, usually after hearing testimony from private power representatives only in regard to Government power extension projects already approved by the Congress for every one of the 17 Western States. That's one way the powerful Committee of Appropriations operated through its equally powerful subcommittee.

ANSWERE

Secretary of the Interior, Julius Krug; Under Secretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman; Assistant Secretary, Girard Davidson; and other top department witnesses were heard last at the suggestion of the committee, a suggestion which met with the Department's full approval. Concerning this, Interior Secretary Krug stated in his appearance before the committee:

I am particularly appreciative of this chance to appear last rather than first, as you suggested at the outset of these hearings. Appearing at the close of the hearings assures that if you have questions of policy or otherwise that I can answer such questions directly. Also, I would like to know before this record is closed that you have all the facts that you want. (House hearings, Interior Department appropriation bill for 1949, 80th Cong., 2d sess., pt. 1, p. 1053.)

Thus, Department officials had the last word.

CHARGES

Here's another way they worked. On the House floor, with Democratic Congressman Al Elliott, of California, as the sponsor, the Appropriations Committee floor spokesman rammed through what amounts to an unconstitutional bill of attainder, which requires that Bureau of Reclamation top officials must have 10 years engineering experience. That would force the dismissal of the Bureau's two top officials, Michael Straus, the Commissioner, and the regional director, Mr. Boke. Their crime has been that they have faithfully implemented the provisions of the 160-Acre Act on irrigation in California despite the outraged screams of the great land holding companies in that State.

ANSWERED

The amendment requiring that Bureau of Reclamation top officials must have 10 years' engineering experience was not sponsored by the committee. Although I was in charge of the bill for the committee as chairman of the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee, I did not speak on the measure one way or another except to ask that debate be limited. Again this subject came up as an amendment to the bill, and consequently was subject to a point of order. Representative John McCormack, Democrat, of Massachusetts, the minority whip in the House, raised the point of order that this was legislation on an appropriation bill. The Chair ruled that the amendment was a limitation; that it referred to a part of the appropriation bill, and therefore ruled against the point of order.

Reference to the debate indicated that the House acted as it did because certain top employees of the Bureau were not qualified engineers in jobs requiring vast engineering experience, but operated as publicity agents and propagandists in keeping with their backgrounds.

This story teller implies that it is unconstitutional for Congress to establish qualifications to be met by persons holding responsible positions in the Government. Since it was Congress which created the whole reclamation program by passage of the Reclamation Act of 1902, it is both constitutional and proper for the Congress to set up the qualifications of those persons appointed to carry out this program if it desires. By requiring engineering qualifications for certain positions, Congress is giving legal effect to a personnel custom that had been practiced over a long period and proven highly successful. These two men were the first in a long and brilliant professional history of the Bureau of Reclamation to have held such positions without the qualifications prescribed in this amendment.

CHARGES

The committee operated in yet a third way. They inserted into the appropriation legis lation a clause which they buried under the completely misleading title of "Alaskan In-vestigation." That clause provides that the 3-percent interest collected by the Government on its power and municipal-water projects in any profits made on these projects could no longer be used to extend Government irrigation and cheap electricity to con-That money must be returned, instead, to the Treasury immediately. What this means is that automatically the cost of Government power and irrigation would be forced up to and even beyond the prices charged by private companies. Thus the whole key power and water basis of Govern-ment water projects would be killed. Interior Department officials told me this provision alone would cause a power-rate increase to consumers nationally ranging from 15 to 38 percent.

ANSWERED

Nothing in the bill was buried. The provision to which he objects here was outlined in the committee report. The fact that the provision was in the bill was well known to the minority members of the committee and therefore minority Members of the House were on notice. The public power grave diggers certainly exhumed the body if this provision was buried, inasmuch as it was a major point of discussion.

It is ironical for this broadcaster to argue that if Federal power projects in the West paid 3-percent interest on their money into the reclamation fund with the stipulation that it not be allocated, that this would force the price of Federal power up beyond prices charged by private companies. If this is true—if Federal power is so inefficient and depends so completely upon subsidies—then the Government had better get completely out of the power business and stay out.

CHARGES

There are many more of these obscure amendments written into the Interior appropriations bill. It's worth noting again that all of the hearings during which these amendments were written were held in secret. The committee only released them for scrutiny by the press and Government officials on the morning of the day that it agreed with the House Rules Committee to bring the whole bill on to the House floor for debate.

ANSWERED

The Elliott amendment was not written into the bill in committee but was incorporated into the bill by an amendment offered from the floor. The other legislative limitations and provisions to which the broadcaster objects were made a part of the bill when it was marked up. This was in executive session, and under the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, it is required that such action always be taken in executive session regardless of whether the hearings are open or closed. Section 133 (f) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 provides as follows:

All hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee, by majority vote, orders an executive session.

CHARGES

Since the hearings covered thousands of pages, it was obviously impossible for those Members of the House who would have fought these wrecking amendments to spot the destructive features. Just to make sure, apparently, that nothing could be done about it anyway, even if they were spotted, the committee rammed through the House on the day of debate a gag rule that forbids points of order being taken and thus killed off any extended opposition debate. They did quite a tob.

ANSWERED

Again let it be noted that minority Members were present during all hearings on the bill and at the time the report was presented for reading, and at the time the bill was marked up. They were completely informed at all times concerning its provisions. The House was put on notice to the subject of every provision to which the broadcaster objects.

The bill was debated in the House under a rule forbidding points of order being made against items in the bill as reported. Without this rule one individual out of 435 Members by raising a point of order could thwart the will of the majority and could have prevented long-standing abuses from being corrected. The rule under which the bill was debated did not prohibit amendments being offered. Any objectionable feature of the bill could have been struck out by an amendment and certain features that the House found objectionable were stricken from the bill. It is further to be noted that the amendment to which he takes most violent objection was offered from the floor and was subject to a point of order that was overruled. Further, the rule under which this limitation as to points of order was adopted was submitted to full and complete debate on the floor.

CHARGES

The Senate Subcommittee on Interior Appropriations handled the matter differently and decently. They permitted opponents to testify in open hearing. That brought before that Senate committee a dozen Congressmen, men who had been unable to make their voices heard in their own House and brought denunciations from Republican Governor Warren of California and also from Republican Gov. Sam Ford of Montana.

ANSWERED

The House Interior Appropriations Subcommittee held hearings covering a period of 3 months. At the close of the House hearings Secretary Krug himself stated, "Our people do appreciate the fair and thorough hearings that your committee has conducted during the past 11 weeks. Without exception they have reported that they have had both courteous and attentive consideration and a complete unbridled opportunity to lay the facts before the committee." (House hearings, Interior Department appropriation bill, pt. 1, p. 1053.) Irrespective of what the newscaster reports, not a single Congressman who wanted to be heard in the House was denied that opportunity. Governor Warren of California and Governor Ford of Montana could have appeared had they so desired. Since they did not request time, it is obvious that they did not wish to testify. Contrasted with the opportunity given to any and all witnesses to appear during the House hearings, the Senate Appropriations Committee, in order to accomplish its task and to expedite the enactment of this annual supply bill, found it necessary to limit witnesses, other than department witnesses, to 5 minutes each, and the hearings in the Senate covered 4½ days, compared to 11 and 12 weeks' time in the House.

Now the whole business has such a rotten look to it and the Senate hearings so effectively exposed the rottenness for anyone who cared to listen, that there is some hope that this most successful of all the special interest raids against constructive Government projects will fail. But it needs a lot of publicity still.

ANSWERED

This slur against the processes of the Congress of the United States cannot go unchallenged. It is apparent that this broadcaster has never realized that Government agencies can constitute a special interest group fully capable of raiding the United States Treasury and sticking its hands deep into the pockets of the United States taxpayers. It is hardly rotten for House committees and the House to take every action within its power to protect the interests of the American taxpayers and the solvency of the United States Government and the Nation's credit.

This bill as it passed the House made $375,692,000 available for the fiscal year 1949. This means that the House pared the budget estimate $84,293,000 and prevented a special interest raid of that amount. But, even so, the bill makes $112,876,000 more available for use in 1949 than was provided in last year's bill, an amount which compares with $172,000,000 made available in the fiscal year 1940, the last full fiscal year before the beginning of the national defense program.

CHARGES

The minority whip, John McCormack, of Massachusetts, said of this legislation and these are his words, "It gives off a strange odor. It's the cdor of the power lobby." To the general public the whole rotten business can be summed up in three words for even those with the least sensitive olfactory equipment. And those three words are "It smells bad." And I could sum it up in two words but I have to keep decency in mind.

ANSWERED

Instead of quoting the Democratic minority whip, the broadcaster might have quoted Democrats who are definitely pro-Interior. For example, Representative Murdock, Democrat, of Arizona, said:

I want to say to the gentleman how earnestly this subcommittee has worked. I recall coming before this committee late one day and having to wait 2 hours until a dozen other witnesses were heard. But the gentleman and his committee remained long after hours to hear my constituents, for which I want to express my appreciation. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, May 27, 1948, p. 6600.)

Representative Kirwan, Democrat, of Ohio, and a member of the subcommittee, said:

I * • want to congratulate the Subcommittee on Interior Appropriations and the majority members of that committee.
They were very gracious and granted the minority members all the time they wanted to interrogate any witness who appeared before the committee. I am very appreciative of their courtesy. Generally speaking, I think this is a good bill. There are some things in it with which I do not agree ard to which I shall call attention. (Congressional Record, May 27, 1948, p. 6602.)

Representative Gore, Democrat, of Tennessee, and also a member of the subcommittee, said:

The distinguished gentleman who is the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Jensen] has labored long and diligently. For many, many weeks we have been sitting long, long hours daily studying the many problems affected by this bill. The distinguished gentleman has been thoroughly fair and considerate of the minority members as well as his colleagues on the majority. * * * We members of the minority have served as a backstop. Our opinions, though they have not prevailed in some of the fundamentals of the bill, have, I think, been taken into consideration. Upon most points in the bill, though in some cases reluctantly, we find ourselves in agreement. (Congressional Record, May 27, 1948, p. 6609.)

Representative Jackson, Democrat, of Washington, said:

It was my pleasure to have the privilege of serving temporarily with the subcommittee in connection with the marking up of a portion of the bill under consideration today. The distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Jensen], painstakingly considered all items of the bill, as did other members of the committee. I know that the chairman did his utmost to give fair and equitable consideration to all matters before the committee. (Congressional Record, May 27, 1948, p. 6616.)

Mr. JENSEN. All right; is there anything else?

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the committee for letting me appear before you again, and I appreciate your cooperation.

Mr. Jensen. Of course, Mr. Wright, you realize that we have extended a privilege to you that is not customary, by permitting you to come back before the committee the second time. However, because of the complexity of this controversy, the committee felt that you should have an opportunity to discuss the things which you had discussed before the committee on your first appear-ance, and I want to thank you for coming before the committee.

Mr. WRIGHT. I certainly appreciate it, Mr. Chairman.

MAY 14, 1948, PART 3

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. SCHWABE, do you have any questions?

Mr. Schwabe. Yes. Mr. Wright, of course, we appreciate your being here. This is the third time you have been before the committee in this series of hearings, and this committee, I say without fear of successful contradiction, has given you more consideration and extended you more courtesy than has been extended any other Bureau or group that appeared before us.

Mr. WRIGHT. I appreciate that. Mr. Schwabe. This hearing today was due to the fact that you apparently wanted to furnish the committee with information which, I think you utterly failed to furnish at former hearings.
I think that we all know that you are here because you were advised that the committee was not satisfied, that you had made a showing that would justify this committee in appropriating the amount you requested.

We are glad you are here. I personally was the first member of this committee to suggest that you be given this opportunity, and I am glad of it, and happy to have you

I want to say, however, that there are some things in this telegram that you sent in that we were not able to understand, and do not understand vet

Mr. WRIGHT. I want to clear them up. Mr. Schwage. That is the reason we have extended this unusual privilege and opportunity to you of being here today. Mr. STRAUS. We are now drawing to the close of an outstanding hearing. I have been sitting here keeping statistics during this hearing, and I see that this is the end of the thirty-third session on reclamation alone. Reclamation said, as this hearing opened, it looked forward confidently to a helpful hearing, and that the more thorough the hearing was the greater would be the benefit to the Bureau of Reclamation and to the United Expectations have been more than fulfilled by this hearing. I say that now, and I want to say it on the record. I do not want it to inhibit the committee from remembering that we are also asking for money when they go to mark up the bill.

This is the first time that we have brought in such a group of field officials. I want the record to show that I consulted with the chairman of the committee, and that we were glad to bring these officials to Washington. We feel it was very worth while from the point of view of the Bureau of Reclamation as well as from the point of view of the committee and the Congress to have those officials come to Washington. You may be interested in knowing that for the purposes of this hearing 27 field officials came to Washington from the reclamation areas, including regional directors, assistant regional directors, and others. Perhaps 16 or 17 people were here from the Washington office. I am only citing Bureau of Reclamation witnesses at this hearing.

The able clerk, who has educated more Reclamation Commissioners than he has before him at the present time, tells me that during these hearings far larger numbers of witnesses who are not members of the Bureau of Reclamation appeared than appeared on this hearing, which is a hearing on the largest budget that has ever been submitted.

The Bureau of Reclamation alone, the outof-town regional and field officials, traveled a total of 135,000 miles to make an appearance here. They were glad to do so, and the Bureau of Reclamation was glad to have them do so. I would also like to mention that approximately 1,500 square feet of maps were drawn for this hearing. For the Reclamation Bureau witnesses alone the transcript numbered over half a million words, and I think we had some 700 man-days of time of Bureau employees used in connection with these hearings alone, all of which is considerable. Whatever the cost, the Bureau of Reclamation feels that it is a very good investment and it was glad to make that investment. I think that more information has been submitted to this committee at this hearing than any other hearing that I am familiar with in my 16 years of attending hearings. I think that this has been a better hearing than any hearing that I have attended for perhaps 16 years. This is not a task or a burden only for the Bureau of Reclamation, but the Bureau wants to recognize fully that it is an equally heavy task and a burden on the members of this committee and the Members of Congress that have sat patiently through these long sessions and treated us with such courtesy and understanding and sympathy, and also with an increased knowledge of our problems gained not only during these hearings but during the trip that was made last summer.

In conclusion, I want to say that I would like to thank you on behalf of the Bureau of Reclamation for the way in which these hearings were conducted, and to state that in our opinion these hearings were fine, full, and fair, and we were delighted to participate in them. We look forward to the result of these hearings, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. JENSEN. Thank you, Mr. Straus.

In response to that very glowing and interesting analysis of the hearings and the things that go with it, I have only this to say: The three members of the committee, Mr. SCHWABE, Mr. FENTON, and myself, who made the extended trip to the Western States last year said on every occasion where we made stops—we made little talks numbering a little over 100—the purpose of our trip was for one thing, and one thing alone. That purpose was to see with our own eyes and to hear with our own ears the things that were important to the development of the work. We had but one purpose in mind, and when the time came to consider an appropriation for the many and varied projects, not only the Bureau of Reclamation but every branch of the Interior Department, we would give full and careful consideration to the requests of the Department for every branch of that Department, and for every project.

We also stated that we would go into the matters pertaining to each case thoroughly and completely in an attempt to acquaint ourselves and get full information from the officials of the departments and from such other people as would be interested in any matters pertaining to the duties of the Department of the Interior and the Congress of the United States

We also stated that we felt that up to that time we had done everything we could, and we will continue to do and carry out the promises made to those people.

When we mark up this bill we will stand by our word. Of course, it is customary to mark up this bill in about 3 days, but I can readily see where we will spend not only 3 days but a week, or possibly longer, in going through each one of these items and talking it over among ourselves in executive session, trying as best as we can to determine what is the right and proper figure, as near as humanly possible, to allow for each item.

Gentlemen, I again assure you that we will carry through and that we recognize the responsibility that rests on the shoulders of the members of this committee. I know that you recognize the responsibility that rests on our shoulders in asking for the American people insofar as the expenditures of money is concerned, as it pertains to this commit-tee. Without a doubt, we will reduce some items, and possibly raise a few even over and above the budget requests. After all, we feel that it is the duty of this committee to use its own judgment to some degree, regardless of what the Budget has sent up as a requested appropriation. However, we do not expect to deviate very far from those requests in raising items to any great degree from what the Bureau of the Budget has requested.

I am sure that I speak for all members of committee, who act pretty much in unison, in the final analysis, when we get into executive session. Of course, we have some pretty hot arguments about certain items in the bill, but we always have. I suppose that we will have those arguments this time. That is merely a difference of opinion, and we try our best to have a meeting of the minds so that when we bring this bill to the floor of the House it will be in such form that the committee will be in as complete accord as possible on each item.

Gentlemen; I want to say that I am very appreciative, and I know that I speak for the members of the committee when I say that. I believe we are all appreciative of the manner in which you have presented your requests to this committee, and the desires that you have shown to give us the infor-mation that we requested. We shall now live in hopes that some of the things we had been critical of, rightly or wrongly, will be corrected. If we have been wrong, it has been a mistake of the mind, and not of the heart, because we have no ax to grind other than to do a good job for the American people. I am inclined to feel that that is your purpose. While there are certain individuals that would like to take a broadside at the Members of Congress on occasions, after all, we are all human and must live as best we can in peace and harmony so long as we treat each other as friends and neighbors, and we will get along in this great America

That is all I have. Thank you, gentlemen.

REVOLVING FUND FOR PURCHASE OF NATURAL FIBERS

Mr. TOWE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 2376) to provide a revolving fund for the purchase of agricultural commodities and raw materials to be processed in occupied areas and sold, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the Secretary of the Army is authorized to issue notes from time to time for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury, not to exceed in the aggregate outstanding at any time $150,-000,000. Each such note shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the note. Payment of the purchase price of such notes and repayments thereof by the Secretary of the Army shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States. The proceeds of these notes shall be used by the Secretary of the Army, or his duly authorized representatives, as a revolving fund for the purpose of (a) purchasing natural fibers (including cotton waste) produced in the United States, and such other materials, including starch, dyestuff, roller leather, and card clothing as may be used in processing and finishing such fibers; (b) transporting such fibers and other materials to occupied areas, making them available for processing, and having such fibers processed in such areas; (c) insuring such fibers and materials and the products obtained from such processing; and (d) selling products obtained from such processing. In the case of wool, mo-hair, or flax fiber, only those types and grades shall be purchased hereunder as the Secretary of Agriculture, in the light of supplies on hand in the United States, designates as available for export; and stocks held by Com-modity Credit Corporation of the types and so designated shall be purchased before other purchases are made of such types and grades. For the purpose of this act an occupied area shall be considered as any liberated or occupied area, which is at the time, occupied by United States forces or such an area occupied jointly with another power or powers when it is considered by the Secretary of the Army to be necessary or desirable to include such an area, in order to carry out United States objectives: Provided, That a treaty of peace shall not have been ratified and confirmed for such an area.

SEC. 2. Neither the Secretary, nor any duly authorized representative, shall use the fund created by thi act for the purchase of any commodity unless, on the date of purchase of such commodity, it appears in his best judg-ment that within 15 months after such date

(a) such commodity will be processed, or used in processing operations, in an occupied area; and

(b) So much of the products obtained from such processing will be sold under such terms and for such currencies as will be necessary to cover, in United States dollars, (1) all amounts expended from the fund in connection with such commodity plus (2) an appropriate portion of the interest payable to the Secretary of the Treasury on account of loans made pursuant to this act.

SEC. 3. The proceeds from the sale of products of commodities purchased with mon-eys from the fund, to the extent of the amounts specified in section 2, shall be re-turned to the fund.

SEC. 4. Annually after the date of enactment of this act the Secretary of the Army shall make a complete report to the Congress with respect to the status of the fund. At such time as there shall no longer be any occupied area within the meaning of this act or at such earlier time as the President or the Congress by concurrent resolution shall de-termine that the fund is no longer required for the purposes of this act, the unobligated balance of the fund shall be repaid to the Secretary of the Treasury; and the Secretary of the Army, as expeditiously as possible consistent with orderly liquidation, (a) shall cause to be sold so much of the commodities purchased with moneys from the fund and products thereof which are then on hand as may be necessary to obtain the amount of balance then remaining owing to the Secretary of the Treasury on account of loans made pursuant to this act, and (b) shall repay such amount to the Secretary of the

SEC. 5. Fibers and other materials purchased for processing in any particular occupied area may, if a treaty of peace is ratified and confirmed with respect to such area prior to the processing of such commodities, be processed and sold, or sold, in such man-ner as the Secretary of the Army may deem to be in the best interest of the United If, after purchasing any such com modity with moneys from the fund, it shall appear to the Secretary of the Army that the product of such commodity cannot be sold for as much as the amounts specified in clauses (1) and (2) of section 2 of this act the Secretary of the Army may sell such product for a lesser amount; but, insofar as may be possible, no commodities shall be sold for less than the amounts specified in clauses (1) and (2) of section 2 of this act. Sec. 6. So much of the commodities pur-chased with moneys from the fund for processing in any occupied area and so much of the products thereof as are not required to be sold, and so much of the proceeds obtained from the sale of any such commodities or products as is not required to be returned to the fund shall be used and disposed of by the Secretary of the Army, in such manner as he deems fit, for the benefit of the economy of such occupied area.

SEC. 7. In providing for the performance of any of the functions described in section 1 the Secretary of the Army shall to the maximum extent feasible utilize private channels of trade and is hereby authorized to make all necessary rules and regulations for the efficient implementation of the provisions of this act.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. TOWE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Georgia for 20

Mr. TOWE. 'Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. TOWE. Mr. Speaker, this bill is offered for the purpose of setting up a revolving fund to aid the textile industries, mostly wool and cotton, in Japan and Germany, countries we now occupy, to aid in their rehabilitation effort.

It is costing the taxpayers of this country today approximately $400,000,000 to help support these people. The purpose of this bill is to establish a revolving fund which may be used from time to time to purchase raw materials for shipment to those countries, under control of the Army and other Government agencies, to be converted into fabrics by the Japanese and German people who work in the mills. This would give employment to people in an industry which represents about 60 percent of their economy.

Before the war Japan furnished a large market for our surplus cotton. That is another purpose of the bill, to help reestablish that market. We have today in this country under control of the Commodity Credit Corporation a large stock of raw wool for which there is apparently no use in this country because it is a kind that our own manufacturers do not use. The bill requires that before any material can be purchased in the open market in this country that CCC stocks will have to be used. That would convert that stock pile into cash and return that money to the Treasury. The bill is meritorious in that respect and has the unanimous support of the Committee on the Armed Services of the House. It was passed in the Senate without a dissenting voice.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to say just a few words about this bill because it is a very important bill. It is important not only from the standpoint of the industrial rehabilitation of the occupied areas but it also directly affects the pocketbook of every American taxpayer. What this bill does is to set up a revolving fund under the control of the Secretary of the Army. This fund will be used to finance the purchase of natural fibers produced in the United States-cotton, wool, mohair, and flax fibers. These fibers can then be shipped to Japan, Germany, and other occupied areas where they will be processed by the textile industries of those countries. finished goods may then be sold either in those countries themselves or exported to other nations. The money borrowed from the revolving fund will then be returned to the fund out of the proceeds of these sales. In this way the textile industries of occupied areas will be pro-vided with working capital which they do not now have and which they need very badly.

I want to make it clear at the outset that this bill does not mean that we are going to give away $150,000,000. This is a business proposition, and we expect that every cent will be repaid to the fund. We expect, moreover, that a substantial profit will accrue from the proceeds of sales over and above what is necessary to repay the fund. These profits may be used by the Secretary of the Army in any manner he sees fit for the benefit of the occupied areas from which they are Now, let us see why this bill is important to the taxpayers of the United

At the present time, we are appropriating approximately $400,000,000 a year to cover the cost of relief shipments of food and other necessities of life to Japan. We have to do this because Japan today cannot feed herself. Japan has always been a deficiency nation. She has never been able to produce more than 80 percent of her total food requirements. Therefore, in order to feed her people, it has always been necessary for Japan to engage in foreign trade in order that she may buy from other nations the foodstuffs to make up her own deficiencies at home. This was true before the war and is still true today. But in order to engage in foreign trade she must produce commodities for which there is a demand in other countries, so that she may have something to offer in exchange in foreign markets for the food she needs at home. Because every inch of Japanese soil is devoted to the cultivation of foodstuffs for home consumption, Japan cannot hope to produce agricultural commodities in large volumes for export. And so, quite naturally, Japan turned many years ago to the development of her manufacturing industries. She had to do this in order to provide herself with purchasing power in international trade; she also had to do this to provide employment for her own people because there is just not enough land in Japan to keep all the Japanese people occupied in agricultural pursuits.

Before the war the cotton and woolen textile industries were the leading manufacturing industries of Japan. Manufactured cotton goods were Japan's principal export products. Japan was the most important customer of the American cotton farmer, and raw cotton and wool were her leading imports. With the textile commodities which she produced, she was able to buy from other nations the foods which she required at home, and also the raw materials to keep these industries operating so that she could produce these manufactured goods for export.

The importance of the textile industry to Japan cannot be overestimated. It accounts today for over 60 percent of the industrial capacity of the entire nation. Yet today, Japan has only 2,000,000 cotton textile spindles operating as against 12,000,000 in 1937. Today there are 203,-000 laborers employed in her cotton textile industry. By a process of simple arithmetic it is easy to see that with 12 .-000,000 spindles-the capacity of the cotton textile industry in 1937—about six times as many people could be employed, or about 1,200,000.

The industrial rehabilitation of Japan is and has been a primary concern of the occupation authorities. Until self-sufficiency is obtained. Japan and other occupied areas will continue to represent a financial burden which must be sustained by the taxpayers of the United States. Under our international obligation to prevent disease and unrest, we must furnish food and other relief supplies to keep the Japanese people alive. These relief costs, which run to nearly $400,000,000 a year, must be met in addition to the purely military costs of occupation. Consequently, we must face squarely the problem of assisting the Japanese people to become self-supporting. Otherwise we will have to continue relief shipments indefinitely.

One of the principal handicaps which has been faced by occupation authorities in their attempts to bring about economic recovery in occupied areas is the lack of a supply of working capital. This bill will provide the means of obtaining that working capital, and I might say that it has been estimated that savings of $300,-000,000 in appropriations for Japanese relief could have been brought about in the past if we had had a revolving fund of this type in operation beginning on VJ-day.

The main reason why this working capital is so important is because Japan and the other occupied countries now have no means of financing purchases of raw materials. These countries are bankrupt; their production is virtually at a standstill; they do not have the purchasing power in the form of exportable commodities with which they can enter foreign markets to buy these raw materials. In Japan, in particular, the textile industry will have to shut down unless working stocks of raw cotton and wool are made available immediately. This will mean more unemployment, more relief shipments, and ultimately more money out of the American taxpayer's pocket.

Considerable progress has been made since the occupation began in the rehabilitation of the Japanese textile industry. This progress has been possible because surplus stocks of cotton held by the Commodity Credit Corporation have been made available. This cotton has been furnished on a credit basis with payment being made from the proceeds of sale of finished goods, in very much the same manner as will be done under the revolving fund. These shipments of cotton provided an interim solution to the problem of obtaining working stocks of raw material-a solution, incidentally, which circumvented for a time the difficulties resulting from the absence of working capital. By now these surplus stocks have been exhausted, and a new method of financing must be provided to finance raw material purchases.

Experience under the CCC program has demonstrated that the Japanese textile industry can and will operate at a profit. Under that program, its average net profits per month have been $10,000,-000, and there is every indication that these profits will continue if the textile mills can be assured of working stocks.

Some of the Members may ask if there is not a danger that the textiles produced by the mills of Japan will find their way back to compete with our own textile industry. This fear is absolutely without foundation. Testimony was received from representatives of the cotton textile industry who told the committee that they too had formerly shared this fear. But they went on to say that after careful study of the problem they had come to realize that no question of competition was involved, but rather, the ques-tion of survival of the Japanese industry. They pointed out that the products of Japanese mills are of a cheaper quality for which there is no demand in the United States, but for which there is a crying need in India, China, the Philippines, and other countries of the Far East. These were the countries in which Japan sold the bulk of her textile exports before the war. These are the countries from which Japan can obtain copra, rice, and other raw materials vital to her recovery. She can also barter these textiles for rubber and tin which we need in this country, and which can in turn be sold to American purchasers in exchange for dollars with which to repay withdrawals from the revolving I might add that the bill provides that this fund can be terminated at any time by the President or by the Congress, by concurrent resolution. Thus, if Japby concurrent resolution. anese industry ever develops to a point where competition becomes a threat, we can call a halt to this program im-

I want to say also that there is no danger that purchases of cotton, wool, mohair, or flax under this fund will raise the domestic prices of these fibers. quantities of these shipments will be insignificant in comparison with those to be made under the comprehensive for-eign-aid programs. Moreover, the fibers to be shipped will be those for which there is no demand in this countryshort-staple cotton and cotton waste, wools of coarser grades which now lie unused in the stocks of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and surplus mohair, of which there are vast stocks still in the hands of domestic producers.

This is a very important bill. It is important from the broad standpoint of our foreign policy. It is important from the standpoint of our taxpayers. It will help materially to put the Japanese economy on a sound basis by restoring her production and by putting her back into normal channels of foreign trade. It is vital from the international political standpoint for the same reason that the foreign-aid programs are so vital. As we all know, there is no better safeguard than prosperity to stem the menacing tide of commu-

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ELSTON. I have had some persons question whether or not this program might set up a plan which would compete with the textile industry in this country unfairly. Can the gentleman state whether or not it would do that?

Mr. VINSON. That question was raised when the committee was having its hearings. We have absolute assurance there will be no importations of textiles which will in any way interfere with American production.

The type of goods manufactured by the Japanese does not come in competition with American production. It will be sold out in the Malays, in China, and in that section of the world.

Mr. TOWE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. TOWE. Will the gentleman state for the benefit of the House whether or not the cotton and woolen producers as well as the converters in this country favor or disapprove this measure?

Mr. VINSON. The textile people had their representative before the commit-The wool industry had its representative. The type of wool that is used is not a kind that can be used in our looms here and the type of cotton that will be used is the low-grade cotton. So there is no competition and it is urged by the textile industry. They support this bill to aid the industry in Japan to get on its feet, if you please.

This bill will begin to save us money, it will put people back to work and help them rehabilitate themselves, which is the proper thing to do.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?
Mr. VINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. I may say that I have given considerable attention to this matter and I am convinced that in the interest of our country as well as the Japanese it ought to be enacted into law.

Mr. VINSON. I thank the gentleman. Mr. TOWE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas

[Mr. SCRIVNER].

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Speaker, I have requested this time to ask members of the committee how this particular program works in connection with Government relief in occupied areas. Does it supplement it, is it in competition with it,

Mr. VINSON. I may say that as the occupied area of Japan is under the jurisdiction of the Army, the administration of this will be by General MacArthur's

headquarters

Mr. SCRIVNER. We are doing just exactly that with some of these millions of dollars we are sending to Germany and Japan. We are using part of it for that Mr. VINSON. This will have the effect of reducing that because they will not have to use any of that money for subsistence of the unemployed.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Nearly all of this stuff we are sending over there is being sold to those people. There is rolling around somewhere from seven to nine hundred million dollars in a revolving fund to do this very thing the gentleman is talking about.

Mr. VINSON. It is not for this purpose. It may be for some other purpose. It is not for textile purposes.

Mr. SCRIVNER. The gentleman feels if this program is carried out as now suggested, by this time next year this Congress should be called upon to appropriate less money for these occupied

Mr. VINSON. Yes. If that could have happened immediately after VJ-day we would have saved a great deal of money.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and (twothirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

PROMOTION OF THE COMMON DEFENSE

Mr. SHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (S. 2554) to promote the common defense by providing for the retention and maintenance of a national reserve industrial productive capacity, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "National Industrial Reserve Act of 1948.'

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 2. In enacting this act, it is the intent of Congress to provide a comprehensive and continuous program for the future safe-ty and for the defense of the United States by providing adequate measures whereby an sential nucleus of Government-owned industrial plants and a national reserve of machine tools and industrial manufacturing equipment may be assured for immediate use to supply the needs of the armed forces in time of national emergency or in anticipation thereof; it is further the intent of the Congress that such Government-owned plants and such reserve shall not exceed in number or kind the minimum requirements for immediate use in time of national emergency, and that any such items which shall become surplus to such requirements shall be disposed of as expeditiously as possible.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 3. (a) The term "national industrial reserve", as used herein, means that excess industrial property which has been or may hereafter be sold, leased, or otherwise dis-posed of by the United States, subject to a national security clause, and that excess in-dustrial property of the United States which not having been sold, leased, or otherwise disposed of, subject to a national security clause, shall be transferred to the Federal Works Agency under section 5 hereof.

(b) The term "excess industrial property," as used herein, means any machine tool, any industrial manufacturing equipment and any industrial plant (including structures on land owned by or leased to the United States, substantially equipped with machinery, tools, and equipment) which is capable of economic operation as a separate and independent industrial unit and which is not an integral part of an installation of a private contractor, which machine tools, dustrial manufacturing equipment, and industrial plants are under the control of any executive department or independent establishment in the executive branch of the Government, including any wholly owned Government corporation and which are not required for its immediate needs and responsibilities as determined by the head

(c) The term "national security clause," as used herein, means those terms, condi-tions, restrictions, and reservations, heretofore formulated or as may be formulated under section 4 (2) hereof for insertion in instruments of sale or lease of property, determined in accordance with section 4 (1) to be a part of the national industrial reserve, which will guarantee the availability of such property for the purposes of na-tional defense at any time when availability thereof for such purposes is deemed neces-sary by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 4. To effectuate the policy set forth in section 2 of this act the Secretary of Defense is hereby authorized and directed

(1) determine which excess industrial properties should become a part of the national industrial reserve under the provisions of this act:

(2) formulate a national security clause, as defined in section 3 (c) hereof and vary or modify the same from time to time in such manner as best to attain the objectives of this act, having due regard to securing advantageous terms to the Government in the disposal of excess industrial property;

(3) consent to the relinquishment waiver of all or any part of any national security clause in specific cases when necessary to permit the disposition of particular excess industrial property when it is determined that the retention of the productive capacity of any such excess industrial property is no longer essential to the national security or that the retention of a lesser interest than that originally required will adequately fulfill the purposes of this act: Provided, That nothing in this subsection (3) shall require the modification or waiver of any part of any such national security clause when such clause is deemed necessary by the Secretary of Defense to effectuate the purposes of this act; and

(4) designate what excess industrial property shall be disposed of subject to the pro-visions of the national security clause.

SEC. 5. (a) In the event that any agency charged with the disposal of excess industrial property, after making every practicable effort so to do, is unable to dispose of any excess industrial plant because of the national security clause it shall notify the Secretary of Defense, indicating modifications in the national security clause, if any, which in its judgment would make possible disposal of the plant. The Secretary of Defense shall consider and agree to any and all such proposed modifications as in his judgment would be consistent with the purposes of this act. If, however, such clause is not modified or the requirements thereof waived pursuant to section 4 (3), or if modified, such plant cannot then be disposed of under such modified clause, the Secretary of Defense shall direct that such plant be transferred to the Federal Works Agency, and such transfer shall be without reimbursement or transfer of funds.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, any agency charged with the disposal of excess machine tools and industrial manufacturing equipment shall transfer custody of such machine tools and equipment as may be designated by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 4 hereof to the Federal Works Agency, without reimbursement, for storage and maintenance.

SEC. 6. Subject to provisions of section 7 hereof, the Federal Works Agency is hereby authorized and directed to accept the transfer to it of such excess industrial property as is directed to be transferred to it under section 4 hereof and, as and when directed or authorized by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 7 hereof, to utilize, maintain, protect, repair, restore, renovate, lease, or dispose of such property. Notwithstanding section 321 of the act of June 30, 1932 (47 Stat. 412; U. S. C., title 40, sec. 303 (b)), any lease may provide for the renovation maintenance, protection, repair, and restoration by the lessee, of the property leased, or of the entire unit or installation when a substantial part thereof is leased, as part or all of the consideration for the lease of such property.

SEC. 7. The Secretary of Defense, with re spect to property in the national industrial reserve, is authorized when he deems such action to be in the interest of national security-

(1) to establish general policies for the re, maintenance, utilization, recording, and security of such property transferred to the Federal Works Agency pursuant to section 5 hereof; and

(2) to direct the transfer without reim-bursement by the Federal Works Agency of any of such property to other Government agencies with the consent of such agencies;

(3) to direct the leasing by the Federal Works Agency of any of such property to designated lessees; and (4) to authorize the disposition by the Federal Works Agency of any such property by sale or otherwise when in the opinion of the Secretary of Defense such property may be disposed of subject to or free of the national security clause provided for in section 5 hereof: and

(5) to authorize and regulate the lending of any such property by the Federal Works Agency to any nonprofit educational institution or training school when (a) the Secretary shall determine that the program proposed by such institution or school for the use of such property will contribute materially to national defense, and (b) such institution or school shall by agreement make such provision as the Secretary shall deem satisfactory for the proper maintenance of such property and for its return to the Federal Works Agency without expense to the Government.

SEC. 8. As and when directed or authorized by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to the provisions of section 7 hereof, the Federal Works Agency shall after the date upon which transfer is directed pursuant to section 5 hereof provide for the transportation, handling, care, storage, protection, maintenance, utilization, repair, restoration, renovation, leasing, and disposition of excess industrial property.

SEC. 9. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed as authorizing the acquisition of any property for the national industrial except from excess or surplus Government-owned property.

SEC. 10. The Secretary of Defense shall ap-point a National Industrial Reserve Review Committee, which shall consist of not exceeding 15 persons to be appointed from civilian life who are by training and experi-ence familiar with various fields of American industry, including shipbuilding, manufacture, machine tools, and arms and armament production. The members of such committee shall serve for such term or terms as the Secretary of Defense may specify and shall meet at such times as may be specified by the Secretary of Defense to consult with and advise the National Military Establishment. Each member of such committee shall be entitled to compensation in the amount of $50 for each day, or part of day, he shall be in attendance at any reg-ular called meeting of the committee, together with reimbursement for all travel expenses incident to such attendance: Provided, That nothing contained in sections 41, 109, and 113 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 93, 198, and 203); in Revised Statutes, section 190 (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 99); in section 19 (e) of the Contract ettlement Act of 1944 (Public Law 395, Seventy-eighth Congress); or in any other provision of Federal law imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of services, or the payment or receipt of compensation in connection with any claim pro-ceeding, or matter involving the United apply to such persons solely by reason of their appointment to and membership on such committee.

SEC. 11. It shall be the duty of the committee appointed under section 10 hereof to not less often than once each year the justification for the retention of proper-ty in the national industrial reserve established hereunder and (i) to recommend to the Secretary of Defense the disposition of any such property which in the opinion of the committee would no longer be of suffi-cient strategic value to warrant its further retention for the production of war material in the event of a national emergency; (ii) to recommend to the Secretary of Defense standards of maintenance for the property held in the national industrial reserve; (iii) to review and recommend to the Secretary of Defense the disposal of that property which in the opinion of the committee could and should be devoted to commercial use in the civilian economy; and (iv) to advise the Secretary of Defense with respect to such activities under this Act as he may request. SEC.12. The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Congress on April 1 of each year a report detailing the action taken by it hereunder and containing such other pertinent information on the status of the national industrial reserve as will enable the Congress to evaluate its administration and the need for amendments and related legislation. SEC. 13. Section 5 of the act approved by repealed.

SEC. 14. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Office of the Secretary of Defense and to the Federal Works Administration, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as the Congress may, from time to time, determine to be necessary to enable the Secretary of Defense and the Federal Works Agency to carry out their respective functions under

Mr. SHAFER. Mr. Speaker, S. 2554 is a bill to promote the common defense by providing for the retention and maintenance of a national reserve of industrial productive capacity. It is almost identical to a House bill, H. R. 6098, which has been unanimously reported to the House by the Armed Services Committee.

This is one of the most important defense measures to be presented to the Congress in this session. This bill, if passed, will preserve an essential nucleus of industrial plants and manufacturing equipment so necessary to the Nation in the event of an emergency.

The primary purpose of this bill is to establish a method of maintaining plants which cannot be disposed of subject to a national-security clause. This bill provides that after a disposal agency finds that it cannot dispose of any excess industrial plant with the national-security clause, then the Secretary of Defense may direct that such plant be transferred to the Federal Works Agency without reimbursement. Thereafter the Federal Works Agency, subject to the policy and standards established by the Secretary of Defense, shall maintain the plants and equipment in adequate standby condition so as to insure their readiness for use in the event of an emergency. It is contemplated that the Federal Works Agency would be authorized to utilize such facilities for storage purposes or other Government use, which would not affect the basic functions of the plant. Continuing efforts will be made to sell or lease these plants with appropriate security clauses imposed.

Under the provisions of Public Law 364, approximately 100,000 machine tools have been earmarked for the industrial reserve or transferred to the custody of the armed services. The proposed legislation permits the further selection of machine tools and industrial equipment excess to the needs of any Government department to be placed in the industrial reserve. It is estimated that the total industrial reserve of machine tools and equipment may eventually approximate 150,000 to 200,000 items.

It is anticipated that under the proposed legislation, the Federal Works Agency will be called upon to maintain about 60 industrial plants. These plants originally cost about $550,000,000. It will cost about 5 percent of original cost to place these plants in adequate stand-by condition, and thereafter about 1 percent per year for maintenance.

The entire cost of the project for fiscal 1949 will probably be about $36,000,000. and thereafter about $6,000,000 to $7,000,000 annually.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot overemphasize the importance of this legislation from a national defense viewpoint. In effect, all we are doing is keeping what we have so that if we are ever called upon to produce war material, we will not have to spend billions for rebuilding or repurchasing that which we already have.

This bill does not in any way impair the operations of private industry or the national economy, and I sincerely hope it will be accepted by the House.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed. A similar House bill (H. R. 6098) was laid on the table.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DEVELOPMENT OF CIVIL TRANSPORT ATRCRAFT

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 6501) to provide for the development of civil transport aircraft adaptable for auxiliary military service and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress that in the interest of national security the Federal Government should promote the employment in air commerce in as large numbers as possible of more efficient transport and cargo aircraft; and, to this end, sponsor the design, development, testing, tooling, con-struction, service testing, and modification of prototype transport and cargo aircraft, intended primarily for commercial use, but adaptable also for auxiliary military service. SEC. 2. The Civil Transport Aircraft Evaluation and Development Board (referred to hereinafter as "the Board") hereinafter provided for, is authorized and directed-

(a) to survey the national requirements for aircraft types designed primarily for com-mercial transport and cargo service, but adaptable also as auxiliary military transport one or more of the departments of the

National Military Establishment;
(b) to prepare and recommend, from time to time, the operating and utility characteristics and specifications of such aircraft: Provided, That such characteristics and specifi-cations shall be consistent with the require-ments of the civil air regulations promulgated by the Civil Aeronautics Board; and

(c) to advise the Secretary of the Air Force (referred to hereinafter as "the Secretary") of the Board's findings and recommendations under this section, and to recommend the allotment by the Secretary, from funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this act, of appropriate sums for design, development, testing, tooling, construction, service testing, and modification of prototypes of each such

SEC. 3. (a) The Board shall be composed of one representative designated by each of the following agencies: The United States Air Force, the United States Navy, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the Civil Aeronautics Board, and such other agencies of the Federal Government, concerned with aeronautics, as the Board may, from time to time, determine.

(b) To assist the Board in carrying out its functions, it is authorized to establish an in-dustrial advisory committee composed of not less than six members appointed by the Board with the approval of the Secretary. Each member of such committee shall serve for a term of 2 years, except that (1) the terms of three of the members first taking office after the enactment of this act shall expire at the end of 1 year, and (2) any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the ex-piration of the term for which his prede-cessor was appointed shall be appointed for the unexpired term of the member whom he succeeds. No member shall be eligible to serve continuously for more than one term unless in the opinion of the Board his reappointment is necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act. Members of such committee may be designated without regard to the civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and shall receive such compensation, not in excess of $50 for each day or part of a day actually devoted to the performance of the duties of such commit-tee, as the Board shall determine. Each member of such committee shall be allowed actual necessary transportation expenses and an allowance not to exceed $10 per diem in lieu of subsistence when engaged in the performance of the duties of such committee at any place other than his permanent residence or place of business. Nothing contained in sections 41, 109, 112, or 113 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 93, 198, 202, and 203), section 190 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 119), or any other provision of law imposing restrictions, requirements, or penalties in relation to the employment of persons, the performance of services, or the payment or receipt of compen-sation in connection with any claim, pro-ceeding, or matter involving the United States, shall apply to any such person solely by reason of membership on such committee: Provided, That the provisions of the act of July 12, 1870 (R. S. 3679; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 665), as amended, shall not apply to the acceptance of voluntary service by any member of any such committee.

(c) The Chairman of the Board shall be designated by the Secretary from among the members thereof and the Board shall act in accordance with such regulations and rules of procedure as it may, from time to time, prescribe. The Board is authorized and directed to consult with manufacturers of air-craft, and with United States operators of transport aircraft. Members of the Board shall serve as such without additional compensation, but each member of the Board shall be allowed actual necessary transportation expenses and an allowance not to exceed $10 per diem, in lieu of subsistence, when engaged in the performance of the duties of the Board at any place other than his permanent station.

(d) The Board and the Secretary are authorized, subject to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, without regard to any provision of law limiting the number of civilian personnel which may be employed by the Department of the Air Force, to employ and fix the compensation of such personnel as may be deemed necessary to assist the Board and the Secretary in carrying out their respective functions under this act: Provided, That to the extent possible, consistent with other duties and assignments, the personnel and facilities of the member agencies of the Board shall be used to carry out the duties of the Board.

SEC. 4. The Secretary is authorized and directed, if he concurs in the advice and recommendations of the Board referred to in section 2 of this act, to provide, out of funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this act, for the design, development, testing, tooling, construction, service testing, and modification of prototypes of each such type of aircraft, by contract or otherwise. Any such contract entered into by the Government shall contain a provision that—

(1) sales of aircraft subsequently manufactured from the design specifications of such prototype or prototypes shall be made at a price allowing a reasonable profit, not exceeding such profit as may be prescribed by the Secretary; and

(2) in determining the fair selling price of such aircraft, except to the extent required by the Secretary, there shall not be included in the cost thereof any development, engineering, tooling, or other costs which have been reimbursed to the manu-facturer by the Secretary; and

(3) aircraft subsequently manufactured from the design specifications of such prototype or prototypes shall be sold only to purchasers who, by contract with the Secretary, have undertaken (a) unless required by the civil air regulations to make no changes in the design or standard equipment of such aircraft without first obtaining the approvalof the Secretary; and (b) to make, for an agreed sum payable by the Secretary, such changes in the design or standard equipment of such aircraft, not inconsistent with the civil air regulations, as the Secretary may prescribe.

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary, in carrying out the provisions of section 4 of this act, may enter into contracts or other arrangements, or modifications thereof, with or without legal consideration, with or without performance or other bonds, and, in carrying out such contracts, arrangements, or modifications thereof, may make advance, progress, and other payments without regard to the provisions of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes.

(b) Each contract, arrangement, or modification thereof, executed pursuant to this act, shall contain such provisions, consistent with the laws affecting the issuance or use of patents, governing the disposition and use of inventions made thereunder as are appropriate, in the judgment of the Secretary, to protect the public interest and the equities of the individual or organization with which the contract, arrangement, or modification thereof is executed.

SEC. 6. The Secretary is authorized to procure and test prototype aircraft from any manufacturer whose design meets the oper-ating and utility characteristics and speci-fications recommended by the Board: Provided, That, in the event such manufacturer is not in a position to produce promptly the prototype aircraft desired, then the Secretary may procure such prototype aircraft from any other qualified manufacturer.

SEC. 7. Aircraft manufactured from design specifications pursuant to this act shall not be sold directly or by resale to either foreign governments or other foreign users without the approval of the Secretary: Provided, That in approving any such sale the Secretary may waive such of the requirements of section 3 hereof as he may deem proper.

SEC. 8. The Secretary is authorized and directed, if he concurs in the advice and recommendations of the Board with respect thereto, by appropriate contractual condi-tions or otherwise, to recover, in whole or in part, as deemed to be practicable and expedient, the costs incurred by the United States pursuant to this act. The Secretary shall transmit to the Congress within a pe riod of 1 year following the passage of this act a report setting forth the means and methods which he intends to utilize in effecting such recovery.

SEC. 9. In the event the Board shall recommend the development of a seaplane commercial transport or cargo aircraft and the Secretaries of the Navy and the Air Force concur, the Secretary of the Navy shall be authorized to perform all of the functions with respect to such aircraft as are vested in the Secretary of the Air Force by this act, and the Secretary of the Air Force is authorized to transfer to the Secretary of the Navy such funds appropriated under this act as may be necessary for the performance of such functions.

SEC. 10. As used in this act-

(a) The term "aircraft" shall include en-nes, propellers, instruments, accessories, and standard equipment for such aircraft.

(b) The term "standard equipment" means all operational features of such aircraft, including, without limitation, standard cockpit arrangement, communications, facilities, and provisions for such items, but excluding commercial equipment.

(c) The term "commercial equipment" means removable furnishings and fittings, not part of the primary structure or the mechanical apparatus of such aircraft, and which is generally installed for the accommodation of passengers, baggage, or cargo.

(d) The term "prototype aircraft" means the initial models of each type, built primarily for static tests, flight performance, and service test.

SEC. 11. The Secretary and the Board shall transmit to the Congress, on the 1st day of January in each year, a report on (1) the progress made in the accomplishment of the purposes of this act and (2) the amounts of the expenditures made or obligated pursuant thereto.

SEC. 12. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of the Air Force such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Speaker, this bill has received the unanimous approval of all Members of the Committee on Armed Services who were present and who took part in the consideration of it, as well as of those to whose attention it has been brought. It sets forth the policy of the United States that in the interest of national security the Federal Government should promote the employment in air commerce of as large numbers as possible of more efficient transport and cargo aircraft. The purpose of the bill, which has the approval of the Department of Commerce, the Department of the Air Force, the Department of the Navy, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and the Civil Aeronautics Board is to see to it that the latest possible transport designs are available for air-commercial people. At the outbreak of the present war the Government was fortunate and so was the military in having DC-3 planes available in large numbers. The cargo companies are not in a position to develop the new planes, and that being so it is believed that the Air Forces, under the direction of the Secretary and Board, should determine the best type of transport plane for both the military and the commercial people and to see, if possible, if they cannot agree to use that plane in their operations. That, I think, is a sufficient explanation of the bill.

FEDERAL-AID ROAD ACT

Mr. DONDERO submitted conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 5888) to amend and supplement the Federal-Aid Road Act approved July 11, 1916 (39 Stat. 355), as amended and supplemented, to authorize appropriations for continuing the construction of highways, and for other purposes.

CONVEYING SANTA ROSA ISLAND, FLA .-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CLASON submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill H. R. 3735:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3735) to authorize and direct the Secretary of War to donate and convey to Okaloosa County, State of Florida, all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a portion of Santa Rosa Island, Florida, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 3, and 4, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 1: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amend-ment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "That the Secretary of the Army is authorized to convey, subject to the limitations and conditions hereinafter enumerated and such others as he may prescribe, to Okaloosa County, State of Florida, for recreational purposes, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to all or any part of that portion of Santa Rosa Island, Florida, extending one mile east from Brooks Bridge on United States Highway 98 near the town of Fort Walton, Florida, except for a strip of land six hundred feet wide (three hundred feet east and three hundred feet west from center line of road leading to radar site 'Dick'), extending from Highway 98 to the mean low water level of the Gulf of Mexico. and two miles west from said bridge, and to all or any part of that portion of said Santa Rosa Island which lies east of the new channel at East Pass (consisting of two small islands), said property being under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army. Such conveyance shall be made upon payment by said county of a sum which shall be 50 per centum of the fair value of the property conveyed, based upon the highest and best use of the property at the time it is of-fered for sale regardless of its former character or use, as determined by the Secretary, less such portion of the price originally paid by said county for said island, prior to its conveyance to the United States, as the Secretary shall determine to be fair and equi-

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3735) entitled "An act to authorize and direct the Secretary of War to donate and convey to Okalosa County, State of Florida, all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a portion of Santa Rosa Island, Fla., and for other purposes," submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

The purpose of the proposed legislation is to permit the Secretary of the Army to convey a portion of Santa Rosa Island, Fla., to Okalocsa County, Fla., subject to restrictions, without consideration, for public recreational purposes. The Senate disagreed with the provisions authorizing a gratuitous conveyance of the property in question and amended the bill to provide that the Secretary of the Army shall be permitted to convey the property to Okaloosa County, Fla., but that the consideration for such conveyance should be equal to the fair value of the property conveyed, based upon the highest and best use of the property at the time it is offered for sale without regard to its former character or use, less such portion of the price originally paid by said county for said land, prior to its conveyance to the United States. The conferees have agreed to an amendment to the Senate amendment wherein the conveyance is authorized upon the payment of 50 percent of the fair market value of the property by Okaloosa County, Fla., to the United States.

Senate amendment No. 2 is merely a clarifying amendment which clearly defines the responsibility, as between Okaloosa County and the Department of the Army, for the maintenance of certain fences which are to be erected pursuant to the provisions of the proposed legislation. Senate amendments Nos. 3 and 4 are only technical amendments which are made necessary by the fact that the Secretary of War has been superseded by the Secretary of the Army.

NATIONAL FUEL POLICY

Mr. RIZLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 595) to direct the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to recommend a national fuel policy.

The Clerk read the title of the reso-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. BUCK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may we have an explanation of this resolution?

Mr. RIZLEY. This resolution came from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It gives that committee authority to look into the fuel situation during this summer. It was reported by that committee unanimously and was reported out of the Committee on Rules unanimously.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas it appears that current and anticlpated shortages of petroleum products threaten the present and future economy and security of the people of the United States; and

Whereas such shortages must be considered in the light of the availability of other fuels and energy resources; and

Whereas in order to deal effectively with the problem of making petroleum and other fuels available in quantities adequate for an expanding economy and for the security of the United States, it is necessary to formulate sound national policies: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to formulate and recommend a national fuel policy adequate to meet the needs of the United States in times of peace and war, including recommendations for a national petroleum policy and the integration of such policy with policies relating to other fuels and energy resources except atomic energy; and for such purposes the committee shall study the current and future fuel supply and demand of the United States and shall study methods of encouraging needed developments to assure the availability of fuels adequate for an expanding economy and the security of the United States.

SEC. 2. The committee shall make a report not later than the close of the present Congress. Such report may be made to the Clerk of the House if the House is not in session.

SEC. 3. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this resolution, the committee or any subcommittee thereof—

(1) is authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within or outside the United States, whether or not the House is in session, has adjourned, or has recessed, to hold such hearings, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, correspondence, memoranda, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary; and subpenas shall be issued over the signature of the chairman of the committee or by any member designated by him, and may be served by any person designated by such chairman or member;

(2) may utilize the services, information, facilities, and personnel of the various departments and agencies of the Government to the extent that such services, information, facilities, and personnel, in the opinion of such departments and agencies, can be furnished without undue interference with the performance of the work and duties of such departments and agencies;

(3) may seek information from such sources and conduct its studies and investigations in such manner as it deems advisable in the interest of a full and correct ascertainment of the facts.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL FUEL POLICY

Mr. LeCOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration, I submit a privileged resolution (H. Res. 600) and ask for its immediate consideration. The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the expenses of carrying out the provisions of House Resolution 595, incurred by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, acting as a whole or by subcommittee, not to exceed $35,000, including expenditures for the employment of experts, assistants, and other employees, and all expenses necessary for travel and subsistence incurred by members and employees while engaged in the activities of the committee or any subcommittee thereof, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives on vouchers signed by the chairman of the committee or subcommittee.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 4, strike out "$35,000" and insert "$20,000" in lieu thereof.

Line 11, following the word "subcommittee," add the words "and approved by the Committee on House Administration."

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LECOMPTE. I yield.

Mr. RAYBURN. I have no way of objecting to these appropriations, of course, since they come from the Committee on House Administration as privileged matters. But just the other day, before several resolutions similar to this passed, I looked up the record with reference to such appropriations. I find that this Congress has already appropriated $1,-733,741.52 for investigating committees. I think that that is probably a larger amount than I have ever known to be appropriated in any 10-year period for investigating committees.

Mr. LeCOMPTE. Of course, the gentleman knows that a considerable part of that money has not yet been expended. For example, the resolution just read was reduced from $35,000 to $20,000, in accordance with the resolution which was just passed a moment ago.

Mr. RAYBURN. I understand that, but by the time we get through with this session of the Congress, we will probably have appropriated much more than $2,000,000 to pay the expenses of investigating committees. Nearly half of the amount that has been appropriated, the gentleman understands, has not been expended.

I do not say that all this money has been expended, but it has been appropriated.

Mr. LECOMPTE. I do not have the figures with me as to amount that is unexpended. But some of the committees, for example, have already turned back money.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I am not saying that all this money has been expended. I am just saying that this session of the Congress has appropriated $1,733,741.52 for investigating committees.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LECOMPTE. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. I would like to remind the gentleman from Texas that under the Reorganization Act, the responsibility was placed on the regular standing committees of the Congress to conduct continuing surveillance of the operations coming within their jurisdiction. Much of the money has been spent in that way. I might suggest also that my view is that probably the money that has been spent that way is the best money that this Congress has ever spent.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

INVESTIGATION OF ISLAND POSSESSIONS IN THE PACIFIC

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 129) providing for a joint committee composed of Members of the Senate and the House Public Lands Committee to make an investigation of our island possessions in the Pacific and trust territories, and report back recommendations for legislation providing for civil government, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 4, line 11, after "advisable.", insert: "The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words."

Page 4, line 12, after "committee", insert: ", which shall not exceed $50,000,".

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. EBERHARTER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is that for the trip down to the Hawaiian Islands to investigate whether that Territory is ready for statehood?

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. No. This bill passed the House and has already passed the Senate. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford].

Mr. CRAWFORD. This in no way refers to the Hawaiian Islands statehood proposition.

Mr. EBERHARTER. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McCORMACK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, just as a matter of curiosity, we passed the Hawaiian Islands statehood bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct.
Mr. McCORMACK. Unfortunately, it was not passed in the other body.
Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct.
Mr. McCORMACK. I suppose under

Mr. McCORMACK. I suppose under this resolution the joint committee will keep alive the hope to the people of Hawaii that sometime in the future both branches will act favorably.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I appreciate the gentleman making those remarks, but this resolution has to do with a trusteed area which has been taken over under the United Nations by the United States, and we must necessarily adopt some kind of civil form of government.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am not opposed to the resolution.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. McCORMACK. I make the observation that certainly this body did everything it could in connection with Hawaiian statehood.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is right.

Mr. HOBBS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask the distinguished gentleman from Michigan if he is a member of that committee.

Mr. CRAWFORD. You mean the committee that is to be appointed?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. As chairman of the Committee on Insular Affairs and Territories, I may be on the committee, but the Speaker has not yet appointed a committee.

Mr. HCBBS. But you are chairman of the committee which is bringing in this request?

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct. Mr. HOBBS. And, in your opinion, it is all right?

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is correct.

Mr. HOBBS. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

VIRGIN ISLANDS CORPORATION

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker. I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 5904) to incorporate the Virgin Islands Corporation, and for other purposes, as amended.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in order to promote the general welfare of the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands of the United States through the economic development of the Virgin Islands of the United States there is hereby created, within the Department of the Interior, a body corporate to be known as the Virgin Islands Corporation hereinafter referred to as the "Corporation."

SEC. 2. The Corporation shall have principal offices in the Virgin Islands and in the District of Columbia and shall be deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions to be an inhabitant of each of these jurisdictions. The Corporation may establish offices in such other place or places as it may deem necessary or appropriate in the conduct of

SEC. 3. The Corporation shall have, and may exercise, the following general powers, in addition to those elsewhere conferred in this act:

(a) To have succession until dissolved by act of Congress.

(b) To adopt, alter, and use a seal which shall be judicially noticed.

(c) To adopt, amend, and repeal bylaws governing the conduct of its general business, and the performance of the powers and duties granted to or imposed upon it by law.

(d) To sue and to be sued in its corporate name.

(e) To determine through its directors the character of and necessity for its obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to laws applicable generally to Government corporations.

(f) To execute all instruments necessary or appropriate in the exercise of any of its

(g) Whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of the Corporation, to acquire, in any lawful manner, any property, real, personal, or mixed, tan-gible or intangible; to hold, maintain, use, and operate the same; and to sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same.

(h) When consistent with the powers and duties granted to or imposed upon it by law, to enter into contracts, leases, agreements, or other transactions

(1) with any person, firm, association, r corporation; and

(2) with any agency or instrumentality of the United States, or with any State, Territory, or possession, or with any political subdivision thereof, on a break-even basis, except that such basis shall not apply with respect to the sale of products manufactured or produced by the Corporation: Provided, That in no case shall the Corpora-tion contract to undertake an activity for any agency or instrumentality of the United States, or with any State, Territory, or possession, or with any political subdivision thereof, unless the latter is authorized by law to undertake such activity and has funds available for such purpose: Provided further, That the Corporation shall not undertake any program or activity tending to duplicate concurrently the programs or ac-tivities of any other Government agency within the Virgin Islands or extend such program or activity beyond limitations already imposed on such other governmental agencies.

(i) To obtain funds from the Treasury of the United States, for use in the performance of the powers and duties granted to or imposed upon it by law, not to exceed a total of $7,775,000 outstanding at any time. For this purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to advance to the Corporation out of funds appropriated in advance to the Treasury for this pur-pose, amounts not exceeding a total of $7,-775,000 when requested by the Board of Directors of the Corporation. Appropriations for this purpose are hereby authorized to be made.

(j) To appoint such officers, agents, and employees; to vest them with such powers and duties; to fix and pay such compensation to them for their services as the Cor-poration may determine, without regard to the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; and to require bonds for the faithful performance of their duties, the premiums on such bonds to be paid by the Corporation: Provided, That persons employed by the Corporation whose compensation is paid on any basis other than a per annum basis shall not be included in making computations pursuant to the provisions of section 607 of the Federal Employees' Pay Act of 1945: Provided further, That the Corporation shall give due consideration to residents of the Virgin Islands in the hiring of its employees and officers.

(k) To use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as the executive departments of the Federal Government. (1) To have, in the payment of debts out bankruptcy estates, the priority of the United States.

(m) To accept gifts or donations of services, or of property, real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible, in aid of any of the purposes herein authorized.

(n) To take such actions as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the powers herein or hereafter specifically conferred upon it.

SEC. 4. In fulfillment of its objects, the Corporation, in accordance with annual budget programs submitted to and approved by the Congress pursuant to applicable provi-sions of law, is authorized to use its general

(a) to examine, investigate, and conduct research and experimentation in the marketing, distributing, advertising, and exporting of products or resources of the Virgin Islands, and to make known the results of such activities:

(b) to encourage and to promote the investment of private capital in industrial, agricultural, commercial, or related enterprises or activities in the Virgin Islands. Insofar as may be possible without jeopard-izing the maximum development of industrial, agricultural, commercial, and related resources for the public good, the Corporation shall formulate its policies so as to encourage and promote the investment of capital owned by residents of the Virgin Islands:

(c) to engage in land-use planning to the end that the most economic and socially beneficial use may be made of the soil of the Virgin Islands, and to encourage and assist private persons and organizations to act in accordance with the results of such planning;

(d) to encourage and engage in the business of providing, whenever adequate facilities are not otherwise available, transportation for persons and property to and from the Virgin Islands, and from place to place in the Virgin Islands;

(e) to encourage, promote, and develop, and to assist in the encouragement, promo-tion, and development of tourist trade in the Virgin Islands;

(f) to encourage the establishment and development of small farms and small farm communities in the Virgin Islands, and, for that purpose, to construct, equip, improve, administer, operate, and supervise such small farms or communities and to make loans and give other assistance to them;

(g) to make loans to any person for the establishment, maintenance, operation, con-struction, reconstruction, repair, improvement, or enlargement of any industrial, commercial, agricultural, or related enterprise, undertaking, or activity in the Virgin Islands whenever such loans are not available from private sources: Provided, That the total amount of outstanding loans made under authority of this paragraph shall not at any time exceed $5,221,880: Provided further, That each person applying for a loan shall be required to furnish adequate security and that the interest on such loans shall not exceed 6 percent per annum; shall be the general policy of the Corporation to establish interest rates on loans that, in the judgment of the Board of Directors, will at least cover the interest cost of funds to the United States Treasury, the operating expenses of the lending division of the corporation, and a risk factor which, over all, should provide for losses that may be expected to materialize on loans;

(h) for any of the purposes or objects herein authorized, and for the further purpose of developing the industrial, commercial, mining, agricultural, livestock, fishery, and forestry resources of the Virgin Islands, to establish, maintain, operate, and engage in, upon its own account, any appropriate enterprise, undertaking, or activity:

Provided, That the Corporation shall not undertake any activity not specifically set forth in the annual budget programs: Pro-vided further, That in the event an emergency is declared to exist by the Board of Directors during a period when the Congress is not in session, appropriate action in effectuation of the policies or purposes of the Corporation recommended by the Board to meet such emergency may be taken upon the advance authorization of the President of the United States. Such emergency action shall be reported to the Congress upon its reconvening for its approval, and, subject to the appropriation of funds therefore, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to reimburse the Corporation for any losses incurred as a result of such action

SEC. 5. (a) The Corporation shall issue a receipt as of July 1, 1948, to the Secretary of the Treasury for the value of the property and assets transferred, less the liabilities assumed, under section 9 hereof. Such receipt shall be evidence of the ownership of the Corporation by the United States of America. The amount of the receipt shall be increased or decreased by any subsequent changes in the investment of the United States Government. Any property and assets, the ownership of which hereafter may be transferred to the Corporation without cost, or for consideration clearly not commen-surate with the value received, shall be included in the investment of the United States Government at net values approved by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget. Any income earned by the Corporation shall be included in the investment and any losses incurred shall reduce the investment. The amount of the receipt shall not include, and interest shall not be paid to the Treasury on funds advanced by or payable to other agen-cies of the United States Government.

(b) The Corporation chall pay interest on the advances from the Treasury and on that part of the Government's investment represented by assets transferred to the Corporation, but shall not pay interest on accumulated net income or on funds received through appropriations by the Congress to cover losses. The Secretary of the Treasury shall determine the interest rate annually in advance; such rate to be calculated to reimburse the Treasury for its cost.

(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of the Treasury sums to cover net losses estimated in advance in the Corporation's budgets submitted in accordance with the Government Corpora-tion Control Act (59 Stat. 597) and approved by the Congress, to be paid over to Corporation from time to time as needed.

SEC. 6. The Corporation is hereby authorized to use all its funds and other assets, and all funds and other assets which may hereafter be paid, transferred, or allocated to, or otherwise acquired by it in the exercise of its corporate powers and functions: Provided, That no Government funds may be turned over to or administered by the Corporation other than as authorized by this act or the annual Government Corporations Appropriation Acts. The Corporation shall reimburse the civil-service retirement and disability fund for Government contributions to the fund applicable to the Corporation's employees, and the employees' compensation fund, Bureau of Employees' Compensation, Federal Security Agency, for the benefit payments made to the Corporation's employed and shall also reimburse other Government agencies for payments of a similar nature made on behalf of the Corporation.

SEC. 7. The Corporation shall pay into the Treasury of the United States the amount of its funds, from whatever source derived, in excess of the current requirements of the Corporation. Such payments shall be ap-plied, first to reduce the balance of the receipt evidencing ownership attributable to advances outstanding under section 3 (1) hereof, after which any payments shall be applied to the remainder of the receipt. The investment of the United States Government in no event shall be reduced to less than $1.

SEC. 8. The property and business of the Corporation shall be managed by a board of mine directors to consist of the Governor of the Virgin Islands, the Secretary of the In-terior or his nominee, the president of the Corporation, the remaining members to be appointed by the President of the United States. The power of removal shall be vested in the President of the United States. Not more than five directors shall be of any one political party. The directors shall designate one of their members as chairman of the Board, subject to the approval of the President of the United States. The Board of Directors shall report upon the affairs and activities of the Corporation to the President of the United States through the Secretary of the Interior. The appointed directors shall serve for a period of 5 years, except that the terms of the first Board shall be shortened to provide for replacement or reappointment of its members in number as nearly equal as possible each year. The Board shall meet at least quarterly: Provided, That at least two of the meetings in each year shall be held in the Virgin Islands. Directors who are otherwise employed full time by the Corporation, by the Government of the Virgin Islands, by the municipalities of St. Thomas and St. John or St. Croix, or by the United States Government shall receive additional compensation for their services as directors. All other directors shall receive a fee of $50 a day for each day in attendance at directors' meetings, including travel time. All directors shall receive necessary travel expenses in connection with their attendance at directors' meetings. A majority of the directors shall constitute a quorum of the Board and action shall be taken only by a majority vote of those present. Qualifications for Board membership shall consist of demonstrated ability, attachment to the public interest, impartiality, and diversified experience among the members. The Board shall confine itself to over-all policy-making, directive, and supervisory functions with administrative functions centered in a staff of executive officers (including a controller) headed by a chief executive, resposible for the execution of programs and policies adopted by the Board.

SEC. 9. (a) There is hereby transferred to the Corporation the following property:

(1) All property—real, personal, and mixed—now operated by the Virgin Islands Company, on behalf of the United States, except that property now operated by the company for the Department of the Interior conveyed to that Department by revocable permit from the Navy Department under agree-ment dated January 1, 1948. The value of the property so transferred shall be fixed at the depreciated cost as of June 30, 1947, shown in schedule 1 of the Comptroller General's report on the audit of the Virgin Islands Company for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1947, adjusted for all changes from that date to the date of transfer, including depreciation at rates set forth in said schedule 1.

(2) All the assets and property—real, personal, and mixed, tangible and intangible—of the Virgin Islands Company. The value of the property so transferred shall be fixed at the value shown on the books of the Virgin Islands Company at the date of transfer, subject to any adjustment deemed necessary as a result of the audit required to be made by the Comptroller General under section 105 of the Government Corporation Control Act of 1945.

(3) All of the United States Government's interest in the property known as Bluebeard Castle Hotel situated in the Island of St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands of the United The value of the property so trans-States. ferred shall be fixed at a value approved by the Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

(b) The Corporation shall assume and discharge all of the liabilities of the Virgin Islands Company: Provided, That the liabilities shall not include the balances of relief grants held by the Virgin Islands Company, which balances are invested in the assets and property embraced by section 9 (a) (2) hereof, and which shall become part of the Government's investment in the Corporation.

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior, the Under Secretary of the Interior, and the Governor of the Virgin Islands, who are the stockholders of the Virgin Islands Company, a corporation created by ordinance of the Colonial Council for St. Thomas and St. John, Virgin Islands of the United States, are hereby authorized and directed to take such steps as may be appropriate to dissolve the said Virgin Islands Company. SEC. 11. In lieu of taxes, the Corporation is authorized to make the annual payments into the municipal treasuries of the Virgin Islands directed by section 5 of the act of May 26, 1936 (49 Stat. 1372; 48 U. S. C. 1401d), to be made by the Virgin Islands Company: Provided, That any valuation for tax purposes made by the Secretary of the Interior shall not be reviewable by any court: Provided further, That the annual payments shall not include payments in lieu of income taxes, capital stock taxes, or franchise taxes. SEC. 12. Section 101 of the Government Corporation Control Act of 1945 is amended by striking out "The Virgin Islands Company" appearing therein and substituting the Virgin Islands Corporation."

SEC. 13. This act shall become effective

June 30, 1948.

SEC. 14. This act may be cited as the "Virgin Islands Corporation Act."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker. I demand a second.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Without objection. it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN] is recognized for 20

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may require to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD 1.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, some 14 years ago, as the result of a terrific and chaotic economic condition in the Virgin Islands, the Government of the United States went into that Territory and established what has been known for the past 14 years as the Virgin Islands Company. Private citizens of that area had practically been thrown into bankruptcy and were forced to discontinue operation of their plantations and their sugar mills because of the terrific losses that had been incurred in the period 1929 to 1933. The Government of the United States outside of the Virgin Islands Company and through the Department of the Interior, Public Works Division, acquired a very substantial acreage where sugarcane and other crops had previously been grown. They purchased two sugar mills and a rum factory which had been owned and operated by private individuals. The Virgin Islands Company, having received grants-in-aid from the Treasury of the United States, leased from the Department of the Interior, Public Works Division, lands and mills which the Department of the Interior

During the past 14 years the Virgin Islands Company has been operating those properties under lease. The Virgin Islands Company is the largest employer of direct employees, and, indirectly, through purchasing the products grown by farmers on the island of St. Croix. which is the largest agricultural area of the islands, and thereby becomes the largest employer of people in the Virgin Islands. Its operations primarily constitute the backbone of the economic structure of the Virgin Islands.

Some months ago, as you know, the Congress of the United States adopted the Federal Corporations Act which forces all of these Federal corporations to become organized under the Corporations Act. It is therefore necessary now to reincorporate the Virgin Islands Company before the 30th of June of this year under the new Federal Corporations Act or the Virgin Islands Company must go out of business not later than June 30 of this year.

If the Virgin Islands Company does go out of business on June 30 of this year it forces a tremendous relief program to be initiated by the Government of the United States in order to provide relief for the people of the Virgin Islands because the principal industrial operation of the Virgin Islands will cease to operate.

The best information which I can obtain, and it is certainly reliable, from the Department of the Interior, the Governor and the Municipal Councils of St. Thomas and St. Croix, is that this will call for an immediate job for the Red Cross and cost millions of dollars from the Federal Treasury putting these people on direct relief if these operations, agricultural and industrial, are discontinued. This is a straight proposition without any vacillation whatsoever to refinance the Virgin Islands Company, extend it under the New Federal Corporations Act and let it go along as a direct employer maintaining the principal economic structure of the Virgin Islands.

We are now at the point where we must make a decision whether or not we shall resort to direct relief in place of agricultural and industrial operations or go ahead with the refinancing and reconstruction of the Virgin Islands Company under the new Corporations Act.

If any Member desires to ask questions, I shall be glad to try to answer them.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Can the gentleman tell us what the over-all cost involved in this bill will be?

Mr. CRAWFORD. This bill calls for only $7,750,000 for the combined purpose. Now, let me make this very emphatic: It will take something like $900,000 to refinance the Company and rebuild the mills so that they can operate efficiently, and put in new machinery—new presses for the sugarcane which the farmers grow.

This bill carries, roughly, $4,000,000 as part of the $7,750,000 for the Company to use in making loans to people in the Virgin Islands who are without bank facilities in that the one bank located there which holds the position of a virtual monopoly will not extend commercial loans to the people and let them adventure in their own way. This is necessary if the people of the Virgin Islands are to have money with which to operate or a source from which to get funds so that they can enter into private industry of their own. They must have recourse to the RFC, the Commodity Credit Corporation, or some other Government credit agency, in the absence of the existence of the Virgin Islands Company.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Does the gentleman know what action the other body took on this?

Mr. CRAWFORD. As I understand, the other body has passed a bill which provides only $500,000 to continue the operation of this Company along with loans that it will have to obtain from the Treasury of the United States for 1 year,

That bring up this question: Just 1 year ago in the closing hours of the session, as a matter of fact, almost at midnight, as the result of our not having acted prior to that time, the Appropriations Committees of the two bodies in conjunction with my efforts and the efforts of other gentlemen of the Congress, mushed through in the last minutes a life rope, you might say, and pulled the Company through, but with the promises that before this time this whole matter would be cleaned up. Now we face the situation where the other body offers to extend it on a shoestring basis for another 6 months until the Congress meets in January, action which will call for an amendment to the Federal Corporations Act exempting this corporation from that act so that it may continue beyond June 30. That is as frank and blunt as I can state with reference to what the other body has done.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Does not the gentleman feel the action of the other body is probably better than this bill?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I do not think so. I feel that the responsibility of the Virgin Islands is upon the leadership of these two bodies and that we have not treated those people fairly. It is time for us to give them some answer as to their social and economic condition while we are doing all these things for people scattered all over the world.

This is a bill that I strongly urge and strongly advocate for the favorable consideration of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Will the gentleman tell the House whether the Virgin Islands Company has done anything in the way of rehabilitating those people?

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Virgin Islands Company has maintained the social and economic structure of these people during the past 14 years and it has charged up against that a loss of only about $60,000 in direct losses plus depreciation on the agricultural implements and the factory owned by the Department of the Interior during that period.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Miller].

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I think the Congress ought to be informed as to what is going on in the Virgin Islands. Senator Butler and myself made a trip to the Virgin Islands during the Christmas holidays. We spent 2 weeks in these islands. A report was made to Congress. It is amazing the amount of waste of the taxpayers' money that is going on in the islands.

You must remember the Seventy-eighth Congress appropriated $10,000,000 for a rehabilitation program, a publicworks program, in the Virgin Islands. We have already spent more than $4,000,000 on public works.

Mr. Speaker, I was down there and saw some of those public works. In two of the towns on St. Croix Island, Christiansted and Fredriksted, they had built 3 miles of sewers and have 18 private houses connected with those sewers.

They are wasting the taxpayers' money in a way I am sure you would not approve.

As to the Virgin Islands Company, we looked into that very, very carefully. The present manager I think is a good man. His name is Olsen. He wants to get out of the business of growing sugarcane by those people. He has the earmarks of a good manager. Now, we propose to appropriate over $7,000,000 to continue this Company. Between four and five hundred people are employed by the Virgin Islands Company for a period of about 5 months in the year.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman knows very well that the pay roll of the Virgin Islands Company to which the gentleman refers does not include the very small farmer who operates a small piece of land and sells the products of his labor to the mills operated by the Virgin Islands Company and the gentleman further knows that the $10,000,000 referred to by him has nothing whatever to do with the Virgin Islands Company.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. It was a work-relief project. I know there are a few small farmers around there who raise cane and send it to the mills. The sugarcane industry cannot be justified,

The Government is also in the rum business. You have to sort of give it away with the other liquor that people drink. They have to buy some of this Government rum in order to get liquor. Now, that molasses is brought over from Puerto Rico.

I admit that the Virgin Islands is our problem. The people have not been very well treated. But I am also here to tell you that the people in the Virgin Islands will not work. They do not work. They like relief. We have carried them on a relief program and as long as they are carried on such a program they will not work. We are establishing an economy and standard of living they cannot support.

Senator Butler, myself, and two clerks went over to the island of Tortola, which is about the same size as the island of St. John. It is under England's control. Now, we have more people employed by the Government on the island of St. John than there are in private industries. The biggest employment, with padded pay rolls all the way down the line. I believe the records show that there are 1,100 people on the Government pay roll in the Virgin Islands.

There is an Englishman in charge at the island of Tortola. An Englishman runs that island containing about the same number of people as the island of St. Thomas; he has all of those farmers working making a living, self-supporting, bringing their goods by little boats to the island of St. Thomas and he is running his island with 75 people. That is what the English are able to do.

The Interior Department under Tugwell and other New Dealers have planted a philosophy in these Virgin Islands that the United States must take care of them. These islanders could support themselves just as they do on the English-controlled island of Tortola if we gave them proper management. The Dutch had no trouble when they owned the islands.

I say to my colleagues that the program that we are adopting in the Virgin Islands is absolutely wrong. It is said there are more Virgin Islanders in the United States than there are down in the Virgin Islands. The average age of the worker in the Virgin Islands, according to statistics, is 54. I looked at their school-lunch program. They can raise everything in the Virgin Islands that they need. They can raise potatoes and vegetables, but the food that was used in the school-lunch program did not come from the Virgin Islands. Every bit of it was imported from this country. They had 160 pounds of potatoes for 120 youngsters. The meat, the butter, the vegetables, and the things that they could raise in the Virgin Islands were not raised there. They were imported, because we give it to them. As long as we continue with that program they will never become self-sustaining or selfsupporting

I am in favor of adopting the bill passed by the Senate. The Senate bill will start liquidation of the Company. There is a bona fide offer to buy the Virgin Islands Company for $1,500,000. It ought to be cleaned up. It would be far cheaper for us to put these people under the Red Cross if they insist on being treated as wards, but the program we are now adopting in the Virgin Islands is absolutely wrong. I am certain that these good people of the Virgin Islands want to be respected self-supporting folks. They cannot do it under the present program.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. LECOMPTE. After being down there did the gentleman think that there was as much agriculture in the Virgin Islands as there is in a good county in Iowa or Nebraska, or even a good township hardly?

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Well, there is not much good land. They could be self-supporting if they went out and worked under proper encouragement from this country.

Mr. LECOMPTE. One good county in the Middle West could produce more than they are producing down there. Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Oh, yes. I prefer the Senate bill. We can then in the Eighty-first Congress help to put these people back on a self-supporting basis. We should not continue the Tugwell program of the thirties.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. EBERHARTER].

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the argument of my good friend the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Miller] defeats itself. This $7,000,000 for the Virgin Islands is largely to put the people in industry and largely to start a public works program which is sadly needed. If there are any on relief, that will take them off relief. So, his argument really defeats itself.

I understand from reliable sources that in those islands the water is so had that it is almost dangerous for anybody to drink it. We owe a duty to the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands. They are our wards. Why force those people to continue drinking this unsanitary water? I understand also that for the past several years there have not been any hospitals built and there have not been any roads built, and conditions down there are deplorable in every respect. When you talk about the pay of these workers on these public works and in private enterprise, they only get about $2 or $3 a day.

about $2 or $3 a day.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, it will be more expensive to deny these Virgin Islanders this $7,000,000 because the entire economy of the country would probably collapse and we would have practically everybody on relief. This is a humanitarian measure. It is not only humanitarian; it is our duty to take care of this situation in the Virgin Islands. The whole world will point to this example how the United States treats its wards down in the Virgin Islands.

I hope that the membership will realize that we ought to pass this measure with an overwhelming vote.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EBERHARTER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Let me reemphasize that the $7,700,000 which is carried in this bill is not to be used unless the people of the Virgin Islands to the extent of approximately $4,000,000 of that total apply to this Company for loans in order to go into business and enterprise themselves. This bill is designed for the specific purpose of enabling those people to establish essential industries and get out from under the wing of the Federal Treasury. It is the very purpose that the gentleman from Nebraska advocates, and it does away with the past program.

Mr. EBERHARTER. In other words, it encourages private enterprise and encourages the establishment of small business, and keep these workers working and under more satisfactory conditions. I hope the House will see the justice of this thing and see what our duty is and pass the bill overwhelmingly.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell].

Mr. POWELL. Mr. Speaker, I am quite familiar with this situation because it happens that most of the Virgin Islanders that are in America live in my district. I do not want to differ too radically with the gentleman from Nebraska, but there are only about 13,000 Virgin Islanders in America and there are 34,000 in the Virgin Islandes. Eight thousand of the Virgin Islanders of America live in my district.

Our friend from Nebraska certainly said some things that are true, but they just do not happen to be related. This is not a relief bill. Granted that the $10,000,000 that was appropriated before went down there for relief and was not used correctly, granted that that may be true, this is still not a relief bill. This is to do just what the gentleman from Nebraska wants done. If you read the bill carefully you will find it states:

For the further purpose of developing the industrial, commercial, mining, agricultural, livestock, fishery, and forestry resources of the Virgin Islands, to establish, maintain, operate, and engage in, upon its own account, any appropriate enterprise, undertaking, or activity.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POWELL. I yield.
Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. This Company has been engaged in that business. They were chartered for it, but they have not accomplished a single thing. There is no reason to think they will accomplish anything in the future.

plish anything in the future.

Mr. POWELL. This Company has accomplished everything. If it were not for this Company we would still have to spend money down there for the relief and the feeding of the people. This is their livelihood.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. The Danes had the islands for over 100 years and they had no trouble. They were quite self-supporting.

Mr. POWELL. Yes; that may be true. Also, if we could get this Company on its feet they would be self-supporting, but we have never put this Company on its feet correctly. If we get this Company on its feet, then they will be able to be self-supporting. You cannot tell people to go out and work and support themselves unless you give them something to do it with; is not that true? In Nebraska you have great farmers, but they have to have something in their hands to farm with Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. This is really a relief program, if that is what you want it to be.

Mr. POWELL. No; this is not a relief program at all.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. It has been all along.

Mr. POWELL. This is to develop in the people the character the gentleman has been talking about, so they will be able to take care of themselves.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POWELL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If I go to the bank and borrow $500 in order to start a peanut store and a popcorn popper and put myself in business, the gentleman from Nebraska would call that a relief program. That is exactly what it is not.

Mr. POWELL. If the gentleman did not, it would be all right, but if they did it he would call it relief.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It is the soundest type of industrial operation on the face of God's green earth. That is what built this country. The gentleman from Nebraska knows this as well as anyone

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. It is a relief program when the money is not paid back and you have to put in more and more money to keep the machine going.

Mr. POWELL. Yes, if it does not come back.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. That is what is going to happen in the Virgin Islands.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What we have been doing in the Virgin Islands is what this bill is designed to take us out of, as the gentleman well knows.

Mr. POWELL. We have been spending money in relief. With this, there is no relief. We are giving the people an opportunity. I call for passage without a record vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MILLER of Newraska) there were-ayes 132, noes 9.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the

LABOR DISPUTE AT OAK RIDGE-MES-SAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 726)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to the Labor-Management Relations Act, 1947, it is my duty to report to the Congress concerning the labor dispute which recently existed at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

The important facts concerning the dispute may be summarized as follows:

The Oak Ridge National Laboratory is Government-owned. Some 2,350 persons are there engaged in important atomic-energy research, but not directly in production of fissionable materials or weapons.

The dispute was between the Carbide Carbon Chemicals Corp. and the Atomic Trades and Labor Council, affiliated with the American Federation of The corporation operates the laboratory under a cost-plus-fixed-fee contract with the Atomic Energy Commission. The corporation also operates two other important plants of the atomic-energy installation at Oak Ridge. The council represents some 900 employees who perform maintenance, operating, and service functions at the laboratory.

The recent dispute resulted from the failure of negotiations concerning both wages and working conditions. These negotiations were begun with the predecessor contractor in the latter part of November 1947 and continued with Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corp. beginning February 9, 1948.

It is clear that there was a difference in objectives sought by the council and the corporation. On the one hand, the council desired to preserve differentials over the two nearby atomic-energy plants as to wage rates and conditions of employment-differentials which have been in existence in the laboratory since its beginning. On the other hand, the corporation desired uniformity of wage rates and conditions of employment and the elimination of the laboratory differentials.

In a union meeting held Sunday, February 29, the employees voted to strike unless settlement were made by Friday midnight, March 5, and this intention was reaffirmed by another meeting on the night of March 3. Accordingly, on March 5, I issued Executive Order 9934, creating a Board of Inquiry pursuant to the Labor-Management Relations Act. At my request, both parties agreed to maintain the status quo until March 19.

On March 15 the Board of Inquiry submitted to me its first report. It found the existence of a labor dispute at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, and it advised me of the facts of that dispute. It further found that grave danger to the national safety would result if the operations of the laboratory were inter-

Thereupon, at my request, the Attorney General on March 19 instituted an action and obtained an injunction in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee. This order enjoined both the corporation and the council, and all persons in active participation with them, from engaging in any strike or lock-out or from interfering with normal continuance of work, or from making any change in terms or conditions of employment other than by mutual agreement.

On March 24 I reconvened the Board of Inquiry. Negotiations between the parties continued, with the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. On May 18 the Board of Inquiry submitted to me its second report, stating that the position of the parties remained unaltered and the dispute unsettled.

On June 1 and 2 the National Labor Relations Board conducted a secret ballot of the employees to ascertain whether they wished to accept the final offer of settlement as stated and made by the employer. The employees, by a vote of employer. The employees, by a vote of 771 to 26, rejected the employer's last offer. On June 7 the National Labor Relations Board certified to the Attorney General the results of this election. On June 8 the employees at a union meeting took action looking to a possible stoppage if the injunction were lifted and if the employer unilaterally placed in effect the terms proposed in its final offer.

On June 10, pursuant to section 210 of the Labor-Management Relations Act, the Attorney General moved the court to discharge the injunction. The injunction was discharged on June 11.

During this period, the parties con-tinued negotiations, with the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. On June 15 the parties reached agreement on the terms of a new contract.

All parties to this dispute and the Government agencies concerned complied with all legal and procedural requirements of title II of the Labor-Management Relations Act, 1947.

A number of additional facts concerning this dispute are set forth in the first and second reports of the Board of Inquiry. Copies of these reports are transmitted to the Congress with this message.

Both parties are to be commended for achieving settlement of this dispute without an interruption of work.

The dispute at Oak Ridge has raised some question, nevertheless, as to the sufficiency of present collective-bargaining methods in atomic-energy installations.

This question is somewhat different from others which have arisen in the past. On the one hand, it is clear that the national security and the develop-ment of the beneficial arts and sciences are bound up with the progress of our atomic-energy program. Thus, every dispute which threatens to seriously impair that program imperils the national health and safety.

On the other hand, it is equally clear that the progress of our atomic-energy program requires the support and drive of broad sectors of the American economy. In order to encourage such support, the Atomic Energy Commission has lodged in its contractors a large measure of responsibility and authority. progress of the program is equally dependent upon the full and willing support of the men and women who work in atomic-energy plants and laboratories.

Under these circumstances, it is imperative that the most successful techniques of the collective-bargaining process should be adopted for the atomicenergy program.

The objective should be twofold: The parties should continue to enjoy the maximum of voluntary action and freedom of choice; secondly, the public interest must be protected at all times.

I believe that special study should be given to the problem of peaceful and orderly settlement of labor disputes in Government-owned, privately operated atomic-energy installations, such as those at Richland, Wash.; Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Los Alamos, N. Mex.; the Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago, Ill.; and

I propose, therefore, to establish a commission, composed of men having expert knowledge in the field of labor relations, to study this problem and to make such recommendations as they may find necessary. The commission should explore the question whether any special legislation should be enacted to protect the national interest without depriving management or labor organizations of the initiative and freedom necessary for the progress of our atomic-energy program. The commission should study ways and means of adapting to the atomic-energy program the best of our experience in the complex field of labor relations. The commission should concern itself also with special aspects of the problem, such as questions of bargaining representation, uniformity of working conditions and wages, and procedures for grievance handling.

The commission should concern itself, in short, with the broad code of conduct which should be observed by management and labor in their relations with each other in this vital program.

In appointing this commission I shall request the advice of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy both as to the membership of the commission and the specific questions to be studied.

I believe that the report of this commission, which should be submitted as soon as possible, will be of great value in guiding contractors, labor organizations. and the Government in this new and vital field. I am confident that this is the best avenue to follow to achieve and maintain that proper balance between freedom and responsibility which is the tradition in all our economic relations, including those between management and labor.

HARRY S. TRUMAN. THE WHITE HOUSE, June 18, 1948.

TO AMEND RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION ACT

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2877) to amend the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4 (b) (2) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, be further amended by striking therefrom the following words and figures: "Section 4 (a) (1), (2), and (4)" and inserting in lieu thereof "Sections 4 (a) (1) and (2)"; and that section 4 (c) thereof be amended by striking out "$25,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$45,000,000."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Wolcorr: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert

"That section 4 (c) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out $25,000,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $35,000,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE MAINTENANCE OF DOMESTIC TIN-SMELTING INDUSTRY

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2830) to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tinsmelting industry.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to strengthen the common defense and to meet industrial needs for tin by providing for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry," approved June 28, 1947, is amended by striking out "June 30, 1949," and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1954."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Wolcott: On page 1, line 8, strike out "June 30, 1954," and insert "June 30, 1950."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended.

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS AT THIS POINT

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, some days ago I placed in the Record a report of the investigation staff of the Appropriations Committee referring to certain matters relating to the administration of unemployment compensation and the employment services in the State of Tennessee. The State director of these services published a reply in most of the newspapers of that State. My answer follows:

My attention has been called to an article entitled "Hake's Reply to Charges," appearing in various Tennessee newspapers. Because the gentleman—under pressure—has attempted to brush aside plain facts and truth with falsehoods and innuendoes, I deem it my duty to give the people of Tennessee the facts.

W. O. Hake is the State employment security commissioner for the State of Tennessee. As such he has under his direction State employees who are paid entirely out of funds appropriated by the Congress of the United States. The Unemployment Compensation Division and the Employment Service are both financed out of funds raised by virtue of a tax imposed by Federal law on covered pay rolls. It thus is important that the Federal Government know how these funds are being expended by the States. The Subcommittee on Appropriations in charge of this particular appropriation directed that an investigation be made in the field in various States to determine the necessity for the large appropriation requested. Mr. Hake appeared before my subcommittee, along with a number of other State administrators, on April 2, 1948. His testimony is found in the printed record of the committee hearings. While he was on the witness stand, I made this statement, which appears on page 239 of the hearings:

I would like to say to you that that is one of the things that the investigating staff of the Appropriations Committee is going to make a thorough study of, and they are trained men in the field of investigation. I expect they will come up with some real information to this committee, so that we can get a picture of the situation which we have heretofore had.

Mr. Hake's response was:

I want to commend you, Mr. Chairman, for inaugurating that policy. The State men will unanimously welcome it.

Thereafter the Appropriations Committee sent investigators into a number of States, including Tennessee. Their preliminary report indicated serious violations of the Hatch Act. The committee decided to have a further investigation made and sent the chief of the investigating staff, Mr. Lee, to conduct the investigation. I may say that everyone in Washington knows that Mr. Lee is one of the most courageous and outstanding investigators in the Federal service, and the attempt of Mr. Hake to "smear" him is the usual artifice adopted by one who is cornered and caught and who is seeking to distract attention from the real facts.

When Mr. Lee's report came to the committee, I was instructed by the committee to lay it before the Congress and to present the preliminary facts disclosed by the Attorney General of the United States and to the United States Civil Service Commission with a demand that a full and complete investigation be made by the FBI and the Civil Service Commission, and with the further demand that such steps be taken in accordance with law as the facts might indicate to be necessary.

Mr. Hake in his statement in no way denies the facts but resorts to the old trick of the accused when confronted with unassailable documentary evidence by calling me names. Among other things, he states in reference to me:

He is well known as having a fixed hatred of any progressive legislation enacted by the Democratic administrations of the last 16 years. The social-security program appears to be one of his pet hates, and especially the Employment Service.

He further says that the action taken by the subcommittee and the Congress would have emasculated the employment security program and that he, along with other State administrators, testified before my committee against this unwarranted position. I categorically state that such statement can only be properly designated as an unmitigated falsehood. The facts are clear. Judge Hake, in company with other leading State administrators, came before my committee and urged that the Congress adopt the program which I was advocating. His testimony appears on pages 234 to 240 of the hearings before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives. I need only to quote this to demonstrate the falsity of Judge Hake's statement. He made this statement to the committee:

As I review it, Congress has done two outstanding things up to the moment: No. 1, last week when it determined that these two programs (unemployment compensation and employment services) should not be separated when they defeated the reorganization plan; and No. 2, this year they did another outstanding job when they decided that the program would not go over to the Labor Department. Then, by inference certainly, they would decide by these two actions that the program should be administered in the Federal Security Agency. I appeared before both committees along that line, and I think now the question is, Congress needs to do something to carry out what they have most decidedly said they want and which is apparently not going to happen from the executive branch of the Government. I think the State administrators are unanimous in their thinking now that the reorganization should be effected yesterday. I mean by that without delay.

In statement after statement appearing in this record, Judge Hake firmly supported me in the very program which he so viciously assails and condemns in his so-called reply. For 3 years now he has appeared before my committee and urged the very thing which has now been accomplished and written into the law. He now says that this action on the part of the Congress would destroy the socialsecurity program. He of all people knows that there is not a single word of truth in such a statement. The full Appropriations Committee accepted with practically no dissent the recommendations which I offered to consolidate in the Federal Security Agency, the unemployment compensation and the employment service activities. The House of Representatives with only 29 dissenting votes approved that program. It then went to the Senate, and the Senate took a contrary view, largely because of the opposition of Mr. Truman. In the conference between the House and Senate, an agreement was reached fully sustaining the reorganization program which I had proposed, and the Senate completely receded from its position. Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, was a member of that conference committee and signed the conference report.

It is interesting to note that the conference report was overwhelmingly adopted by both the House and the Senate, and the bill went to the President. The President vetoed the bill and thereafter on June 16 the House by a vote of 288-113 overrode the Presidential veto. It is also interesting to note that Representatives Gore, Murray, Phillips, Jennings, Cooper, and Davis of Tennessee all supported the position of the writer and voted to override the Presidential veto. Only Representatives Priest, Couring, and Evins voted to sustain the President.

It is also interesting to note that the Senate by a vote of 72-17 voted to override the veto of the President and thus by an overwhelming vote placed its seal of approval upon the action proposed by the writer. It is also interesting to note that both Senator MCKELLAR and Senator STEWART of Tennessee voted to override the President and voted to support the position taken by the writer.

Thus when Judge Hake attempts to indicate in his alleged reply that "Congressman Keefe's political prestige had thus reached an all-time low and something had to be done to restore it," he is again making a statement which he knows is not in accord with the facts.

It is also interesting to note that while the conference between the House and the Senate was going on, W. O. Hake, Commissioner, sent the following telegram to me and to every member of the Tennessee House delegation:

H. R. 6355 as passed by the House contains a reorganization rider which has been rejected by the Senate. The issue now goes to conference. As administrator of the employment security program in Tennessee, I strongly endorse the position which has been taken by the House. My attitude is shared by the vast majority of State administrators of this program. Reorganization and integration of the Federal level similar to operations now maintained in all States would be most helpful to our State part of the program. Present dual set-up on Federal level leads to irritation, inefficiency, time and money wasted both on the Federal and State level, and should not be tolerated by Congress. I strongly urge that you lend your support to the conference committee in sustaining the House's former action.

Does this telegram and the testimony of Judge Hake before my committee indicate that he opposed the position which I had taken? I repeat that Mr. Hake has evaded the facts and has resorted to abuse and vilification in an attempt to becloud the issue.

He further attempts, in his alleged reply, to stir up political emotions by his intolerant and hate-inspiring references to Mr. Lee and to myself. I happen to know that in making this statement he was doing so under orders from higher-ups in Tennessee, and if he is the man that I have always thought he was, he will let the people of Tennessee know the truth and repudiate his statement

He attempts to inject into the picture the fact that I am a Republican from Wisconsin and that my political fortunes are "low" and that I have lost caste with my colleagues, and so forth, and so forth. The record of the congressional action and the overwhelming support given me by the Congressmen and Senators clearly demonstrates the falsity of this statement. His own telegram, above quoted, ought to cause him to hang his head in shame for daring to write such a reply, even though he was under pressure from political superiors to do so.

The real truth is that the employees of State government in Tennessee themselves know whether they have been subject to a political shake-down by which 10 percent of 1 month's salary has been taken from them for political purposes. It will not do for Judge Hake to say that these contributions were voluntary. I have many letters in my file that clearly demonstrate the contrary, written by State employees who were forced to contribute against their will because of fear of loss of jobs.

As a Republican from Wisconsin, I am interested in seeing that these two great programs throughout the Nation are conducted in the public interest and that the employees, paid for 100 percent by Federal funds, carry on their jobs in the interests of the people and not be subjected to the political dictation of any political machine. I have served notice that these investigations will continue, and no amount of personal abuse will stop them. This is Federal money that is being used, and to that extent the Congress of the United States has an interest in seeing that Federal law is not violated.

I can assure Judge Hake that so far as it lies within my power I shall see to it that he has his day in court and that all of the facts are presented. I know nothing of the political situation in Tennessee and have no intention of injecting myself into the politics of Tennessee. I believe the good people of Tennessee, however, are no different from the good people of Wisconsin or any other State in the Union and that they will resent efforts to cover up plain facts with a campaign of smear, abuse and vilification.

I have every right to assume that the Department of Justice and the Civil Service Commission of the United States Government will follow through on this investigation and that in due time Mr. Hake and his political associates will have ample opportunity to try to explain away the mass of fully documented evidence that has been gathered by the investigators of the House Appropriations Committee.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HORAN asked and was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD in two instances.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include two radio addresses by Father Saloway. I do not know whether this will exceed the limit allowed, but, if so, I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed notwithstanding.

The SPEAKER. Notwithstanding, and without objection, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING FEDERAL WORKS ADMIN-ISTRATOR TO LEASE PROPERTY AT 811 VERMONT AVENUE NW.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2706) to authorize the Federal Works Administrator to lease for commercial purposes certain space in a building located at 811 Vermont Avenue NW., in Washington, D. C., commonly known as the Lafayette Building

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Federal Works Administrator is hereby authorized to lease for commercial purposes for periods not exceeding 10 years and upon such terms and conditions as he may deem to be in the public interest, such space in the building located at 811 Vermont Avenue NW., Washington, D. C., commonly known as the Lafayette Building, as was leased by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for commercial purposes on July 30, 1947, the date title to such building was transferred from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the United States of America by section 306, title III, Public Law 268, Eightieth Congress. The rentals received pursuant to this act may be deposited into a common fund account or accounts in the Treasury, and notwithstanding the provisions of the Act of June 30, 1932 (40 U. S. C. 303b), shall be available to pay the cost of maintenance, upkeep, and repair of the space so leased and for the establishment of necessary reserves therefor: Provided, That except for such necessary reserves, the unobligated balances of rentals so deposited into the Treasury shall be covered at the end of each fiscal year into miscellaneous receipts.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO HEAR AND DETERMINE CLAIMS OF CERTAIN MOTOR CARRIERS

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1260) to create a commission to hear and determine the claims of certain motor carriers.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created and established a Motor Carrier Claims Commission, hereafter referred to as the Commission.

SEC. 2. The Commission shall hear and determine, according to law, existing claims against the United States arising out of the taking by the United States of possession or control of any of the motor-carrier transportation systems described in Executive Order No. 9462, dated August 11, 1944 (C.F.R., 1944 supp., p. 70). The settlement of any claim prior to the enactment of this act shall not prevent the Commission from hearing and determining such claim if it determines that the principles of equity as administered by the courts require that such settlement be set aside and that such claim be heard and determined.

SEC. 3. The Commission shall consist of a Chairman and two other members, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall each receive a salary of $15,000 At least two of such members shall be learned in the law. Each member shall take an oath to support the Consti-tution of the United States and to discharge faithfully the duties of his office. The members shall hold office until the dissolution of the Commission as hereinafter provided. Vacancies shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointments. Two members shall constitute a quorum, and the agreement of two members shall be necessary to any and all determinations for the transaction of the business of the Commission, and if there be a quorum, no vacancy shall impair or affect the business of the Commission, or its determinations.

SEC. 4. The Commission shall appoint a clerk and such other employees as shall be requisite to conduct the business of the Commission. All such employees shall take oath for the faithful discharge of their duties and shall be under the direction of the Commission in the performance thereof.

SEC. 5. The Commission shall meet at such times and places as it may prescribe, shall keep a full written record of all its hearings and proceedings which shall be open to public inspection, and shall have power to establish its rules of procedure.

SEC. 6. The Commission shall receive claims for a period of 6 months after the date of enactment of this act, and not thereafter. The jurisdiction of the Commission over claims presented to it as pro-vided in section 2 of this act shall be exclusive; but nothing in this act shall prevent any person who does not elect to present his claim to the Commission from pursuing any other remedy available to him. The At-torney General or his assistants shall represent the United States in all claims presented to the Commission.

SEC. 7. Any member of the Commission or any employee of the Commission, designated in writing for the purpose by the chairman, may administer oaths and examine witnesses. Any member of the Commission may require by subpena (1) the attendance and testimony of witnesses, and the production of all necessary books, papers, docu-ments, correspondence, and other evidence, from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing; or (2) the takof depositions before any designated individual competent to administer oaths under the laws of the United States or of any State or Territory. In the case of a deposition, the testimony shall be reduced to writing by the individual taking the deposition or under his direction and shall be subscribed by the deponent. In taking oral testimony, opportunity shall be given for cross-examination, under such regulations as the Commission may prescribe. Witnesses subpensed to testify or whose depositions are taken pursuant to this act, and the officers or persons taking the same, shall severally be entitled to the same fees and mileage as are paid for like services in the courts of the United States.

SEC. 8. The final determination of the Commission shall be in writing, shall be filed with its clerk, and shall include (1) its findings of the facts upon which its conclusions are based; (2) a statement (a) whether there are any just grounds for re-lief of the claimant and, if so, the amount thereof; (b) whether there are any allowable offsets, counterclaims, or other deductions, and, if so, the amount thereof; and (3) a statement of its reasons for its findings and conclusions.

SEC. 9. (a) When the final determination of the Commission has been filed with the clerk of said Commission the clerk shall give notice of the filing of such determination to the parties to the proceeding in manner and form as directed by the Commission. Such determination shall be subject to review in the same manner as is provided for cases in the Court of Claims upon application to the Supreme Court within 3 months from the date of the filing of such determination with the clerk.

Sec. 10. In each claim, after the proceedings have been finally concluded, the Commission shall promptly submit its report to

The report to Congress shall contain (1) the final determination of the Commission; (2) a transcript of the proceedings or judgment upon review, if any, with the instruc-tions of the Supreme Court; and (3) a statement of how each Commissioner voted upon the final determination of the claim.

SEC. 11. (a) When the report of the Commission determining any claimant to be entitled to recover has been filed with Congress, such report shall have the effect of, and be paid in the same manner as is provided for, a final judgment of the Court of Claims.

The payment of any claim, after its determination in accordance with this act, shall be a full discharge of the United States of all claims and demands touching any of the matters involved in the controversy.

(b) A final determination against a claimant made and reported in accordance with this act shall forever bar any further claim or demand against the United States arising out of the matter involved in the con-

sec. 12. The Commission shall determine all claims presented to it as expeditiously as possible, and shall make a report to Congress of its progress not later than the fifteenth of April of each year until its dissolution.

SEC. 13. The existence of the Commission shall terminate at the end of 2 years after the first meeting of the Commission or at such earlier time after the expiration of the 6 months' period of limitation set forth in section 6 hereof as the Commission shall have made its final report to Congress on all claims filed with it. Upon its dissolution the records of the Commission shall be delivered to the Archivist of the United

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. WALTER. No; I am not opposed to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Wisconsin

[Mr. BYRNES] to demand the second. Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Wisconsin for 20

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, shall take only a few minutes to explain this bill which is a very simple one. During the war some 103 trucking companies operating in the Midwest, principally west and south of Chicago, found themselves in difficulty because of strikes. Finding that the strikes could not be settled the Government issued an order taking over the truck lines. Due notice of that seizure was posted and the ODT sent their representatives to St. Paul and thereafter proceeded to operate the 103 lines.

The first thing done by the manager in behalf of the Government was to insist that the trucking companies pay the wages which had been in dispute and which had not been settled between the operators and the truck drivers. Thereafter, the representatives of the Government continued to manage and operate these truck lines and exercise control over them, differing in degree naturally, in the various lines.

It is the claim of the operators of the truck lines which were taken over by the Government that they were damaged by this action, by the seizure of their property, and they make demand on the Government under the due-process clause of the Constitution for the payment of damages

This bill would simply set up a commission of three members to be appointed by the President to hear and determine the claim of the operators of these truck

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. BRYSON. Does not the bill carry a House committee amendment reading "to determine such claims, if any there

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. I may say to the gentleman that some amendments were suggested in the House committee including the one to which the gentleman refers.

The present motion is to pass the bill as it passed the Senate. I would have no objection to the amendment. My only thought in making the motion as I did was to pass a bill which had passed the Senate and avoid the necessity of going to conference. I believe the amendments that were made by the House committee would not substantially affect the bill one way or the other. I would be perfectly agreeable if they could be accepted by the Senate but I fear that if we go to conference the bill will not be passed.

This bill has been the subject of extended hearings in the Senate, and hearings were held by the House committee.
Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. I yield. Mr. DINGELL. I judge then the gentleman's objection to any amendment is in order to facilitate passage?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. That is correct. I am moving that the bill be passed by the House as it was passed in the Senate to avoid the necessity of a conference. As I said before, I personally would have no objection to the House amendments.

Bear in mind that these truck operators will be required to submit their claims to this Commission within 6 months after the law becomes effective, that no person will be entitled to recover a dime unless he proves he was damaged and unless he proves he was damaged in accordance with the rules and decisions made many times under the due-process

I think this is a very just bill and a very simple and easy way to get these claims adjudicated.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. As a matter of fact, the procedure set up in this bill is a substitute for procedure in the Court of Claims, which is cumbersome and the only remedy available to these people right now.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. That is cor-

Mr. WALTER. The effect of this bill is to substitute the Commission for a hearing of the case by the Court of Claims.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. That is correct. It is in the interest of economy both for the claimants and for the Government. It follows a policy that was adopted by this Congress and has been used on many occasions.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I think that Members of the House can agree that during the last few days we have been going at a merry clip. I suppose if somebody at some time could devise a means of eliminating the last week of a congressional session or any legislative session, the country would erect a statue to him, and it really should.

I do not criticize the leadership here for the necessity of bringing a lot of these bills up with very little time for consideration. I realize the situation with which they are faced.

But here, Mr. Speaker, is a bill that we should not, if we are going to act in good conscience, consider in this manner. What we are doing in effect is passing an appropriation bill involving at least eight or nine million dollars and the possibility of an amount even in excess of that, with no check on the facts, simply on the basis of turning over to a commission of three men this matter and saying: "You decide what these people are to get, you give it to them by certifying it to the Congress, and the Congress will have no further

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Of course the Government can appeal any decision just like in the Court of Claims.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. ernment may appeal, that is true; but as far as this Congress is concerned, what it is doing is passing a claims bill in an amount of over eight or nine million We are doing it here in a hurry dollars. without a full discussion of the contentions and the facts in the case.

What does the bill do? I am somewhat in doubt as to what the committee actually desires in view of the fact that the committee some time ago reported a Senate bill with amendments. Now, today, in order to hurry it up and get it through and spend this money, they are saying, "Well, we are going to forget about the precautions that the committee wanted to put in this legislation, we are going to take it from the Senate just as it came to us even though when we were thinking a little slower and probably using better judgment we wanted to have amendments on the bill, we wanted to make some corrections in it."

That is the evidence, Mr. Speaker, of how fast we are trying to move. The bill provides for three commissioners at a salary of $15,000 a year each, and the bill says they shall complete their functions within the next 2 years. In other words, that will be their term of office. But you and I know if they have not determined all of the issues involved in that time, it is going be another 2 or 3 years that these commissioners will continue in their jobs, and draw their salaries, with their staff, plus their expenses.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. SCRIVNER. Is there any indication here that these claimants cannot have recourse to the courts of the United

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. The evidence is that the Court of Claims has ample jurisdiction, has complete jurisdiction over this matter. The proponents of the legislation were not willing to have an ordinary bill which would confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims passed, because they admit—at least some of them do to whom I have talked—that the Court of Claims has jurisdiction. That is not an issue at all as far as being a reason why a commission has to be formed.

Mr. Speaker, it is my position that that certainly is the way this should be handled. We have a court already set up to handle just such cases as this. But here we come in and bypass that court and say that we are going to create some jobs and spend more money. Why? I think the primary reason is the feeling that probably the commissioners will be a little more lenient in the rule of damage that might apply or the amount of proof required.

Mr. HAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HAND. Will the gentleman inform the House who are the beneficiaries of this legislation?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. There are some 103 carriers, I believe it is, who, during the war, refused to comply with a directive of the War Labor Board increasing the wages of employees. In order to avert a strike the Government took over some of these carriers. There is a question of law even now as to whether the Government did come in and operate and take over all the carriers who are now making claim. I believe it is connected in the case of at least eight of them that they were taken over and operated, but may I also call the attention of the House to the fact that because the Government operated a business and that business did not make money is, in my judgment, no reason for a substantial claim against the Government in that regard. I remember sitting on the War Claims Committee when an order of the Government closed up some gold mines out West by virtue of which severe damage was done. But those people did not have a special commission set up to assess their damages. I believe that those who have a just claim are entitled to be recompensed, and I am not arguing against that at all. But they should go to the duly established courts of this country which we authorized them to do, and there prove their claims and prove their damages and obtain their awards.

I do not believe in the advisability, particularly at this time in the rush of adjournment, of pushing through and ramming through a bill involving as much money as this.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. DEVITT].

Mr. DEVITT. Mr. Speaker, you may recall that during World War I it was necessary for the Government to seize the railroads of this country and to operate them during the entire course of the war. Immediately after the war the Congress set up a Claims Commission to hear the claims of those railroads against the Government. During World War II it was necessary for the Government to seize another segment of the great transportation system of the country; 103 over-the-road truck lines principally situated in the upper Mississippi Valley. They serve an area covering 15 States, and in most instances are the only means of transportation from town to town, especially the smaller towns. Those truck lines were seized in August 1944, under exactly the same statute that the railroads were seized during World War I.

Now, the Constitution of the United States is clear that this Government of ours cannot seize private property without providing just compensation, and that is what this bill seeks to do. It seeks to set up a Claims Commission so that that Commission may determine if any of these carriers are entitled to compensation and, if so, how much compensation.

I think I know of the interest of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BYRNES] in this controversy. The fact of the matter is that there are some truck lines in the United States which the Government did not seize. As you all know, the trucking business in the United States is a young, growing, vigorous business and very competitive. I dare say that there are some truck lines in the State of Wisconsin that were not seized during the war. From that you may well conclude what the interest of the Members of the House who object to this bill really is.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEVITT. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Of course, the gentleman knows that extensive hearings were held on this bill in the Senate and before the House committee. Does the gentleman know whether or not the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BYRNES] appeared before those committees and made known his views at that time?

Mr. DEVITT. The gentleman from Wisconsin did not appear before any of those committees. This bill passed the Senate unanimously after extensive hearings. It was unanimously reported out by the House Committee on the Judiciary. It is a fair, just, and reasonable measure.

As I understood the arguments of the gentleman from Wisconsin, they were two in number. No. 1, he said this bill makes a huge appropriation of some $8,000,000. The fact of the matter is, it does not do any such thing. If he and all of us will read the bill on page 5, section 11, we will find that the payment of these claims, if any are adjudicated by the Claims Commission, is handled in exactly the same way as claims from the Court of Claims.

The No. 2 objection he made to the bill is, why do not these 103 motor carriers go to the United States Court of Claims? I will be very happy to answer that question for the gentleman. Three years ago three of these motor carriers decided to try their cases in the Court of Claims. So they started a lawsuit in the Court of Claims, and that lawsuit has not been decided even today. The hearing examiner has just finished taking testimony. A motion was made in the course of the hearings on one of these claims asking the court if they would not consolidate all pending cases so that they could all, be heard together. The court denied that motion. So the object of setting up this commission is to avoid a multiplicity of suits.

Is it going to be necessary for these loval Americans who had their trucking lines taken from them during the war to wait for 10, 12, or 15 years before they can have a determination in the United States Court of Claims, which is already overcrowded?

I will tell you another reason why the Court of Claims is an inadequate tribunal to hear these suits. It is because under the statute the Court of Claims has jurisdiction only over claims against the Government that sound in contract or implied contract. Many of the claims of these trucking companies are tort claims. accident claims, and the like.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. DEVITT. I think most of us agree that we have been concerned in these years following the war with taking care of many claims under the Contract Settlement Act, among other things, where patriotic citizens came to the fore when an appeal was made to them. I think we should not neglect these honest, patriotic truck owners. The action of the Government in taking over these truck lines was a very precipitous proposition. They had a labor dispute in this 15-State area, and the President of the United States issued an order to the Office of Defense Transportation in which he ordered them to take over these truck lines. A Federal manager was appointed. He seized the truck lines. He operated them. He controlled their activities. He controlled their rate-making. He told them how much they had to pay their employees. These truck owners have legitimate claims against the Government as a result of that operation.

This resolution seeks to set up a commission to hear and determine these claims. It is not expedient to go to the Court of Claims. It seems to me it is a reasonable request of the Congress.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEVITT. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I wonder if the gentleman can tell us why a commission can review these cases and determine the damages any more expeditiously than the Court of Claims can do it, since the Court of Claims has said that each case is to be considered on its individual merits, its individual facts. which I believe is the contention of the proponents. Does not the Commission have to do the same thing?

Mr. DEVITT. No. 1 is that the docket of the Court of Claims is years behind. No. 2, that the procedure in the Court of Claims, if the gentleman is acquainted with it, is for hearing commissioners or examiners to go out all over the country and take testimony. They come in and present their findings. Those findings have to stand in line until the other business of the court is disposed of. The third reason is that the Court of Claims has no jurisdiction over tort matters.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. The gentleman complains that there are certain phases of this matter that are not within the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims.

Mr. DEVITT. That is right.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Yet the proponents of the legislation refuse to accept an amendment which would confer jurisdiction on the court over those phases which they do not have jurisdic-

Mr. DEVITT. That may be true. I have no knowledge of any amendments to the bill. I know that extensive hearings were had and that matter did not come up, although careful consideration was given.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker. I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walter].

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I think the principal objection to this bill made by my distinguished young friend from Wisconsin is in the fact that a commission of three people is to be appointed. Let us for a moment examine the procedure in the Court of Claims. In the Court of Claims, in actions ex contractu, a hearing is fixed by a hearing examiner. He hears all of the facts. The hearing is in Washington or anywhere that witnesses are available so that they may testify. After he prepares the facts and the findings thereon, the record is submitted to the Court of Claims. Our Court of Claims has a docket which would take them 3 years to become current, even if no additional cases were added to it. In order for these people to stay in business, it is necessary that they get relief more quickly.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I wonder, then, if it would not be more advisable for the Committee on the Judiciary to recommend the creation of another branch of the Court of Claims to clear off not only the truck cases but the other cases that you are complaining about which are pending.

Mr. WALTER. May I say to the gentleman that the Committee on the Judiciary has reported many bills for the establishment of new judgeships throughout the Unted States, and for some reason or another, probably because this is 1948, favorable action has not been taken on those bills.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield.

correct?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. The fact is that Congress adopted this policy years ago, and we can not make over the Court of Claims just to suit somebody's whim.

Mr. WALTER. Of course not. Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. We provide in the bill that the Attorney General is authorized to hear these claims which cannot be heard in other places, is that Mr. WALTER. That is entirely correct. It seems to me in the long run. the Government is going to save money because after all you must bear in mind the fact that whatever claim is paid is going to be paid with interest, and if claimants must wait for years, which I am sure will elapse before the claims are finally disposed of, we are going to pay a very large sum of money in interest.

Now, there is one thing you must bear in mind: There is no intention on the part of the Committee on the Judiciary to make a finding of liability. The question of whether or not the United States is liable in each of these cases is a question of law and of fact, but there is no finding. Therefore, this cannot possibly be construed as a large claims bill, because there must first be a finding that there was a tort, an illegal taking, and after that fact has been determined, then there is the question of whether or not the taking resulted in damage.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I have had a great deal of experience in condemnation cases of lands for reservoirs, dams, and so forth. Is there any difference in principle in what you propose than you have in the ordinary court, where the land owner is entitled to a speedy trial and a quick determination of the issues, and interest on the judgment?

Mr. WALTER. Oh, no. It is a wellknown method of disposing of matters of this sort, and I think that in simple justice we should approve the bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER] has expired.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield I minute to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I do this merely to get an official declaration from the gentleman who is now presenting the bill that there is no intention on the part of the Judiciary Committee of the House to admit an illegal taking in any case.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. I may say in answer to the gentleman's question that the bill contains no legislative finding. It is my own judgment, after hearing the testimony, that what was done by the Government amounted to a taking. However, I see nothing in the bill that passed the Senate which would foreclose adjudication of that question by the commissioners and by the courts.

Mr. HOBBS. And nothing that would foreclose the necessity of proving an illegal taking on the part of the Government.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. In my judgment, the gentleman is correct.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch].

Mr. McCULLOCH. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I wish to say that I am not opposed to this bill. However, I feel it is my duty to say a word or two about the amendments which were adopted by the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee which heard this bill, and which will not be in the bill if the motion which has been made by the gentleman from Iowa is finally agreed to. It was felt by some of the members of this subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee that the language of the Senate bill might amount to a legislative finding of a taking. I want the RECORD to unmistakably show that it was the unanimous desire of the subcommittee that heard this bill that there be no legislative finding that there was a taking, either legal or illegal. The claims might finally result, notwithstanding what has been said before, even if the taking were legal, because the alleged taking was under the war powers, and of course that taking could be legal.

In the Senate bill, after the word "taking," the committee has written into the bill the phrase "if any."

I repeat, I wish the record to unmistakably show that there has been no legislative finding that there was a "taking," either legal or illegal by the Government.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCULLOCH. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. the bill as it is now before us, however, which is the bill as it came from the Senate, there is some question as to whether there has been such a legislative finding, in view of the fact that the amendment that the committee wanted to put in is not presently in the bill.

Mr. McCULLOCH. Yes; there was some question in the mind of the subcommittee, but I am pleased to note that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GWYNNE] has said that the sponsors of the bill do not consider the language to be a legislative finding that there was a taking, either legal or illegal.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I shall not take the full 5 minutes, but I think the best argument against the adoption of this bill that has come to us from the Senate came from someone who said he did not oppose this bill at all-from a member of the committee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCul-LOCH], who pointed out to you that after the House Committee on the Judiciary had held its deliberations on this bill, a majority recommended some amendments that you are not given a chance to vote on here on the floor of the House today. In their haste to get this thing through, the deliberations of the House Judiciary Committee are being disregarded. I have not heard anything said by the three gentlemen who spoke in favor of this bill here in this late evening that dissuades me from the opinion that the creation of this commission for the settling of these claims is utterly wrong in principle. Here we have a great variety of circumstances among a large number of trucking companies who have a variety of claims to present, and the only argument I have heard is this: Now we have got all these claims; the way to settle them is by a commission, so we will get it done quickly.

Every one of these cases is not going to have to be pursued in the courts. Under the usual procedure, the claimants set out to establish one or two claims, then usually the rest can be quickly disposed of.

Mr. DEVITT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. I yield. Mr. DEVITT. I wonder if the gentleman was in the Chamber when I made the statement that this procedure is exactly the same procedure that was used following World War I in the case of the railroads.

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. I was here and heard the gentleman make that statement. Even if that were true you cannot make one right by the duplication of a wrong; and here you have admitted that the men sent out to investigate this by the Court of Claims have now completed their work; they have filed their reports. Now you are asking this House hastily to set up a procedure that will call for a duplication of the same work.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. I yield.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. No. statement was that several trucking companies had begun suit and that there was a proceeding in a few cases. They have not concluded them.

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. But have there not been investigations completed and reports filed in some of those cases?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. No: the cases are still being tried.

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. I understood the gentleman from Minnesota to say that some reports had been completed.

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. That is cor-

I wish the gentleman to understand the situation. Each one of these would be a separate suit and several have been begun. Many months have elapsed, a great deal of testimony has been taken, and nothing has been concluded.

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. Is it not true that each of these cases is going to have to be dealt with separately even if you do set up this high-salaried commission to hear those claims?

Mr. GWYNNE of Iowa. Very true, but the whole situation is this: That you require these people to litigate 103 cases in the Court of Claims that they must wait years for their cases to be reached on the docket, just exactly like the rail-roads would have had to wait, just like these Japanese claimants would have waited. So as a matter of simple justice and following a policy which was adopted years ago we have created a special commission which will have nothing to do but work on these claims until they get them disposed of, and not longer than a 2-year-limitation period.

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. Does the chairman of the subcommittee approve of a policy where some of these cases have been partially heard and are now pending before the court, to now set up a separate administrative agency to do the same work in those cases over again?

Mr. GYWNNE of Iowa. No, no; the bill specifically provides that any claimant may come before this Commission or he may go before the Court of Claims and file his case there if he so desires.

Mr. DAVIS of Wisconsin. What is the attitude of the administrative agency which had this job to do during the war with respect to the setting up of this Is it not true that the Commission? ODT and the Department of Justice have opposed this proposition?

Mr. DEVITT. May I say to the gentleman that at the time the Government took over these truck lines it told the truckers they were going to be compensated. Now there are some technical objections on the part of the Department of Justice as to whether they were taken That is why it has been emphasized by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch]. This bill does not determine the question whether or not they have been taken over. That is some-thing that lies within the province of this Commission.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Byrnes of Wisconsin), there were-aves 90, noes 28.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRANTS-IN-AID TO THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES IN PROVIDING MEDI-CAL CARE AND TREATMENT FOR CER-TAIN VETERANS

Mr. KEARNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2861), as amended, to assist by grants-in-aid the Republic of the Philippines in providing medical care and treatment for certain veterans.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the gentleman tell us something about this bill.

Mr. KEARNEY. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from New York that extensive hearings have been had not only by the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, but also in the Senate. This is to provide hospitalization for those Filipino veterans who served in the Army of the United States during the war with Japan, those who were not only taken in by order of the President of the United States, but those guerrillas who later became a part of our armed forces under orders of the commander in chief. General MacArthur. At the present time in the three hospitals in the Philippines there are approximately 3,000 disabled Filipino veterans.

Mr. BUCK. What is the annual cost of the bill?

Mr. KEARNEY. The total cost of the bill is about $25,000,000 for the three hospitals

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the gentleman says the total cost is $25,000,000? Mr. KEARNEY. That is right.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Why should we pay these costs for the Filipinos? They were fighting for their own independence. Why should we bear this burden?

Mr. KEARNEY. I may say to the gentleman from Ohio that these veterans were duly enlisted in the Army of the United States. It is my humble opinion that we not only have a moral obligation but a legal responsibility to those veterans for the reason that they are in the same category as the veterans in our own hospitals in this country. They were soldiers of the United States armed forces, wearing our uniforms and fighting alongside our own men. They are the men of Bataan and Corregidor.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Were they a part of our own Army?

Mr. KEARNEY. Yes.

Mr. EVINS. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. KEARNEY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. EVINS. I may say that the former Governor General of the Philippines, also a former distinguished Member of this body, appeared before our committee and testified on behalf of this legislation.

Mr. KEARNEY. That is correct and the gentleman gave our committee a true and complete picture of the situation at present existing in the Philippines with particular reference to the hospital Victoria Luna. We are grateful to him for the complete and true picture as it exists today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to assist the Republic of the Philippines in providing medical care and treatment for veterans, as defined in section 2 of this act, who are in need of hospitalization for disabilities, determined by the Veterans' Administration under laws which it administers to be connected with the service described in such section, the President is authorized, subject to the provisions of this act, to furnish aid in the form of grants to the Republic of the Philip-pines (a) for the construction and equipping of hospitals in the Philippines to be used exclusively for such medical care and treatment and (b) for expenses incident to such medical care and treatment in either the hospitals so constructed and equipped or other hospitals in the Philippines

SEC. 2. For the purposes of section 1 of this act, the term "veterans" means persons who served in the organized military forces of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines while such forces were in the service of the armed forces of the United States pursuant to the military order of the President of the United States, dated July 26, 1941, including among such military forces organized guerrilla forces under com-manders appointed, designated, or subsequently recognized by the Commander in Chief, Southwest Pacific Area, or other com-petent authority in the Army of the United States, and who were discharged or released from such service under conditions other than dishonorable

SEC. 3. Any grant for the construction and equipping of a hospital may be made prior to or following its completion: Provided, That the total of such grants shall not exceed $22,500,000.

SEC. 4. Grants for expenses incident to hospitalization may be made for a period not to exceed 5 years to reimburse the Republic of the Philippines for moneys expended for such hospitalization: Provided, That the total of such grants shall not exceed $3,285,000 for any fiscal year.

SEC. 5. The President may from time to time prescribe such rules and regulations and impose such conditions on the receipt of financial aid as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act; and he may delegate in whole or in part the authority conferred upon him by this act to any officer or officers of the United States.

SEC. 6. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the pro-visions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONVEYING LAND IN TENNESSEE TO THE CITY OF JOHNSON CITY

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 6448) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to convey certain land in Tennessee to the city of Johnson City, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Clerk read the Senate amendment. as follows:

and including line 7, page 3, and insert:
"Sec. 2. The tract of land authorized to be transferred by the first section of this act shall be used by the grantee for fair grounds and recreational purposes; and the deed of conveyance of such lands shall contain (1) the provision that all such property shall be used and maintained for the purposes for which it was conveyed for a period of not less than 20 years, and that in the event such property ceases to be used or maintained for such purposes during such period, or is alienated or an attempt is made to alienate such property during such period, all or any portion of such property shall in its then existing condition, at the option of the United States, revert to the United States; and (2) such additional terms, reservations, restrictions, and conditions as may be determined by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to be necessary to safeguard the inter ests of the United States. The deed shall reserve to the United States the interests in fissionable material as provided in Executive Order 9908, dated December 5, 1947: Provided, That Johnson City shall pay 50 percent of appraised value of its property to be deter-mined by the Veterans' Administration."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADMINISTRATOR OF VETERANS' AFFAIRS TO PRESCRIBE RATES OF PAY FOR CER-TAIN POSITIONS AT FIELD INSTALLA-

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2794) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to prescribe the rates of pay for certain positions at field in-

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 100 of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (58 Stat. 284), as amended (38 U. S. C. 693), is amended by adding at the end thereof a paragraph to read as follows:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended (5 U.S. C. 661 and the following), or any other provision of law, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized to prescribe the rates of pay for the following positions at Veterans' Administration installations in the field: (1) Hospital attendant, (2) dental mechanic, (3) orthopedic mechanic, and (4) positions classified in the crafts, protective, and custodial service pursuant to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That in no case shall the range of rates prescribed for the position be lower than the range of rates prescribed for the same position by the Classification Act of 1923, as amended."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

UNITED STATES NAVAL TRAINING STA-TION, GREAT LAKES, ILL.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6958) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to transfer to the custody of the Navy Department certain property at the United States naval training station, Great Lakes, Ill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding the provisions of the Surplus Property Act, 1944, as amended, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized to transfer to the Navy Department without exchange of funds all of the lands at the naval training station, Great Lakes, Ill., which the Navy Department now occupies under revocable permit from the Veterans' Administration, except the portion thereof which lies between the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railroad and Morrow Avenue, together with all improvements thereon; the specific area hereby authorized to be transferred comprising a parcel lying between the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railroad and Sheridan Road and a parcel lying north of Morrow Avenue.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONVEYING LANDS TO THE CITY OF CHEYENNE, WYO.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5734) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affais to convey to the city of Cheyenne, Wyo., for public-park and golf-course purposes, certain land situated within the boundaries of the Veterans' Administration center at Cheyenne, Wyo., with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Mrs. Rogers of Massachusetts, Mr. Kearney, Mr. O'Konski, Mr. Rankin, and Mr. Allen of Louisiana.

ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6402) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? Mr. DURHAM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not find myself in agreement with this measure, but under the conditions existing at the present time in regard to the confirmation of this Commission, I feel it is in the best interest of the country to adopt this measure at this time. When the Commissioners took over this project from the War Department in 1946 under the present Atomic Energy Act the primary objective was from a military standpoint. The Commission has met this obligation in its entirety. The recent tests at Eniwetok have proven that this weapon is more powerful and much cheaper than heretofore produced. The research work which has been carried on under the direction of the present Commission for the benefit of humanity is too numerous and much more extensive then I can explain to the Members of this body in the few minutes allotted to me. I have had the opportunity of visiting this operation which today is much larger than the United States Steel Corp. of America and feel that since the Commission has taken over this project that they have done an excellent job. By virtue of the imminent rela-tionship between science and technology the problem is one of great importance to the national welfare. The future development of the physical and biological sciences will be, I hope, in the years to come for the benefit of mankind. In the meantime we must face the fact that we live in a world in which not much progress has yet been made toward achieving stable international relationship. This Commission which has been carrying on this project, in my opinion, carries a heavy responsibility to the American people and their appointments should be carried out under the terms of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. American scientists of which this Commission is composed have shown themselves to be conscientious and discreet in the case of the atomic bomb. I most emphatically say that it has been our good fortune thus far to have had such men to carry out the functions of this important operation. I maintain that the original act should be carried out in regard to these appointments to fulfill the objectives of the 1946 Atomic Energy

Mr. PRICE of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I have the same feeling on this bill as expressed by my colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Durham]. I have a further feeling that it is politically motivated, but I am constrained to go along for the same reason as outlined by my colleague.

Mr. Speaker, may I submit that those who support this bill owe the American people a straight answer to one question:

Have the members of the United States Atomic Energy Commission done a good job?

That is what matters here.

If these men have not done a good job, this House would be faithless to its trust if we voted to continue their tenure for 1 minute.

If these men have done a good job—have safeguarded the leadership in the development of this new force for man's benefit—if they have brought these things to pass, then they are not only fit to serve for the two additional years provided for in this bill, they are fit to serve the terms of variable length which the Congress in accordance with sound policy decreed should be installed in 1948. If these men have done a good job, vote down this bill, so that the wise provisions on tenure of Commissioners in the original Atomic Energy Act may apply.

I say Messrs. Lilienthal, Pike, Strauss, Waymack, and Bacher have done a good job, Mr. Speaker.

I say this out of personal knowledge gained through work as a member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Armed Services Committee of this House

Let me enumerate some of the accomplishments recorded by this group of able and devoted men in the 17 months since they assumed charge of this Nation's atomic-energy program.

When they took over the project the most important element in it—the technicians and scientists whose work makes production and new discovery of principles possible—was in disrepair. Men were leaving this service; those remaining were confused and uncertain. On the testimony of the scientists themselves, oft-repeated in recent months, these Commissioners have remedied these conditions. Morale is good and growing better. The technical staff is coming up to strength.

They have set in motion a whole series of programs designed to train more technical men and more skillful technical men for future research and production work.

They have nurtured a current research program which is yielding new knowledge of great importance such as the recent first artificial production of mesons in the large cyclotron at the Radiation Laboratory in Berkeley. They have maintained and enhanced the security of physical facilities and of technical information and have disseminated unrestricted technical information to advance science and industry, as directed in the Atomic Energy Act.

They have guided an unremitting—and successful—drive to step up output of fissionable material. As a matter of fact, in furtherance of this operation there is now under way at Hanford in the State of Washington one of the largest peacetime construction programs ever undertaken by this Nation.

With complete fidelity to their charge to hold paramount the common defense and security, they have provided the means and the encouragement which have resulted in the signal advances in atomic weapons development proved out at the recent tests at Eniwetok Atoll. As a member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy I was present at one stage of these tests. In addition I have received from the Commission in executive session of the joint committee, a detailed account of the test result. I know whereof I speak.

Mr. Speaker, in this sphere of weapons development and cooperations with the military services, there are a few additional comments to be made. I have an especial interest here because of my membership on two of the committees most intimately concerned and because of my own experience in the armed forces in the last world war.

This interest of mine has led me to observe these phases of atomic energy operations very closely. I can state categorically that all the evidence is that the Commission and the military services have worked closely together with satisfactory results.

It will be recalled that section 2 (c) of the Atomic Energy Act establishes a Military Liaison Committee and provides that the Commission shall keep this committee fully informed of all matters regarding atomic energy and that the committee shall have authority to take an appeal to the Secretaries of War and Navy and finally to the President if at any time it concludes that any proposed action or failure to act on the part of the Atomic Energy Commission is "adverse to the responsibilities" of the armed services. Let me emphasize that the relationship between the Atomic Energy Commission and the armed services have been so amicable and satisfactory that not a single appeal to the President has been necessary under this provision of the act.

The attitude of the armed services is well represented by the statement of Secretary of the Army Royall when he was asked to comment on the bill introduced by Senator Wherry to turn the atomic energy program back to the military. In this connection, it should also be noted that there have been several bills introduced from time to time to accomplish this result and that the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy has never seen fit to take any action on them.

My observations at Eniwetok of the field working relationships between the civilian scientists of the Commission and the men of the three services combined into Joint Task Force 7 for the conduct of the weapons tests provided the final proof that there is complete cooperation—and most fruitful cooperation—between the Commission and the military. This was evidenced further by the statements of General Hull, Captain Russell, and Dr. Froman issued at Honolulu May 18. Note the words of these men:

Lt. Gen. John E. Hull, commander, Joint Task Force 7:

It is a tribute to the scientists who were members of the task force that the operation was successful. * * * All of us have been equally impressed with the scientific competence, the technical skill, and the sound judgment of the civilian scientists and technicians assembled for these tests. Our close association has been valuable in many respects and paves the way for continuing and increasing cooperative effort to insure the common defense and security of the people of the United States.

Capt. James S. Russell, United States Navy, test director, Joint Task Force 7:

The support given to the AEC group was complete and without the assistance of military personnel in the technical phases of the operations the test program could not have been carried out.

Dr. Darol K. Froman, scientific director, Joint Task Force 7:

The spirit of cooperation which existed between the military and civilian personnel resulted in the smoothest possible operation. Throughout the whole operation there has not been a single incident which impeded any test or measurement.

Mr. Speaker, the people of the Nation stand in the debt of the men comprising the Commission whose leadership has provided such striking results in so many new and strange phases of endeavor. They deserve from this Republic a better reward than is here vouchsafed in this politically motivated bill. The Nation deserves of us much better than the disservice that we would render by enacting this bill which will impede progress in atomic-energy development. Let us rise above partisan considerations; let us take the course of true service to America and speed the progress of this important work by rejecting this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 (a) (2) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Members of the Commission shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. In submitting any nomination to the Senate, the President shall set forth the experience and the qualifications of the nominee. The term of office of each member of the Commission of office of each member of the communication taking office prior to June 30, 1950, shall expire at midnight on June 30, 1950. of office of each member of the Commission taking office after June 30, 1950, shall be 5 years, except that (A) the terms of office of the members first taking office after June 30, 1950, shall expire, as designated by the President at the time of the appointment, one at the end of 1 year, one at the end of 2 years, one at the end of 3 years, one at the end of 4 years, and one at the end of 5 years, after June 30, 1950; and (B) any member appointed to fill a vacancy, occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed, shall be appointed for the remainder of such term. Any mem-ber of the Commission may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. Each member, except the chairman, shall receive compensation at the rate of $15,000 per annum; and the Chairman shall receive compensation at the rate of $17,500 per annum. No member of the Commission shall engage in any other business, vocation, or employment than that of serving as a member of the Commission."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

House Resolution 679 was laid on the

ISSUANCE OF FREE PASSES TO TIME INSPECTORS OF CERTAIN CARRIERS

Mr. WOLVERTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2192) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act so as to permit the issuance of free passes to time inspectors of carriers subject to part I of such act.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (7) of section 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, is amended by striking out "its officers, surgeons, physicians, and attorneys at law," and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "its officers, time inspectors, surgeons, physicians, and attorneys at law."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRAINING OF FILIPINOS

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1969) to amend the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 in connection with the training of Filipinos as provided for in title III.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I should like to have an explanation of the provisions of this bill.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Speaker, this bill merely perfects the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 with respect to the training of selected Filipinos-some in public health, some in engineering and highway construction, some in fisheries, coastal survey, and in other fields. The original bill authorized the training of a designated number of Filipinos ranging from 10 to 100 in each of these fields. Most of them were to be brought to this country and trained before July 1, 1948. It proved impossible to do it in so short a time. Therefore, this bill extends the time under which it can be done to July 1, 1950. It does not increase the authorization of appropriations in the original act. It allows us to spread the training over a longer period instead of being so hurried and concentrated as to prevent a good job.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. What is the amount of the appropriation?

Mr. JUDD. There is no appropriation at all in this bill.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. What is the estimated cost?

Mr. JUDD. That was authorized under title III of the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946. I would have to look up the hearings to get the exact amount in each category, but this does not increase them.
Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the

gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. STEFAN. The Philippine Rehabilitation appropriation was in the bill which makes appropriations for the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, from the subcommittee of which I am the chairman. I assure the gentleman there is no increase in the appropriation. I cannot tell him the entire amount now because I do not have the information before me, but it does not change the situation as far as money is concerned.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. The gentleman has no idea of what the cost is?

Mr. STEFAN. The money has already been appropriated.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. I know; but what is the amount?

Mr. STEFAN. The cost has already been included in the funds that have been appropriated by the House and the Senate for the rehabilitation of the Philippines.

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. But the gentleman does not know the amount?

Mr. STEFAN. I cannot tell the gentleman what the amount is. It just increases the number of students that are coming and going.

Mr. JUDD. May I say to the gentleman it does not increase the number; it extends the date from July 1, 1948, to July 1, 1950, so a smaller number can be trained each year, approximately 25 a year for 4 years, instead of 50 a year for 2 years. That is the essence of it. It does not increase the total number by a single person.

Mr. STEFAN. And not a cent of money more is required than has already been appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second sentence of section 305 (b) of the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 is amended to read as follows: "The Public Health Service may set up demonstrations and establish training centers in the Philippines; may establish and maintain in the Philippines a school or schools for the purpose of provid-ing practical instruction in public health; and may, at any time prior to July 1, 1950, provide not to exceed 1 year of training in public-health methods and administration, through study at appropriate schools or colleges in the United States and supplementary field work and observation of public-health work, to not more than 90 Filipinos, to be designated by the President of the Philippines subject to the provisions of section 311 (c), and not to exceed 5 months of training in such methods and administration, through field work and observation of public-health work, to not more than 10 additional Fili-pinos, to be so designated."

SEC. 2. Section 311 of the Philippine Re-habilitation Act of 1946 is amended by adding thereto a subsection numbered (f) and reading as follows:

"(f) Any Filipino who has commenced training or instruction prior to June 30, 1950, as provided in this act, shall, notwithstanding any other provisions of this act, be entitled, insofar as facilities are available, to receive the full course of training or instruc-tion as prescribed by the head of the bureau or agency concerned, and funds appropriated under the authority of this act shall be available for such training or in-struction. The number of trainees to be trained each year, as prescribed by the several sections of this act, refers to the number of trainees who may be designated each year by the President of the Philippines and not to the total number of trainees receiv-ing training or instruction in any 1 year."

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause on page 1 and on page 2 through line 11 and insert the following:

"That section 302 (b) of the Philippine Re habilitation Act of 1946 (Public Law 370, 79th Cong.) is amended to read as follows:

"'(b) The Commissioner of Public Roads is authorized, under such regulations as he may adopt, to provide training for not to exceed 10 Filipino engineers, to be designated by the President of the Philippines from the regularly employed staff of the Philippine Public Works Department and the engineer officers of the armed forces of the Philippines subject to the provisions of section 311 (c), in the construction, maintenance, and highway traffic engineering and control necessary for the continued maintenance and for the efficient and safe operation of highway transport facilities.'

"SEC. 2. Section 305 (b) of the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 is amended to read as follows:

"'(b) To accomplish such purposes the Public Health Service shall at the earliest practicable time survey the health situation in the Philippines, and is authorized to replace, expand, or install such health services and facilities in the Philippines as are deemed essential to preservation of health, and may assist in the rehabilitation and development of a Philippine quarantine service for prevention of introduction of disease from abroad or from one island to another. The Public Health Service may set up demonstrations and establish training centers in the Philippines; may establish and maintain in the Philippines a school or schools for the purpose of providing practical instruction in public health; and may, at any time prior to July 1, 1950, provide not to exceed 1 year of training in public health methods and administration, through study at appropriate schools or colleges in the United States and supplmentary field work and observation of public health work, to not more than 90 Filipinos, to be designated by the President of the Philippines subject to the provisions of section 311 (c), and not to exceed 5 months of training in such methods and adminstration, through field work and observation of public health work, to not more than 10 additional Filipinos, to be so designated. It may replace equipment and supply reasonably necessary additional equipment, utilizing for this purpose, so far as possible, surplus property, and may recommend to the Commission the repair or construction under the provisions of section 304, at any time prior to July 1, 1950, of buildings deemed essential to the rehabilitation of public health and quarantine functions.'

"SEC. 3. Section 311 of the Philippine Rehabilitation."

The committee amendment was agreed

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TITE INDIANS

Mr. DAWSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2743) providing for the more expeditious determination of certain claims filed by Ute Indians.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment on any and all claims which the Ute Indians or any tribe or band thereof may have against the United States, and for other purposes, approved June 28, 1938 (52 Stat. 1209), as amended July 15, 1941 (55 Stat. 593), June 22, 1943 (57 Stat. 160), June 11, 1946 (60 Stat. 255), and August 13, 1946 (60 Stat. 1049), is hereby amended by adding to section 3 thereof the following: "The court shall, upon a determination of the material issues or upon consent of the parties, enter a separate final judgment for any value of the surface and a subsequent separate final judgment for any value of the subsurface of the land which the court may determine to be the subject matter of case No. 45585 in the United States Court of Claims entitled "Confederated Bands of Ute Indians versus United States of America." Each of the judgments shall be subject to review in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of the act of February 13, 1929 (ch. 229, 43 Stat. 939), as amended by the act approved May 22, 1939 (ch. 140, 53 Stat. 752; 28 U. S. C. 288). Any value subsequently allowed by the court for the subsurface, when added to any value previously allowed by the court for the surface, shall not exceed the court's determination of the value, if any, of the land, surface, and subsurface, valued as a whole. The parties may compromise or settle in whole or part claims for any of the surface or subsurface values involved, and any settlement or compromise shall be reduced to a separate judgment. The services rendered by the attorney or attorneys in obtaining any judgment shall constitute a separate employment and undertaking involving a single set of services and the court shall award separate compensation for the services rendered in obtaining each separate judgment. Nothing in this act shall be construed to reduce or increase fees payable to counsel in accordance with their duly approved and executed contracts or to preclude their continued representation in any case until paid; nor, with respect to any judg-ment hereunder, shall this amendment impair or limit any claim, right, defense, or offset otherwise applicable."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

IMPORTED FERMENTED LIQUORS

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6162) to make imported beer and other similar imported fermented liquors subject to the internal-revenue tax on fermented liquor, with a Senate amendment, thereto, and concur in the Senate amend-

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, lines 9, 10, and 11, strike out "also be subject to the war excise tax prescribed in section 1650 of the Internal Revenue Code" and insert "during the continuance of the war-tax rate on fermented malt liquors prescribed in section 1650, be subject to tax at such rate in lieu of the rate hereinbe-fore prescribed."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 6800) to amend sections 3108 and 3250 of the Internal Revenue Code, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, this bill would provide a permit and bond system for users of nonbeverage alcohol. It does not make any change in the net rate of tax paid by these users of nonbeverage alcohol upon withdrawal. It has the unanimous support of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from

There was no objection. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3108 of Internal Revenue Code is hereby amended-

(a) By amending the heading thereof to read as follows: "Withdrawal of Alcohol Tax-free or at Reduced Rate."

(b) By relettering subsection (d) as "(e)" and by inserting after "tax-free" in such subsection the following: "or as provided in subsection (d)."

(c) By relettering subsection (e) as "(f)."
(d) By inserting in said section a new subsection reading as follows: "(d) For use in production of medicines or medicinal preparations for internal use, food products, flavors, and flavoring ex-tracts: Alcohol may be withdrawn, under regulations and upon payment of tax at the rate of $3 per proof gallon, from any industrial plant or bonded warehouse for the manufacture or production of medicines or medicinal preparations, intended for internal use, food products, flavors, or flavoring extracts, which are unfit and not intended for intoxicating beverage purposes." SEC. 2. That section 3250 of the Internal Revenue Code is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection reading as follows:

"(m) Same: Withdrawal under permit: Any person withdrawing alcohol under the provisions of section 3108 (d) shall pay special tax as follows: $25 for such with-drawals not exceeding 25 proof gallons a year, $50 for such withdrawals not exceeding 50 proof gallons a year, and $100 for such withdrawals exceeding 50 proof gallons a year."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

LEON NIKOLAIVICH VOLKOV

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 703) for the relief of Leon Nikolaivich Volkov, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.
The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the Attorney General is hereby authorized and directed to suspend the deportation of Leon Likolaivich Volkov for a period of 1 year from the effective date of this act."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PATRICIA SCHWARTZ AND BESSIE SCHWARTZ

Mr. FELLOWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 5716) to record the lawful admission to the United States for permanent residence of Patricia Schwartz and Bessie Schwartz, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the Attorney General be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the lawful admission for permanent residence of Patricia Schwartz and Beatrice Schwartz, who arrived at the port of New York on May 9, 1947, and that they shall, for all purposes under the immigration laws, be deemed to have been lawfully admitted as immigrants for permanent residence, upon the payment of the visa fee and head tax. The Secretary of State is authorized to instruct the proper control officer to deduct two numbers from the appropriate quota for the first year in which such quota is available."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act to record the lawful admission to the United States for permanent residence of Patricia Schwartz and Beatrice Schwartz."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 77 OF THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. CASE of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill H. R. 6657, to amend section 77 of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsections (b) and (f) of section 77 of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, as amended (U. S. C., 1946 ed., title 11, sec. 205 (b)), be, and are hereby, amended to read as follows:

hereby, amended to read as follows:

"(b) A plan of reorganization within the meaning of this section (1) shall include pro-visions modifying or altering the rights of creditors generally, or of any class of them, secured or unsecured, either through the issuance of new securities of any character or otherwise; (2) may include provisions modifying or altering the rights of stock-holders generally, or of any class of them, either through the issuance of new securities provisions of any character, or otherwise; (3) may include, for the purpose of preserving such in-terests of creditors and stockholders as are not otherwise provided for, provisions for the ssuance to any such creditor or stockholder of options or warrants to receive, or to sub-scribe for, securities of the reorganized company in such amounts and upon such terms and conditions as may be set forth in the plan; (4) shall provide for fixed charges (including fixed interest on funded debt, in-terest on unfunded debt, amortization of discount on funded debt, and rent for leased railroads) in such an amount that, after due consideration of the probable prospective earnings of the property in light of its earn-ings experience and all other relevant facts, there shall be adequate coverage of such fixed charges by the probable earnings available for the payment thereof; (5) shall provide adequate means for the execution of the plan. which may include the transfer of any interest in or control of all or any part of the property of the debtor to another corporation or corporations, the merger or consolidation of the debtor with another corporation or corporations, the retention of all or any part of the property by the debtor, the sale of all or any part of the property of the debtor either subject to or free from any lien at not less than a fair upset price, the distribution of all or any assets, or the proceeds derived from the sale thereof, among those having an interest therein, the satisfaction or modi-fication of any liens, indentures, or other similar interests, the curing or waiver of defaults, the extension of maturity dates of outstanding securities, the reduction in principal and/or rate of interest and alteration of other terms of such securities, the amendment of the charter of the debtor, and/or the issuance of securities of either the debtor or any such other corporation or corpora-tions for cash, or in exchange for existing securities, or in satisfaction of claims or rights or for other appropriate purposes; and may deal with all or any part of the property of the debtor; may reject contracts of the debtor which are executory in whole or in part, including unexpired leases; and may include any other appropriate provisions not inconsistent with this section. "The adoption of an executory contract or cured or unsecured, bonds, stock, certificates of beneficial interest therein, certificates of beneficial interest in property, options, and warrants to receive, or to subscribe for, securities. The term 'stockholders' shall include the holders of voting-trust certificates. The term 'creditors' shall include, for all purposes of this section, all holders of claims of whatever character against the debtor or its property, whether or not such claims would otherwise constitute provable claims under this act, including the holder of a claim under a contract executory in whole or in part including an unexpired lease.

"The term 'claims' includes debts, whether liquidated or unliquidated, securities (other than stock and option warrants to subscribe than stock and option warrants to subscribe to stock), liens, or other interests of whatever character. For all purposes of this section unsecured claims, which would have been entitled to priority if a receiver in equity of the property of the debtor had been appointed by a Federal court on the day of the approval of the petition, shall be entitled to such priority and the holders of such claims shall be treated as a separate such claims shall be treated as a separate class or classes of creditors. In case an executory contract or unexpired lease of property shall be rejected, or shall not have been adopted by a trustee appointed under this section, or shall have been rejected by a receiver in equity in a proceeding pending prior to the institution of a proceeding under this section, or shall be rejected by any plan, any person injured by such nonadoption or rejection shall for all purposes of this section be deemed to be a creditor of the debtor to the extent of the actual damage or injury determined in accordance with principles obtaining in equity proceedings. The provisions of section 60 of this Act shall apply to visions of section of of this act shall apply to a proceeding under this section. For all purposes of this section any creditor or stockholder may act in person or by an at-torney at law or by a duly authorized agent or committee subject to the provisions of subsection (p) hereof. The running of all statutes of limitation shall be suspended during the pendency of a proceeding under this section: Provided, however, That such plan of reorganization shall not affect the existing authority of any State or State regulatory agency relating to service, operations or rates. This proviso shall not be construed as restricting any of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission under the Interstate Commerce Act."

"(f) Upon confirmation by the judge, the provisions of the plan and of the order of confirmation shall, subject to the right of judicial review, be binding upon the debtor, all stockholders thereof, including those who have not, as well as those who have, accepted it, and all creditors secured or unsecured, whether or not adversely affected by the plan, and whether or not their claims shall have been filed, and, if filed, whether or not ap-proved, including creditors who have not, as well as those who have, accepted it. confirmation of the plan, the debtor and any other corporation or corporations organized or to be organized for the purpose of carrying out the plan, shall have full power and authority to, and shall put into effect and carry out the plan and the orders of the judge relative thereto, under and subject to the supervision and the control of the judge, the laws of any State or the decision or order of any State authority to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, however, That such plan of reorganization shall not affect the existing authority of any State or State regulatory agency relating to service, opera-tions or rates. This proviso shall not be construed as restricting any of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission under the Interstate Commerce Act. The property dealt with by the plan, when transferred and conveyed to the debtor or to the other corporation or corporations provided for by the plan, or when retained by the debtor pursuant to the plan, shall be free and clear of all claims of the debtor, its stockholders and creditors, and the debtor shall be discharged from its debts and liabilities, except such as may consistently with the provisions of the plan be reserved in the order confirming the plan or directing such transfer and conveyance or retention, and the judge may require the trustee or trustees appointed hereunder, the debtor, any mortgagee, the trustee of any obligation of the debtor, and all other proper and necessary parties, to make any such transfer or conveyance, and may require the debtor to join in any such transfer or conveyance made by the trustee or trustees. Upon the termination of the proceedings a final decree shall be entered discharging the trustee or trustees, and making such provisions as may be equitable, by way of injunction or otherwise, and closing the case. Upon confirmation of a plan the Commission shall, without further procedings, grant authority for the issue of any securities, assumption of obligations, transfer of any property, sale, consolidation or merger of the debtor's property, or pool-ing of traffic, to the extent contemplated by the plan and not inconsistent with the provisions and purposes of the Interstate Commerce Act as now or hereafter amended. The provisions of title I and of section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, shall not apply to the issuance, sale, or exchange of any of the following securities, which securities and transactions therein shall, for the purposes of said Securities Act, be treated as if they were specifically mentioned in sections 3 and 4 of the said Securities Act, respectively: (1) All securities issued pursuant to any plan of reorganization confirmed by the judge in accordance with the pro-visions of this section; (2) all securities issued pursuant to such plan for the pur-pose of raising money for working capital and other purposes of such plan; (3) all and other purposes of such plan; (3) all securities issued by the debtor or by the trustee or trustees pursuant to subdivision (c), clause (3) of this section; (4) all certificates of deposit representing securities of, or claims against, the debtor, with the exception of such certificates of deposit as are issued by committees not subject to subsection (p) hereof. The provisions of subdivision (a) of section (14) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 shall not be applicable with respect to any action or matter which is within the provisions of subsection (p)

PROMOTING INTEREST OF FORT HALL INDIAN IRRIGATION PROJECT IN IDAHO

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 5416) entitled "An act to promote the interest of the Fort Hall Indian irrigation project, Idaho, and for other purposes."

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5416) to promote the interests of the Fort Hall Indian Irrigation project, Idaho, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That those provisions of the order of the Secretary of the Interior, dated February 6, 1948, which are based on certain recommendations contained in the Report on Conditions Found to Exist on the Fort Hall Irrigation Project and the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, Idaho, dated February 26, 1941, and which are described in the said order as made pursuant to the authority contained in the Act of June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1803), are hereby approved pursuant to the provisions of such Act.

"Sec. 2. During such periods as water for the Fort Hall Indian I-rigation project may be available in excess of the present duty of three acre-feet per acre per annum, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his discretion and under regulations to be pre-scribed by him, to permit the delivery of such excess water equally to the project lands in an amount not to exceed five-tenths acre-feet per acre per annum, in addition to the present duty of three acre-feet per acre per annum: Provided, however, That any surplus water temporarily available in addition to the three and five-tenths acre-feet per acre per annum may be furnished for use on project lands on terms, conditions, and rates to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.
"SEC. 3. The Little Indian Unit containing one thousand one hundred eighty-six and thirty-three one-hundredths acres of irri-gable land in townships 2 and 3 south, ranges 36 and 37 east, Boise meridian, within the boundaries of the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, is hereby made a part of the Fort Hall Indian Irrigation project and the lands there-in shall have the benefit of, and be subject to, all existing legislation applicable to said project to the same extent as other lands of like ownership and character within the project. The Indian-owned irrigable land in the unit shall be charged with its proper proportionate share of the project rehabili-tation and improvement costs of $5.10 and not to exceed $7.50 per acre, respectively, as these costs are defined in the report referred to in section 1 of this Act. The non-Indianowned irrigable land of the unit shall be entitled to receive only natural-flow water until a full project water right is acquired for said land through the execution by the owner of a contract, or contracts, providing for the repayment to the United States of like per-acre costs as are charged against the Indian-owned land in the unit. Said charges, as to Indian and non-Indian lands, shall be a first lien against the lands, under the Act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. 200, 210).

"SEC. 4. The net irrigable area of the Fort Hall Indian irrigation project is hereby established as forty-seven thousand and forty-four and sixty-three one-hundredths acres of land, more or less. This area includes the forty-six thousand eight hundred and three and seventy-two one-hundredths acres of land, more or less, shown as the irrigable area of the project by the maps and plats in the report referred to in section 1 of this Act, and the two hundred and forty and ninety-one one-hundredths acres, more or less, included in eight additional tracts of land described as follows: (a) An irregular shaped area in the northeast corner of the east half southwest quarter southeast quarter of section 36, township 5 south, range 33 east, Boise meridian, containing one and seventy onehundredths acres; (b) an irregular shaped area lying along the east side of the Fort Hall Main Canal in the west half of section 35, township 5 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, containing twenty-eight and seventeen one-hundredths acres; (c) an irregular shaped area lying along the east side of the Fort Hall Main Canal in the south half of section 14, township 6 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, containing forty acres; (d) a portion of the northwest quarter northeast quarter of section 23, township 6 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, containing thirty-three and forty-two one-hundredths acres; (e) Fairview Park in the east half southwest quarter southwest quarter northeast quarter and west half southeast quarter southwest quarter northeast quarter of section 23, township 6 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, containing ten acres; (f) the east half northeast quarter northwest quarter of section 23, township 6 south, range 34 east, Boise meri-dian, containing twenty acres; (g) an ir-regular shaped area lying along the east side of the Pocatello lateral in section 23, township 6 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, containing ninety-seven and sixty-two one-hundredths acres; and (h) the southwest quarter southwest quarter southwest quarter of section 24, township 6 south, range 34, east, Boise meridian, containing ten acres. The above-described tracts of land, together with such lands in the portion of the village of Alameda, lying between the Pocatello lateral and the Oregon Short Line Railroad right-of-way in section 23, township 6 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, as (notwithstanding their inclusion in the irrigable acreage shown by the maps and plats herein-above mentioned) have no water right at present, shall be entitled to receive, or to continue to receive, water through pumping operations or by gravity flow, provided the respective owners thereof, within five years from the date of the enactment of this Act, enter into contracts whereby they agree (1) to pay their proper proportionate share of the project construction costs of $18.12 per acre, as these costs are defined in the report referred to in section 1 of this Act, for such of their lands as do not now have a project water right, (2) to pay their proper propor-tionate share of the project rehabilitation and improvement costs of $15.10 and not to exceed $7.50 per acre, respectively, for such of their lands as are not now covered by contracts for the repayment of such costs, and (3) to install, maintain, and operate, at their own expense, pumping machinery to lift the water from the project canals or laterals for the irrigation of such of their lands as cannot be supplied by gravity flow. The noninclusion of the Fort Hall town site within the net irrigable area of the project as hereby established shall not prevent the obtaining of water rights therefor in accordance with the Act of March 1, 1907 (34 Stat. 1015, 1025).

'SEC. 5. There is excluded from the Fort Hall Indian Irrigation project by the designation of the project area in section 4 of this Act the nine thousand six hundred and seventy acres of tribal, allotted, and non-Indian-owned lands located between Fort Hall and Gibson, Idaho, heretofore authorized to be included in the project by the Act of March 3, 1927 (Ch. 371, 44 Stat. 1398). The construction costs apportioned to the tribal lands so excluded are hereby canceled and the water rights are made available for project use. The water rights for the lands of the several allottees and non-Indian owners within the area so excluded shall not be impaired or affected by reason of such exclusion, but water shall be delivered only at the head of the laterals serving these lands. The respective owners of such lands may make their water rights available for project use, whereupon the construction costs as sessed or assessable against their lands with respect to the water rights thus made available shall be canceled by the Secretary of the Interior. Allottees of lands within the excluded area, or their heirs or devisees, may donate or sell their lands to the tribe or may exchange their lands for assignments of tribal lands within the project area. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, $8,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the purchase by the Secretary of the Interior, in the name of the United States of America in trust for the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes of the Fort Hall Reservation, of one hundred and eighty acres of non-Indianowned land, with water rights and improvements appurtenant thereto, described as the north half southeast quarter southwest quarter section 13, township 4 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, and south half northeast quarter and north half southeast quarter section 7, township 4 south, range 35 east, Boise meridian, located within the area excluded from the Fort Hall Indian Irrigation project by section 4 of this Act.
"Sec. 6. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appro-priated, the sum of $3,995 to compensate the following-named landowners, or their heirs. for work accomplished or for future work necessary in filling, leveling, and otherwise preparing for irrigation the abandoned por-tion of the old Fort Hall Main Canal within their holdings, in not to exceed the following amounts: Frank E. DeKay, $401; Henry Jensen, $633; Theodore H. Gathe, $654; A. E. Albert, $106; Ezra D. Wilson, $127; J. M. Bistline, $378; Ambrose H. McGuire, $424; Ellen Griffith, $412; C. M. Allen, $116; Olive A. Granden, $184; William Webster, $28; Hiram Faulkner, $114; Williamette Blakeslee, $298; Frank Parker, $99; and Henrietta C. Blakes-

"SEC. 7. Pending the construction of a siphon to provide gravity flow water to ninety-six and six-tenths acres of irrigable lands in the southwest quarter section 27, and east half section 28, township 5 south, range 34 east, Boise meridian, Idaho, which lands have been irrigated by pumping opera-tions over a period of years, the Secretary of the Interior may accept the conveyance by the landowners of the pumping equipment for use of the Fort Hall Indian Irrigation project and may operate such equipment as a part of said project in order to provide water for the irrigation of such lands; the acceptance of such conveyance being subject to the owners of the lands executing releases to the United States of any and all claims whatsoever due to the pumping operations carried on by such landowners.

"SEC. 8. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his discretion, to revise and reform, upon such terms and conditions as he may determine to be fair and equitable in all the circumstances affectng the interests of the United States and the contractors, existing contracts between the United States and the Idaho Irrigation District, the Progressive Irrigation District, and the Snake River Valley Irrigation District in Idaho, which contracts provide for certain payments by the districts to the United States for the benefit of works of the Fort Hall Indian Ir-

"SEC. 9. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, for refunds to Indians, or their heirs, the sum of $1,419.55, representing irrigation assessments of the Fort Hall Indian irrigation project erroneously made and col-lected, as follows: Andrew F. Cutler, $153.80; Alice Sorrell Johns, $168.95; Nettle Stinson LaVatta, $146.62; Earl Edmund Cutler, $159.-20; Charles Faulkner, $145.25; Josephine La-Vatta Rumas, $155.20; May Phyllis LaVatta Vatua Rumas, $155.20, May Frynis Lavacta Brower, $29.90; Leonard I. Cutler, $135.85; Effie Diggte Houtz, $122.75; Lucy Yandell Spencer, $25; Charles Gerard Cutler, $121.53; and Hattie Sorrell Siler Tillotson, $55.50.

'Sec. 10. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for the relo-cating, rehabilitating, cleaning, and extend-ing of irrigation systems serving the lands irrigated from Ross Fork, Bannock, and Lincoln Creeks, which lands are outside of the Fort Hall Indian irrigation project, including the construction of a storage reservoir on Bannock Creek. The costs of any work benefiting Indian lands performed pursuant to this authorization shall be apportioned on a per acre basis and collected under laws on a per acre basis and confected under laws applicable to Indian irrigable lands on the Fort Hall Indian irrigation project. Opera-tion and maintenance charges against such lands shall likewise be subject to the same laws, rules, and regulations as apply to Indian lands on the Fort Hall project. unpaid charges against such lands shall be subject to a first lien as provided in the act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. 200, 210). No ex-penditure shall be made under this authorization which will benefit lands in non-Indian ownership unless the owners thereof execute contracts providing for the repayment of their proportionate per acre share of the costs of the work assessable against their lands.

"Sec. 11. In order to prevent the accumulation of delinquent project assessments or other charges against the non-Indian-owned lands of the Fort Hall Indian irrigation project, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to cause liquidation of all delinquent assessments or charges by taking such action as may be necessary, including the foreclosure of the Government's lien covering any such delinquent charges or by initiating such other procedure as may be legally available, which action may be taken by him at any time when in his judgment the best interests of the project would be served thereby.

"SEC. 12. All Act or parts of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed."

And the Senate agree to the same. RICHARD J. WELCH, WESLEY A. D'EWART, JOHN SANBORN, J. HARDIN PETERSON, JOHN R. MURDOCK, Managers on the Part of the House.

STATEMENT

. The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5416) to promote the interests of the Fort Hall Indian Irrigation project, Idaho, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to such amendment, namely:

The text of the Senate amendment was designed to accomplish the same results as the provisions of the bill as it passed the House, hence the conferees adopted the language of the bill as it passed the House. It was agreed that the text of the House bill sets forth more clearly what was intended than what was contained in the Senate amendment.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BUSBEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. GWINN] may extend his remarks in the RECORD and include an address by Mr. Rudd entitled "Education for the New Social Order," notwithstanding the fact that it is two and one-quarter pages over the regular allowance in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. REGAN (at the request of Mr. RAYBURN), for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, June 17, 18, and 19, on account of illness.

THE DRAFT BILL

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Okla-

There was no objection.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to express the sincere hope that when the conferees bring back the draft bill that the Members of this body will be as brave as the men we expect to draft under it.

ANCHOR DAM, OWL CREEK UNIT, WYOMING

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to clear up a matter in connection with the conference report on the Interior appropriation bill.

On the subject of transfer of the Owl Creek unit, Wyoming, Missouri Basin project, from phase B to phase A in the tabulation of the conference committee report, Interior Department appropriation bill, H. R. 6705, on page 8788, of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 17, the Owl Creek unit appears under phase B. units being prepared for construction, with the amount of $200,000 approved by the conferees. It is understood that when the amount of $200,000 was inserted by the House appropriations subcommittee, the intention was to start construction of this development through initiation of work on Anchor Dam. The hearings before the House and Senate committees show that the Bureau of Reclamation has completed preliminary or preconstruction work on Anchor Dam, the major feature of the Owl Creek unit, and the $200,000, if allowed, would be used to initiate construction.

In order that the Bureau of Reclamation may have guidance with respect to the intention of the Congress in connection with the Owl Creek unit, the record should show that it is the understanding of the House that the item "Owl Creek, Wyo., $200,000—amount approved by conferees" on page 8845 of the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD of June 17 should appear under "Phase A, units selected for construction" rather than under "Phase B, units being prepared for construction." I feel sure that this was an oversight on the part of the efficient assistants of the conferees in making up the report and the question is raised at this time so that there may be no misunderstand-ing of the place this unit has in the Missouri Basin program. Inadvertently, this was not brought to the attention of the committee of which the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Jensen] is chairman, and I therefore desire to ask the gentleman from Iowa what position he and his committee take on this matter.

Mr. JENSEN. Since this matter has been brought to my attention, I can assure the gentleman from Wyoming that the committee will be happy to concur in the Bureau of Reclamation request to bring this project into phase A construction.

A HUNDRED THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT COMMUNISM

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I take this time simply to call to the attention of the Members of the House the answer to the question which I have been asked frequently in the past 48 hours; that is, whether or not you can secure extra copies of this new publication of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, entitled "A Hundred Things You Should Know About Communism."

I am pleased to announce we are making arrangements to have printed 500,-000 extra copies of this factual document. They will be distributed to the public through the House document room in the normal manner, which will mean that about 1,000 copies will be available to each of you. If you do not care to distribute those copies in your own districts, perhaps you can make them available to your senatorial colleagues or to Members from other States, where these handbooks are in great demand.

This handbook on communism grows out of 10 years of research by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and its able staff and gives the specific, direct answers to 100 important questions about communism, how it operates in the United States of America and what its purposes are in this Republic.

MONTANA PUMPING UNIT, MISSOURI BASIN PROJECT

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, on the subject of transfer of the Montana pumping unit, Missouri Basin project, from phase B to phase A in the tabulation of the conference committee report, Interior Department appropriation bill, H. R. 6705, on page 8845, of the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD of June 17, the Montana pumping unit is included under phase B, units being prepared for construction. This appears to be an error and this unit should be included under phase A. The basis for this inquiry is the statement made on page 6637 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 27 in a colloquy between Mr. D'Ewart of Montana and Chairman Jensen of the House Appropriations Subcommittee. In that colloquy Chairman JENSEN stated "When we marked up the bill we meant to bring a certain portion of this money which we had approached in phase B for the Montana pumping item and also for the Lower Marias, to bring it out of phase B up into phase A, which is construc-tion." The chairman stated then that The chairman stated then that he had conferred with other members of the committee and "we now recommend that such part of the amount allowed for these projects as may be necessary shall be available for phase A, or, in other words, construction.' Since it is the understanding that the Bureau of Reclamation will follow the break-down by projects of the amounts approved by the conferees under the Missouri Basin item, it is suggested that the record should be clarified so as to transfer the item: "Montana pumping, Montana, $210,000—amount approved by conferees" from phase B to phase A.

The first subunit under the Missouri Basin pumping unit will be the N-Bar-N ranch development which will be an important pilot irrigation undertaking in this area. It is hoped that the Bureau of Reclamation will press the construction of this subunit which will have an important bearing on guiding future developments in the Missouri River Basin.

The conferees on the part of the House are to be congratulated on the excellence of their work in maintaining the major part of the results of their able and earnest efforts to advance reclamation along sound lines.

Mr. JENSEN. It is the intention of the committee that that project be advanced from phase B to phase A.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, a couple of days ago I was given permission to extend in the Appendix of the RECORD a speech made by the Honorable W. Calvin Wells to the Mississippi State Bar Convention.

I am advised by the Public Printer that this exceeds the limit established by the Joint Committee on Printing and that the cost is $301.75. Notwithstanding the cost I ask unanimous consent that the extension may be made.

The SPEAKER. Notwithstanding the cost, without objection, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. DOMENGEAUX asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a newspaper article.

TOM LINDER, J. E. MACDONALD, AND BOB HARRIS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, it seems strange indeed that the Department of Justice has overlooked so many Power Trust lobbyists, railroad lobbyists, and other big interest lobbyists that have infested this Capitol for the last 6 months, and indicted Tom Linder, commissioner of agriculture of the State of Georgia; J. E. MacDonald, commissioner of agriculture of the State of Texas; and Robert M. Harris, a cotton farmer and merchant, for their efforts to boost the price of cotton, which the farmers sold for about 50 of 60 percent of its normal value last year.

Mr. Harris is a Louisiana planter who is also engaged in the cotton business. He is a cotton merchant; but he seems to be always on the bull side of the market; that is, he is in favor of raising the price of cotton instead of holding it down.

Now, if the time has come with a commissioner of agriculture of a southern State cannot exert his efforts to keep the buyers from beating down the price of cotton and plundering the farmers of the South of untold millions of dollars, I say we have reached a poor pass.

Why not indict some of these lobbyists who are here trying to wreck this country, or trying to ram through legislation that they know is detrimental to welfare of the American people.

Tom Linder and J. E. MacDonald are two outstanding men of the South as far as the cotton farmers of this country are concerned.

They have exerted every effort to see that the southern farmers received a fair price for their cotton, and I cannot see the justice of prosecuting them for such efforts, especially since they have been elected by the people of their respective States for that purpose.

TOM LINDER

Mr. DORN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. DORN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to concur in what the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi has just said about the indictment of Tom Linder in Georgia. We in South Carolina across the river from Georgia admire the great stand of Tom Linder, of Georgia, in behalf of the cotton farmers and, indeed. of the farmers of every State of the 48 States of this Union. Possibly I am wrong but it appears to me the Attorney General could find plenty of people who should be indicted without bringing charges against a man who is obligated by virtue of his election as commissioner of agriculture to fight for the rights of his people before committees of this Congress and elsewhere. I do not believe Mr. Linder has made this fight for personal gain. I believe the courts will prove this.

Tom Linder has done a good job for the farmers of the South. I agree with the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi that if they are going to indict anyone, why not indict some of these big monopolies, these big trusts, lobbyists for displaced persons and foreign loans here in Washington and not come down into the sovereign State of Georgia and indict the commissioner of agriculture of a great and sovereign State.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BUSBEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include, first, an article entitled "American Taxpayers Finance Communist Students," second, an article entitled "More on State Department Act," and, third, an article from the Chicago Tribune.

Mr. MACK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD and include a statement he made before the Banking and Currency Committee.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes following any previous special orders for the day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers] is recognized for 10 minutes.

VETERANS' LEGISLATION

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I wish again to remind the House that there is pending before the Rules Committee an extremely fine veterans' housing bill, H. R. 4488, the only bill that will really give housing to the veteran. The bill passed today does not take care of the veterans; it is not a veterans' housing bill. It is a general housing bill. They have to take their chance with everybody else. There is no priority for veterans, as I understand the bill.

In all of our discussions on the question of housing legislation there is one fundamental fact which too many of us overlook. We tend to forget the fact that the housing problem is primarily a veterans' housing problem. We are forgetting the pledges we made to our demobilized veterans that we would do something about their housing problem. The suffering caused by the present housing shortage is not equally distributed—our former GI's are bearing the brunt of it.

There is ample evidence that the average veteran family is already priced far out of the market for new homes. The high rate of home building is an excellent achievement, but let us not delude ourselves that these homes are going to our veteran constituents. They simply cannot afford them.

The general housing legislation we are considering will not improve this situation. Except for the public-housing provisions, which will conceivably prove helpful to only a small segment of veterans in the metropolitan centers, the general housing bill will merely continue a status quo in which the veteran has no real preference.

It is time for us to live up to our pledges and to pass a housing bill which will really help our veterans. I am convinced that H. R. 4488, the Veterans' Homestead Act of 1948, is that bill. The veterans' homestead bill has the sponsorship of the American Legion and was reported out unanimously by the Committee on Veterans' Affairs. It is the only legislation I know of which will really give the veteran a break in the housing market.

It will give them homes at much lower cost. Through FWA grants and other features, the bill will reduce housing costs to veterans by as much as 20 percent. Unlike the general housing bill, which would give aid to the bottom 10 percent of our income groups through public housing, and to the top 10 percent through its other provisions, the veterans homestead bill is aimed squarely at the home-seeking veterans in the middle 80 percent.

It will give veterans the tools to master their housing problem through their own initiative. Through homestead associations chartered by the Veterans' Administration, veterans can go ahead in their own communities and build their homes without having to rely on the efforts of others.

It assures veterans of the necessary financing. Through loans from the Veterans' Administration and through provisions which assure the availability of an adequate supply of capital for GI loans, home-seeking veterans can be certain of low-cost financing.

It will solve the rental-housing problem which is plaguing our veterans in urban centers. Homestead associations can begin immediately to build apartment houses which will feature greatly reduced monthly rentals.

It provides the very necessary aid to GI's who need farms. By making low-cost credit available to veterans through the Federal land banks and the Farmers Home Administration, the bill will answer a crying need in our farm communities where veterans are now unable to get the necessary financing to buy a farm.

These are the compelling advantages offered to veterans by the homestead bill. Now as to legislative cost. I have heard opponents of the bill say, "The bill is all well and good, but won't its cost to the taxpayers be prohibitive?" The answer is an emphatic "No."

The great bulk of the funds made available under the Homestead bill will not be expenditures at all, but will be self-liquidating loans which will be repaid to the Government with interest. The only direct cost involved is the $200,-000,000 for FWA grants for land development and public utilities, and even this cost will be spread over a number of years. I think that all of us who have helped to develop the Homestead bill can well be proud that it will accomplish so much at so little cost. It certainly seems the least we can do to help our deserving veterans solve their housing problem.

A broken pledge is a terrible thing. Let us keep faith with our veterans and give them this Homestead bill. It is the only way we can make amends for our shameful neglect of the veterans' housing prob-

Mr. Speaker, I would like to include as a part of my remarks an editorial taken from this morning's Washington Times-Herald, which is as follows:

GOOD LUCK, CONGRESS! SEE YOU NEXT JANUARY

As this was written it was pretty nearly in the cards, that Congress will leave here in another 48 hours not to return until January 1949, so here is a sort of vital-statistics round-up on the job it has done.

A FINE RECORD

To begin with, this is the Eightieth Congress since the founding of the Republic. It came into being with the elections of November 1946, and took office on January 3, 1947, for its first session. On July 27, 1947, it recessed and went home to check with the public, returning November 17. This present session convened January 6, 1948, and closes June 19, 1948.

The Eightieth Congress has done an outstanding job, all things considered, and the taxpayers have got more than their money's worth out of it.

So this Congress has a right to its present cocky, cheerful confidence that the tax-payers will call on the Eighty-first Congress for more of the same from just about the same representation in House and Senate when it convenes here on January next.

Looking over the record in detail, we figure the main weaknesses of the Eightleth Congress about as follows:

It leaves the country without universal military training and regardless of whatever so-called draft it turns out in these last hours, this was a terrible mistake.

WEAK SIDE

We live in an age of wars and in such an age there is no substitute for a trained military manpower. A draft, as such, is only a stopgap until UMT can really polish up our fighting Reserves for instant service when needed. The Eightieth Congress laid down on that job, largely because it was intimidated by mothers, college professors, and professional pacifists. To do so was an invitation to national disaster.

The Eightieth also made a boner, we think, in not passing the Taft-Eilender-Wagner housing bill. Senator Taft was able to get this long-range project through the Senate but the House flopped. Here's hoping the Eighty-first Congress puts it into law, and for that matter all the rest of Senator Taft's lay-out of improvements in social security, education, and public medicine.

Taken all together, these are a program of national self-improvement that the United States of America could use and nobody we know of equals TAFT as a master at designing the laws to carry out such a program.

On the good side, the Eightleth has a really stellar record. First, as to national defense, it has put up the necessary cash by the billions for research and improvements of weapons—lands, sea, and air.

GOOD SIDE

It has forced the Army, Navy, and Air Force to work on a long overdue internal reorganization that will undoubtedly be valuable both to economy and efficiency. It has kept its head about the atom bomb, in spite of many tensions and some real mistakes, such as last year's senatorial confirmation of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The Eightleth has also faithfully reorganized its own system of doing business along the lines drawn up by the Seventy-ninth Congress and has started a high-powered Commission to studying the executive branch for reorganization as well. The Commission will report to the Eightý-first Congress next January, and great hopes are held for better government at less cost.

On taxes, the Eightieth has done about as good a job as anybody had a right to expect, having got through some cut-backs of a modest sort over the Presidential veto, as at least a token of intention, if not as a real return of the people's money to the people.

On labor, there is the Taft-Hartley law working smoothly after all and helping the unions keep out of trouble.

On foreign affairs, the Eightieth yielded to the pressure for the multibillioned ERP gamble, but at least has had the wit to form up a team of its own specialists to watchdog the Executive. Thanks for that, anyhow. On veterans' needs it has done such a good

On veterans' needs it has done such a good job that it has won high praise from even Commander Ty Krum, the Times-Herald's editor of veterans' affairs, who has put in many hours of work with Speaker JOE MARTIN.

But, as of this writing, the House was past due on one piece of veterans' legislation that passed the Senate a year ago and that is the bill to provide cars for combat-disabled men of World War II so they can get out and make a decent living. There is still time for the bill to go into law and it should.

POLITICAL PROSPECTS

Considering the record, what is the political outlook for the Members of the Eightieth Congress? How is the country likely to feel about reelecting them?

Well, first it has to be noted that the Eightieth Congress has been a Republican Congress, working upstream against the stubborn, often frantic disruptions of a tailend Democratic regime headed up by a man who was never elected to the Presidency.

Congress has done its work wonderfully well against the sniping of Mr. Truman's team and has not only won most of its battles but has kept its dignity and prestige.

Of course we could be wrong, but right now it looks like a sure thing to say that the Eighty-first Congress, like the Eightieth, will be organized by the Republican majority and will also have the satisfaction of working with a Republican President.

Good-bye, Congress. Good luck. Hope most of you come back next January.

Mr. Speaker, if the so-called veterans' amputee car bill that has already passed the Senate does not pass the House, I shall feel that everything that is being said in the House about caring for our disabled veterans is a hollow mockery. These veterans are the combat disabled, the blind and the amputees, among the worst disabled of all of our veterans. It costs very little. The Senate in its wisdom and kindness passed it last year. There is no excuse for not passing this legislation. We have just passed a bill which I myself introduced to build a hospital in the Philippines. We have a legal and a moral obligation to do that. But I remind the House that countless billions have been sent to foreign countries, millions of dollars of automobiles have been sent to foreign countries. This bill costs only a pittance. These veterans are the boys we sent to war. There are a few Members who have been disabled as these boys have been. They know what an automobile can do as a rehabilitation measure.

Mr. Speaker, I feel so strongly about the matter that if by any chance it should not pass, I plan to tour the entire country to see that in the next session it does pass, It cannot fail.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ENGEL of Michigan asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in the Record and include an article by Dr. Joseph F. Thorning, associate editor of World Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Under previous special order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Church] is recognized for 10 minutes.

REDUCING THE COST OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, as this Congress approaches a close, I wish to say a few words with respect to the work of the Congress in the matter of reducing the cost of government.

Inasmuch as the House has acted on all the appropriation bills, except for a final deficiency bill, I recognize that what I might say at this time will have little, if any, influence on the final record of the Congress in achieving economy. Nonetheless, I feel justified in taking this time in order that the record may be clear, at least insofar as I am personally concerned as a member of the Committee on Appropriations, on what has been accomplished and what we have failed to accomplish.

At the moment no one knows what the final figures will show as to the actual savings realized by this Congress in the various operations of the Federal Government. Indeed, a major question yet to be decided is the amount to be appropriated for the foreign-aid program. I am most hopeful that the views of the House, reducing the amount to be appropriated, will prevail over the views of the Senate, which is insisting upon the full amount.

As is true in every election, there are many factors that prompted the American people to elect this Republican Congress. One of the reasons, and I think a very compelling reason with the majority of the American people, was the fact that the Republicans gave promise of reducing the cost of Government, of eliminating the waste and the extravagance, and of placing our economy on a sound fiscal basis.

This Congress did not break that pledge. As a rough estimate, the Congress has saved approximately $6,000,000,000 in these 2 years of its existence. When one considers the difficulties that have been involved in accomplishing this saving, the determined opposition we faced from the administration, it represents a very substantial achievement. It is because of this saving that we have been able to give our people much-needed tax relief.

As a member of the Committee on Appropriations I fully appreciate how hard it has been to realize economy. We have had absolutely no cooperation from the executive branch of the Government. And, as has been demonstrated time and again here on the floor of the House, we have had consistent opposition by the gentlemen on the other side of the aisle.

It should be borne in mind that the President did not present to the Congress his major budget requests when the Congress opened. It was not until May 26 that our committee received the final budget estimates for the Army and the Air Force, and it was not until June 1 that we received the estimates for the Navy.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, we have been proceeding under great handicaps in trying to accomplish a thorough job of realizing economy. I appreciate that fact. I know what our committee has been up against. While I do not for a moment detract from what has been accomplished, I wish to say that for myself I believe much more could have been accomplished.

I rise at this time to utter a word of warning, Mr. Speaker. We are rapidly approaching a crisis in Federal expenditures. As I have said on several occasions on this floor, when the various appropriation bills were before us, it is always easier to spend than to save; every proposed expenditure has a political appeal. It is perfectly evident to me, and I believe to the vast majority of the American people, that the only way to cut Government spending is to cut it. It takes political courage, but that is the kind of courage we must have if we are to maintain financial stability.

Let me emphasize this fact: if the fiscal system of the United States weakens, the whole civilized world will follow. The weakening of our financial foundation, upon which our system of free competitive enterprise rests, will do more to serve the enemies of our way of life than any weapon that could be devised. The liberty-loving people of the world are dependent upon our strength. For my part, I do not believe that we can remain strong when the Government, Federal, State, and local, eats up about 30 percent of the incomes of all Americans.

One of the major achievements of this Congress was the establishment of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government.

For approximately a year that Commission has been engaged in a thorough, over-all survey of all the operations of the Government. It will probably make its report when the new Congress assembles. It is a nonpartisan Commission, and it has proceeded in a nonpartisan manner.

The fact that this Commission exists and that it is composed of such outstanding men gives me some hope. It gives me hope that when the new Congress meets we will be in a position to do the kind of a job that should be done toward bringing order out of chaos in Federal operations and expenditures.

Former President Herbert Hoover is serving as Chairman of this Commission. That he and his colleagues recognize the absolute necessity of dealing realistically and thoroughly with this problem of Government expenditures and the need for complete reorganization is evidenced from the following paragraph in a letter he wrote last month concerning the work of his Commission:

That it is imperative is obvious when we consider that the number of persons at 3 years after the First World War who were receiving regular payments from the Federal Government was about 2,200,000, and 3 years after the Second World War it is about 13,-400.000. The budget 3 years after the First World War was about $4,000,000,000 per annum, whereas 3 years after the Second World War 1# is $40,000,000,000. There are insufficient savings left in the hands of the people to repair, maintain, and improve the tools of production and distribution upon which our standard of living depends. These figures obviously indicate the necessity for important structural changes in the Government to secure the maximum efficiency and economv.

But however thorough a study this Commission may make of the subject, however sound its final report may prove to be, it will all be meaningless unless we have in Congress men and women who are determined to carry through an economy program. As I said before, we have accomplished much during this Congress; but speaking for myself, I do not believe we accomplished nearly enough.

It is my conviction that the American people earnestly desire to see our Government on a sound fiscal basis, that they earnestly desire to see the cost of government reduced, that they earnestly desire to be relieved of the burdensome taxes that have been destroying initiative and eating up our productive substance. I hope—I sincerely hope—that when the people go to the polls this November they will elect a truly economyminded Congress and an economyminded President.

We greatly need, both in the White House and in Congress, men and women who do not simply talk economy, then vote for an increase in this appropriation and that because it may be politically wise or expedient. We need a determined, courageous economy program. Without such a program, I fear for our national solvency.

We have made a beginning, but it is only a beginning toward restoring sanity and order in Government. I am sure the people will wholeheartedly support an all-out economy program. To such a program I stand committed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. LECOMPTE, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 4071. An act to amend section 301 (k) and 304 (a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Compatic Act as amended:

and Cosmetic Act, as amended;
H. R. 6419. An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors for navigation, flood control, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 6772. An act making appropriations for the Department of the Navy and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to a bill and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 239. An act to provide for a Board of Visitors to the United States Naval Academy and for a Board of Visitors to the United States Military Academy, and for other purposes:

S. J. Res. 117. Joint resolution for acceptance by the United States of America of the Constitution of the International Labor Organization Instrument of Amendment, and further authorizing an appropriation for payment of the United States share of the expenses of membership and for expenses of participation by the United States; and

S. J. Res. 202. Joint resolution to change the name of the Potholes Dam in the Columbia Basin project to O'Sullivan Dam.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 7 o'clock and 29 minutes p. m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, June 19, 1948, at 10 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows-

1660. A letter from the Secretary of the Army, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated May 18, 1948, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a review of reports on Manistique Harbor, Mich., requested by a resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted on June 19, 1945 (H. Doc. No. 721); to the Committee on Public Works and ordered to be printed, with one illustration.

1661. A letter from the Secretary of the Army, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated May 10, 1948, submitting an interim report, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey of Oswego Harbor, N. Y., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved on March 2, 1945 (H. Doc. No. 722); to the Committee on Public Works, and ordered to be printed, with one illustration.

1662. A letter from the Secretary of the Army, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated June 1, 1948, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, on a review of reports on inland waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort Inlet, N. C., in the vicinity of Fairfield, N. C., requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted on November 28, 1944, and also in partial response to resolution of the Committee on Public Works, United States Senate, adopted on April 20, 1948 (H. Doc. No. 723); to the Committee on Public Works and ordered to be printed, with two illustrations.

1663. A letter from Charles E. Bohlen, counselor, for the Secretary of State, transmitting lists indicating the dismantling and shipping status of all plants listed for reparation in the French zone and, for all plants other than war plants for which estimates are feasible, their character and capacity, as requested under the second and third questions of House Resolution 365; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1664 A letter from the assistant to the president, the American Academy of Arts and Letters, transmitting the official report of the American Academy of Arts and Letters for the year ending December 31, 1947; to the Committee on House Administration.

1665. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to settle and extinguish land claims to the public domain in the Territory of Alaska; to the Committee on Public Lands.

1666. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting the Annual Report of the Foreign-Trade Zones Board for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1947, and the Annual Report of the City of New York covering operations of foreign-trade zone No. 1 during the calendar year 1946; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE

SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1948

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 15, 1948)

(Continuation of Senate proceedings of Friday, June 18, 1948, from 1:45 a. m. on Saturday, June 19, 1948.)

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, some months ago, while I was absent because of illness in my family, the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas] took occasion not only to attack me personally at that time but also to attack the conduct of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Tonight I hold in my hand a statement made last evening during the temporary absence of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. President, in 1933, when the Democrats came into office, the record shows they did not confirm one single post-master. The record shows further that President Hoover made a personal appeal to President Roosevelt for the single purpose of getting even Walter Newton, his former secretary

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I desire to make the point that the Senate is not in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators will please be seated so we can hear the speech by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. LANGER. Even the desperate personal appeal of former President Hoover merely to have one single Democrat, Walter Newton, confirmed as judge was denied.

Mr. President, in contrast, I want to show the fine and splendid cooperative attitude of the Republican Party. have here in my hand the nominations that were on the calendar for June 15. Postmasters were confirmed for the States of Connecticut, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Vermont, and Virginia. In addition to that, two were confirmed in Iowa.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield.

Mr. McFARLAND. I wanted to ask the Senator about the State of Washington.

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield at this time, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest the Senator from North Dakota retain the floor.

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. Likewise, on the next day, the 16th day of June, postmasters were reported and confirmed in the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan— Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I suggest the Senate is not in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair is doing the best he can. This is a very important speech.

Mr. LANGER. The postmasters were also reported and confirmed in the States of Minnesota, Mississippi, Vermont, and Virginia.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield.

Again, Mr. President-

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I reluctantly make the point of order that the Senate is not in order. We should have order in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. the Senator from Illinois suggest that the galleries be cleared?

Mr. LUCAS. No, Mr. President; I do not suggest that. The people are here to see a good show.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the point of order is not well taken, because the show cannot go on if the Senate is not in order.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I make the point of order that the Senator from North Dakota has enumerated every State in the Union except the State of Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is coming to that. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I yield. Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, so long as I am in this chair as acting majority leader, I shall insist that the rules of the Senate be enforced. I know that the Chair is seeking to enforce them. There are other rules which we can put into effect if we do not have order on the floor of the Senate. Simply because we may not agree with the tactics being used, we should not be ourselves guilty of violating the rules of the Senate. I shall cooperate with the Chair in maintaining order in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota has the floor.

Mr. MORSE. The Senator from North Dakota yielded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He can yield only for a question, under the rules. We must follow the rules. However, the Chair will continue to recognize the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. LANGER. I do not yield for anything.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The po more parliamentary inquiries. The Senator will

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, during my absence from the Chamber yesterday the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas] made what I consider to be an attack upon the distinguished junior Senator from the State of Illinois [Mr. BROOKS]. Upon that occasion he introduced various resolutions to discharge the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service from the consideration of various post office nominations. In order that it may be clear in the minds of the Senators upon the floor, I wish to read what transpired:

Mr. Lucas. Mr. President, I should like to ask a question respecting a number of post-master nominations, in view of the fact that many postmasters have been confirmed tonight. It is my understanding that sold 38 or 40 postmaster nominations in Illinois 38 or 40 postmaster nominations in Illinois have been approved by the Civil Service Committee, and I wonder if the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service is present and can tell me why those post-masters do not appear on the calendar. Mr. Wherry. The Senator from North Dakota is not present.

Mr. Lucas. It is my understanding that my colleague from Illinois has objected to these postmasters, and he is present. I should like to know whether that is true or not.

Mr. Brooks. Mr. President, I may say to my colleague that I know nothing about the nominations of postmasters that are not on the calendar. I was csked if I approved them and I said I did not know who they were. I do not know who they are and to that extent I have not approved them.

Mr. Lucas. Mr. President, I want to submit resolutions respecting each and every one of these postmasters. The purpose of the resolution is to discharge the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service from fur-ther consideration of the nominations of the postmasters to whom I refer. The first one is Monroe A. Lawson of Clay City, Ill. Mr. Lawson is a disabled marine veteran of World War II, having been wounded on Saipan. He was the only applicant for the office and the only eligible certified by the Civil Service Commission from an open competitive examination.

He has served as acting postmaster since October 1946, and is unanimously endorsed by the Clay City Chamber of Commerce, and was recommended by the Republican Congressman from that district.

Personally, the Senator from Illinois does not know whether this gentleman is a Democrat or a Republican, and it would not make any difference, because he is a veteran, and is No. 1 on the eligible list, and the only one on the list.

"He is a veteran." I want my distinguished colleagues to remember those words of the Senator from Illinois-"He is a veteran."

Mr. President, why that individual cannot be confirmed by the Senate of the United States at this session will be a little difficult for me to understand, and it will be a little difficult for many people in Illinois to un-derstand—people who will know more about it as time goes by.

I submit the resolution, and ask that it lie over for the day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be filed and will lie over for the day.

Mr. Lucas. The second nomination is that of Charles H. McGough, to be postmaster at Secor, Ill. Mr. McGough was the first man on the eligible register established by the Civil Service Commission as the result of an open competitive examination.

He is a disabled veteran of World War II, and is now serving as acting postmaster.

Some other individual is serving as acting postmaster while this disabled veteran of World War II, who was the first man on the eligible list, waits for his commission because of someone here in the United States Senate who refuses to approve him or who refuses to report out his nomination.

I may say to every Senator upon the floor that every nomination that has been approved by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service has been reported with the exception of a man from Wyoming and one from the State of Illinois. To the others there was some objection by some Senator. In accordance with the rule laid down by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, if any Senator objects, the nomination is not reported. Four from the State of Wyoming were objected to by the distinguished Senator from that State [Mr. ROBERTSON], on grounds that were satisfactory to him-

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LANGER.

I decline to yield. The Senator from Illinois continued:

Mr. President, to me this is indefensible and it is unbelievable that an Illinois boy who went out to fight for his country, and is disabled, and is No. 1 on the list, should not be confirmed.

I want Senators to remember that statement also.

There is nothing that anyone can do about it under the law. He must be ultimately accepted, whether anyone likes it or not, be-cause under the law no one can be chosen over him. I do not know what his politics are, but I know that he is a disabled veteran, and I know that he is waiting for this job, and that he cannot get it.

Mr. Wherry. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question. I have the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No: the Senator from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. I beg the Chair's pardon.

Mr. Lucas. I shall be glad to yield if the Senator from Nebraska wants to ask me a question.

Mr. WHERRY. How does the Senator know that the nomination in question will not be reported from the committee?

Mr. Lucas. I hope it will. Mr. Wherry. Is not the Senator really begging the question?

Mr. Lucas. I am not begging the question very much because unless the nomination is reported from the committee within 48 hours he will not be confirmed. There would not be any action in this matter if it were not for the fact that the Senator from Illinois has taken the floor and proceeded to take the action he is now taking.

Mr. WHERRY. The chairman of the committee is not present.

Mr. Lucas. I have asked the chairman about this.

Mr. WHERRY. The chairman has done quite well in the matter of reporting nominations, and the Senate has confirmed every nomina-tion which has been placed on the Executive Calendar, with the exception of one, during the executive session today

Mr. Lucas. I appreciate that.

Mr. WHERRY. I think that is something of a record. Only one nomination on the calendar has been put over today. I have taken the position that when the Senate acted on the Executive Calendar all nominations on the calendar should be confirmed.

Mr. Lucas. I have tried to get these nominations on the Executive Calendar. Obviously they cannot be confirmed until that is

Mr. WHERRY, I am satisfied that if the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service were present he could give the Senator satisfactory answers respecting these postmasters.

Mr. Lucas. He cannot give me satisfactory answers respecting the individuals I have mentioned, because there is nothing that can be done about these postmasters except confirm them or turn them down.

Mr. Buck. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. Lucas, I yield.

Mr. Buck. I cannot answer the Senator respecting the postmasters in question, but I will say there is a meeting of the commit-tee scheduled for tomorrow morning, when nominations for postmasters will be considered, and I hope these nominations may be reported then.

Mr. Lucas. Recently I called the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Johnston], a member of the committee, on the phone and he told me that some 33 nominations for postmasters had been reported favorably the committee, that there was no objection to them, and since that time nominations from one State after another have been placed on the Executive Calendar, but the Illinois postmasters are not on the calendar, and time is running out in this Congress. Action must be taken quickly if the nominations are to be confirmed before the session is ended.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. Lucas. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. There are three nominations of postmasters from Illinois on the calendar.

Mr. Lucas. Yes; there are three from Illi-This is somewhat of an anomaly. I went before the committee and appealed to the committee to have the three postmasters from Illinois placed on the calendar, and the committee voted practically unanimously to place them on the calendar while I was there; and, lo and behold, they are now on the Executive Calendar. The reason I ap-peared was because some slight objection had been raised to these three. Lo and behold, they are on the calendar. But these other postmasters, to whom there is no objection, have not been placed on the calen-

Mr. WHERRY. Perhaps if the Senator went before the committee again he would succeed in having them placed on the calendar.

Mr. Lucas. I thought they would be placed on the calendar in view of the favorable report by the Committee on Civil Service. had every reason to believe they would be on the Executive Calendar as a result of favorable action by that committee.

Then all these pending nominations were named in the RECORD, the nomination and the name of the town. I refer to the fact that the distinguished Senator from Illinois referred to his colleague and blamed him because these nominations were not upon the calendar. I wish to take exclusive, total blame, as chairman of the committee, because these nominations have not been reported to the Senate.

A resolution passed by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service provides that where both Senators from a State agree, unless there is some objection on the part of someone, either in the files or otherwise, a nomination must be reported.

Mr. President, as I said before, all the other nominations from every other State except Wyoming and these from Illinois were reported, and I want the RECORD to be clear, I want it to be indelibly clear, as to why they were not reported.

Some months ago the Senate passed a resolution directing the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service to make a full and complete investigation of the entire matter as to how the civil-service law relating to postmasters had been carried out and was being carried out at the time. I made that investigation, and the report is practically ready.

During the course of the investigation being made by my staff, I for a time was absent. Lately I have been going over the report. My going over the report is why I did not report these Illinois nominations.

When the civil-service law was passed the distinguished Senator from Wyoming gave the most eloquent speech upon this floor. He said that the civil-service law was passed to take post offices out of politics, that that was the prime reason for passing it.

I do not think the distinguished Senator from Illinois will deny that his brother is a postmaster. I do not think he will deny that his brother's brotherin-law is a postmaster. So, Mr. President, in this investigation, I wanted to find out whether there was dirty politics in the State of Illinois in the matter of these post offices or whether there was

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator yield? Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. Mr. LUCAS. The Senator is making my family

Mr. LANGER. The distinguished Senator spoke in my absence last night. Mr. LUCAS. I am going to speak some more, too, when the time comes.

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield now. Mr. LUCAS. The Senator will yield sooner or later.

Mr. LANGER. I am giving the record. Mr. LUCAS. I will answer the Senator.

Mr. LANGER. The Senator will have every chance in the world when I finish, to answer this record, answer the coldblooded record if he can, show how veterans were discriminated against in the State of Illinois by the-

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator ought to talk about the cold-blooded record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KNOWLAND in the chair). The Senators will be in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, here it is. Here is the cold, cold, cold record. I do not blame the distinguished Senator for getting excited. I do not blame him at all.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. LANGER. First of all I want to say that in this entire investigation-

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota declines to yield. Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President-

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for

Mr. LUCAS. Cannot a Senator raise a question of personal privilege?

Mr. LANGER. I do not yield for anything at all.

Mr. LUCAS. Am I to stand here and have my family and the State of Illinois defamed by innuendo and not be allowed to answer?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sentors will suspend for a moment while the Chair discusses the matter with the Parliamentarian. [After a brief interval.] There is no rule in the Senate rules or in the precedents of the Senate that would permit the Senator from North Dakota to be taken off his feet on the basis of a question of personal privilege. The only reason for a Senator being taken off his feet is that he has, in violation of the rules of the Senate, referred offensively to a State or to a Member of the United States Senate.
Mr. LANGER. That I have not done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Or impugned the motives of a Senator.

Mr. LANGER. That I have not done. Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair's ruling is that the Senator has not transgressed those two narrow rules of the Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. Very well; if the Senator refuses to yield-

Mr. MAGNUSON. I said a parliamentary inquiry. A point of order.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I make a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator is not in order at this time. Mr. MAGNUSON. To make a point of PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator is not in order to make a point of order without the yielding by the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Does the Chair rule that the Senator from Washington is not in order to make a point of order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. What have we come to if a Senator cannot make a point of order in the Senate of the United States? Can a Senator go on and on and a point of order cannot be made regardless of what happens in the Senate? That is the strangest ruling I have ever heard of.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I decline to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota declines to yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. To make the Record clear, I make a point of order, and I want the Chair to rule in declining to entertain the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is not in order. The latest precedent on the subject in the Senate, when the matter was fully discussed and the precedent was handed down, which was in line with other precedents of the Senate, was on the 27th day of July 1947.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I appeal from the ruling of the Chair, and make a point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The ruling on the 27th of July 1947 was based on rule XIX of the Senate headed "Debate," reading as follows—

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, on what page does that rule appear?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On page 23 of the Standing Rules of the Senate Manual.

1. When a Senator desires to speak, he shall rise and address the Presiding Officer, and shall not procede until he is recognized, and the Presiding Officer shall recognize the Senator who shall first address him. No Senator shall interrupt another Senator in debate without his consent, and to obtain such consent he shall first address the Presiding Officer; and no Senator shall speak more than twice upon any one question in debate on the same day without leave of the Senate, which shall be determined without debate.

Based on that rule and the precedents of the Senate the decision of the Presiding Officer of the Senate on the 27th of July 1947 was that interruption could not be made for a point of order. That was the ruling of the Chair based on the rules of the Senate and the precedents of the Senate.

Of course the ruling of the Chair is subject to an appeal, if the Senator desires to take an appeal, and when the Senator from North Dakota has surrendered the floor the question would again be subject to discussion and appeal could be taken perhaps at that time.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President— Mr. LANGER. Mr. President—

Mr. MAGNUSON. I rose to a point of order. I rose in all sincerity because I thought by the ruling of the Chair made just prior to my rising that the Chair suggested that a point of order might lie when any Senator might in some way, by innuendo or otherwise, cast reflection upon a State or upon a Senator. I thought the Senator from North Dakota did cast a reflection upon the State of Illinois and the senior Senator from Illinois. I rose to a point of order. I should like to discuss that matter, but if the Chair will not allow me to make my point of order I must reluctantly, although I do not like to do so, appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is endeavoring impartially to preside over the Senate at this time.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I appreciate that. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair's ruling is based on the rules of the Senate, on the advice of the Parliamentarian, and on the precedents of the Senate. The Chair is not endeavoring to cut off any Senator from any right he has under the rules of the Senate, but whoever the occupant of the chair is, it is his obligation, at least as the present occupant of the chair sees it, to enforce the rules of the Senate as they are, and as the precedents have determined them to be.

The Chair refers to rule XIX again, which provides as follows:

No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator.

3. No Senator in debate shall refer offensively to any State of the Union.

4. If any Senator, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the Senate, the Presiding Officer shall, or any Senator may, call him to order; and when a Senator shall be called to order he shall sit down, and not proceed without leave of the Senate, which, if granted, shall be upon motion that he be allowed to proceed in order, which motion shall be determined without debate.

The last paragraph refers to the two preceding paragraphs relating to imputing to another Senator any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator, or referring offensively to any State of the Union and it is on that basis that the Presiding Officer has made his ruling.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President— Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota has the floor. Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, do I have a right to propound a parliamentary question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has ruled that the Senator does not.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Does the Chair rule that I have no right to propound a parliamentary inquiry at this time? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has ruled, based on the rules of the Senate and the precedents of the Senate.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has ruled that until the Senator from North Dakota has yielded the floor, or unless the Senator from North Dakota gives permission by yielding, a point of order cannot be made.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, then the Chair rules that a point of order is not in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A point of order is not in order, and the Senator is out of order.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for me to read Rule XX of the United States Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield to anyone.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield, and the Chair respectfully suggests that we proceed in order, and permit the Senator from North Dakota to proceed.

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is what I am trying to do—proceed in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I decline to yield for any purpose in any way, shape, form, or manner.

Mr. President, during the course of investigating these Illinois post offices, and there is a very large number of them in Illinois-I was very often in communication with the distinguished junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Brooks]. In view of what was said upon the floor last evening by the senior Senator from Illinois it is going to take me a little time to make my statement. I want to make it unmistakably clear not only to the people of the State of Illinois, but to the people of the entire United States of America, that from no other Senator in this body, so far as veterans are concerned, and particularly disabled veterans, has the Senator from North Dakota received more cooperation and finer help than from the distinguished junior Senator from Illinois. Time and time and time again the distinguished junior Senator from Illinois has asked me to be certain that no veteran, particularly a disabled war veteran, should in any manner whatsoever be discriminated against. The distinguished junior Senator from Illi-nois warned me, Mr. President, because of the fact that the debate had some months ago showed that in connection with a postoffice in another State there were three candidates, one of whom was a civilian, and two were disabled war veterans. Examination for postmaster was not called for for a long while, although both of the disabled war veterans wanted to take an examination. The distinguished junior Senator from Illinois said to me, "I want you to be certain that that sort of thing does not transpire, not only in my own State of Illinois, but anywhere in the entire country."

So, Mr. President, with the help of the distinguished junior Senator from Illinois, I as chairman of the committee have taken exceptional care, and I instructed the entire staff of the committee to be certain that no veteran should possibly be discriminated against.

I believe I can readily understand why the distinguished junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Brooks] was so solicitous with respect to even the most humble veteran in the State of Illinois. It is because the junior Senator from Illinois himself is one of the most distinguished and outstanding veterans of World War I. The brother of the distinguished Senator was killed in the service. He himself was wounded time and again, and decorated with almost every medal and every ribbon that this great country could give him in that war. I can understand his solicitude, because he had been across the water. He had seen the boys over there making sacrifices and undergoing suffering. He saw them in hunger, and in time of want. He saw them offering up their very lives for the United States of America. I say that the distinguished Senator from Illinois can be proud, as I believe every Senator, and the citizens of the great, fine State of Illinois, can be proud, of the record that this distinguished Senator made upon the fields of battle.

I have here every single one of the nominations which I myself held up, and for which I myself take full and complete responsibility. Every single one of these, as anyone can see who cares to look at them, was approved. They were not held up, but were approved by the junior Senator from Illinois. I said to him then, "After making an investigation I may not report them right away." His answer was, "If you, as chairman of the committee, have any objection to a single one of those nominees as a result of your investigation, I want you to know that the people of Illinois do not want a postmaster in any town in the United States who does not meet the qualifications set up by the Commit-tee on Post Office and Civil Service." That is the fine cooperation which I have had, Mr. President.

What did the examination in Illinois show? Let us take the town of Cullom, Ill. It is because of what I found in this examination, and the examination in another town which I shall name in just a moment, that on my own responsibility I held up these nominations until I could make a fuller investigation.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President. will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator declines to yield.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, what does the examination at Cullom, Ill., show? An examination for third-class postmaster at Cullom, Ill., was held on February 15, 1941, and produced the following eligibles: Jerome W. Kiley, 80.63; Henry E. Altig, 76.25. Then came the veteran we heard so much about last evening. The record shows that he was preferred. He had 75. Under the civilservice rules, when a veteran is within a point and a half, the Civil Service Commission looks into the case very carefully. What took place here? The Post Office Department, for some reason-I will let Senators judge what that reason was-wanted to appoint Henry E. Altig.

The experience of the nominee, Henry E. Altig is as follows: Education, eighth grade graduate. Business experience: 1904 to 1914, odd jobs and farm laborer; 1914 to 1916, store clerk and post-office clerk: 1916 to 1921, farming: from the 22d day of June to the 23d day of April next, oil truck driver; from 1927 to 1933 he operated his own dray line. Senators can imagine what a great businessman he was and how competent he was, when they find in the report that the dray line consisted of one horse and one wagon. From 1933 to 1941 he was maintenance patrolman. On the 19th day of June he was a laborer in the county on AAA.

Now we come to the rating. I want Senators to remember that under the resolution submitted by the senior Senator from Illinois last night he wants the committee discharged from further consideration of the nomination. What does the report show? The rating officer and reviewing officer concurred in a rating of 75 on experience, but later graded 80 on a new experience and fitness report, with a notation "See memo by L. A. Moyer August 5, 1941, R. M. R."

Mr. President, a very significant thing happened. Our committee wanted to get those files, and we could not get them. They refused to give them to us. We sent for them, sent a man to get the files for the committee, but we could not get them

Then what happened? The record shows further that Mr. Altig received a rating of 72.5 on a written examination, giving him an average rating of 73.75, a 5-point upgrading, which changed his average rating to 76.25. I have here the original sheets.

But it was not enough to grade up Mr. Altig. I state the simple fact that the is a brother-in-law of the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois. He was rated up 5 points, and a veteran was rated down 10 points. That is the record; here it is.

I want to find out whether among the 38 nominations in Illinois there are cases of other veterans who were marked down and other persons who were marked up-persons who possibly had a little influence.

Mr. President, I may not be chairman of this committee very long; but so long as I am chairman of the committee, it is going to be honestly run, let the chips fall where they may, let me make enemies where I may. The committee is going to be honestly run, and run in an open and aboveboard fashion. When we find the Department refusing to give the record to a properly constituted committee of the Senate of United States. the question arises, whom are they trying to protect? Why were they covering up?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator from North Dakota-

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for any purpose whatsoever.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I rise again to a question of personal privilege. The Senator from North Dakota asked whom were they trying to cover up or protect; and the Senator cannot refer to anyone except the Senator from Illinois in that statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I cannot stand here and take these innuendoes much longer. If I do not get some protection from someone. I shall take the matter in my own hands.

Mr. LANGER. The Senator is perfectly welcome to do so any time he

Mr. President, I wish to say that I have the floor, and I wish to proceed quietly. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota will suspend while the Chair makes a statement.

In the opinion of the Chair, the statement made by the Senator from North Dakota was not a transgression on either of the two rules which heretofore have been mentioned, for violation of which a Senator can be taken off the floor.

The remark as to who might be responsible for the matter referred to could obviously apply to someone in the Post Office Department or anywhere else in the Government.

For that reason, it is the opinion of the Chair that the remark made by the Senator from North Dakota does not violate either of the two rules referred to.

The Senator from North Dakota may proceed.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I come now to another post office. I repeat, that in order to take care of Mr. Altig. after the examination had been taken and after the papers had been marked, Mr. Altig was marked up five points, and a veteran was marked down 10 points; and that action was based-it was the only thing on which they could base iton business experience. After the veteran was first ranked up, he was later lowered 10 points.

Now we come to another post office. This is the post office in the town of Abingdon, Ill. The postmaster is J. Wilcy Lucas, I believe his name is.

Mr. LUCAS. His name is J. Wiley Lucas.

Mr. LANGER. Very well; J. Wiley Lucas

In this case an examination for postmaster, second-class office, was held in December 1944. There being no eligible, a second examination was held in March 1946. Only one eligible was secured, the acting postmaster, with a rating of 81.70, including 10 points for being a veteran's widow. She was appointed in that town-which was not Abingdon; but in Abingdon an examination for postmaster, second-class office, was held in August 1945. That examination produced one eligible. The candidate, Mr. Wiley Lucas, made a grade of 51.25 on the written test, and he was originally rated 85.21 on experience and suitability, which gave him an average of 68.23not enough for eligibility. He was later rerated upward by reviewing officers to 89.2 percent on experience and suitability, thus making him eligible with an average of 70.23. Of course, 70 was required to pass.

He was then nominated, and subsequently was confirmed by the Senate. You see, Mr. President, when one eligible failed, no examination was called, although the rules and regulations provide that in such case an examination shall be called. This man failed. But instead of calling a new examination, they rated him upward, so that they could qualify him. Mr. President, I call attention to the fact that that was in 1945, about the time when the veterans were coming

I have another case in Illinois. This is from the town of Sutter, Ill. On the 3d day of March, at Sutter, Mr. Melvin W. Shrader received from the Post Office Department a letter signed by Mr. J. M. Donaldson, First Assistant Postmaster General, and now the Postmaster General. The letter is as follows:

MARCH 3, 1947 DEAR MR. SHRADER: Your name has been certified as eligible for appointment as postmaster, and your appointment is now under consideration. Before any further action can be taken, it will be necessary that the inclosed medical certificate, Form 2413, be executed by any doctor of medicine who is duly licensed to practice under the laws of the several States, the District of Columbia, or the Territories or possessions of the United States. When completed, it should be returned to this Bureau for submission to the Civil Service Commission.

Please give this matter your prompt attention and see that the necessary form is prop-erly executed and returned to this Bureau at the earliest practicable date. Further consideration cannot be given your appointment until your medical certificate is approved.

Sincerely yours,

J. M. DONALDSON.

On March 26, 1947, he received another letter, from the office of the Postmaster General, as follows:

Mr. MELVIN W. SHRADER,

Sutter, Ill.

DEAR MR. SHRADER: It is a pleasure to notify you of your appointment as postmaster of the above-named fourth-class office. are without authority to enter upon your new duties until your commission has been issued. This will be done when you have had the enclosed bond and oath of office properly executed and returned to the First Assistant Postmaster General. The enclosed Form 905. oath of office, must be executed by the person you appoint your assistant, after you receive your commission. This form should be carefully filed in your office.

I congratulate you-

Mr. President, this letter was from the Postmaster General, Robert Hannegan, to Mr. Shraderupon your appointment. It of course carries with it not only an opportunity for public service, but an obligation to adhere strictly and faithfully to the postal laws and regulations of the Department.

ROBERT HANNEGAN Postmaster General.

On March 20 he received another letter. This is from J. L. Bridwell, superintendent of the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Government Service Bureau, 1616 Eye Street NW., Washington, D. C. It reads:

DEAR MR. SHRADER: Your appointment as postmaster has come to our attention and we take this opportunity to congratulate you and wish you a long and a successful career.

On April 29, 1947, he received another letter. This is from Mr. Donaldson, then First Assistant Postmaster General:

Please disregard this Bureau's letter of April 26, 1947, informing you that you had been appointed postmaster at Sutter, as the Department wishes to make a selection from a more complete register of eligibles. The Civil Service Commission has been requested to hold another open competitive examination for postmaster.

You see, Mr. President, Mr. Shrader was a Republican. After he had been appointed, after he had been congratulated by the Post Office Department, and after he had been wished a long term of service at Sutter, Ill., this Republican could not take office. They fired him even before he could qualify. Of course, he took the matter up with his Congress-

I hold in my hand a letter which I am going to read. Why is it important? I call attention to the time J. Wiley Lucas was raised from 68 and a fraction up to 70.23 so he could qualify. There was no talk then of having an examination so there would be three eligibles. What do we find here, when a Republican had been appointed, where a bond had been sent him for execution, and where he had been congratulated by the Post Office Department? The letter is from the Congressman:

This is in reply to your letter of recent date regarding the shoddy treatment of Mr. W. Shrader. I took this matter up immediately with members of the Post Offices and Post Roads Committee-that is, the Republican members—and they informed me it would not hurt, neither would it help, for me to go down and make a fight on this case.

It would not help him any.

However, I did go down to the Post Office Department yesterday afternoon and spent some time with Mr. Uttley, who is executive assistant to Mr. J. M. Donaldson, First As-sistant Postmaster General.

Parenthetically, I may say Mr. Donaldson at present is Postmaster General.

The answer given me was, under the law-

I refer your mind back, Mr. President, to Mr. Uttley, now.

The answer given me was that under the law appointments may be made from any of the first three certified by the Civil Service Commission, that in event there are not three qualified, the Postmaster General may the appointee even though there be but one or two that qualified, unless someone raises the point and demands that there must be three certified. Mr. Shrader, stood first, Mrs. Lemons, second, in this case. Then an unusual thing happened. My recommenda-tion of Mr. Shrader had been received. Someone in the office failed to check my recommendation for party affiliation.

But, Mr. President, in 1938 we were told if Congress would only pass the Civil Service Act-

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I yield for a question. Mr. FERGUSON. I wonder whether the Senator from North Dakota would grant unanimous consent to permit the naming of conferees, with the understanding that he would not thereby lose the floor.

Mr. LANGER. I regret I cannot do that. I am sorry.

Mr. FERGUSON. That is, would the Senator yield on the condition that he might proceed immediately thereafter? It would only take one sentence to name the conferees. The Senator could then proceed.

Mr. LANGER. I very, very much regret that I cannot yield.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, we can not hear. If the Senators would speak a little louder, we would appreciate it. We are interested in the proceedings of the Senate as well as Members on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. FERGUSON. The Senator declines to grant the consent?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declined to grant the consent.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, as I was saying a moment ago, when the civil service law involving postmasters was passed, the most eloquent speech, according to the RECORD at least-I was not here at that time-certainly the most eloquent speech according to the RECORD was delivered by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming (Mr. O'MAHONEY). The Senator, before becoming United States Senator from Wyoming, had been First Assistant Postmaster General. At that time it was promised us, or rather promised to the people of the country, that if the Congress would pass the civil service law and place postmasters under it, it would take the postmasters out of politics.

Mr. President, if you read the speech by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming you will observe that he covered paragraph after paragraph in his statement to show what it would mean to the Post Office Department if only postmasters were taken out of politics, and if the Post Office, the largest business in the world, were only taken out of politics. In 1938 the civil service law was passed. Yet we have States today where the investigation shows that not a single Republican was appointed. I can cite a town where three men were high on the list, so certified by the Civil Service Commission. They were all three Republicans. Not one of the three was appointed. Another examination was called for. The three high men again were Republicans. No one of the three was appointed.

Finally, among the three eligibles there was one Democrat. That Democrat was appointed.

As I say, Mr. President, I speak only from the record. I want to make it clear that when the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas] moved to discharge the committee last evening, making the statements which he did, saying by innuendo that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service was discriminating against veterans, there were some other Illinois post offices to which I wanted to refer. But I shall not discuss them tonight. I may discuss them later, because I gather from what the distinguished Senator from Illinois said tonight that he might have something to say when I have concluded. So I shall save those post offices until later.

I want to take up the matter of the draft law. I wonder whether the Members of the Senate really comprehend the feeling of the people of the United States with regard to the measure which we are discussing.

I have here, out of thousands of letters I have received, certain ones from my home State of North Dakota. I want to show the Senate how church after church has written me protesting the passage of the bill. Here is a letter from the Northern District Conference of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, dated June 9, 1947. That was only a week ago, plus a year. Mr. President, during all this time the attitude of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America has not changed. The letter is as follows:

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: At the recent session of the Northern District Conference of Mennonites, comprising the more than 5,000 members of some 30 churches in South Dakota, North Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Montana, it was unanimously resolved to make known to the congressional delegations from these respective States that we are definitely opposed to the plan of peace-time military conscription as recommended by the President's special commission on this subject.

It seems to us that this is so utterly foreign to what we in this country have always felt was our greatest weapon, namely a righteous course in international affairs. It would seem now that we will leave this glorious heritage and substitute for it a policy which will be based on might of arms. Countries which have rested largely on force to maintain themselves in the family of nations have usually fallen while we have prospered. It is our feeling that if our country follows a basically Christian course in the family of nations with emphasis upon fair play, equal opportunity, and righteousness, it will not be necessary to follow in the footsteps of the nations that we so recently destroyed because they followed a course based on selfishness and force.

We trust that you may do what you can to keep our country from this threat to real freedom.

Very sincerely,

WILLARD K. CLASSEN,
President of the Conference.
HENRY M. HARDER,
Secretary of the Conference.

Mr. President, I have some other letters here. Here is one from a Methodist church. It was written on May 20, 1947, on the letterhead of the Commission on World Peace of the Methodist Church, Chicago, Ill. The letter says:

Dear Senator Langer: The universal training proposals must not pass. I am convinced that the American people are opposed to the adoption of peace-time compulsory military training, even when labeled "universal training." We find a deepening conviction that universal military training legislation should not be adopted.

The Methodist Church officially is solidly opposed to the adoption of any form of peacetime compulsory military training, as evidenced by the official actions of various Methodist bodies. The Council of Bishops of the Methodist Church—

Just listen to this, Mr. President-

The Council of Bishops of the Methodist Church, with only one abstaining vote among the 33 active bishops—

Thirty-two to one, Mr. President-

adopted a strong and impressive statement in opposition to any form of such universal training. The commission on world peace reaffirmed its opposition at its last meeting. The annual conferences have become most outspoken in opposition. Quite recently the board of education of the Methodist Church, embracing the university and college division, and also the Division of Religious Education, took an incisive and forceful stand in opposition to any form of universal military training. The National Conference of the Methodist Youth Fellowship took action at its last meeting, reaffirming its former opposition, as did the Woman's Division of Christian Service.

All of the above agencies are officially elected by the church, and contain a cross section of all viewpoints.

Let us see who the members of this commission are and whence they come. I will not give the names—well, I might as well read them, to show the outstanding character of these persons.

The members of the commission are: Rev. Earle A. Baker, Cedar Falls, Iowa; Bishop Robert N. Brooks, New Orleans, La.; Rev. Lawrence C. Campbell, Meade, Kans.; Rev. George W. Carter, New Orleans, La.; Rev. Mark Depp, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Miss Georgia Harkness, Evanston, Ill.; Rev. John W. Haywood, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. Edmund Heinsohn, Austin, Tex.; Mr. Harry N. Holmes, Jackson Heights, N. Y.; Mr. Tracey K. Jones, Syracuse, N. Y.; Rev. G. Ray

Jordan, Atlanta, Ga.; Bishop William C. Martin, Topeka, Kans.; Mrs. James McGiffin, San Francisco, Calif.; Isaac Morris, Birmingham, Ala.; Rev. William F. Quillian, Atlanta, Ga.; Mr. George S. Register, Bismarck, N. Dak.; Mr. Frank D. Slutz, Dayton, Ohio; Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, New York, N. Y.; Rev. Willard E. Stanton, Moscow, Idaho; Mr. Robert C. Tatum, Beaumont, Tex.; Rev. Ernest F. Tittle, Evanston, Ill.; Rev. Paul Worley, Johnson City, Tenn.; and Mrs. Frank L. Wright, Webster Grove, Mo. There are 33 of them, most of them Methodist Bishops, and the vote against the bill was 32 to 1.

The last sentence of the letter is:

Universal military training proposals should be decisively defeated. Assuring you of our full support in every effort to defeat universal military training proposals, I am, Sincerely yours,

CHARLES H. Boss, Jr., Executive Secretary.

Mr. President, military training might be justifiable in certain cases. I wish to call the attention of all the Members of the Senate—there are so many of them sitting here before me [laughter]—to some of the votes they cast on the amendments proposed to the bill.

Before I do that I wish to make one statement. If there be any Senator who in the very, very, very back part of his cerebellum believes that the rule should be changed which permits even one Senator to give his viewpoint, I call to that Senator's attention the fact, if he wishes to change the rules of the Senate, about which we have heard much tonight, to think of our projecting ourselves 50 years from tonight, and if we then had here in the Senate a reverse condition, where an equal number of Senators wanted to pass a law such as is the law in Sweden today, providing that, in addition to taxes, there should be capital levy of 10 percent, every last Senator disagreeing with the capital levy of 10 percent would be exercising the privilege, under the rules, I am exercising tonight. They would not be in any hurry to adjourn, they would not be criticising the rule. They would be here trying to keep the majority of the Senate from passing a law to levy a capital tax to take 10 percent of what a man has, as is done in Sweden today.

So, Mr. President, I am not at all concerned when some Senators tonight say, "We have a lot of business to do. We are in a hurry to get it done", because what does the La Follette-Monroney Act say, the law which this body adopted only a year and a half ago? Does that say anything about adjourning on the 19th day of June? No, Mr. President, we could run on for over a month yet and still be acting in accord with the La Follette-Monroney Reorganization Act.

If there be any criticism because some of us may choose to talk, I very respectfully and humbly say that the criticism is not to be directed against any of us who may care to talk, but rather to the leadership which says we are going to quit on the 19th day of June. Mr. President, If you hired a man and paid him to work for you and paid him $15,000 a year, how long would you keep it up if the man quit work on the 19th day of June? [Laughter in the galleries.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The occupants of the galleries must maintain order. Under the rules of the Senate no demonstrations of approval or disapproval are in order. Unless the occupants of the galleries maintain order, the Chair will have to have the galleries cleared.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I go back to the amendments which were proposed to the bill. I offered an amendment, first, providing that in the case of contracts with our Government, the men who made the contracts should not make a greater profit than 10 percent on the capital invested. Is not 10 percent enough? At the time I offered that amendment I showed that in the manufacture of boilers and some other articles the war profiteers made a profit of 2,491 percent. For every dollar they made before the war, during the war they made $2,491.

When I tried to limit the profit to 10 percent, I said, "Oh, well, $249 is enough for every dollar that is invested," but I could not even get a yea-and-nay vote.

The distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] offered an amendment to this very bill—and this time we got a record vote, and I am going to take great satisfaction in reading that vote upon the floor of the Senate as the years go by, when some Senator very piously rises and says that somebody is making too much money in war profits. Eleven Senators-I remember the numbervoted to tax war profits 100 percent, 11 Senators voted for the amendment offered by the distinguished junior Senator from Texas. Senators are perfectly willing to draft the last drop of blood out of the body of a young boy 19 or 20 or 21 years old, but, oh, we must not tax profits. Let them go ahead and make 2,491 percent. In the list I read, Mr. President, time after time it appeared that there were profits of as much as 500 percent, 600 percent, 700 percent, and there were some profits of over 1,000 percent. Yet, Mr. President, amendment was defeated. I think every taxpayer in the United States has the right to know that that amendment was defeated, and who voted for it and who voted against it.

One of the great things we treasure in this democratic country of ours is that what we do here is an open book. For example, a few years ago, when the Senate confirmed a nominee or failed to confirm a nominee, action was taken on the nominee in executive session. That practice was changed because the people wanted to know which Senators voted for confirmation and which Senators voted against confirmation.

Mr. President, I want to speak of churches, church organizations, and the very fine men who are at the head of them, bishops, clergymen, who are opposed to the bill almost unanimously. I have in my hand a letter from Rev. J. F. Simpson, President, Dakota Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, which comprises the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Wyoming. His letter to me is dated April 6, 1948, and is as follows:

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: We appreciate the great task which is yours in bringing before Congress proper recommendations concerning the Selective Draft during this time of world peril.

Am sure you will agree with me when I say that our Nation has a great moral and spiritual problem and unless it is solved we will not be able to successfully wage another war.

The ranks of the Ministry have been depleted for years to come because of the loss of our young men during the recent war.

Our church had a conference of all its general and Conference leaders last week in Marion, Ind., and considered the above question seriously and took official action requesting our Congressmen to give serious consideration for the exemption of young men from Military service who are preparing for the Ministry, also unordained ministers.

Our church and other churches were loyal in releasing key men for the work of chap-lains during the recent war. This has caused a serious shortage of pastors.

We will appreciate your influence and efforts to be used in securing proper exemptions for theological students, so that the Church and Nation can continue to have spiritual leadership.

Yet, Mr. President, when in the House the effort was made to exempt doctors and dentists, a terrible fight resulted. I have received letters from such men as the head of one of the leading clinics of North Dakota, with headquarters at Grand Forks, N. Dak., protesting the inclusion in the original draft bill of doctors. I also have received letters on the subject from some of the leading dentists in our State. I have letters from other churchmen.

I have one from Mr. Gordon W. Hewes of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology of the University of North Dakota, located at Grand Forks. say that the University of North Dakota, located at Grand Forks, is one of the great institutions of the country. Seventy-two miles south of it is the State College of North Dakota, formerly known as the Agricultural College. Those two institutions, Mr. President, have done a marvelous job not only for the United States but for the entire world.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I would rather not yield at this time. I might do so a little later.

Mr. FERGUSON. Will the Senator vield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I prefer not to yield at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator prefers not to yield.

Mr. LANGER. In the State college there is a man named E. F. Ladd, who is connected with the Pure Food Commission. That man found, for example, that if one bought a can of stuff there was no way of knowing what was inside of it. For example, in a can of apricots there might be found some fluid which was entirely foreign to apricots. So Mr. Ladd obtained the passage in our State of a law requiring the labeling of all cans containing food and other products so that the purchaser could tell to the tiniest fraction all the components of whatever was contained in the can, Those who opposed the law took the case all the way to the Supreme Court of the United States, claiming the law was unconstitutional. Mr. Ladd made so fine a record in the development of paint that if a man in Michigan now buys paint, he will find on the outside of the can of paint a label giving the exact description of the contents. That is due to the efforts of E. F. Ladd.

Mr. President, he was such a distinguished man in his field that when the League of Nations met, officials of the League insisted that Mr. Ladd, of that school at Fargo, N. Dak., be one of the technical advisers, and later they selected him to draw up all the pure food regulations which they were going to place in effect in all the countries which belonged to the League of Nations.

What kind of men has the University of North Dakota, located at Grand Forks, of which Mr. Hewes is head of the department of sociology and anthropology, sent out to help America? In World War I when there was a scandal in the buying of millions of dollars worth of material for the Navy, President Wilson looked all over the United States and finally picked John Hancock, from a little town called Amarado, which perhaps at the outside at that time had 150 inhabitants, and he placed Mr. Hancock in charge of the buying of $2,000,000,000 worth of property for the Navy. He did such a good job that the Army also appointed him to do the same work, and he did buying for the Army. He is one of the few men who today holds rank in both the Army and the Navy of the United States. Today he is a partner of Lehman Bros. of New York, and one of the great advisers of Barney Baruch, the man who acted as adviser to those engaged in the development of atomic energy. Mr. Hancock is a graduate of the University of North Dakota.

President Roosevelt closed the banks and declared a bank holiday, and overnight every single bank in the country was closed except the Bank of North Dakota. I wonder why that bank remained open, of all the other banks in the United States. It was at that time decided that a man was needed who could take care of the closed banks without a scandal arising in connection with his work. So Mr. J. F. T. O'Conner of Grand Forks, where the State university is located, was chosen by President Roosevelt to be comptroller of the currency. I well remember when I was in Detroit talking to some of the officials of the Ford organization. They said they had $164,000,000 in one bank that was closed, and they said that Mr. O'Conner had operated that bank so well that there was not even the slightest claim of any wrong or fraud or corruption in connection with it. He is a graduate of the University of North Dakota.

Mr. President, if today one of the Members of this body should become ill and go to Rochester, Minn., to the Mayo Brothers Clinic, and if after he had been there for weeks and no one knew what was wrong with him, the final, ultimate decision, would rest with a doctor born on a farm in North Dakota, a graduate of the University of North Dakota.

Certainly people who live in Chicago have heard of the Murphy Hospital. young farm boy born 7 miles east of Casselton, at a town called Mapleton, went to Chicago. After going to the university he became a doctor. He per-formed the first operation for appendicitis, and is the inventor of the Murphy button, which doctors use all over the country when they perform operations for appendicitis. It has been responsible for saving thousands of lives.

What does the head of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology have to say? His letter is dated March 29, 1948, and reads as follows:

University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, March 29, 1948. Hon. WILLIAM LANGER, United States Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I have been told that you have already more or less gone on record against UMT and revival of selective service. This is merely to help you hold fast to this position in the face of the overwhelming force of war hysteria and jingoism that now seems to engulf the country. Frankly, before coming to North Dakota, I had been frequently puzzled by the vague political reports I had heard about this State and its curious progressive-conservative approach to many problems—local, national, and inter-national. Having lived here for 2 years, and having worked and traveled about in various parts of the State, I am beginning to understand the reasons for the political behavior of this State, and of your actions in representing it

When I lived in California, and when I lived in Washington, D. C., and in Philadelphia, I had assumed that the reason for the so-called isolationism of North Dakota (along with certain other predominantly rural midwestern States) stemmed from what I assumed to be rural ignorance and inability of people in this remote area to perceive the relationships between national and international affairs which more favorably situated urban populations (on the Atlantic coast, e. g.) realized. I now know that the relative immunity of these people to hysterical propaganda is based on intelligence and a kind of realism which is often lacking in urban, industrial areas. Perhaps it simply comes from an occupation which permits the individual to think something out, reasonably and quietly, free from the incessant bombardment of headlines, slogans, and appeals to the emotions.

I was very impressed recently, here in Grand Forks, by two large meetings, one at which several ministers and a physicist (Dr. D. Q. Posin of Fargo), spoke on the menace of a future war to all civilization, and the other a meeting on this campus, to debate UMT-selective service. The questions from the floor were so reasonable, the interchange of opinion so sane, compared to the ranting of the radio commentators and so-called analysts, who predict war in 24 hours every night.

I am also very distressed by the way in which religion has somehow intruded in a big way into discussions of our foreign policy and international problems. If we must fight the Soviet Union because their state is not Christian, why not, just as reasonably, advocate war against the Arab nations, which are certainly, and have been for some 1,400 years, far more diligently anti-Christian than the Russians. To inject religion into a political, economic, and possibly military seems to me to place international relations back 400 or more years, when the nations of Europe were engaged in almost incessant incessant wars, in the name of Christian faith.

Finally, you might be amused to learn that the Catechetical Guild of St. Paul, Minn., in a recently published comic-book presenta-tion entitled "Is This Tomorrow" (or some such title), purporting to show the way in which the Communists would take over America, contains an unflattering reference to the State of North Dakota. The booklet, distributed widely on newsstands, selling for 10 cents, uses the simplified, appeal-to-the-emotions-of-a-child approach, showing communist troopers (wearing United States Army uniforms) at work, etc. In one strip, civilians are shown being herded pell-mell into a line of cattle cars by United States Army troops (somehow taken over by the Reds). One victim says, as he is manhandled into a cattle car:

"They're taking us to North Dakota."
"Yes, to work on a dam for 5 years," says another.

This childish form of propaganda has had a wide distribution. I suppose it is necessary to make North Dakota the equivalent of Yakutsk or Kamchatka, in telling Americans what is in store for us if we do not go right down the line with the Administration's anticommunist drive.

Sincerely yours,

GORDON W. HEWES,
Department of Sociology and Anthropology.

Mr. President, I want to take up some other letters which I have received from North Dakota, so that the Senate may judge just exactly what kind of people are opposed to universal military training. Here is a letter from the president of a State college in North Dakota, the State Normal and Industrial College at Ellendale, N. Dak., which is only a short distance north of the State of South Dakota. The letter is written by J. C. McMillan, president of the college. He says:

Dear Senator Langer: We at the State Normal and Industrial College note with no little concern the continued insistence of the President and some military pressure groups, that compulsory military training legislation be enacted at this session of Congress. What arguments they have presented have been shown to be faulty, irrelevant, inaccurate, or downright misrepresentations, yet they are continually on the radio and in the press.

Dr. McMillan, who signed this letter as president of the State Normal and Industrial College at Ellendale, N. Dak., at the time he wrote the letter, on March 11, 1948, did not realize that the Marshall Plan and universal military training went hand in hand. If he had known about it, if he had known that the New York Tribune, the New York Times, Fortune, News Week, Time Magazine, Life and some radio stations were going to get $10,000,000 out of the Marshall Plan, perhaps he would not have wondered, because he says, "Yet they are continually on the radio and in the press."

President McMillan continues:

The proponents of C. M. T., in other words, are making themselves heard. The opponents are not. That puts a lot of pressure on you men in Washington.

This letter is written you from the faculty council of the State Normal and Industrial College to assure you that the faculty of this college is 100 percent diametrically opposed to compulsory military training and just as strongly in favor of a powerful Army, Navy, and Air Force. We are vitally interested in C. M. T. and will be glad to assist you in any way we can to keep it off the statutes. Let's not surrender to the system our forefathers came to these shore to avoid.

Yours very truly,
J. C. McMillan,
President, Chairman, Faculty Council.

Mr. President, it does not worry me to keep the Senate up at night. It will do Senators good.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. Mr. FERGUSON. Will the Senator yield merely for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator decines to yield.

Mr. LANGER. The soldier boys who are going to be drafted if this bill becomes law, as their brothers did a few months ago, will spend days, weeks, and months away from home.

Mr. President, in some countries when a man is elected to be judge, he is put in jail before he is allowed to serve as judge; and sometimes he is kept in jail a week, or sometimes a month, so that he can actually experience what it means to be in jail, before he sentences someone to go there. A letter I read a short time ago suggests that it might be a good idea for the Senators who favor a draft law to draft themselves for a short time and have the actual experience.

Mr. President, it is only a few months ago that I received from the president of one of the North Dakota colleges a pamphlet, which had been sent to that college, stating that in Knoxville, Tenn., a universal military training college had been in operation for 18 months; and that pamphlet, which actually was sent to students at that college in North Dakota, contained statements trying to persuade the students of that North Dakota college to leave there and go to the universal military college at Knoxville,

Mr. President, as perhaps you know, I believe in taking direct action; and because we have authority in our committee to investigate personnel, I subpenaed before our Civil Service Committee the men who were in charge of that school or college in Tennessee. Lo and behold, they not only appeared before the committee, but they admitted that they had sent out 5,000 of those pamphlets every week; and they were only similar to other pamphlets which were gotten out in other parts of the United States—pamphlets advocating universal military training.

They admitted that they had been doing that for 18 months. They admitted that the War Department had established this college; and they admitted that they had had one graduating class of 600, and that 6 months later they had had another graduating class of 600, and that in a few days after they were testifying they would have another graduating class of 600—or a total, Mr. President, of 1,800 graduates of a universal military training college, and yet here in the Senate we had not passed a law providing for such a college.

I tried to find out who was responsible. The answer was always the same: Dwight Eisenhower had issued an order directing that the college be established. Testimony to that effect was taken under oath, and transcripts of the testimony are in the files of our committee.

Mr. President, I hold in my hand a letter from the Federated Church of Grand Forks, N. Dak. I shall read the third paragraph of the letter:

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: . .

I hope that you will maintain opposition to the move toward the restoring of Selective Service as well as continue your opposition to universal military training.

Cordially yours,

HUBERT N. DUKES.

He is a minister of the Gospel.

Mr. President, I wish to read other letters from churches.

I now hold in my hand a letter from the pastor of the Methodist Church at Forest River, N. Dak., the Rev. George G. Finlay. He writes the letter from 1030 Plum Ave., Grand Forks, N. Dak. His letter reads in part as follows:

MARCH 24, 1948.

Dear Senator: We have been considerably perturbed here by a press release of last evening in the Grand Forks Herald concerning a meeting of Senator Gurney's committee on the armed services. It was indicated that the committee is presently overwhelmingly in favor of a "limited" draft and of universal military training. Such action seems to me a complete reversal of a traditional American policy, which has been cherished as a safeguard of a democratic attitude and way of life. To reverse a policy so well grounded in reason and history is not a matter of light moment nor for the counsel of hysteria. Can the Senate not provide full and open hearings on this matter before taking decisive action?

Later in the letter he says:

The Farmer's Union and the Grange have both strongly opposed universal military training. My own church, the Methodist Church, has opposed it. Several Roman Catholic bishops have registered their opposition.

Mr. President, I now hold in my hand a letter from the president of the North Dakota Farmer's Union. The letter, which is dated March 22, 1948, reads as follows:

March 22, 1948.

During my attendance at the annual stockholders meeting of the Farmers Union Central Exchange in St. Paul last week, I listened to the President's address delivered in person to the joint session of Congress. Since that time I have carefully analyzed the text of his address as it was carried in the press. To say that I was shocked at Mr. Truman's interpretation of national emergency and his proposals for action by the Congress is putting it mildly indeed.

We completely disapprove President Truman's interpretation of national emergency and oppose both proposals for universal military training and re-enactment of Selective Service. We are for both rehabilitation and emergency aid for Europe, but we are firmly persuaded that such aid as may be made available by the Congress should be administered through the United Nations and not by unilateral action.

I congratulate you upon your Senate vote on this question. Our blind stampede down the road toward world war III must, in some way, be halted. It is our judgment that the United Nations organization still provides the only basis of hope for world peace. Russia, through her intemperate use of the veto and the United States through by-passing UN with unilateral action, as witness the Greek-Turkish program and the proposed Marshall plan, and our reversal of positions already taken, as witness the question of Palestine partition, has already done much to scuttle the United Nations organization.

We urge you to take every possible opportunity to insist that our Nation use its strength, resources and influence to lead the world towards a strong United Nations and universal disarmament.

With best personal regards.

Sincerely yours,
NORTH DAKOTA FARMERS UNION,
GLENN J. TALBOTT, President.

When a large fine farm organization like that is calling upon one of the two Senators of the State, saying "We urge you to do everything you practically can; when the churches of every denomination in the State state that they are opposed to the bill now under consideration in the Senate, and when, as I shall later read, veterans of World War II are opposed to universal military training, asking me as 1 of the 96 Senators to do everything I possibly can to prevent enactment of the bill, then of course I, as their representative here, naturally will comply with their request to present to every member of this body the fact that the churches of North Dakota and the large farm organization of that State want me to so inform each of the Senators on the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. I regret I cannot yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. LANGER. Naturally those groups want to have their views known to those sitting upon the floor of the Senate tonight.

Mr. President, I have here a letter from a man who was formerly one of the officers of the Farmers Union of South Dakota, the State president. I believe the Farmers Union of South Dakota perhaps has the second largest group of members in that section of the country, being second only to North Dakota.

Jerome H. Evanson, President of the Jamestown Farmers Union Federal Credit Union, a man who used to reside in South Dakota sent me on January 30, 1948, the following resolution:

At the annual members' meeting of the Jamestown Farmers Union Federal Credit Union, composed of 300 members, held January 30, 1948, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas the military is becoming more and more influential in governmental affairs, thereby tending to dominate the civilian life of this country; and

"Whereas we feel that the adoption of peacetime military conscription, would extend that power, and endanger the basic rights of free American citizens: Now, therefore, be it fore, be it "Resolved, That we vigorously oppose House Resolution 4278, and that we mail a copy of this resolution to our Congressmen, Senators, and chairman of the House and Senate Military Affairs Committee."

JEROME H. EVANSON,
President, Jamestown Farmers
Union, Federal Credit Union.

Mr. President, when the head of an organization like that says he is opposed to the measure, and when he says that the 300 members of his organization are likewise opposed to it, I reserve the right to take the judgment of those 300 men against the judgment of two honest men who may be representing the interests of another State, who may yet be mistaken. I feel that a Senator ought to take into consideration the wishes, the feelings, the judgment of the people of the State he represents. Here we have the State president of the Farmers Union, the State president of the credit union making their position known. "Ah!" somebody may say, "they merely sat down at Jamestown and wrote some letters." But, Mr. President, I have here a telegram dated March 20, sent to me from Bowbells, N. Dak., away up in the northwest corner of the State, near Canada, reading as follows:

At a meeting of Farmers Union Local No. 315 sixty members last night voted unanimously to oppose universal military training.

WILLIAM BUTGEREIT, Secretary.

Sixty farmers meet, 60 taxpayers, and they say to me as their Senator, "We are opposed to universal military training."

In my opinion not one person in a thousand recognizes and knows what the Marshall plan and all these other programs have cost their respective localities. I went to the Congressional Library and said, "I want you to estimate for me what the indebtedness will be for every county in my State." We have a county called Cass. My recollection now is that Cass County's share is $20,000,000. There are some counties that I have clearly in mind, and some cities like Towner, N. Dak., with a population of 1,500, whose share is over $436,000. Wabek's share, as I now recollect, is over $1,200,000.

Tomorrow, Mr. President, I shall put in the RECORD exactly what it has cost every county in my State, and what it will cost them, together with what it will cost some of the leading towns.

Here is a letter, Mr. President, from the Episcopal Church in North Dakota. It comes from St. Matthew's Church, Linton, N. Dak., and from Christ Church, Mandan, N. Dak. It is written jointly to the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Young] and myself. I read:

DEAR SIRS: Greetings! To Senator BILL, whom I know personally; and Senator Young whose recent questionnaire to sample people's ideas on public questions I greatly admire.

Mr. President, what was that questionnaire which the junior Senator from North Dakota, prepared and sent out to approximatey 40,000 voters in our State? If there be any Senator upon the floor who thinks that the people are in favor of universal military training, they should see the reports which were returned by the farmers, the laboring men, the small-business men, and the lawyers of North Dakota.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have this letter from Eldred D. Murdoch, Vicar, 205 Sixth Avenue, Northwest, Mandan, N. Dak., printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LINTON, N. DAK., March 17, 1948. Senators Langer and Young, Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIRS: Greetings! To Senator Bill, whom I know personally; and Senator Young whose recent questionnaire to sample peoples' ideas on public questions, I greatly admire.

I write to urge you men to consider carefully the implications behind this proposed universal military training. I am simply appalled by it.

History teaches that every country that resorted to it has failed, gone down sooner or later into defeat, corruption, or lost.

Every country that has taken it on has done so to be prepared so as to have peace, yet it has always been the nation with zeal and no preparation that has vanquished the one with all the guns.

The instigators of this universal training program know that when Laddie is off in a camp pa and ma buy bonds, and get more patriotic and will then back a war. Without son in the camp no politician would dare vote war, but with ma and pa full of pride he would be doing his duty and what was expected of him.

Appropriate a million, since there is end-less sums, and send a hundred thousand mothers to live in or near any Army camp in U. S. A .- have her there Saturday afternoon and evening. Have her knit in the waiting room of a prophylactic station and watch the beardless kids come in until time for her to go to church Sunday a. m. and she would change her mind about how necessary it was to have preparedness. Have her take cookies to the venereal disease wards of the hospitals, have her there at the officer's club to hear the stars-after the radio broadcast is shut off, and to count the empty fifth bottles on the hundred tables and watch the "trained" "invigorated" youth go to the officer's quarters. We could send dad to the Orient and have him see our boys in those places and see the liquor ships hove into port ahead of the milk ship, or even ammunition

Before you vote on any such thing talk to the kids in the colleges, the boys that were there. Talk to the Greeks who have visited Greece since the war, talk to any missionary from China, investigate this thing.

Dr. Pozen of the American Council talked in Bismarck not long ago. He made us feel that all the armies in the world will be of little use comes the next war. It might be an idea to have him address a group of your colleagues. It was really something.

In closing let me say that this seems quite an upset letter, I am upset. I have admired both you men and been proud that neither of you has been led around by party bigwigs or by pressure groups. I know you are investigating this thing too, but I do want you to know that there are some who are terribly against universal military training * * * and this Marshall Plan (if it can be used as a dollar club to make Europeans do what we want them to do politically).

Sincerely,

ELDRED D. MURDOCK,

Vicar.

Mr. LANGER. So we have the Methodist Chuch, the Mennonite Church, the Baptist Church, and the Episcopal Church, who are opposed to universal military training. Now we shall see who else complains.

Mr. President, right across the river from North Dakota is Concordia College, a great Scandinavian school, located at Moorhead, Minn., across the river from Fargo, the largest town in our State. I shall read the first few sentences of the letter:

Peacetime military conscription is contrary to basic American tradition. Years ago Daniel Webster considered it a mockery to speak of conscription in a free country.

Oh, how times have changed! If Daniel Webster were here now he would be called a radical.

In view of this fact, the burden of proof clearly rests on those who would change this long-established tradition.

For your consideration, we respectfully raise the following points:

This letter is from W. E. Lillo, chairman, faculty committee on military conscription. Surely, Mr. President, the Senate will not take the judgment of the military men who make their living out of being in the Army, and say that all these church people of every denomination are wrong, that the members of the faculties of various colleges are mistaken, that the heads of the farm organizations are wrong. The other Senators upon the floor may do so if they want to, but the Senator from North Dakota will not follow them. In the long run, I have found in my experience that usually church people can be pretty much depended upon.

Mr. President, I was talking to the late President Roosevelt one day. I said to the President, "Who really formulated social security? Who really came to you and talked to you about the care of the blind, the physically handicapped, the deaf, the dumb, the crippled? Who helped to figure it out?" He told me that it was a Catholic priest in the city of Washington, Father O'Hara. He said, "He has been of great value in helping to formulate it." He said, "You can always depend upon churchmen. They are not looking for money, honors, or glory. They are out to help the common, ordinary man in the rank and file of this life.' Later on I had the pleasure of meeting Father O'Hara. To my surprise, I found he had been in every State in the United States. He has worked, after he became a priest, 7 weeks in the harvest fields of North Dakota. I found that he had gone West, out into the fruit country in Idaho, over at Wenatchee, picking apples in the State of Washington. He came back here after that trip and helped to write the social security laws of the United States. So when Concordia College, that fine Lutheran institution, joins the Episcopal Church, the Baptist Church, and the Methodist Church of my State, and I receive a letter from the chairman of the faculty committee on military conscription, of the leading Norwegian school in the Northwest, I pay attention to it, Mr. President, because I have found in my experience that you can rely upon such persons. They are not politicians looking for votes. They are not trying to make a lot of money. They are not trying to ingratiate themselves. They are men who are ministers of the gospel.

The letter refers to what was said years ago by Daniel Webster. Daniel Webster used to occupy this desk. He considered it a mockery to speak of conscription in a free country. I wish that Daniel Webster were here today.

The faculty of Concordia College says: We respectfully raise the following points: 1. We believe that the American way—the voluntary way—of maintaining our armed forces has not been fully tried.

Mr. President, whether you and the other Senators believe it or not, that is the feeling of the average American wherever I have been, that the Army has not fully tried the voluntary system, and here the faculty of Concordia College say so. Be it true or false, the fact is that today that is what the average American believes, and that is what I believe. No one can go through the questions that have been asked of the average GI and come to any other conclusion.

This is what the faculty of the great Norwegian school of the Northwest says:

A. The Army deliberately lifted its passing grade from 70 to 80 in the Army general classification test. Yet, General Eisenhower testified that the grade could be lowered to 70. Why did the Army want to discourage enlist-ments if it is short of men?

Mr. President, these men are not halfwitted, these men are not foolish, these men demand that they be shown the same as any American taxpayer has the right to be shown whether or not a law is correct. So they say: .

B. In 1945 and 1946 the Army accepted enlistments for 18 months and reenlistments for 1 year. There were more than 150,000 recruits. Today the Army insists on longer enlistment. Why is it doing this if it is short of men?

It has been asserted that the Army is definitely limiting the number of Negro re-cuits. If this position is true, why is the Army doing this if it is short of men?

D. In Europe are millions of splendid young men who would be glad of the opportunity to serve in the American Army of Occupa-tion. Such a plan has been proposed by Senator Lodge. The Army has made no move to get behind such a proposal. Why this attitude if the Army is short of men?

E. Both the Navy and the Air Force have testified that they can get the men they need without conscription. Only the Army insists that it must use totalitarian methods in order to get men. Why not try American methods? If we want steel we pay the price that will produce steel. If we need oil we pay the price that will produce oil.

Mind you, this is from the faculty of this Norwegian college in the northwest, Concordia College, in the State of Minnesota. This faculty is not being fooled. They say:

If we need oil we pay the price that will produce oil. If we need men why not offer the incentives that will supply men? Is the Army hostile to the American way?

F. Common sense suggests that in tomorrow's war the Air Force would be the line of first defense; the Navy would be second; and huge land armies would be of least im-portance. Should we violate a basic American principle in order to bolster the least important part of our defense system?

2. We recommend that every young man who volunteers for military service be given the full benefit of the GI bill of rights. We urge that human beings be considered just as important as material goods; that so long as we do not find it necessary to resort to compulsion in order to get the steel and aluminum we need for defense we ought not to resort to compulsion in order to get the young men we need for defense. Respectfully submitted.

W. E. LILLO, Chairman, Faculty Committee on Military Conscription. CONCORDIA COLLEGE, MOORHEAD, MINN.

Mr. President, we have the Episcopal Church of North Dakota, the Presbyterian Church, the Baptist Church, the Mennonite Church, and all the other churches I have enumerated, calling upon the Senator from North Dakota. We have the leading farm organization, the Farmer's Union, calling upon the Senator from North Dakota. We have the Credit Union calling upon the Senator from North Dakota. Somewhere I have also a letter from the Livestock Association of North Dakota calling upon the Senator from North Dakota to do everything he can to defeat this bill.

Mr. President, how I should like to accommodate some of the Senators so that they could pass some of the bills they want to pass and go home and go to bed, but apparently I cannot do it and at the same time do my duty to those churches, to those farm organizations, to the people of my State, who, as is shown by the letters I have already read, ask me to do everything possible to prevent the passage of this iniquitous, terrible, un-American measure.

I have here another letter dated the 19th day of March, 1948. This letter comes from the western part of North Dakota, adjoining Montana. Only the Yellowstone River lies between Montana and North Dakota. Every time I mention the Yellowstone River or think about it I think of the great sacrifice made by Gen. George Custer when he was sent out to fight the Indians because of the fact that he protested against graft in the Army at Fort Yates, N. Dak., a military post. The privilege of selling goods to Indians for just one year brought graft of $11,000, and because George Custer dared come to Washington and tell the truth, because he dared to come here and insist on the impeachment of the Secretary of War, Belknap, he was sent to his death.

He started out from Fort Lincoln in 1776, and went across the prairies. As he and his men rode away, the flags flying and the bands playing, his little woman, soon to be a widow, was left behind. One has only to read that great book "Boots and Saddles" to realize what a sacrifice the wives of those soldiers made in order that that territory might be opened to settlement. What good did it do? George Custer died. They shipped his body down the Yellowstone River.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield, Mr. President.

Mr. MYERS. My purpose in asking the Senator to yield was to say that it is now 4:10 o'clock in the morning, so that it would be known that I was present in the Senate at this time.

Mr. LANGER. I regret it, but I cannot vield.

George Custer's body was shipped down the Yellowstone River. He and his successors freed the great Northwest.

If there is anyone on the floor of the Senate who has not read the speech which Chief Seattle, the last Indian chief in this country, made when he lived in the State of Washington, he should read it. I quote some words from his speech. He said:

The white men know so much more than the Indians, or they pretend they do; yet the Indians build up their herds of buffaloes to the millions, and the white man comes in and destroys them in a few months.

A few years ago the assessed valuation of North Dakota was $961,000,000. That included every horse, every cow, every sheep, every piece of land and every building. Congress a few days ago gave away under the Marshall plan, $6,000,-000,000. Therefore, Mr. President, I am not so certain that the Senate realizes the great service that George Custer rendered.

I do not want to get away from the churches and the educators.

Mr. President, may I have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAIN in the chair). The Senator's point is well taken. The Senator is entitled to order.

Mr. LANGER. Just to show that not only church people are interested in the subject, I read a petition which was sent to me, as follows:

The Honorable WILLIAM E. LANGER, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We ask that you use your influence against UMT and selective service and in its stead that you redouble your efforts toward securing a workable system of world government.

The petition is dated Fargo, N. Dak., April 6, 1948, and is signed among others by D. Q. Posin, professor, North Dakota State College, and 15 other citizens, some of whom I know. I know Alfred S. Dale, who was State treasurer of my State. Mrs. Alfred Dale was, I believe, head of the women's Democratic organization of Cass County, the largest county, possibly, in the State of North Dakota. She is certainly a brilliant, well-educated, remarkable woman. She is opposed to universal military training and has said so. So, it is not only the church people, it is not only the leaders of the farm organizations but the rank and the file of the people are opposed to universal military training.

I have another petition sent to me by Mrs. Robert Sense, secretary of the Black Butte local, Bowman, N. Dak. I will read the part of the petition which pertains to universal training:

Whereas the United States of America was founded by people who despised the mili-tary system of the Old World, we the undersigned, go on record as opposing universal military training on the grounds that it has been thoroughly discredited in two world wars, and it is outmoded as a means of national defense in consideration of the realization that we are living in an atomic age. Further, it is a betrayal of the traditions of the United States.

We further resolve that this bill is a step toward complete conscripting of American life. Universal military training is the road to war, not peace; it will encourage an arma-ments race. Further, there can be no real security until war itself is abolished.

Further, this bill for universal military training is the exact opposite of education for democracy, as it is widely advertised by its proponents.

I am hard pressed for time, and do not have the time to read the whole of the petition. Therefore, I ask unani-mous consent to have the remainder of the petition printed in the RECORD at this point, together with the names of those who signed it. I want to have the names of these farmers, some of whom I know down near New England, N. Dak., some of them the outstanding farmers of that locality, printed in the CONGRES-SIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the remainder of the petition and the names signed thereto were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

It would damage our young men and waste their lives. It would be a shameful betrayal of our youth.

Further, we oppose placing such a huge and unnecessary tax burden on the American people on the grounds that it would weaken our economy which is already weakened by inflation, and would take money that we so urgently need for hospitals, schools, housing, and living.

We further resolve that passage of this bill would destroy the confidence of the rest of the world which looks to us for hope, and at the same time destroy our last opportunity to prove to the rest of the world that we earnestly want peace.

Rather, we favor spending a small fraction of the amount this proposed program would cost, on a smaller number of continuously and highly trained men who know precisely what atomic and bacteriological warfare

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, those who signed the petition are taxpayers. I see on the petition the name of Julius Homling, of Amidon, N. Dak. I see also the name of Clara D. Brown, superintendent of public instruction of Slope County, N. Dak. Those are the types of people who send petitions relating to the draft to Congress. They have a right to be heard, and so long as I am a Member of this body, I shall see to it that no matter how humble the man or woman may be, no matter how poor they may be, if they write WILLIAM LANGER, a Senator from North Dakota, that they want him to oppose something they think is wrong. I shall at least present their petition to the other Members of this body.

I have here a letter from the president of Golden Lake Local, 791, Farmers Union, Mrs. Edwin Fleache, The letter is dated Finley, N. Dak., April 5, 1948. She writes as follows:

FINLEY, N. DAK., April 5, 1948. Senator WILLIAM LANGER Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am writing you in regard to compulsory military training and the reinstatement of the selective-service law. I am opposed to both of these measures and I urge you to work for their defeat.

I don't think any real effort has been made to come to a mutual agreement with Russia. I believe the Congress and public have been kept ignorant of the real facts of diplomatic relations.

Compulsory military training would be the first step toward war. We fought two world wars to save democracy and we are farther from that goal than ever. If we fight a third world war it will be the end of the human race. Who then will be left to enjoy the freedoms of democracy?

I feel that the money spent for war preparation could be used for improving our schools, hospitals, and for raising the living standard of low-income people.

Your efforts to represent the common people are commendable and I hope you will keep up the good work.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. EDWIN FLESCHE,
President, Golden Lake Local 791,
Farmers Union.

I am opposed to both of these measures and I urge you to work for their defeat. Compulsory military training would be the first step toward war.

Mr. President, this letter from Mrs. Edward Flesche, president of Golden Lake Local 791, of the Farmers Union, is one of the very finest I have received.

Mr. President. I have letters here from churches outside my State. I prefer to confine my consideration to churches inside my State. The population of the State used to be 641,000. Because of the drought it was considerably reduced. Church after church in my State protests this bill.

I now wish to read a letter from the general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at Grand Forks, N. Dak. I want all the many Senators in the chamber to listen carefully.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAIN in the chair). Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. I am sorry.

This is what is expected of a North Dakota Senator. The general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of the second largest town in North Dakota writes:

I am writing as one of your constituents to urge you to use all of your energies in opposition to military conscription.

I served as an enlisted man through five campaigns in Europe during the past war-

Here is a man who fought through five campaigns in the last warand feel capable and obligated to express an opinion opposing military conscription.

I share identical views with Senator Glen H. TAYLOR of Idaho as expressed in his radio address over CBS on Saturday, April 20.

I will be watching with interest for the views which you express in opposition to military conscription.

The general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association is saying to his Senator:

I am writing as one of your constituents to urge you to use all your energies in opposition to military conscription.

This man is a veteran who served through five campaigns in Europe. His name is Leonard H. Egstrom, and he is general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of Grand Forks,

Mr. President, it is very easy to sit here and vote "yea," but it is very much harder to say "Nay." The people of my State sent me down here because they had confidence enough in me to know that when I felt in my conscience that it was time to say "No" I would say "No." If I did not say "No" when I believed that a "no" vote ought to be cast. I would have no business in the Senate.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for any purpose.

I have here a letter from Reverend and Mrs. C. A. Zook, of the Church of the Brethren. He is minister of the Church of the Brethren of Minot, N. Dak. The letter is dated June 22:

I am hoping you will do all you can to down peacetime conscription as I feel it is the wrong thing to do and not a Christian way.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES A. ZOOK. I am a minister of the Church of the Brethren.

Here is the letter from his wife:

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: Will you please use your influence against peacetime conscrip-tion? We feel that it is wrong and not the Christian way to insure peace.

Thank you.

Mrs. C. A. ZOOK.

From the Church of the Brethren, Minot,

I believe that makes nine churches in my State from which I have received letters. I have some more. Mr. President, we have a very religious State. A few years ago the Saturday Evening Post stated that we were the most religious State in the Union, if churches are any indication of religion. In Trail County, North Dakota, there are a great many churches. The Saturday Evening Post showed pictures of 12 churches in three townships out in the country. There was nothing like it in the entire United States. Those churches were in sparsely settled communities, 12 of them in three townships. We have a very religious people. The record shows that the people of North Dakota are among the most patriotic people in the Union.

It will be remembered that in World War I William Gibbs McAdoo offered a prize. As Secretary of the Treasury he said. "I will give a banner to the county in the United States which will sell the most bonds in the third Liberty Loan war drive per capita. To show the kind of people we have in North Dakota, we have a county in my State named Trail County. At that time 95 percent of the people of that county were Scandinavians, born in Norway or Sweden. Practically every one of them was naturalized. They won that prize in competition with every other county in the United States.

Mr. President, more North Dakota boys were killed per capita in World War I than boys from any other State in the Union. In World War I and in the Spanish-American War more North Dakota men were decorated for bravery than men from any other State in the Union, population considered. In the last war three times North Dakota led in the buying of Liberty bonds per capita. Once Montana beat us by one point. We led in the scrap iron drive. We led in the paper drive.

After World War I, France sent to the United States a commission to pick out the typical American nurse. That commission went to every State in the Union. When they got all through, whom did they select? They selected a little 18year-old North Dakota girl, Frances Lauder. Today if you go to Paris, there in the middle of the city you will see a life-size statue of that little 18-year-old girl, the daughter of a district judgesweet, young, 18 years of age. Among all the nurses who went across the water in World War I, she was selected by France, after the war, as a typical American nurse.

Mr. President, on the 17th day of March, in the year when Hiram Johnson ran for the Presidency-and that was the day when he was running in the primary in North Dakota-there was a blizzard of unprecedented viciousness. with a wind of unprecedented velocity. It came up so suddenly that the girls who were teaching in the schools were unable to get the youngsters home. In Oliver County, 8 miles east of Center, a little girl 15 years of age, named Hazel Miner, started home from school with her little brother and little sister. The teacher dismissed the school early. That teacher dismissed the school early. little girl had a horse-drawn sled. She started out with her little brother and sister in the sled with her. That blizzard was so desperately bad that the horse took the sled off the road, to follow the coulee. Those children never got home. Their folks were living about a mile and a half from the school.

The next day when the children were found, her folks found that that little North Dakota girl had taken off her overcoat and her overshoes and her cap and had placed them around her little sister. She had taken the robe and had placed it around her little brother. Then, without any covering at all except her dress, she lay down to die beside her little brother and sister. Mr. President, those are the kind of people that I am proud to represent here on the floor of the Senate. Those are the kind of people I am going to represent. I shall represent them honestly and fearlessly; I shall represent them no matter what the attitude of any Senator may be, much as I like to have Senators friendly. When the day comes that I cannot represent them, I am going to walk out of the door of this Chamber with my head up and my chest out, and I will walk out as a North Dakotan should walk out of this Chamber if he finds that he cannot do his duty.

When those church people whose letters I have read and the university people whose letters I have read and the heads and members of the great farm organizations whose letters I have read and the petitioners and farmers whose letters I have read, all join in asking me to do my best to keep this universal military training bill from passing, they know they can be sure of one thing-and that is that come what may, BILL LANGER will do his best.

Mr. President, I am not responsible for any other Senator upon this floor. I am only responsible to one person, and that is the man who looks at me when I look in the looking glass. When I go up to the mirror, if the man who gazes back at me has no respect for me, then, indeed, my life will have been a sad, sad

Mr. President, I have here another letter from a minister in North Dakota-Mr. Sterling Wenzel, of Great Bend, N. Dak. As I recall, he is an Evangelical minister of the German Evangelical Church. I read his letter:

GREAT BEND, N. DAK., May 21, 1946. WILLIAM LANGER,

United States Senate:

DEAR MR. LANGER: May I encourage you to fight against any legislation that will be in favor of peacetime military conscription.

As pastor I can assure you that the people of the church are not in favor of a continuation of the present draft law.

Sincerely,

STERLING WENZEL

Mr. President, I have received letters from many other ministers in North Dakota and from many ministers in other States.

I now hold in my hand another very interesting letter. Mr. President, in my State of North Dakota, when the young folks are 13, 14, 15, 16, or 17 years of age, they do not loaf around. They keep busy and take care of themselves. When they do want recreation and go to the theater, it is a beautiful sight to see them as they come through the door. There is not a pimple on the face of one of them. Their cheeks are rosy, and they look strong and well, and they are educated.

At our State college at Fargo, a group of them have organized the North Dakota Agriculture College Farmers' Union Cooperative Association, a mutual aid association. I have received a letter from the chairman of the resolutions committee of that association, and I wish to read it to the Senate:

NDAC FARMERS UNION CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Fargo, N. Dak., February 7, 1947. Hon. WILLIAM LANGER, Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C.

Hon. WILLIAM LANGER: We wish to submit to you a resolution passed at the last meeting of the NDAC Farmers Union Co-operative Association.

Whereas our Nation has always sought to avoid military entanglements and has at all times fought against the antidemocratic principles of peacetime military conscription which is nothing more than an incentive towards future wars; and

Whereas the NDAC Farmers Union Cooperative Association is in full accord with this Nation's democratic ideals of freedom for the individual as opposed to peacetime military conscription; and

Whereas this group believes that a military force sufficient for our Nation's needs can be built and maintained by voluntary enlistments: Therefore be it

Resolved, by the NDAC Farmers Union Co-operative Association meeting February 3, 1947, in Fargo, S. Dak., that our United States Senators and Representatives be urged to take action to prevent peacetime military conscription and in its stead make service in the armed forces an attractive career which will insure a high quality volunteer Army and ARNOLD BJORLIE hairman, Resolutions Committee, NDAC Farmers Union Co-operative Chairman, Association.

It is a great pleasure to receive a letter like that and to realize that many of the boys who sent it are of military age, 18, 19, some of them younger. They are interested in what is taking place here and want to help by giving some of us older men their advice.

Mr. President, I have a letter from the Bruflat Lutheran Church. I shall come to the other one of which Senators apparently are thinking. I have received voluntary letters from all the North Dakota churches. This is from the Lutheran Church at Portland, N. Dak., a Trinity Lutheran Church, of which Rev. I. M. Rotto is pastor. I quote from his letter:

I should like to express to you my firm conviction in regard to the proposed universal training program as recommended by President Truman, and urge you to oppose every measure designed to make our free America militaristic nation after the pattern of totalitarianism.

To me it seems clear as day that such a measure will defeat its own ends. Excessive energies devoted to military preparation weakens and does not strengthen a nation. I think both world wars have revealed that fact.

Consider also this: Compulsory military training (or by whatever better sounding name it might be called) is surely the first step in the direction which European na tions took and which led to their eventual downfall.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter of Rev. I. M. Rotto, pastor of the Bruflat Lutheran Church, may be printed in full in the RECORD at this point.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, reserving the right to object-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. Mr. HATCH. I reserve the right to object. The Senator propounded a unanimous-consent request, which I think carries with it the right to object. Mr. LANGER. I would rather with-draw the request. I withdraw it. Hereafter, I shall simply read entire letters into the RECORD. I am sorry it is necessary to take more time. Let the RECORD show that unanimous consent was refused. It will therefore be necessary for me to take 3 or 4 hours longer than I had expected.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President— Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for any purpose whatever.

Mr. HATCH. I have not objected. The PRESIDING OFFICER.

RECORD will so show.

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. The RECORD will show the Senator objected, and we will leave it that way. We shall have to take 4 or 5 hours extra, Mr. President. I was rushing along as fast as I could. I was getting to every one of the churches protesting the pending bill, whose letters I desired to place in

I want to read what the Rotary Club at Grand Forks, N. Dak., wrote.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER.

Senator declines to yield.

Mr. LANGER. The letter is from Mr. C. L. Kjerstad. It is on Rotary Club stationery. I do not know whether he was authorized to speak for the Rotary Club, of which he is secretary-treasurer. He states:

Universal military training: Don't know what your attitude is but I have yet to see a workable plan that I would support.

1. The last two World Wars have been won by nations that did not have universal militraining.

2. This is no time to arouse the suspicions of our neighbors

3. I am a Legionnaire but cannot support their program.

a. Yes; I want preparedness.

b. Military training has little relation to preparedness

c. Let our high-school graduates go on to school. Did not the Army, the Navy, and the Air Corps send their draftees to school as the first step in preparation in this war? Why, we had them on every campus in this and other States?

Most sincerely.

C. L. KJERSTAD.

I very frankly say I do not know whether he had authority to bind the Rotary Club at Grand Forks or not.

Let us see some of the other letters sent to me from North Dakota. There are numerous letters from private individuals. Here is one from a State institution, the North Dakota School of Forestry, which is one of the very finest institutions in the country. It is located at Bottineau, N. Dak., near the Canadian border. It is only a few miles from the International Peace Garden, a great body of land between Canada and the United States. I may say to my distinguished friend the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS], who I sometimes fear is not interested in peace as much as he ought to be, I want him to know that every day thousands of people from Canada and North Dakota gather in the Peace Garden, which is only a few miles from the North Dakota School of Forestry.

Apparently some of the students at-tending the school talked with its president. The president is Mr. C. M. Nelson. He wrote me on March 6. I am sorry that I cannot shorten this letter, because of the fact that objection was made to my request for unanimous consent to insert the letter in the RECORD.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I cannot yield. It becomes necessary for me to read the entire letter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair point out that the Senator from New Mexico had not made an objection earlier; he had merely stated his desire to reserve the right to object. The Chair should like the RECORD to be clear on that point.

Mr. LANGER. Then I misunderstood him, Mr. President. That will enable me to put into the RECORD many letters which I had thought I should not be able to do, in the course of my speech. I am very grateful to my distinguished friend the Senator from New Mexico, whom I have always found-

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I am sorry. I cannot yield. But I want the Senator to know that I cherish a great affection for him. Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield so that the Senator from New Mexico can return some of the kind things which the Senator is saying?

Mr. LANGER. I cannot yield.

The letter says:

At the annual meeting of the American Association of Junior Colleges the question of universal military training as it is being considered in Congress on H. R. 664 came in for considerable discussion. I came away from that meeting fully convinced that this bill must not pass.

This is the president of the North Dakota School of Forestry speaking. It is a school which receives thousands of dollars a year from the Federal Government. It plants millions of trees a year. This gentleman had charge of all the planting. He became so efficient that he was hired to take charge of the entire program.

I cannot see why the War Department feels that it is necessary to conscript 900,000 men each year, in addition to the standing Army, Navy, Marine Corps, National Guard, ROTC, and the Enlisted Reserve Corps as a peacetime policy. The War Department itself and numerous military men have publicly stated that volunteers are preferred to conscripts.

Is it impossible to provide the necessary inducements to secure sufficient volunteers for our peacetime armed services? If it is, then I doubt that conscription is the answer to War Department's manpower problem.

I am convinced that the adoption of universal military training will cause us to develop a Maginot-line philosophy which will be more dangerous to our security than most anything else we could do.

I have some more letters from North Dakota, Mr. President. All of these persons are very anxious to be heard. I have now a letter which I know some of my colleagues are waiting to hear. It is a letter from the Catholic War Veterans. It is a very interesting letter, dated January 28, 1947. I read:

HONORABLE SIR: We wish to advise you-

This is a letter from the Catholic War Veterans. I have read letters from the Episcopal Church, the Methodist Church, the Mennonite Church, and all the other churches which I have named, all opposing universal military training. Here we have the Catholic War Veterans opposing it-

We wish to advise you as to the policy of CWV on the matter of the proposed peacetime training legislation.

We favor complete exploration of the possibilities of the Martin resolution, calling upon all members of the United Nations to outlaw peacetime conscription.

I have here a letter from the northern synod, of the State of Minnesota. I see the distinguished Senator from Washington [Mr. Magnuson] here. He used to live at Moorhead, Minn., and attended Moorhead College. He also attended the agricultural college, and was one of the great football stars of that institution, playing for many years, and was known all over the State as one of the smoothest, one of the slickest, one of the best and finest quarterbacks in the entire United States. The only reason he did not make the all-American team was that he did not weigh enough. If he had weighed a trifle more, Walter Camp said he would have put him on. I am delighted to know that the Senator is here, because he knows the town of Faribault, and it is very likely that he knows Rev. Victor W. Grupe, secretary of the Northern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. I suppose the Senator knows him well and intimately and would vouch for what the distinguished man says in his letter. The letter was written on June 3, 1947. Listen to this:

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: The following resolutions are being sent to you in accordance with the instructions with the therein named group:

"The Northern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, in annual conference assembled at Faribault, Minn., May 20-22, 1947, herewith respectfully submits to the earnest consideration of Senators and Members of the House of the National Congress from the States of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, and Iowa, the following resolutions:

'We reiterate our unswerving opposition to compulsory universal military training at any time and in any guise. Holding that the home, the church, and the school are primarily responsible for the upbringing of our youth, and that the military institution by its very nature a system of dictatorship and agency of destruction is morally unfitted for that task, we unreservedly condemn the dragooning of American youth by indiscrimi-nate compulsion into the Military Establishment as abhorrent to the democratic spirit and repugnant to the Christian conscience. A nation, like an individual, that cannot save itself except by losing its character, does not have very much character to lose.

"'We view with grave misgivings the unilateral action of our Government, dishonoring its commitments to the United Nations. We favor increased appropriations for the hungry wherever they may be, we abhor the denial of fundamental freedoms, to be Communist or Fascist dictatorship, but we believe the military bolstering of unrepresentative governments in a game of power politics is a policy of futility that can only lead to confusion and mistrust, fear and hatred, and down the road to war. Let us encourage and increase the establishment of genuine democracy both at home and abroad, let us honestly demonstrate by word and example that our faith is not in tanks and guns and globe-girdling air bases, but in pacific means of settling differences, and so raise up a standard to which honest men the world over may and will repair."

Very truly yours, VICTOR W. GRUPE, Secretary.

That I repeat, is from the Evangelical and Reformed Church. The Senators will notice that five States-North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, and Nebraska are included. They have all the ministers there together.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Morse in the chair). Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. should like to yield, but I cannot; I am

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator would not relinquish the floor.

Mr. LANGER. I am sorry; I cannot yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. It would give the Senator a little rest.

Mr. LANGER. I am sorry. I very much appreciate the Senator's offer. Mr. MAGNUSON. I want to thank the Senator for his kind remarks.

Mr. LANGER. My friend is so solicitious about my welfare, I assure him that if I should grow tired a little he can spell me for 3 or 4 hours, and I shall be very grateful to him, and I know very well the Methodist Church people and the Catholic Church people will be grateful.

MAGNUSON. The Lutheran Mr. church.

Mr. LANGER. And the Lutheran church people and all the churches I have named. I am sure the YMCA of Grand Forks, where the distinguished Senator used to go to use the swimming pool when he was a student in North Dakota there, and learned his boxing at the YMCA, at the University of North Dakota. I assure him that I am very grateful to him indeed and later I shall welcome his assistance.

I wish to show how universal this demand is that we do not let this bill pass. I read a letter from the YMCA a little while ago. Here is one from the WCTU, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mr. President, I say unreservedly that I believe the Woman's Christian Tem-perance Union is on of the greatest organizations in America. I have been a member of that organization ever since 1917. When I wrote my biography which appears in the Congressional Directory I was delighted to place in it the fact that I was an honorary life mem-ber of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Let me say, Mr. President, that in North Dakota we have today, as the Saturday Evening Post said, the very finest capitol in the United States. We started to build that capitol in 1933, and one of the very finest ornaments in that beautiful building is a lovely painting of the lady who was president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State for some 35 years. She was a woman of such exceptional ability that even at a time when women did not have the vote she organized a campaign, and led it, that threw out of office in North Dakota a Governor who had only one term of office, because he had dis-graced, she said, the State of North Dakota by becoming intoxicated and leading a parade down the streets of Winnipeg, Canada, at 1 o'clock in the morning. The people of North Dakota rallied to her and that was the first time in the history of North Dakota that a Democrat was ever elected Governor of the State. I say this is a powerful organization, not only in North Dakota, but all over the country, and I was privileged a few days ago to place in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a letter from Miss Alice Smart, the national legislative representative of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the United States of America. I do not know whether she is a registered lobbyist or not. I do know I meet her on the streets here once in a while, and it is always a pleasure to greet her, because I know that the organization she represents stands for everything that is fine in the lives of young boys and young girls.

I was tremendously impressed with a bill that was introduced, at the behest of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, during the war, which sought to keep young boys and young girls a certain distance from all forts and all canteens, whatever they call the places where they knew that liquor was being handed out or sold. In my State they have done a remarkable job.

I have here also a letter, in addition to those I have received from churches and universities, from the associate professor of religion and philosophy in Wesley College. That college is located at Grand Forks, N. Dak. It is one of the greatest Methodist institutions in the whole world. It is a fine college, and while the enrollment may not be so very large, it is made up of the very finest minds in the whole State.

I have always been interested in that school because it has been financed by a man by the name of Frank Lynch, who later moved out West to San Diego, Calif., who was so impressed with the college, although he was of a different religious faith, that he contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars toward it. This man used to reside at Castleton, N. Dak., and he helped organize this institution.

What does this associate professor of religion and philosophy of Wesley College say? I read his letter:

WESLEY COLLEGE, THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH DAKOTA, Grand Forks, N. Dak., February 15, 1947.
The Honorable William Langer, Senator from North Dakota,

Washington, D. C.
DEAR SIR: I want to let you know why I am opposed to universal military training, First, because it is no real but an illusory defense in an atomic age-real defense rests with the UN. Second, it is contrary to our democratic ideals and a long step toward fascism. Third, by arousing the suspicions of other nations it will provoke the very war which it seeks futilely to prevent. Fourth, our imperialists, the big-business interests, are behind it and want the flag to follow the

Whenever and wherever I get an opportunity I voice my opposition to this measure. Shall it be said of us that we conquered

Hitler only to be conquered by Hitler?
A. W. Munk,
Associate Professor of Religion and Philosophy, Wesley College.

A little while ago I presented to the Senate a number of petitions. I then said it was not only the church people, not only the educators, not only the farmers' unions and the leaders of the farmers' unions, not only the individual locals, whose letters I have already presented, but the individual farmers in North Dakota who are opposed to this measure. I have here a petition addressed:

To the honorable WILLIAM LANGER, WIL-LIAM LEMKE, MILTON YOUNG, and CHARLES

I might say that Mr. LEMKE and Mr. ROBERTSON are Representatives at large from the State of North Dakota.

We, the undersigned, are opposed to peacetime compulsory military training and respectfully petition you to use your influence against any legislation of that kind.

The first one to sign the petition is Walter Troxel, who for years has been a member of the State Senate of North Mrs. J. M. Joiner also signed the petition. Her husband is dead. He was a member of the legislature of North Dakota, elected in 1918 and took office in 1919, one of the outstanding men of the State. He left North Dakota and went to Minnesota and was placed in a very important position there by Gov. Floyd Olson, of Minnesota.

In speaking of Mr. Joiner going to Minnesota, I am led to wonder whether the average Senator today is aware of the fact that whenever other States need good men they come to North Dakota to get them. These men who have received fine Christian influences from the time they were little children are much sought after for important posts in other States besides their own State of North Dakota, one of whose daughters has a life-sized statue erected in her memory in Paris

When Gov. Floyd Olson was elected Governor of Minnesota he wanted a private secretary. He wanted a man whom he could trust with his private correspondence, a man whom he could trust to open his mail. So he came to North Dakota and hired as his private secretary Vincent A. Day. A little later he had some trouble collecting gasoline taxes. He could not find anyone in all of Minnesota who apparently could devise a system which would put a stop to the bootlegging of gasoline and the escape from the payment of State and Federal taxes on bootlegged gasoline. He came to Burke County and there he hired George Griffith to leave North Dakota and come to Minnesota.

Gov. Floyd Olson wanted a tax commissioner, an individual who knew something about taxes, someone who was honest. He looked all over Minnesota but could not find anyone in Minnesota, so he came to North Dakota and hired George W. Wallace, and he was one of the tax commissioners of Minnesota for years

Governor Olson's State owned considerable timberland around Bemidgi, millions of acres of timberland. He wanted to get someone who knew about the handling of timberland, so what did he do? He hired a North Dakota man to take care of those 3,000,000 acres of timberland.

There are four or five thousand banks in Minnesota. Governor Olson apparently could not find anyone in his State who knew much about banking so Governor Olson, of Minnesota, went to Carson, N. Dak., a town of about 1,100 population, and appointed Robert D. Barry, who ran a little bank in his town. He was appointed bank examiner of Minnesota.

The Governor of Minnesota wanted a chauffeur he could trust to drive his car without running it off into the ditch, a man who would keep sober, a man who would keep his car nice and shiny, a man who would keep his car in a good state of repair. Gov. Floyd Olson apparently felt he could not get that kind of man in Minnesota, so he went to Grand Forks, N. Dak., and hired a man who became a great friend of the distinguished Senator from Washington [Mr. Magnuson], Mose Rosensweig, of Grand Forks, who later changed his name to Rose. He became a close personal friend of Governor Olson. He died and now lies buried within 15 or 20 feet of a very famous and distinguished late Governor of Minnesota.

Mr. President, I want to be very careful not to violate the Senate rules in any way. But I mention what occurred with respect to Minnesota, because it is true.

respect to Minnesota, because it is true.
There lived in my State a man named Nolan, who was convicted of murder. He had killed a traveling man who came to his place. He buried the murdered man in a manure pile. Shortly thereafter his carcass was found there. The murderer was arrested and given a life sentence. This man who was convicted came from the little town of Hansboro, in Towner County. After a while he escaped from the penitentiary. Do Senators know where he was found? Three years later he was found in Arkansas. He was the public printer of the State of Arkansas. I do not know whether he was elected or was appointed by the Governor. I mention that purely to show that even citizens of North Dakota who might be considered of very poor character get into other States sometimes and are advanced to positions of trust and influence and the holding of State office.

So Senators can understand that representing that sort of people as I do in the Senate, I feel very proud indeed when I receive a petition from a large group of individuals such as I have here. The first signer of the petition is a State senator. The petition asks me to do all in my power and to use my influence against any legislation of the kind proposed in Congress

I have other petitions from churches in other States, which show that it is not only in North Dakota that the churches are up in arms against this measure.

I have a letter from Broadway Tabernacle Church of New York City, address 211 West Fifty-sixth Street. That address shows that the church is right about in the center of the town. The letter is written by Allan Knight Chalmers, Broadway Tabernacle Church, and states:

I was very much impressed with the enclosed leaflet on universal military training and wanted to call it to your attention.

I enlisted as a boy of 18 in the First World

I enlisted as a boy of 18 in the First World War and had 10 months in the front lines in the trenches.

As a veteran, I feel this gives me a basis of judgment about the Army's proposal for compulsory military training, and on another war that could easily come if we do not stop the militarization of our Nation.

I would appreciate your comments on the leaflet and on universal military training if you have time.

He encloses a leaflet entitled "The Army Says."

I might add, in connection with universal military training, that when the Army got out a little pamphlet in Tennessee it was sent to the boys in our colleges. It was one of the most beautiful things I ever saw. I presume it was published at the expense of the taxpayers. It contained beautiful pictures of young boys walking down the avenue arm in arm, under beautiful trees. Apparently it was designed to look as attractive as possible.

While we are on the question of churches, I have a letter here from a church in Boston. This is from the secretary of the Universalist Church of America, with executive offices at 16 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. I note that the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts has left the Chamber. If he were here I would ask him whether 16 Beacon Street is not a pretty good address. That is where the executive offices of the Universalist Church of America are located. The letter is signed by the secretary. It reads as follows:

At the recent meeting of the general assembly of the Universalist Church of America, the following resolution was passed in connection with the subject of compulsory peacetime military training:

"Whereas compulsory military training is a denial of the rights of the individual; and

"Whereas it is detrimental to the Christian education of our youth; and

"Whereas it is an historical fact that military conscription has never prevented war; we

"Resolved, That the delegates to the general assembly of the Universalist Church of America go on record as being opposed to compulsory peacetime military training; be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, to Representative JOSEPH MARTIN, Republican minority leader in the House, and to the leader of the opponents of this measure in the Senate."

It is my understanding that you have been very active in opposition to compulsory peacetime military training, and I am, therefore, transmitting this resolution to you for your information.

Sincerely yours, ESTHER A. RICHARDSON,

ESTHER A. RICHARDSON, Secretary,

Now let us, go to the Department of Higher Education. This time we shall not go to New York or Boston. We shall remain in Washington, D. C. The next letter is from the Department of Higher Education of the National Education Association of the United States, 1201 Sixteenth Street NW. It is signed by Alonzo F. Myers, president. The letter reads as follows:

The enclosed statement, Major Arguments Against Universal Military Training, was developed by a highly competent group on the basis of a thorough and up-to-the-minute study of the problem.

I recommend the statement to you as a careful analysis in opposition to a policy of universal military training for the United States.

I am sorry that I do not have the time to read the analysis entitled "Major Arguments Against Universal Military Training." However, I shall read the headings:

- 1. Military training will not produce soldiers ready for combat.
- 2. UMT ignores the specialized nature of modern warfare.
- 3. Military training will not provide men competent to handle civilian defense.
- Professional soldiers would be diverted from the regular armed forces to train recruits.
- 5. Rudimentary military training can be taught much faster than industry can convert to war production.
- 6. UMT will draw funds from other defense programs.
- 7. UMT of the Fort Knox Test Tube cannot be reproduced on a national scale.
- 8. Military training is a recognition of bankrupt diplomacy.
- 9. UMT will preclude civilian programs needed to strengthen the American people and economy.

10. Military training will mean a reduc-tion in volume and quality of war production.

11. UMT will deplete natural resources at a more rapid rate.

12. UMT would obstruct American industrial efficiency.

13. Military training will alter the struc-

I am sorry that I have not the time to read the contents, but I have read the headings of the various chapters. I should like to read the entire analysis, but I must rush on, because I have so many other letters which I wish to bring to the attention of Members of the Senate.

The next letter is from Nebraska. It is signed by Mrs. R. L. Burge, president of the Women's League for Universal Peace. The letter is dated April 15, 1948. The writer of the letter has a very intriguing idea. There is a heading which Congressmen and Senators who favor UMT or the draft should join it.

The letter reads in part as follows:

All Congressmen and Senators who advocate and vote for universal military training or Selective Service Act should, as an indication of their sincerity, accompany their bal-lot with their resignation and with an enlistment as a military private, and subsist on the rations of a private, plus a private's pay; and forfeit all their monetary income.

The human being is the only animal that ask their young to do their fighting, there-fore they should be willing do do what they ask of the younger generation.

Mr. President, it is strange how one's memory goes back, when reading a letter. I do not think the distinguished Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] was a Member of this body at the time when the United Nations Charter was under consideration by the Senate. Some time ago I read in a Washington newspaper an article by a columnist who said that he believed the propaganda used in putting over the United Nations Charter was the best job he had ever seen done. I wish to say that I remember that in the 3 or 4 minutes time during which I spoke here in the Senate on the question of the adoption of the United Nations Charter, I quoted Robert La Follette, Sr., who had fought the League of Nations. He said, "If you adopt the League of Nations, it will lead up into perpetual war." So in my speech on the United Nations Charter, I used that expression-that if we adopted the United Nations Charter, it would lead us into perpetual war. I remember that after-wards four or five Senators scoffed at me. Well, Mr. President, we have had it ever since July 28, 1945, when the Senate approved it, and of course the President signed it almost instantaneously. Since that time we have had perpetual war in almost every country except Ireland, Canada, and a few others. Today the countries generally are in worse shape by far than they were at the time when the United Nations Charter was adopted.

When the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] in his speech advocating the ratification of the United Nations Charter said, "It is similar to the organization of the United States of America by the Thirteen Colonies," I pointed out that when the Thirteen Colonies organized the United States, none of them had a veto power. Certainly the five largest of the Thirteen Colonies did not have a veto power over the other eight. Mr. President, do you think the other eight Colonies would ever have joined the United States of America if the five largest Colonies had had a veto power?

In connection with the Charter of the United Nations, who fought to retain the veto power? The fight to retain it was led by England and the United States of America.

So I say that my memory goes back to the day when I prophesied that the United Nations would lead us to perpetual war. Only the other day the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings], in the course of the debate here listed all the countries that are at war today: India, China, Korea, and practically all the countries of Europe. It is startling to realize how many countries are at war, 3 years after the United Nations Charter was signed.

Mr. President, I have on my desk various other letters from churches. Before I read them, I wish to read another petition from some of the farmers of our State. This petition comes from Bucyrus, N. Dak. One petition which I have received came from near the Canadian line, and another petition came from McKenzie County, near the Yellowstone River in Montana. The petition I now hold in my hand comes from Bucyrus, which is 3 miles from the South Dakota line, and undoubtedly the Senator from South Dakota is acquainted with that town. The petition reads as

We, the undersigned members of the Bucyrus Farmers Union Local, No. 7021, are opposed to universal military training during peacetime.

Therefore we request that you oppose all legislation which will favor such a proposal.

The petition is signed by a great many farmers in that vicinity.

Mr. President, I have also received a card from Mr. and Mrs. Paul Aman, of Richardton, N. Dak. They say:

We are against universal military training.

Mr. Aman is one of the outstanding men in that vicinity.

I have also received a card from Mr. and Mrs. Hunke, likewise of Richardton. N. Dak. They say:

We are opposed to military universal training, and want you to vote against it.

Mr. President, let me say to the distinguished Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] that although I am in a hurry to conclude as rapidly as I possibly can, yet I feel it my duty, under the instructions I have received from the churches of North Dakota and the largest farm organizations, headed by the Farmers Union, and from petitions carrying thousands of signatures, to do everything I can to bring to the atten-tion of the Members of this body the attitude of the people of North Dakota on this question of peacetime conscrip-

I read now a letter from Mrs. M. O. Peterson, of Carrington, N. Dak. On March 8, 1948, she wrote to me as fol-

CARRINGTON, N. DAK., March 8, 1948. Senator WILLIAM LANGER,

Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: There has been a great deal of discussion in our community about universal military training. I have talked with many people and have found no one in favor of this bill. Surely the money that would have to be spent for UMT could be put to better use for the good of all. You know, Senator, that we could use a great deal of money in this State alone for the betterment of our schools, just to mention one need.

I sincerely hope that you will vote against this bill when it comes up, and do all in your power to get others to vote against it also.

Respectfully yours,

Mrs. M. O. PETERSON.

So, Mr. President, I wish to appeal to the distinguished Senator from Alabama to become active in this fight. I wish to keep this peacetime conscription bill from becoming law.

Here is a letter from the Sutton Farmers Union Grain Co., dated March 10:

SUTTON FARMERS UNION GRAIN CO., Sutton, N. Dak., March 10, 1948. Mr. WILLIAM LANGER, Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C. DEAR BILL: According to today's news UMT is again beating its wings. I just thought I'd write again and restate my views. I believe that peacetime military training harms the boys, often seriously, depletes our resources unnecessarily, and puts too much power in the hands of the military. It will be a sad day for democracy if we get to the place where all of our male youth is trained to click its heels and obey blindly when the overstuffed "brass" sounds off.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR W. DAFOE.

Here is a letter from Hebron, N. Dak., signed by R. A. Ketterling, secretary of the Farmers Union Local. Hebron is a town 75 miles west of Bismarck in a very good farming and dairying section of the State. The letter, dated March 8, is a typical Farmers Union letter. I read:

HEBRON, N. DAK., March 8, 1948. Hon. WILLIAM LANGER.

Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C. DEAR SENATOR: At our last Farmers Union local meeting, which consists of 40 members, it was unanimously decided that the group was opposed to universal military training.

This universal military training provides no defense. All indications are that the next war will be one of atomic bombs and biological warfare. Carrying a gun will hasten trouble. It will provide no protection for there is no defense for atomic warfare. Neither England nor the United States of America has had peacetime conscription but they have won their wars. France, Germany, and Japan all had compulsory military train-Peacetime conscription will increase taxes and promote military control. We have reached the point where the military are directing instead of supporting this country's policy.

If universal military training becomes compulsory it will be the ruination of our country and the beginning of militarism.

Yours truly,

R. A. KETTERLING. Secretary.

Mr. President, I have here another petition coming from Marion, near the home town of my distinguished colleague the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Young], Berlin, N. Dak. The town of Marion is located perhaps 18 miles from the Senator's home town. I quote:

We, the undersigned, are wholeheartedly opposed to the passage of the so-called universal military training bill; we believe it is a step toward a military government and a threat to peace.

That is signed by a group of citizens. I know most of them. Those signing the letter I know are very fine, distinguished taxpayers of that county.

Here is a letter from Agate, N. Dak.

AGATE, N. Dak., March 19, 1948. The Honorable WILLIAM LANGER,

Washington, D. C.

United States Senate,

MY DEAR MR. SENATOR: We, herewith, would like to ask you to exert your influence in opposing compulsory military training as well as a peace draft. We feel that President Truman is being used by the military men in our Government in an effort to plunge this Nation into war, against the majority wish and will of the American people. The money that would be spent arming America could be better used to feed the hungry and raise living standards immediately in the destitute regions of the world.

Very truly yours,

Mrs. IVER M. SOLBERG. IVER M. SOLBERG.

I know Mr. and Mrs. Solberg well. I do not know how they came to be writing from Agate; perhaps they live there. One of the Solbergs was formerly State senator for Williams County, N. Dak. I think this is another Solberg.

Here is a letter from Mrs. B. H. Eggers, of Dickinson, N. Dak.:

In regard to the universal military training, I am definitely against it. We need our boys on the farm.

Here is a letter from her husband:

I am against compulsory military training. Please vote against it. We need our boys on the farm.

Here is a letter from Park River, N. Dak., dated March 18, one of the very · prosperous towns in the State:

PARK RIVER, N. DAK., March 18, 1948. Senator WILLIAM LANGER, Senate Office Building,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR LANGER: I am opposed to universal military training, even after President Truman's speech.

I believe the voluntary program could be improved and should be given a fair trial before our Nation is forced into a conscription program which is directly opposite to all American traditions.

I ask that you work against passage of a universal training bill.

Yours truly,

(Mrs.) ZELLA V. WIDME.

Mr. President, I want to make it crystal clear that 4 or 5 days ago I announced to the press I would take part in no fillbuster of any kind or character. I do not propose now to participate in a filibuster. I have brought the attention of the Senate to letters from our churches in North Dakota, also letters from our farm organizations, together with petitions from various other groups. Some may say, "Oh, but you stop legislation."

Mr. President, who is responsible for the stoppage of legislation? Every Senator on this floor remembers that at the beginning of the session we were in session only every other day for weeks and weeks. How would a farmer raising chickens like to hire a man by the month to feed his chickens, and have the man feed them only every other day?

How many days did we actually meet in January or February or March? There was not a time when we could not have passed the pay bill. It was not wanted on the floor.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for any purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. THYE. If the Senator will yield, I think I can help him in his hazy thinking.

Mr. LANGER. I am sorry. I decline to yield. I deeply regret it. I am very sorry. I regret that I cannot yield.

I have here the testimony regarding the salaries of Federal Government employees. When was that testimony taken? It was taken on January 15. 16, 17, 24, 26, and 28; February 9 and Where was our Republican leadership then? Tonight they are in a great hurry to get through. At that time our Republican leadership controlled the House and the Senate. Where were those distinguished men who are now in such a hurry to get to Philadelphia?

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield at this point I can inform him that we would have passed the salary increases if he had not made such a spectacle of himself, as he is doing tonight.

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. I might say to my distinguished friend from Minnesota that I suggest that he read a letter which I filed. I suggest that he fight for the people of Minnesota as I am trying to fight for the people of North Dakota, so that his conscience might be as clean as is mine. I yield to no man, Mr. President, when it comes to fighting for the common people of this country. The distinguished Senator knew he was violating a rule of the Senate when he made the remark which he made, because he must be familiar with the rules. It is typical, Mr. President. If they cannot control, they try to wreck anyone who dares to stand up. They ridicule him, make fun

I did not make the rules that we have in the Senate. I have not done anything wrong. I have a right to debate. It is my judgment that if a bill were before us today which would wipe out the grain exchanges, other Senators would be standing here making a spectacle of themselves.

O Mr. President, it is easy to criticize. I want it known that I do not care any more tonight than I cared for years as to what any other man thinks of me. That is my business. Looking into the mirror I see the man staring out at me. Surely we could have finished the salary bill. But I did not notice some of the members of the committee tearing their shirts to be there to hear the WILLIAM LANGER sat there testimony. seven-eighths of the time alone. I was not out playing golf; I did not play one game. But I say, Mr. President, that practically nine-tenths of the Federal employees are not receiving enough money. Some of them are not receiving enough to keep body and soul together. That does not worry the Republican leadership. Let them starve! When the testimony showed that some of the families could not buy butter for 3 months. and some did not have meat for over a month, I did not see the Republican leadership worrying about it. When the testimony was undisputed that in order for one of those men to live decently his pay should be raised $1,160, I did not see the Republican leadership worrying about it. If a Senator protests against such a situation, he is accused of making a ridiculous spectacle of himself.

Let some of the Senators who say that go back to their States; let them go to Minneapolis and St. Paul and publicly say "Let the Republican Party carry on its duties."

According to the testimony, if one of the Government employees received an increase of $800 a year, and received it today, he would still be getting $2.10 a week less than he received in 1939, based on what money will now buy.

That is the testimony of the Department of Labor; it is the testimony of the Department of Agriculture.

Let, me say, Mr. President, that the failure to pass the pay bill months ago is a disgrace to the Republican Party. The distinguished Senator from California [Mr. Downey] over a year ago showed the desperate need of Government employees. I have here, Mr. President, a record of the distinguished Senators who are members of the committee and who attended the meetings. I suggest to the postal employees and to the other Federal employees that they find out about the deep, deep interest of some of the Senators who now criticize a Senator for getting up and daring to fight for the interests of those employees.

Two hundred and ninety-nine million dollars was appropriated the other day just for tobacco for foreigners, $200,000 just for coca-cola for foreigners, under the Marshall plan. These Government employees did not have a raise from 1925 to 1946, and when they got the raise of $300 which I secured for them, 2 weeks later the President abolished overtime, and the record shows they took home less in their envelopes after they got the $300 raise. That is a record that cannot be denied.

Mr. President, Senators are in a hurry all of a sudden. There is a convention about to meet, and I am curious to see the planks of some of the reactionary Republicans. Four years ago they pledged themselves to pass an antilynching law, and there it stopped, they are still pledging. I am not going into all the other matters I have discussed at various times, but if you find a party that defaults on one promise, it will default on another.

Four years ago, when they wanted the Negro vote, they promised the Negroes everything. I do not know what they are going to say this time; I am very curious to see. What some gentlemen on this floor do not seem to realize is that the Senator from North Dakota believes that if a party makes a campaign promise, the party should keep it, not come along and say we are going to have a tonnage tax on coal or iron or something and then not impose it, come along and say we are going to raise the income taxes and then not do it.

It is very strange that some of these Senators who are so very, very critical and who are such great Republicans, could not carry their own State for President 4 years ago, and could not carry it 8 years ago. We carried North Dakota, we carried it when Minnesota went Democratic. I carried every county in North Dakota and I did it in spite of the fact that the Governor of Minnesota came to Grand Forks, N. Dak., and was photographed with my opponent. I did it in spite of the fact that $40,000 was raised in the State of Minnesota to defeat me, and that every grain company except Cargill Elevator Co. contributed. I did it in spite of the fact that Mr. Stassen did all he could to defeat me in North Dakota, and I took a little time out from my own campaign to beat Mr. Stassen in another State, and we did a good job

Oh, no, Mr. President, I may be making a spectacle of myself tonight in the judgment of some Senators, especially from Minnesota, but I challenge them to come to North Dakota and meet me in debate. We will decide up there what the farmers in that locality think about it. He has not heard from the churches of North Dakota asking me to put up this fight. He has not heard from the Farmers' Union asking me to put up this fight. He has not heard from the Concordia College asking me to put up this fight, or from the other churches and people's organizations asking me to put up this fight. I did not have to do it. I could have gone and lain down some place and let somebody else talk. It is not pleasant for me to be here. It is so much easier not to do your duty, sometimes.

I wish to say, Mr. President, that I shall not soon forget the remarks of the Senator from Minnesota. I learned a long time ago the courtesy of this Chamber. I regret that coming from the Northwest we have a man who did not know the meaning of that courtesy. We have not many men like that who will come into this body from the great Northwest.

Out there, Mr. President, in the great Northwest, over 50 years ago my grandfather started the fight for the people, my father kept it up, and the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce almost wrecked them. But we finally won out.

When one goes through a 50-year fight, Mr. President, he does things that seem incomprehensible to fellows who have not gone through a fight of that character, who have not had to work their way up, who had some machine that picked them up, a machine that was backed by the railroads, the Steel Trust, and the Grain Trust, who just picked them up and said, "You are a nice little boy. You will obey orders. We will take you for United States Senator. We will send someone there to give you a rub-down each night and keep you in shape." The Senator from North Dakota never had that kind of treatment, but when the Senator from North Dakota showed up at a place, he could get some sleep at some fine farmer's

I learned one thing, and that was to be honest with the men and women who elected me, and when the hour was the darkest in North Dakota, in spite of all the Minneapolis and St. Paul newspapers-in which I was vilified-could do, in spite of it all, I got the biggest vote for Governor on the 27th day of June 1934 that any Governor ever received in the history of North Dakota.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President-The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WIL-LIAMS in the chair.) Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield. Mr. MAGNUSON. For a question? Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield for

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator would not rule my grandfather out from Fort Ransom, would he?

Mr. LANGER. I decline to yield.

In this session we have had January, February, March, April, May, and part of June, and last year we had 12 months in which we could have passed a pay-increase bill. Nobody worries about it. So far as the Senate is concerned, I guess, I, as chairman of the committee, did most of the worrying about it. Now it is proposed to hurry the pay-increase bill through Congress. Anyone who proposes to make an appropriate increase is accused of filibustering. A bill is brought in providing $300 increase instead of $700, and when a Senator objects he is accused of making a spectacle of himself on the Senate floor. A small clique of Republican reactionaries say the increase should be $300 or $400. But if a Senator says the increase should be more he is filibustering.

Mr. President. fortunately, someone says something about me that he may think is very, very bad, his remarks are like water on a duck's back.

Mr. President, delay is indefensible in passing a pay bill. But suddenly it is said that a pay-increase bill is going to be passed. Of course, the bill will not provide much by way of increase, but those who urge the passage now will say, "A half a loaf is better than nothing." Whereas an increase of $1,000 should be given, it is proposed The poor Federal worker to give $350. is so far in debt that even two or three hundred dollars looks like manna from heaven to him when he cannot stall off the banker any longer.

Some of those who are going to be at the Republican National Convention should read the testimony given on the pay bill. Do those who will compose the resolutions committee at that convention believe there should be an adequate pay increase?

Some say that if I had not talked tonight the pay-increase bill would have been passed, the conference on it would have been over, and increases of $350 or $450 would have been made, whereas, according to the evidence, the increases should be $1,160.

Mr. President, I hope the time will come when the Hatch Act will be abolished so far as it pertains to the Federal Government workers. There is no reason why those men and women should not exercise all the rights of full citizenship. Everyone else is receiving a large increase in pay. That is shown from the figures of industrial pay increases. Such increases are much greater than the Government has given its own employees. But no one is worrying about that.

Mr. President, I again come back to the draft bill. Respecting that bill I bring to the Senate the demands of the people of North Dakota that I should put up this fight. I am sorry if the people of North Dakota are different from the people of Montana or the people of Minnesota or the people of South Dakota. But here are the letters from professors in the agricultural college and the university; letters from the school of forestry and the school at Ellendale; letters from Concordia College faculty.

Mr. President, it is a great satisfaction to one who realizes that God Almighty has given him the strength and the courage and the fortitude and the patience and the health so that he can properly represent the kind of people I have in my State.

Mr. President, I would not criticize the votes of any of my colleagues for the world, because I assume that every man who votes on a measure votes according to his conscience, but I noticed when the Committee on the Judiciary 4 or 5 years ago reported a bill which would get the insurance companies out from under the antitrust law after the Supreme Court rendered a decision against them, how quick some were to vote for such legislation. I noticed what happened when the railroads were indicted for fixing rates, how they sought to get around the law, and I have observed that no Attorney General, either a Republican or Democratic Attorney General, up to the time that Tom Clark became Attorney General, had ever put a man in jail for violating the Sherman Antitrust Act. There seems to be one law for the rich and another law for the poor. There is an antitrust law on the statute books and it has been there since 1890. When a GI came home and stole a loaf of bread he went to jail. If a grocer, during OPA raised the price of bread one penny, he went to jail. But, Mr. President, when the great big companies get together and organize a monopoly on bread and milk they do not go to jail. Those behind those big companies were made ambassadors to foreign countries, and there they are, because out of the money they have taken from poor people they were able to raise four or five or six hundred thousand dollars to pay for a campaign for someone to run for President.

Mr. President, I would rather cast my lot, and I have during all the years of my life, with the underdog, with the one who needs a friend.

Mr. President, I return to the question of universal training. I want to call attention in the RECORD to the votes cast on the amendments. Some Senators from the Northwest who have been preaching so much against war profits, when they had an opportunity to reduce them to 10 percent refused to raise their hands and obtain a vote; and when the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. O'Daniel] offered an amendment to tax war profits 100 percent, it received very few votes.

I am not criticizing any Democrats. The Democrats started 18 months ago to put the Republican Congress in a hole, and they have done a beautiful job. One cannot help but admire it when they do a fine, efficient job. I am proud of the Republican Party. I am a very insignificant part of it, but, by the Eternal, I am a very vocal part of it. I shall do a great deal of talking out in the Northwest.

We have a peculiar system in the Northwest. We learned the last time that just because one is on the Republican ticket that does not mean that he must support the Republican nominee for President. One can even go to the Republican convention and second the nomination of the man who is nominated for President, and go back to the great Northwest, and instead of being for the Republican nominee he can be for the Democratic nominee, as was so well proved 4 years ago.

I am going back home to support the Republican ticket in my State. I hope to do a good job of it. But I shall get a great deal further by telling the Republicans the truth about this Congress than by trying to salve it over and make excuses for it. I know that in some of the other States that does not make any difference. In some other States the corporations and trusts are strong enough to elect anyone. That cannot be done in North Dakota. The people of North Dakota are too well informed, too progressive. They read too many newspapers. They watch the candidates, and they watch the record. So even if a man wanted to fool them, he could not do so, as has been so ably demonstrated by the people of North Dakota time and again.

There was a time when Art McKenzie gathered a few men around him in a hotel in St. Paul, Minn., and there named the entire ticket for North Dakota. I do not blame some of the Minnesota politicians for being sore at North Dakota. But in 1915 we obtained a divorce, and we wiped the slate clean. North Dakota had grown up. We said that we no longer needed a nursemaid in the person of Minnesota. Up to that time the situation reminded one of a big cow, with her front feet in North Dakota eating grass, and her hind feet in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Those in St. Paul got all the cream. In 1915 we moved the cow into North Dakota-all of her, hind feet, tail, and everything else, and we have had her in North Dakota ever since.

All we get is ridicule. We are not doing so badly in North Dakota. We have managed to get along all right. We have no great amount of bonds or indebtedness. Last year we had the highest income of any group of farmers in the United States. We are getting along well. But we do not want our boys drafted. We have a right to say that we do not want them drafted. When I am asked by the people of my State, by the hundreds of people who have written me letters, by the churches, and by all the other institutions I have enumerated this evening, I will say that I did not propose to let the Senate adjourn without presenting to the Senate the letters which I have received.

Mr. President, I wish to make it plain once more that I have not taken a single moment of time for a filibuster. The letters and petitions which I have presented are from people who are opposed to universal military service. Almost without exception the writers ask me to present them to the Senate. This is the first opportunity I have had to present them to the Senate as a body. My job is done. My work in behalf of those people, so far as this bill is concerned, is completed.

So, Mr. President, confident in the knowledge that the farmers and the common people of my State will understand what I have said here, even if unfortunately some other Senators from the Northwest do not, I am willing to leave it to the judgment of the people who elected me as to whether I have given a faithful portrayal of the feelings of the farmers of the Northwest. Every Senator who cared to do so could have sat here and listened to me tell the attitude of one State of this Union, the great, fine patriotic State of North Dakota.

I thank Senators who remained and listened to me. I wish to make it unanswerably plain that I believe that if the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrn] knew that something was being voted for that the people of Virginia did not want, he would say so. The same thing is true of the majority of Senators.

With those words, Mr. President, I vield the floor.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I shall take only a few moments of the time of the Senate at this particular part of the early morning.

We have had about 9 hours of discussion which has generally been advertised in the public press, at least, as being a filibuster. We have had relief given to the Senator who is trying to prevent action on this very important national defense legislation, the relief being given by the Senator from North Dakota. Now the Senator who originally spoke, and who was conducting the filibuster to prevent the Senate from acting, is back again on the floor of the Senate.

I think I can say without fear of contradiction that no person denies to the Senator from North Dakota the right to discuss, debate, and vote against this legislation if his conscience tells him to do so. But by the same token, even though the rules of the Senate are so loose that they permit it to be done, I do not believe that morally any Senator or small group of Senators in exercising their right of expression and their right to vote, have a right themselves to deny to 94 other Members of the Senate of the United States, representing 140,000,000 people, the right to vote on legislation which may mean the very safety of this Republic.

Not so long ago we had an Ambassador who wrote a well-known book, the title of which was "Mission to Moscow." Mr. President, I say with all the sincerity I possess that, at some time when perhaps a power might move in Europe to upset the peace of the world, and might endanger the very safety of this Republic, I certainly hope history will not record that this filibuster was in fact a mission for Moscow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WILLIAMS in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. TAYLOR and Mr. MAGNUSON addressed the chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. TAYLOR. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I was on my feet first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thought both Senators were on their feet at the same time.

The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken Hatch Murray Hawkes Hayden Hickenlooper Myers O'Conor O'Daniel Baldwin Ball Barkley Brewster Bricker Hill O'Mahoney Pepper Holland Revercomb Robertson, Va. Bridges Brooks Butler Jenner Russell Johnson, Colo. Johnston, S. C. Saltonstall Smith Byrd Cain Sparkman Stennis Capehart Kem Chavez Kilgore Knowland Stewart Cooper Cordon Langer Taft. Lucas McCarthy Taylor Thomas, Okla. Donnell Downey Dworshak Eastland McClellan McFarland Thye Tobey Tydings Umstead Vandenberg McGrath McKellar McMahon Ecton Ellender Wherry Wiley Williams Magnuson Malone Feazel Ferguson Flanders Martin Maybank Millikin Pulbright Young Green Gurney Morse

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eightytwo Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota that a conference be requested and the conferees be appointed. [Putting the question.]

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President! Mr. President! Mr. President!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, recently, a month or 6 weeks ago at least, there was an article in the paper about two American GI's in Germany who chased two Russian officers home, throwing rocks through the barracks windows. The boys were arrested or detained and action taken against them. I have forgotten what, but certain penalties were invoked anyhow. When asked why they did it, the boys stated they "just hated Russia." Well, it is not much wonder they hate Russia. I quote from an Associated Press dispatch from Frankfurt, Germany, dated November 7, which said:

American soldiers in Germany will begin next week a study of Communist Russia as part of the United States Army's official troop information and education program.

Attendance is compulsory.

The bulletin soldiers will study describes itself as "the story of Mother Russia, of its great cruel history, of the hard men who seized power 30 years ago and have held it

Officials said the lessons are scheduled as a part of a series of studies entitled "Know Your Neighbor."

It is ironical to note that during the war, when the Russians were fighting actively as our allies, we had courses of study on things connected with Russia, as everybody knows wonderfully well. We all remember that in those days the headlines would refer to our Russian Al-lies as "the gallant Russians," "the brave Russians," and "the heroic Russians." Then the war came to an end. More particularly, a date that is more significant than the change in relations would be the death of President Roosevelt. The tone of dispatches began to change almost as soon as Roosevelt left us. By the time the war had ended the newspapers hardly ever referred at all to the Russians in favorable terms. It was always, from then on, the "heroes of Stalingrad" who became the "villains of the Kremlin," and they have been hard at it ever since. It is a wonder, Mr. President, we have been able to keep the peace to this date considering the propaganda that is put out by the press against Russia; the radio, to a lesser extent, though there are laws that make the radio give both sides of questions to a certain extent anyhow.

I should like to read into the RECORD an article by Walter Lippmann which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune on Tuesday, April 20, dealing with the Bogota Conference. We have been told by our State Department, those in authority, that the Bogota Conference was a great success. I think it might be well to examine those articles. For that reason, I would like to quote first the article of Walter Lippmann. Across the page is another article by Sumner Welles dealing with the Bogota Conference. I think they are both very significant. The first article appeared in the New Herald Tribune of Tuesday, April 20, in Walter Lippmann's column, Today and Tomorrow. The item is entitled "The Bogota Intelligence," in which he says:

After testifying in a secret session of a congressional committee, Admiral Hillenkoetter, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, allowed himself to be interviewed in order to show that he had warned the State Department of the Bogota uprising. This would not have been edifying even if the admiral had proved his case. But in fact his own evidence disproves his case.

You see Mr. President, when they had this Bogota Conference down there they had a sort of revolution right in the midst of it and some of our Congressmen and various other people were very much put out that our Secret Service agents had not informed them of what was taking place in Bogota. Within the last few days I have read in the papers that Bogota is overrun by foreign secret-service agents; they are just all over the place. The country can hardly be called its own there any more at all, there are so many foreign powers in there finagling for the oil they have. Mr. Lippmann goes on to say:

The key-intelligence dispatch, dated March 23, which he says

which he says was withheld from the State Department by a representative of the Department in Bogota said: "Have confirmed information that Communist-inspired agitators will attempt to humiliate the Secreof State and other members of the United States delegation to the Pan-American Conference upon arrival in Bogota by manifestations and possible personal moles tation." This was in no sense a warning of what happened in Bogota. No attempt made to humiliate the Secretary of State; there were no manifestations against the Secretary of State upon his arrival in Bogota, and he has not been subjected to personal molestation.

This was in no sense, Mr. President, a warning of what happened in Bogota. No attempt was made to humiliate the Secretary of State. In fact, all the dispatches I read said he was treated very well at all times. There were no manifestations against the Secretary of State upon his arrival in Bogota, and he has not been subjected to personal molestation. The fact is that what Admiral Hillenkoetter predicted did not happen, and what did happen was not predicted by Admiral Hillenkoetter.

Mr. Lippmann goes on to say:

A "warning" that Secretary Marshall was going to be molested can hardly be construed as a warning that there was going to be an uprising against the Colombian Government.

When we stop to think about that, it is not any great wonder that they had an uprising against the Colombian Government. I find, since the uprising down there, that the Government has decreed that industries must provide their workers with shoes. That is a great advance, a great concession. Evidently, up to this time there have been a great many of the Colombians who did not even have shoes to wear. I do not see how anyone can expect people to be very satisfied when they have such a low economic state that they do not even have shoes to wear. So at least out of their uprising they did get an order directing the mostly foreign-owned oil companies to buy shoes for their work-They are somewhat better off.

The article continues:

It seems reasonably certain, not only from the uprising in Colombia, but from the condition of the conference, before it was inter-rupted, that the administration, though it had warning of trouble, had not made a successful diagnosis of the trouble. It seems to have fixed its attention on the Communistinspired agitators, and not on the deep and violent popular unrest which was boiling up just under the surface.

The crucial and difficult part of intelligence work is not in spying and the collection of secret information. It is in the appraisal of the information, most of it not secret at all. The first installment of Mr. Churchill's memoirs in Life magazine is worth studying in this connection. There is a passage in which Mr. Churchill tells us how during the years 1931-34, when he was out of office, he managed nevertheless to appraise far more accurately than the government in office what was happening in Nazi Germany.

During those years he worked closely with three men. One was Prof. Frederick Lindemann, later Lord Cherwell, with Desmond Morton, who was in the British Intelligence, and with Ralph Wigram, "then the rising star of the Foreign Office and in the center of all its affairs." Mr. Churchill had access to the same information, scientific intelligence, and diplomatic, as the government. He did not know any more than did the Prime Minister and the government. Yet he understood what he knew and drew the right conclusions whereas they did not understand and drew the disastrously wrong conclusions.

The moral of this story is that while an intelligence agency can serve a government, it is not a device for relieving statesmen of the task of judging correctly and wisely the course of events.

Let me say, Mr. President, that that is the question involved here, whether the right decision has been made. firmly convinced that any decision to saddle peacetime conscription on our country is the beginning of the end of all our traditional freedoms. If I were not firmly convinced of that, certainly I should not be subjecting myself to what I am going through here.

It is a mistake to expect, and foolish of Admiral Hillenkoetter to talk as if we had a right to expect, the Central Intelligence Agency to appraise the situation in Colombia and South America. That was the business of the President and Admiral Leahy, of Secretary Marshall, and Mr. Armour, after they had studied Admiral Hillenkoetter's reports and the State Department's reports. To suppose that an intelligence agency can make these final judgments is in effect to say that the intelligence agency could be not only the eyes and the ears, but also the brains of the Government.

There never was, and there never will be, such an intelligence agency.

The aftermath of the Bogotá explosion shows that it could not have been easy to foresee it. For even by hindsight there is as yet no convincing and consistent story of what happened. That may be due in large measure to the censorship. But I suspect may also be due to something else, something subtler and more misleading.

That something else is the very human propensity to insist on making the facts fit one's stereotyped preconceptions—in this case to treat a South American revolution as a phase of the Russian revolution, and then to suppose that all revolutionary conditions in the world begin and end in Moscow, that but for Moscow there would be no revolu-

In an epoch which is as revolutionary as ours this can be a dangerous infatuation. For it concedes to Moscow exactly what Moscow claims and desires: That all the oppressed and discontented masses of mankind

I think that is a significant statement, Mr. President, in view of what was said on the floor shortly before I started speaking today.

There was the insinuation, the piously expressed hope, that this was not a mission from Moscow. They blame every-thing on Moscow. If you do not like universal military training, if you do not like to see the American people enslaved to a military machine, if you want the American people to remain free, then you are a stooge of Moscow. That is all they know to say, Mr. President. They cannot argue the matter on its merits, so they insinuate. Anybody who speaks up for the preservation of our traditional way of life is a stooge of Moscow. That has been the cry of Fascist sympathizers, I might say, all over the world wherever they hope to destroy freedom and set up a Fascist way of life.

I may say that, with the Senator from North Dakota, who spoke during the night, I want neither fascism nor communism. We want to preserve the American way of life free from military domination.

Across the page from the article by Walter Lippmann which I have just quoted is another by Sumner Welles. These two gentlemen are conceded to be our foremost experts on foreign affairs at least in the field of newspaper columnists. Mr. Welles' article has this heading:

Begotá putsch obscured trend—Hemisphere unity is dissolving.

Of course, I have been contending that our good-neighbor policy was being scuttled. For almost 2 years now I have been warning the American people and the Congress that the good will which Roosevelt built up for us in South America was being dissipated by the greed and disregard of the welfare of our South American neighbors by our cartelists and monopolists, who are down there exploiting those people unmercifully, interfering in their internal affairs, telling them how to run their government, driving their government to take drastic action against workers and workers' movements of any kind.

This is the subhead: "Sumner Welles reports bitter feeling against United States before parley was halted; he denounces patronizing attitude toward the Latins." By Sumner Welles, former Under Secretary of State. This is the body of the article:

Secretary Marshall was right in describing the uprising in Bogotá as an "occurrence that goes far beyond Colombia." But whether the revolt was Communist-inspired, or, what seems more likely, merely Communist-abetted, it has had a tragic impact upon the national life of one of the most truly democratic of the American Republics. It has undoubtedly dealt a blow to the international prestige of the American regional system.

In the long run, however, more harm will result from the fact that public opinion is now going to be so obsessed with a hemispheric Red scare that it will lose sight of the significance of what happened at the conference before the uprising.

The conference provided new evidence that the inter-American system is in real ranger of collapse.

In other words, all the good will that was built up through the good neighbor policy, conceived and put into operation by our great leader Franklin D. Roosevelt, has been dissipated. Mr. Welles says:

For this, Communist intrigues are not responsible. It is due chiefly to our own policies in recent years. The impression of the public here that all is well is being deliberately fostered in Washington.

In other words, when they tell us that we still have the friendship of the Latins they are kidding us. Deliberately fostered is a polite way of saying they are not telling us the truth. If they have told us falsehoods about our relations with South America, it is not the first time we have been deceived by the bipartisan coalition in charge of our foreign policy at the present time. In fact, the Wall Street publication "Financial Age" published an article a while back telling, I do not know for what reason, just to brag, I guess, and let their business clientele see how easy it is to fool the common folks, that our Government sent out two different groups of speakers to sell the Marshall plan. One group went to churches and clubs and told them the Marshall plan was to feed hungry people, especially poor little starving They do not want to forget the babies. Of course, that played on the sympathy of the good church people and tender hearted women's clubs. But they got behind the Marshall plan. Another team of speakers went to businessmen's clubs, chambers of commerce, bankers associations, manufacturers' associations, and this team of speakers, sent out by the State Department to sell the Marshall plan, told these business people, "Now, don't let anybody kid you fellows. Just don't get exicted by what we are telling these women's clubs and church groups about feeding hungry people. This Marshall plan is really designed to get us markets all over the world."

We might expect something like that of Chiang Kai-shek or some of the other governments we have thought of as being corrupt all over the world, but can anyone imagine our Government being so cynical as to send out these different groups of speakers to say different things to different people to try to sell the Marshall plan to them?

The lengths to which they went to sell the Marshall plan were beyond belief. Of course, the appropriation of $10,000,000 out of the taxpayers' money for certain newspapers for services they rendered in selling the Marshall plan is about the ultimate in unmoral governmental dealing.

Mr. Welles goes on to say:

A State Department spokesman has just declared that the inter-American system "is a stronger * * * system than it was at the end of the war."

Mr. Welles said:

Now such a flagrant misstatement of fact as this not only misleads public opinion but also causes this Government's good faith to be questioned in Latin America.

Of course, when the State Department boys said that our inter-American system is stronger than it was at the end of the war perhaps they did not mean in the strength of the ties of friendship that the South Americans may have for us. Perhaps what they meant was in the number of guns they have down there.

Oh, some few years ago there was agitation for the Congress to appropriate money to arm South America. To my knowledge, Mr. President, unless it was slipped through without debate while I was away from the session sometime, we never did act on that matter of appropriating money for South America for armaments, but to the best of my knowledge they got the guns anyhow. This Army of ours pays no attention to what goes on on Capitol Hill. They just send stuff around and arm people to suit themselves. If they cannot figure it out one way they do another. If they cannot buy the new material, guns, and what not, to give to their stooges and protégés, their Fascist henchmen all over the world, then they declare it surplus and just give it to them if they do not happen to have an appropriation.

The next paragraph of Mr. Welles' article has the subheading "A blessing in disguise?" Now let us see what this blessing in disguise is.

Mr. Welles said in his article: On the very day of this statement—

That is when he said that our inter-American system is stronger than at the end of the war.

On the very day of this statement, one of the most widely respected statesmen of Latin America said to me, "Bad as it is, the revolt at Bogotá may prove to be a blessing in disguise. It will probably pull us together in taking effective defense measures. And it has at least postponed the open clash between the United States and the other republics which seemed inevitable before the rebellion occurred."

The feeling against this country at the Bogotá Conference was more bitter than at any inter-American meeting since the Habana Conference of 1928.

Is that not a sad thing, Mr. President, that a man of the reliability of Sumner Welles can say now that the feeling in South America is more bitter against us than at any time since 1928—that was before Roosevelt came in? All that good will has been dissipated. Mr. Welles said:

The United States has falled to show any comprehension of our neighbor's most vital problem. It has refused to admit that they have any right to expect the United States to cooperate in a long-range economic program which would relieve their pressing difficulties, and which, by increasing production and promoting industrialization, would help them to raise the living standards of many peoples now illiterate, undernourished, desperately poor, and without sanitation or decent housing.

Is not that a terrible picture to be able to paint of our next-door neighbors right down here, when we are shipping billions of dollars worth of stuff over to Europe? I just read to this Chamber last evening the report that Europe is allowing food to spoil in warehouses, and manufactured goods to accumulate, because they are unable to sell them in Europe, while our poor South American brothers are in such dire straits. But we refuse to help them. We take the more direct, blunt approach of supplying arms to their corrupt rulers to keep the people in subjugation so they cannot protest against their economic conditions. Just send the bosses guns instead of sending the workers some food.

Mr. Welles proceeds to say:

The worst of it is that the peoples of the other Americas are beginning to think that the United States only remembers them when, as after Pearl Harbor, this country urgently needs their help.

Our misconception of the underlying issue was recently illustrated by an editorial in one of this country's greatest newspapers. It complained that when Secretary Marshall had read to the conference the announcement of President Truman's recommendation that the capital of the Export-Import Bank be increased by $500,000,000 for loans for Latin America the Latin-American delegates listened in stony silence. Their lack of enthusiasm was termed "the last straw."

When folks are starving, our South American neighbors do not appreciate it when we tell them we will loan them some money. When we tell them we will loan them some money and they do not appreciate it, our boys say, "That's the last straw":

This point of view is precisely that of Secretary Marshall and his Cabinet colleagues.

The other American republics had for 3 years been pleading with the United States to join with them in a program which, would safeguard the democratic institutions and insure the future welfare of the hemisphere.

The next subheading is "Flatly turned down." Mr. Welles goes on to say:

They had been flatly turned down. Yet they were apparently supposed to jump to their feet with jubilation—like school children granted a holiday—upon hearing an an-nouncement that was in no sense responsive to their needs, and the purport of which had been published a month before.

The economic program for which they ask would involve no excessive burdens. It would imply the obligation of this Government, when private capital is neither available nor desired, to assure its neighbors of the credits and facilities needed over a period of years to help in carrying out a constructive development plan upon which all the American republics would agree.

Such a program would insure economic stability in the new world. By helping to rebuild trade between Europe and Latin America, it would expedite the European recovery which is our major objective. By increasing purchasing power, it would expand the market for our own exports. The adoption of this program would be the surest means of halting communism, which only prospers in those parts of Latin America where living standards are pitifully low.

Of course, that is true most any place. Where people get a decent economic break, communism has very little appeal. Mr. Welles continues:

The Latin-American Republics want no hand-outs. They do consider themselves entitled to the same friendly cooperation in the solution of their vital problems as that which they gave us during the war.

If the people of the United States want to preserve the inter-American system they must wake up to realities. It is only going to survive if we show our neighbors that we have learned that the welfare of the other Americas is essential to the welfare of the United States.

Mr. President, we are in a Presidential election year. Both old parties have failed to take any action to assure that millions of our citizens will have the right to vote.

Here is an article from the Atlanta Journal. It is headed "One thousand eight hundred and thirty-three of Negro voters purged by Laurens County registrars. Talmadge supporters linked to new board which began work in October.

The article goes on to tell how registered voters have been purged from the They are getting ready down in Georgia to be sure that very few Negro people are allowed to vote. As I have said, the new party has a Negro candidate for the United States Senate down there, and they do not want too many Negroes voting.

This article is written by George Goodwin, Journal staff writer. It reads as follows:

DUBLIN, Ga., May 8 .- Some 1,833 qualified Negro voters have been purged from the Laurens County registration list. The action by the 3-man county board of registrars cut off more than 75 percent of the 2,477 Negroes who were entitled to vote in the last general election.

The list of those removed included landowners, church officers, and college graduates.

In the past they have been a little considerate. If a Negro was somebody, so to speak, if he had landholdings or something else, they might give him a little consideration; but they are becoming a little more desperate now.

The purge started last October, some 5 weeks after Superior Court Judge R. Earl Camp appointed a new board of registrars. The registrars are E. S. Baldwin, chairman; Marvin W. Watson, and Ancil Chavous.

The registrars continued the purge after both the January grand jury and county attorney had ruled that their actions were

It seems that the election registrars down in Georgia pay about as much attention to grand juries and county attorneys as the Army pays to the Congress. The Congress can make rulings, but the Army just goes ahead and does as it pleases.

Political control in Dublin and Laurens County centers in Representative W. Herschel Lovett, one of the strongest Talmadge supporters in Georgia and candidate for the State senate. His political followers include Judge Camp, members of the county Democratic committee, the county commissioners, and members of the board of registrars.

In the 1946 general election Laurens County had about 11,000 registered voters. About 2,477 were colored. Since the 1946 election the Negroes are opposed to Mr. Lovett, both in State and local political matters.

REVEALS PURGE DETAILS

Mr. Watson, who was an assistant registrar before his appointment to the three-man board, and Board Chairman Baldwin told the Journal details of the purge.

The board held its first meeting October 5 and decided to go over the entire registration list. They worked 18 days in October and then stopped the purge until January of this

They stopped when the county attorney ruled that, according to the State law on the duties of registrars, they could not meet before April 20, 1948. He advised the county commissioners not to pay the board members for any days worked before that time. Registrars are paid $6 per day each. However, the commissioners have paid the registrars for all of their time worked.

Judge Camp said he advised the board members they could not meet before January 1. He said that he considered they could meet legally any time after the first of the

CALLED EMERGENCY ACTION

He said he had been told that the old registration list had been lost and that, even if it were not lost, it was somewhat incorrect. He justified the registrars' actions after January 1 as an emergency.

"The registrars had a mammoth task,"

Judge Camp told the Journal.

Actually, the list had not been lost. It was in the possession of the clerk of the court and another copy was in the hands of the tax collector. Board members said they got the list from the tax collector early in October.

The purge got into full swing in January. Chairman Baldwin said the board worked one district's list at a time. They started with Dublin district, where 1,482 colored voters were registered.

The Georgia code states that the fact that voter's name is on the registration list as furnished to the registrars by the tax collector is prima facie evidence of his right to vote.

Most of the Negroes stricken had been registered more than 3 years and had voted in 1946. All had been eligible to vote in November 1946.

Nevertheless, they were stricken from the rolls, and so, of course, were unable to vote.

Here is an interesting article which appeared in the Washington Daily News. It is datelined Birmingham, Ala., June 12. The heading is "Negro Girl Scout camp disbands after threat." The article reads as follows:

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 12.—Authorities today promised to investigate a night raid on a nearby Girl Scout camp by a band of men wearing the white robes and hoods of

Two white Girl Scout instructors conducting a leadership-training course for some 20 Negro girls reported that the masked men broke into their tent late Thursday night and gave them 24 hours to get out.

Scout officials said the camp was broken up yesterday to safeguard the lives of the students and instructors.

Deputy Solicitor H. A. Sullinger, of Besse mer, near which the camp is located, promised an investigation to determine if any State laws had been violated.

In New York, Scout officials said the FBI was checking the incident.

Scout officials identified the threatened white girls as Miss Katrine Nickel, of Birmingham, and Miss Elizabeth Ijams, of Knoxville, Tenn., instructors on the Girl Scouts' national staff.

The two girls reported to Scout headquarters that 8 or 10 men in white robes and hoods, who looked like Klansmen, entered their tent late Thursday night.

The girls said the men awakened them. questioned them about camp operations, and rified their personal belongings, saying they were looking for cards with hammers and sickles on them.

Then the hooded raiders warned them to "get out by tomorrow night," the instructors

Miss Nickel and Miss Ijams were conducting the training course for Negro girls from five Southern States at Camp Bray Fletcher, a short distance south of Bessemer. had separate eating and sleeping facilities, they said.

Scout officials said the purpose of the camp was to train Negro girls in Scout leadership so that they could conduct similar courses for other Negro girls. There are pres-ently no Negro girls in the area to conduct such courses, they explained.

Some Senators become so excited that every speech a Senator makes seems to them to have been written in Moscow, or perhaps written right at home on paper with sickles and hammers on it.

The article states that the hooded raiders explained that they were looking for cards with hammers and sickles on them. Mr. President, what a deplorably sad commentary that is on the state of affairs which exists today in some parts of the United States. In that case the Girl Scouts were trying to train some colored Girl Scouts, so that they, in turn, could train other colored girls in scouting; and hooded men appeared and told them to disband within 24 hours, and said they were looking for cards with hammers and sickles on them. Imagine the hysteria of grown men, presumably, rifling a Girl Scout camp and looking for cards with hammers and sickles on them. It is almost unbelievable.

Mr. President, recently I was in Alabama, and I was arrested for going through the wrong door, it was claimeda door marked "colored"-into a meeting place. I had first-hand experience with conditions in the South. I was arrested and tried for that offense of going through the wrong door. Of course, I was charged with practically everything on the books-disturbing the peace, assault and battery, resisting an officer in the lawful pursuit of his duties, and one or two other charges. I did not resist anyone; I simply tried to enter the hall as gently as I could, and still be firm and get any place. But I was tried. At the trial, the Honorable Oliver B. Hall, recorder, was the judge of the proceedings. I was found guilty and fined $50 and given a 180-day suspended sentence.

I have before me at this time a copy of the statements made by the judge at the time of my sentencing. There is nothing new about those statements. I have heard the same statements before. Any time the question of dealing with Negroes comes up, almost any person from south of the Mason and Dixon's line can be heard making remarks, very similar to those contained in this speech, about how much they love the Negro.

The court had this to say:

There is one statement there that the counsel I have heard so much about for so long, and I have high respect for, made with reference to the publicity, and that the city of Birmingham, Ala., is on trial tonight before the 47 other States.

I think the trial is not shirked at all. We have our laws and we have our customs and we have our problems.

The way and manner in which we have been solving those problems, and the way we are trying still to solve them, is peculiar to our own State or our own section or our own city, and I think we have made admirable progress in solving those problems.

Here, for instance, a short time ago, in my lifetime, it wasn't anything unusual to hear of lynchings, of unlawful homicides, of executions without trial, etc.

Mr. President, I may say that I was told by the Negroes and others in Birmingham that lynchings were out of style.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? I wish to call the Senator's attention—

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I can yield only for a question, I must say. I would be happy to yield; but the rule is being enforced, and I must not yield except for a question.

Mr. President, they no longer have lynchings down South; that draws too much publicity. I am told that just every so often a Negro is shot, but nothing is said about it in the newspapers. That is supposed to be in the line of duty. It has the same effect of intimidating the Negroes, but it does not receive the adverse publicity around about the country.

But to resume with the statement of Recorder Hall:

It has been a long time since I have heard of that. I am proud those things are being wiped out.

There has been a great deal of progress made in the good relations between the races in Alabama and in Birmingham, and it is—progress is being made from time to time.

But we are constantly confronted with some outside influences sometimes that retard that development and retard that progress we have made in those things, and there are spokesmen from other sections of the country coming in here and, for some reason or other, trying to create a discontent among the colored people, and it reacts to their disgrace, reacts to their detriment, reacts to the detriment of society as a whole in trying to create peaceable solutions.

Our solutions have been brought about by men in, and not outside of Alabama, trying to live and let live. There is room in Alabama for two races.

As long as spokesmen from other sections fall to recognize that fact and try to create disruption among the races, they are setting that progress back for generations and doing a disservice to the colored people. They are the ones that suffer. Just last night we had a case in here where a colored man drew a knife on a police officer, and he stated if it hadn't been for the Taylor case, he didn't believe he would have done it.

That is too ridiculous for words. I read further:

That is the thing that makes it so hard for us to solve our problems and makes it so hard for our relations to continue peacefully.

Now, I have seen numbers and numbers and numbers of cases here in Birmingham where there has been a clash between the colored people and the white, where just a few years ago, in your own memories, there wouldn't have been trials in those cases. There would have been lynchings. So, the progress we have made to eliminate lynchings has been our own progress and not the progress by outside spokesmen.

I want to say now to all parties interested, and to the spectators on this side—

I may say, Mr. President, that the court room was divided by an aisle down the center. There was no physical segregation. The colored people were on the left 'side as one faced the judge, or on the judge's right side. So he spoke to the colored people. The court room was full—half colored and half white.

Recorder Hall said, then:

I want to say now to all parties interested, and to the spectators on this side, I don't think there is anyone who can say I am not a friend of the colored people.

That is an old saw. I read further:

I am regarded as such by those friends of mine among the colored peeple that I know and have discussed it with—

I have gone out and asked them, "Don't you think I am your friend?" And they said, "Yes, sir; yes, sir."

And as for the separation of the races, I have not yet seen a man I call a leader among the colored people that wants to break down the progress we have made—

That is the way they put it. Of course, nobody wants to break down progress. They put it that way, "no leader among the colored people wants to break down the progress we have made."

And they do not want that social equality so many people from the outside quarrel for.

Of course, a measure of social equality would be very helpful, Mr. President, so those people could go into a place to eat, go into any kind of place of business or hotel. What would be even better, and what they want more is economic equality, a chance to hold any kind of a job and be advanced according to their ability and not have the color of their skins enter into the proposition.

He says:

They do not want that social equality so many people from the outside quarrel for. They have told me that.

How silly. Of course they have told him that.

They have said: "We don't any more want to go into your homes and eat with you than you want to come into our homes and eat with us."

Well, Mr. President, I may say that I have gone into colored homes and eaten with those people quite often in the past few months, when I have been out over the country, especially in the South. This recorder, Mr. Hall, goes on to say:

They are proud of their race.

Why, sure.

They have got lots to be proud of and they have got lots yet to do. If we are going to have racial equality, it cannot—

Now listen to this, Mr. President-

If we are going to have racial equality, it cannot be done except by bringing the white man down to the level of the colored man.

He delivered that statement right in the face of half of a courtroom full of colored people—that the white man would have to be brought down to the level of the colored man.

The only way we can raise the standard of the colored man is to hold the standard of the white man high and let the colored man catch up.

First, this is the old argument they put up about socialism along the same line. The slickers who oppose socialism ask the farmer, "Do you want the city fellows to come out here? You will have to divide up your sheep and hogs and things with them. Of course, they know that is not true, but it is a good gag for people that do not think. This statement that you cannot bring a colored man up, the white man has to come down to the level of the colored man—no man is asking those things, or that anybody be put on anybody else's level at all. All they ask is that they be given the same opportunity to seek their natural level, Mr. President, which they do not have at the present time.

He says:

Now, if the people from the outside would let us alone and let the white people keep their pace of advancement, they can live side by side and in harmony in Alabama, and so long as outside spokesmen come in and try to create discontent and try to break down that progress that has been made, so long is the chasm between the races going to get wider and wider instead of closer and closer, and I am speaking this to try to create good relations. When those people get to where they feel capable of taking on to themselves the civilization created by the white people all over the world, not only in Alabama, that will be realized.

Mr. President, such a statement as that by the white people all over the world creating civilization. There are many civilizations besides the white. In fact, the whites make up only a small fraction of the people on this earth.

Some of the greatest men in America, some of the greatest men in Alabama, have been from the colored people—

They never fail to pay lip service to and in the future they can keep on producing great people if they keep that discontent and enmity out of their hearts.

It seems to me from the case at bar that whole situation is a publicity play, and if I followed my inclination it would be never to try the case at all but to dismiss it. That is what I would like to see done-to rob it of publicity value, to keep it from reacting to the benefit of other people in some other quarters that have deliberately tried to create a situation where this type of publicity would

The reason I think it was deliberately planned and accomplished, the defendant in this case, after the occurrence, immediately hied away to Washington to make a speech before the United States Senate, and then came on back to appear before the court, riding on an airplane to and from.

That is a serious offense, Mr. President, "riding on an airplane, to and from."

If that is not creating publicity, creating a situation for the publicity that might accrue to him, I cannot see any other reason.

I may say that the whole thing was quite unpremeditated. I went down to address the Southern Negro Youth Conference. I had told them in the beginning that I would not and could not address a segregated meeting. When I got down there the sessions were supposed to start on Friday. They did not get started until Saturday, because they could not find a place to hold their meet-They would make arrangements for a Negro church. Mr. Bull Conner, the city manager, chief of police, or whatever he is, would call the Negro preacher down to headquarters and tell him that he did not want him letting this outfit meet in his church. Well, in each case the Negro minister would argue about it and say that he had a right to let them use the church. Mr. Conner would then say, "Well, we may not have any legal authority to stop the meeting, but there is always the Klan"these gentlemen I read about a while ago, who broke up the Girl Scouts' meeting. They did not get their meetings started until Saturday. They started to hold a meeting, some of them sitting on opposite sides of the aisle. It was a little church with one aisle. However, on the platform the colored and white sat together.

The police broke into the meeting that afternoon and arrested several of them and said they were not physically segregated. Then they laid a door down across the aisle about 4 rows from the front of this little Negro church, and nailed it across the single aisle. In that way, to get into either the back section or the section nearest the front door, one had to enter at the front door; to get in the front section, he had to come in at a side door. With only one aisle in the place, they made the door at the front of the building the Negro entrance, and around on the side was the white entrance. When they told me the meeting was segregated, they did not tell me about the physical arrangements. They just told me it was segregated. I told them I would not address the meeting, it was against my principle and against the policies of the new party to address segregated meetings.

They said, "Well, just come down and say 'Hello' to the boys and girls and tell them why you cannot address them. Just put in an appearance, anyhow." said, "All right." I went down to the meeting in a taxicab, and when I got out in front of the Negro church, some of the Negroes were out there to meet me, and they said, "Senator, this is the Negro entrance. You will have to go around to the side door."

If that had been the white entrance, I would have walked up, gone in, told them what I had to say, and that would have been the end of it. But I would not put myself out and walk around the side of the building to help the police to enforce their insulting segregation laws against the Negro people. So I walked up to the front door and was unceremoniously arrested. So it was not premeditated, Mr. President.

Recorder Hall goes on to say:

Now, we have a distinguished visitor. We are happy to have distinguished visitors wherever they might come from. The defendant is a Senator from the State of Minnesota.

And then a voice in the audience said "Idaho." The court corrected himself and said "Idaho." Then he said:

It is a great State and a great people. He has reached fame and notoriety all over the United States, as well as in his own State, but he comes to Alabama and attempts to obtain publicity by breaking our laws. I have before me a distinguished United States Senator, a member of the highest branch of the legislative department in the United States. For that I honor him and respect him, but I am not trying him on his honor or on his respect here tonight. I have got to try him on the facts. I would say there is no other police recorder in the State of Alabama, anyhow, that has had the distinction of trying a member of the highest legislative group in the land-

"Laughter" is interpolated hereand it is not, Senator, an altogether pleasant

I might say, Mr. President, that this Mr. Hall was a very pleasant gentleman.

It is embarrassing to us, that I know, but it is a duty, and I can't do otherwise, but it is embarrassing just the same.

I came into town Sunday afternoon from a long trip. This case happened before I got here and I found it was in my lap. Em-barrassing situations have come up. I have tried cases I hated to try, and this is one of them, but I would like to remind the Senator from Idaho, being temporarily in Alabama, a casting rod is better publicity for a poli-tician than breaking the law [laughter and some applause], and it seems sometimes it is a little more successful.

With those efforts of trying to ease the situation that has created tenseness in the crowd, tenseness on the part of the ccurt, tenseness on the part of the Senator, I threw that in for good measure and I am glad you were able to laugh about it. I am not trying to be a comedian but I am glad we still have sense of humor. As long as we can keep that sense of humor there is no danger our becoming involved in things that can't be eliminated. I am not rebuking you for that outburst. However, it isn't proper

Now, I am saying all that for this purpose: to say I believe the defendant is guilty as charged, and I am conscious, at the same time, that in doing that I am probably playing right into the hands of the publicity that was in my opinion deliberately started, but be that as it may I have got to do what I think is right. In doing that I am cunningly jockeyed into a position of thus creating publicity for somebody to use for the benefit of their own purposes.

A United States Senator is supposed to know more about the laws than anybody on earth because they make them. I think, as such, they are chargeable with more knowledge, with more duty to obey them.

We like distinguished visitors here.

have had a few, but very few of them to come equal to this defendant's station in life, but when they do come we are proud of them and welcome them, but when a guest comes in our midst and deliberately sets about to violate our laws, then I don't think it fitting or proper that such conduct should be treated in any light manner. I think the evidence shows a deliberate intent here to violate the law, and if there was that intent the vio-lator necessarily did it premeditatedly.

I realize the case has been exaggerated out of all proportion to its importance, and I am going to go the limit of only justice in setting the penalty. I am not going to set it at the minimum. We have our laws, they may at some time be changed but until that time comes we must obey them.

I find the defendant guilty and set his fine at $50 and 180 days in the city jail.

I understand the Senator has complained about our jail. I am not going to require him to go over there just at the same time, and I am going to suspend the jail sentence, and by that time the campaign for which this publicity was created will be just about over, and if the probation of 6 months has been kept, and there has been no violation of our laws within the jurisdiction of this court, then there will be no invoking of the 180 days suspended sentence, but if, for any reason, any of the laws of this city are violated by the defendant while he is in this jurisdiction during the next 180 days then the suspended sentence will be revoked.

So, Mr. President, I was fined $50 and I drew a suspended sentence of 180 days.

I read a moment ago an article concerning a Klansman invading a Negro Girl Scouts' camp and breaking it up. Here is an article from the Chicago Sun-Times. It says:

Loyalty quiz rocks Oak Ridge scientists.

A loyalty quiz of the scientists down there is being conducted. They will wreck our entire atomic-energy program with their witch hunts. Scientists are not stupid people and they will not stand for having their loyalty questioned all the time, as has been done since the Red scare arose.

The article is dated at Oak Ridge, Tenn. It says:

The most important impression of the loyalty investigation now going on here, under which 2 men have already been suspended and as many as 35 may be hauled up, is that no one finds it anything but distasteful; not unnaturally, the scientists who have been hauled up and those who fear they may be next to undergo the procedure find it hateful. John C. Franklin, Director of Oak Ridge for the Atomic Energy Commission, winces when the subject is broached, for he knows it may be the end of his great research institute. The board that hears the cases is composed of men who are sunk in gloom over their task. The best they can say is that the law directs that the job be done, and, therefore, they must go ahead and do it.

Is not that a sad situation, Mr. President? We have gone crazy in this country, going around investigating people, and even the investigators feel terrible about it. Their heart is not in it. A few Red-baiters are responsible for the whole business.

The worst of it seems to be that no person at Oak Ridge came to this reporter's attention who thought that any of the men are loyalty risks under any reasonable test that could be devised.

Even the remarks of the men who actually hear the cases indicated that they have not been impressed by the dossiers upon which they must base their search.

It is clear that in an organization as tightly integrated as Oak Ridge, where almost all the technical people live and work in close association, a man whose loyalty was suspect would soon be known to his fellows. The men and women here insist that no such person exists in Oak Ridge.

(The United Press reported from Oak Ridge that the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers in a statement Wednesday said that technical personnel at the atomic plant are "seriously demoralized" by the accusations against their colleagues. The association said the charges were "mostly trivial," chiefly based on "unsubstantiated rumors," and some completely false.)

HOW IT'S DONE

At the hearings the suspected worker is furnished a list of charges against him. He may present witnesses and retain counsel, at his own expense, and he is given a transcript of the hearing.

That is better than most Government employees get.

But the men who have been heard believe that most of the charges could have been checked without any trouble before the charging procedure was invoked.

There is some more in this whole business of witch hunting and what not.

Mr. President, I should like to correct the Pathfinder magazine. This is an old publication. I understand it has now come under the domination of Mr. Pew, the famous Republican boss up in Philadelphia. He is using it simply as a campaign propaganda weapon, I guess, because it had a wide circulation all across this Nation. For many years people learned to respect the magazine, but now it is taken over by Mr. Pew, and the respect and confidence which the magazine had built up through the years is prostituted for political use.

In the page Under the Dome, which is printed to simulate a typewriter page—it seems most every magazine has one now, or a similar page, telling all the secret dope—the first item has this to say:

Unless interest in his third party revives, Henry Wallace may give up his crusade and withdraw as a Presidential candidate before the Democratic Convention in July. He thinks his opportunity even 4 years hence is lost, and TAYLOR, his running mate, is pressuring him to drop the fight.

Mr. President, to the best of my knowledge I am convinced that Mr. Wallace has no intention of withdrawing from the race. We have talked it over and can see no possibility of any nominee winning either nomination who would be acceptable. As for the last sentence, that "Taylor, his running mate, is pressuring him to drop the fight," that is an outright falsehood, with no basis in fact whatever. I never at any time even suggested to Mr. Wallace that we should give up the fight. So Pathfinder was just talking through its hat, without any reason to say such a thing.

Back in March there appeared an article in the New York Herald Tribune which said: "Purge of Greek leftists called gesture to United States."

We have read in the papers day in and day out about all the Greeks who were being murdered by the government in power, which we are supporting over there, and, as I said last evening, it got so bad that the British had to protest, the French protested, the Norwegians protested, and perhaps others did, too, whose protest I did not see. Anyway, they decided then that instead of shooting the prisoners in great bunches, sometimes hundreds of them at one time, they would bring them out and shoot them only 10 or 20 at a time, and it would not attract so much attention. They did not kill fewer, but they did not kill so many at one time.

This article appeared in March, and it said:

Ex-minister says Athens sees Truman doctrine requiring repressions.

In other words, the Greeks have decided that what we want is for them to kill off all the opposition, that there would be less trouble that way, no difficulty about fighting them, and one thing and another.

The article, which is by Homer Bigart, by wireless to the Herald Tribune, reads:

ATHENS, March 7.—Nicholas Kolyvas, former Minister of Justice, said today that the current wave of mass arrests, deportations and executions was the result of the Greek government's interpretation of the Truman doctrine. It believes, he said, that Washington desires ruthless suppression of the Left as an implementation of President Truman's "containment of Communism" theme.

Mr. President, we have been responsible, with this Truman doctrine, for more misery in Greece than has been visited on that sad people for many, many years, and that is saying a great deal. They have had many trials and tribulations. But we have certainly caused them more grief and misery in the last 2 years than they had had for many years previous to that.

We are ruthlessly, indiscriminately bombing the so-called rebel villages. It got so bad that they had to send their children to Yugoslavia, where they are being taken care of by the Yugoslavs. The Greek Government, the installed government we are supporting, the same government that Adolf Hitler supported, has said that these children were kidnaped, and are in Yugoslavia against their will. But last week there was a series of articles in the New York Herald Tribune, I believe by their Balkan correspondent who had gone to Yugoslavia. He said he saw no evidence that these displaced persons camps for Greeks on Yugoslav soil were military in any way, no military training or preparation was visible, and the people said they had no communication with their homeland at all. The Yugoslavs were just taking care of the children out of the goodness of their hearts.

The correspondent goes on to say:

Mr. Kolyvas, Justice Minister in the Plastiras government at the time of the Varkiza agreement of February 12, 1945, under which the ELAS Leftist resistance force was disbanded, said he say no moral justification for the recent execution of ELAS members for alleged crimes committed during the German occupation. After so long an imprisonment—several were first jailed in the weeks immediately after the Varkiza agreement—it scarcely was humane to march them out and shoot them, he said.

In other words, Mr. President, here we are faced with the sorry spectacle of a country controlled by the United States. They would not do these things if we told them positively not to do them, but here in Greece they take prisoners out of jails and prison camps, where they have been incarcerated since Hitler's occupation. The crimes were committed against Hitler's occupation authorities at our behest. We told them over the underground radio that if they would sabotage Hitler we would be there right away and save them. We got there. Some of them got caught, but we got there before they were shot, and I guess they thought they were going to be saved. But for some strange reason they did not get out of jail. They stayed in jail until just this spring, and then they were taken out of jail finally, but instead of giving them an annuity and a medal for their services to democracy, to the cause of the Allies in the recent world war, we lined these poor wretches up and shot them, Mr. President; killed them for crimes committed against Hitler's occupation.

Of course, no freedom-loving people are going to like an American occupation any better than a Hitler occupation, especially when it is no better, which ours is not, over there in Greece. We are supporting exactly the same people, and they are just as ruthless in suppressing their own people now as they were when they were working for Hitler.

"I suppose I'll be labeled a Communist and a traitor for saying this," Mr. Kolyvas said, "but I believe these convictions should have been reviewed. Remember, some of these crimes were committed in a period of extreme political upheaval, when murder often was regarded as patriotic. At that time, both British and American broadcasts were urging the EAM (National Liberation Front) to neutralize and repress all elements collaborating with the Germans.

"Undoubtedly, there were murders motivated by personal vengeance rather than patriotism, but in a period of anarchy such cases are difficult to clarify.

"For that reason," Mr. Kolyvas said, "the amnesty granted under the Varkiza agreements should have covered all crimes committed during the occupation. In any event," he said, "the present purge is dangerously crude and has already eclipsed most of the fundamental liberties guaranteed by the Greek constitution."

CALLS REGIME REPRESSIVE

In the matter of individual freedom, the coalition government of Liberals and Populists (Royalists) -created last September by Lov W. Henderson, State Department director of Near Eastern and African Affairshas proved far more repressive than even the predominantly Rightist governments which preceded it, Mr. Kolyvas maintained.

In other words this former Greek officials says that the Government now under our occupation is more severe, more repressive, than it was even under Hitler's occupation.

He said thousands of suspected leftists have been deported without trial, journalists arrested for criticizing the government and civil servants purged for disloyalty without benefit of the right of appeal.

Mr. Kolyvas believes a political formula can still be found for restoring peace. Two weeks ago, he visited his native island of Zante and, at the request of its residents, arbitrated an agreement whereby all political groups agreed to bury the hatchet, dis-band their armed organizations and live in Liberal deputies at Athens today deas unconstitutional a decree nounced adopted Friday of a parliamentary committee giving to the military council power to drop 60 senior army officers. Most of the officers are liberals, and the liberal deputies hinted they were being discharged for political reasons by the predominantly royalist military council. Mr. President, what I have been reading concerning what is occurring in Greece is very pertinent to what is happening here in America. We have just read how the government over there has discharged all officers of liberal political leanings. If the peacetime draft becomes the law of America I am confident that this weeding-out process, getting rid of all liberals, will be continued here in America, and eventually the Army will just be a tool of reaction and police organization to see that there is no industrial disturbance of any kind taking place. They refuse to try to evolve some plan whereby the workers of America can be paid enough to enable them to buy the great abundance which they can produce in the sweat of their brow. Labor will not stand for that al-Every time labor gets an increase, the prices increase about twice as much, and labor just gets further behind. Well, when they see that there is potential abundance, so much that we have to figure out a Marshall plan to dump it abroad, on people who already have overproduction of their own, so much that we have to figure some way to curtail production, about the best way they can figure is an armament economy, put great segments of our people to building useless articles, articles of destruction like tanks, airplanes, and guns, and that keeps things scarce so prices stay up. And in order to perpetuate such an unfair state of affairs and not let the workers enjoy the good things they can produce, they will have to have a great army thoroughly disciplined and reactionary in leadership.

I have appointed several boys to Annapolis and West Point, and I always try to select them from the families of workmen and farmers. I figure that the socalled upper classes have had plenty of representation at West Point and Annapolis. But always I have a talk with these boys before they go there, and I ask them to please remember the background from which they came, to remember that these Army officers, these West Point and Annapolis folks are wined and dined and feted, and that they tend to forget that there are any common people in the world at all. They live in a world apart. They lose touch with the common people. So the last word I always say to my nominees to West Point and Annapolis is to urge them to please remember and keep that spark of sympathy for the common people whence they came.

Here is another little article of interest. It is from Istanbul, March 7, an Associated Press dispatch. It is headed: "Turkey wants United States aid to take economic form."

I said last evening that we had sent Turkey so many guns they had had to ask us would we please mind stop sending more, and send them instead something to eat. Here is the article on which I based that statement last night. It savs:

Turkish sources said tonight the government would like to change the military character of the American-aid program so that it would concentrate instead on Turkey's sagging economic structure.

Consequently, Turkey was expected to ask that a new American mission come here for an economic survey. It was presumed the Turks hoped such a mission would propose that any additional financial aid to bolster Turkey against possible Russian threats be not wholly military, as was the initial grant of $100,000,000.

Ankara sources who cannot be quoted said the military aid program was drawn up in haste. They said the general staff had no time to consider all the aspects of the program suggested by the first American mis-

At the time stories were going about that Turkey had not asked for aid, that we just went over and insisted that they take it. They insisted that they did not want it, and we had to threaten them to make them take our aid. But we got them to do it. We are too smart for those fellows.

A study during the last few months, these sources said, has convinced the general staff and Cabinet members that both American and Turkish funds could be better utilized if the program was aimed at restoring the country's economy.

Recently the world witnessed one of the most interesting incidents in all history when the President of the United States recognized Israel 10 minutes after the creation of the state was proclaimed. The reports from Lake Success are certainly humiliating to any American who has any pride in being an American-and I suppose that includes all of us. But it was embarrassing after the reports that Warren Austin would resign because he had been so insulted by not even being informed of the fact that we had recognized Israel that many people thought he would have to resign to save face.

Here is an article headed "Austin denies again he'll quit over Palestine. Sudden United States recognition of Israel revives reports; other delegates critical."

The article is by Fendall Yerxa, and reads as follows:

LAKE SUCCESS, LONG ISLAND, May 15 .- Warren R. Austin, United States representative to the United Nations, issued a flat denial today to widely published reports that he would resign his post because of the Government's Palestine policy.

"If you ask me whether I have resigned, I haven't. If you ask me whether I am going to resign, I am not." Mr. Austin told reporters here before he attended a hastily summoned meeting of the Security Council to discuss the Palestine war.

At the same time, there was silence from the American delegation and caustic criti-clsm from foreign countries in reaction to President Truman's sudden de facto recognition of the new Jewish state of Israel. It was this action, committed without any tip-off to Mr. Austin and his staff, that led to a renewal of reports that Mr. Austin was considering quitting his post.

Of course there was absolutely no excuse for the President recognizing Israel without even informing our delegate to the United Nations. He made up his mind on the spur of the moment, no doubt, to try to get the Jewish vote back, but he could have picked up the telephone. It would have taken him only a minute to call Lake Success and say, "Listen, Warren, I have recognized Pal-estine." He could have hung up and let it go at that. But he did not even bother to do that, and it put our delegates in a most embarrassing position.

Announcement of United States recognition of the new Zionist state threw the American delegation into confusion when it burst upon the final meeting of the General Assembly special session at Flushing Meadow Park last night. Alternate delegate Francis B. Sayre had to take the podium in the Flushing meeting hall and confess that the Nation's official spokesmen before the world congress did not know what their Government was doing.

The delegation had regained some of its composure today. Reporters seeking an explanation of why the President and State Department apparently left their UN representatives in the dark were deftly parried.

But members of some of the foreign delegations were not so casual about it. Three delegates from one of the western European countries were sharply critical. One of them said he wondered how any country in the world could hereafter place its trust in American foreign policies or the pronouncements of American spokesmen in international parleys.

Mr. Austin, quickly surrounded by reporters when he entered the Lake Success delegates' lounge, was jovial in response to their queries on his reported resignation. He declared that he was puzzled by the reports, and added that they had been circulated recently on three occasions.

When his Government did not have enough confidence in him, presumably, even to notify him that it was recognizing Israel, no wonder there were rumors that he would resign. I suppose it was not a lack of confidence, but merely a lack of coordination.

Mr. President, if some Russian soldiers get into an argument with American soldiers, there is a great to do about it. An incident is stirred up. But just the other day we read in the newspapers that our bombing planes had bombed some Korean fishermen and killed about 14 or 16 of them. If the Russians came over and did that to our Mexican friends I am afraid there would be a terrible hubbub and hullabaloo about it.

Here is an interesting article. While we are sending billions of dollars' worth of goods over to Europe, the heading in this article in PM, dated June 4, is Freak Slump in Britain. It reads as follows:

LONDON, June 4.—High taxes and high prices appeared to be forcing Great Britain into a freak depression today, despite critical shortages of essential consumer goods.

While Commons was bemoaning a proposed 25-percent cut in Britain's slice of Marshall plan aid and its possible effect on the import program, informed sources in the financial district said a buyer's strike was developing in London.

"You can't sell a handbag these days," one store manager said. "People just won't buy. Radio sets are piling up and furniture no longer is in demand."

This easing off of consumer demand was in sharp contrast to the long period of indis-criminate public buying which followed the war. People still want things, apparently, but they just haven't got the money to buy

Even the recent relaxation of rationing regulations did little to improve things. Stocks still are piling up in stores all over the country. Informed quarters in the "City," Britain's Wall Street, said the reluctance to buy ranged from luxury items to vacuum cleaners.

COMMONS WORRIED

Despite this situation, however Commons sat all night last night debating the finance bill and worrying about how much money the United States of America is going to allot Britain under the European recovery program. Most of this money will go for imports and raw materials to keep British factories going.

That is a strange thing, Mr. President. We are sending them goods, and yet they find it necesary to have bargain sales to try to get rid of what they have over there.

Mr. President, in the issue of United States News and World Report of May 21, 1948, there is an article about various draft plans. The heading is: "Europe's peacetime draft; comparison with United States plan."

The reports for the article come from London, Paris, and Washington.

The article says:

Peacetime draft, now being debated in the United States, already is under way in all major countries. Service is from 4 months to 3 years.

British youths are called up at 18, Russians at 19, Frenchmen at 20. Most countries defer students, professional trainees, hardship cases. But most men go into reserves until middle age.

Then follows a comparison giving the highlights of the various draft systems in Europe. They are quite interesting.

It says:

If the United States revives the draft, it will be joining all the major nations of the world in building a peacetime conscript

Mr. President, if that is any consolation to us-that we are joining all the major nations of the world-I suppose we had better go ahead and pass this The article then says:

Investigation shows that no major power now depends on volunteers, except the United Of 54 countries with military estab-States. lishments, 48 use some form of compulsory

United States plans, before Congress, are to draft nonveterans 19 to 25 for 2 years of service. Youths of 18 also may be called. This issue raises the question of how other countries recruit their armies.

European nations call their youths to the colors at ages generally ranging from 18 to Length of service varies from 4 months to 3 years. Only countries with no draft at all are Germany and Austria, which have no armies, and Eire, which still uses volun-

Mr. President, it seems that we did the Germans and the Austrians a great favor when we whipped them. They used to have universal military training, and we did not. Then they got into a war, and we whipped them. Now they do not have any army, so they do not have universal military training; but we have taken on such responsibilities that we are told we must have universal military training. So we have traded places with those folks. They used to be kicked around by the army, but now we have traded with them on that, and we are going to let ourselves be kicked around and receive the same sort of treatment which brought them to such a sad end.

The article further says:

Great Britain calls her young men at the age of 18 for 22 months of service. Progressive reductions in terms of service are to be made for men drafted after June 1, so that those called up in December will serve only 18 months.

After January 1, however, new draftees will serve 12 months, followed by 6 years in the reserves. Not only 18-year-olds, but nonveterans up to the age of 26 will be liable for service. Temporary deferments may be granted to students, apprentices and hard-ship cases at the discretion of draft authori-

Mr. President, these draft plans just cannot be worked out equitably. There is "pull" connected with them, no matter what kind of a scheme is adopted. Some boys have to go. Others, who have "ins," are able to escape service.

The article says:

Deferments also are to be granted to doctors and dentists undergoing technical training.

Perhaps that is necessary; but is it fair, Mr. President, simply because a boy is sent to college by his parents to study medicine or dentistry, that he shall be deferred, while some poor boy who did not have the opportunity to receive such an education in the first place has to

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. IVES in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Michi-

Mr. TAYLOR. I can yield for a question, as I understand the situation. So I am happy to yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I wish to ask the Senator if he can advise the Senate how long he intends to speak, so that we may know when the motion may be put to the Senate.

Mr. TAYLOR. It is my intention to speak as long as I can hold the floor, and only the Lord knows how long that will

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question? Mr. TAYLOR. I am happy to yield for a question. Mr. FERGUSON. Does the Senator mean he intends to speak as long as he can stand up?

Mr. TAYLOR. That is correct.

Mr. President, I was giving a résumé of the draft plans in effect in Europe. I feel that if enactment of the proposed law can just be put off a little while, as soon as the Congress has time to go home and talk to the people at home-and the international situation is quieting down now, of course-I do not believe the Congress will enact this proposed draft legislation.

But, Mr. President, once a draft is fastened upon a country, it is almost impossible to get rid of it. It grows like a cancer. As Charles Beard said in the testimony which I read last night, once you get such a system fastened upon you, it strikes down all your liberties, and the country becomes a regimented state, and the people lose their liberties-just as was the case in Germany. Mr. Beard was very bitter against the draft proposal.

Mr. President, I am sorry that I feel compelled to do this; but since we are in the process of losing all our ancient liberties, if I can just postpone this matter a little while, this urge to emulate the countries of Europe, which in the past we have vanguished with our free country, I think the urge for the adoption of the proposed draft system will pass, and we shall regain our equilibrium and our sanity and will have no more of this business. But once we adopt it, of course, it is much harder to get rid of rather than to prevent in the first

I read further from the article:

Deferments also are to be granted to doctors and dentists undergoing technical training. But they must serve their terms before they reach 30. Coal miners are exempt from service now. Agricultural workers may be let off next year.

France keeps conscripts in service only 12 months, but this may soon be raised to 15 or 18 months. Youths are called up at 20, then serve in the reserves until age 48. Deferments are granted to students up to 3 years before starting their training. Some coal miners also are deferred temporarily

Russia drafts her young men into service mostly at the age of 19. Only enough youths mostly at the age of 19. Only enough youths are called to fill a quota set each year. These usually are the men who are most fit, physically and mentally.

Others are put into second-line reserves, subject to call within 5 years. Also in the second-line reserves, but subject only to war-time call are vouths with slight physical.

time call, are youths with slight physical defects and those with two disabled parents, or a father over 60 and a mother over 55.

Conscripts serve from 2 to 5 years, depending on the branch of service. Infantrymen serve 2 years, navy men 5. Longer-term re-cruits usually are volunteers. Deferments generally are granted only for remediable physical defects and to permit completion of secondary-school education.

Belgium and Holland have military conscription. Mr. President, that strikes me as rather ridiculous. They have military conscription, but they are so small they cannot even retard the progress of an enemy of any consequence. In the last war the Germans simply ran over them roughshod. They might just as well—in fact, they would have been much better off if they had had no army, because they put up practically no resistance, anyhow, and were just slaughtered in the process. Yet here they are, right back at the old stand with their draft again, setting up the dinky little army, no good to anybody.

Belgium and Holland call up their youths at age 18. Belgian boys serve 1 year. No more than four sons are drafted from any one family, and deferments are granted liberally for completion of high school, college, and religious studies, as well as for some workers in vital trades. There is no enlisted Dutch youths ordinarily serve 1 year, too. But because of the fighting in Indonesia, they now are held in service for almost 2 years. Conscripts get 3 months' training at home, then are sent to Indonesia. Upon release, they are enrolled in the reserves until 45.

Isn't that terrible, Mr. President, to draft those young men in Holland and ship them over to Indonesia, to browbeat and cow the people in Indonesia, who love their freedom just the same as the Dutchmen love their freedom? Recently the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Taft] said that the amount of aid we have given Holland under the Marshall plan approximates the amount of money they have spent in reconquering Indonesia. In other words, we are financing Holland's imperialism.

Sweden and Denmark require only 11 months' service. Danes register at 17, may volunteer at 18 or 19 and are drafted at 20. Only enough youths are called up to fill an annual quota. Selection is on a basis of physical and mental examinations. Students are deferred while studying. Conscientious objectors are given civilian tasks.

scientious objectors are given civilian tasks.

Swedish youths usually are called up in their 20th year. But training may be deferred until the 25th year for educational or other good reasons. Those physically unfit are assigned to noncombatant duties. Women are employed in training camps for service duties. Reserves are subject to call until age 47.

Norway calls up her youth at 19 for 1 year's service. Sailors and fishermen are assigned to the Navy, others to the Army or Air Force. Students are deferred until they graduate. Reserves are subject to call until

Here is the best plan of them all. This is Switzerland.

Switzerland trains its youth in a citizens' militia, instead of in the regular army. Most boys are called up when they finish secondary school, usually in their 19th year. Cavalrymen serve 130 days, others 116 days. But an additional 200 days of training is given all men during the next 20 years in 3-week refresher courses.

After completing basic training, the recruit takes home his rifle, uniform, and other equipment, including his horse or motorcycle, if a mounted soldier. This equipment is looked over at annual inspections until age 48, when it becomes the citizen's personal

Mr. President, I think that would be the most sensible thing, if we simply had to have some kind of program, to train everybody regardless of health, practically, unless they were just inca-pacitated; but to turn a man down because he has a punctured ear drum or because his sight is not exactly up to snuff strikes me as silly. We ought all to be trained. Then let us take our rifle and equipment home, and in case we get a blitz of atomic bombs-I do not know what you could do; you could not shoot the bombs, but at least everybody would be ready to go, and it would be more democratic, instead of getting into an army when you are pushed around and lose your initiative and get used to being ordered around.

Other European countries draft their youths at the age and for the terms of service listed below:

*Country	Age	Service (months)
Italy Turkey Poland Spain Czechoslovakia Greece Portugal Yugoslavia.	20-21 20 21 20 20 20 21 21 21 21	12 36 18 24 24 24 24 15

Outside Europe, all countries except the United States, the Dominican Republic, and four British dominions—Australia, Canada, India, and New Zealand—practice conscription.

Thus, if the United States adopts peacetime selective service, it will be following a custom long practiced in most countries, with age and service requirements more stringent than under most systems in Europe, but more lenient than some.

That is a fact, Mr. President. If we have this we will doubtless be following customs long established in European countries where they have incessant wars, where the people have very few of the liberties we are accustomed to and enjoy in this country, and yet here we are on the point of following their very poor example.

Mr. President, I should like to point out that the Army's whole handling of the manpower situation suffers from the same kind of thinking. The Army always wants more men than it can use. That is what the generals are doing all the time, both in peace and in wartime. They are thinking about the future, how they can remain generals. They do not want peace, that is, firm peace; they want an uneasy, cold war. That is what they like. They are proposing to draft more doctors for the newly enlarged armed forces.

Mr. President, a few days ago I saw a story which stated that the whole civilian population is suffering from a bad and growing shortage of doctors that might prove disastrous. The shortage is greatest in the rural areas. I suppose the Army's prescription for the shortage is to take more young men out of the rural areas than they take from out of the cities, which will somewhat relieve the demand for doctors.

I should like to place these facts before the Senate, so it may judge for itself as to the wisdom of removing doctors from areas in which they are badly needed. There is no one part of the country that does not need doctors. This little article is from the Gazette and Daily, of York, Pa. I happen to know the editor of the newspaper. It is one of the few really liberal newspapers in the United States. It is a remarkable publication. How it has kept going all through the years, when almost all liberal publications have gone to the wall, is somewhat of a mystery.

The title of the article is the Shortage of Doctors, by the Physicians Forum. Every week in medical journals throughout the country scores of rural communities plead for help. Yes, Mr. President, the small communities of this Nation have a terrible shortage of doctors. They need doctors; they are desperate for them.

It is no easy matter to see your wife or child in pain, with no doctor available inside of 50 or 100 miles. I have gone through that experience and have seen my wife and child needing medical attention, which they could not get, not because there was not a doctor within 100 or 500 miles, but because it was back in the good old depression days, right in the depths of the depression, and I did not have money to hire a doctor. I was an itinerant, moving from community to community. In those days if one did not have his roots down somewhere, he was in bad shape indeed. There were so many people who were patients that the doctors were pretty callous toward any outsiders who happened to be in unfortunate circumstances. So both my wife and baby needed medical attention but could not get it. I know what that means. That is why I am sympathetic to people who are unable to obtain medical care. I believe we should have a medical plan in this country to enable poor people to get medical care. I have always been for that idea and am still for it. Of course it lays one open to the charge of being a Communist if he wants to get a doctor, even if he cannot afford to pay for it.

There are about 150,000 active licensed physicians in America, one for every 930 persons. That sounds high enough, but on closer examination we find that this is true in only 470, 15 percent, of the 3,000 or more counties. In 1,642 counties, 55 percent have one doctor for every 2,000 persons; in 600 counties, 5 percent or 1 doctor for every 2,000 to 3,000 persons. Thirty-seven counties have no doctors at all.

I should not be surprised if one or two of those counties were in Idaho. I can think of some counties there which are very sparsely settled and probably could not support a doctor.

I read:

The situation is generally the worst in rural States. The average farming community is unable to muster enough buying power to support good doctors. The poor health of farmers and farm workers is almost a direct result of this situation,

I remember, Mr. President, when we used to think of the farm as a healthy place on which to live. We are going to send our sickly children out to the farm, and they would get well and be robust in no time and return to us sparkling with good health. But that is not the fact any more. It used to be the case that the slum dwellers in the cities were the most underprivileged and, consequently, their health suffered the most. But in these days it is the farm children who are the most underprivileged and whose health is the poorest, and for that reason they produce the poorest physical specimens. They desperately need medical care.

Even in the largest cities, with one physician for every 600 persons, a majority of the 600 probably cannot afford a doctor. Because of this the health of most low-income city families is as poor as that of farm families. The rest of the 600, that is, those who either have the cash or are covered by some form of health insurance, often have to wait weeks for an appointment. When the long-awaited day arrives, they frequently have a 15- to 20minute session with a tired, overworked physician who has neither the time nor the energy to do an adequate examination. The situation is even worse if the patient happens to be a Negro.

Most Negroes cannot afford to pay a doctor's fee, and even the few who are fortunate enough to have the ready cash cannot even buy the service because of the scarcity of physicians who will treat colored patients. There are approximately 4,000 Negro physicians and approximately 12,000,000 Negroes in the country. That is about one doctor for every 3,000 Negroes.

Few white private doctors treat Negroes. Too many of them subject the Negroes to humiliation. The quality of medical care which the American Medical Association and most health workers consider of primary importance is therefore deteriorating be-cause of the inadequate supply of physicians. The situation is becoming gradually Modern medical practice requires more services, of better quality, from the practicing doctor. He is supposed to give more careful consideration to the mental problems of his patients. Seventy-five percent of all private patients. Seventy-nee per-lems, and they require more of the physi-cian's time. Doctors are expected to do more complete physical examinations in orto do der to discover cancer, heart disease, and other killers in their early curable stages. This, too, requires more time per patient. Today a practitioner must take time out from his busy practice. a national health insurance program on social security lines to lift the financial barriers to adequate medical care. This program, together with hospital con-struction legislation, will make it possible for rural communities and other communities to attract and support more doctors. There will be an overwhelmingly sustained demand for medical services which cannot possibly be met at the current rate of production of doctors.

It will take

It is almost laughable how bitter some people become against union workers nowadays because they departmentalize so much. An electrician will not use a saw and a carpenter will not use a monkey wrench, and people get all up in the air about it. At the same time the same people who in most lines of professional business criticize-I have in mind especially doctors—are getting so that if one treats your big toe he cannot look at your nose, and if he treats your nose he will not even move over 2 inches to look at your eyes to see how they are. Medicine is becoming the most specialized of all crafts. I am not saying it is bad, perhaps it is good, but I hope that when some people are prone to criticize the carpenter or the plumber for not moving out of his particular field they will remember these others who are doing the same thing.

Of course, if you want to know some-thing about the Army's attitude on its own personnel, you can do no better than read the Doolittle Report on Officer-Enlisted Men Relationships. There is one conclusion made by this committee which is more damning of the Army mentality than anything that has ever been said by antimilitarists. I give it verbatim:

There is need for a new philosophy in the military order, a policy of treatment of men, especially in the "ranks," in terms of advanced concepts in social thinking. The present system does not permit full recognition of the dignities of man.

How can you trust the youth of the country to men who have continued to operate for years under a system which does not permit full recognition of the dignities of man?

Mr. President, how can we trust the youth of this country to men who have continued to operate for years under a system which does not permit full recognition of the dignities of man?

This condemnation from the pen of men who have themselves been closely associated with the military condemns this bill better than anything I could

I should like to read a few excerpts from this little report. One of the fine conclusions of this report is that, "It is extremely difficult under existing procedures to get rid of incompetents and undesirables among the officer group." I think that the mothers and fathers of this country would enjoy knowing that their sons are going to be put under a system that is loaded with incompetents and undesirables.

There is another little comment in this report worth noting. The report states that-

The peacetime army did not adequately prepare officers for the wartime job of han-dling civilian soldiers; it did not offer a code of officer-enlisted man conduct flexible enough for application to an army where the bulk of the men in all ranks were civilians.

Mr. President, there are many defects in our system of training our military as it is, without enacting a vast new program without putting any safeguards into it whatever in the way of doing away with discrimination and segregation, and redefining the relationship between officers and enlisted men. as this report has suggested should be done.

It seems that we are very fond of having fancy reports made and then we do nothing about them. We have the President's report on civil liberties and we do nothing about it. We have the President's report on the draft, and they report many things, including the statement that the draft is necessary, but they give us a whole list of things that should accompany it, and all we do is enact a draft law and put none of the other good things in to try to make it acceptable. Then we have the Doolittle report on the relationship of officers to their men in the armed services. We get the report and do nothing about it. Let us either quit having reports and wasting the taxpayers' money on them or else act upon them when once we get them.

Mr. President, that is an interesting commentary on the peacetime army. It would seem to me to mean that the Army has a professional standard that sets them apart from ordinary civilians, and in fact that prolonged association with this standard and system makes them pretty much unfit to handle a bunch of raw civilians. I never heard a better argument against the draft.

Of course, the military men of all countries are not necessarily dumb. I certainly do not want to leave that impression. My purpose is merely to show that the mistakes they make are profound errors of judgment which come from their training, the kind of training that one of their chiefs of staff thought made them unfit for a certain type of civilian leadership. But the military men also have their own ideas of intelligence, ideas which they have used in the past to befuddle the civilian population.

I have at hand that interesting little story that came out of Germany some months ago. The very efficient British Intelligence Service had discovered a little document, called Protocol M, which purported to be a Soviet document giving instructions to German Communists to take action against the western Allied occupation. The New York Times correspondent discovered it was a forgery, but published long after the damage of the original discovery was done.

I should like to read a little comment on this Nazilike technique of getting out the big lie and then neglecting to correct it for a long time. And of course, the purpose is perfectly clear, to embitter relations between the former Allies.

Of course, the purpose is perfectly clear—to embitter relations between former allies. Mr. President, this is a deplorable, despicable thing that is going on in the world. They even resort to forged documents to try to embitter relations between this country and Russia, when anyone who stops to think at all must realize that if relations deteriorate to the point where war finally breaks out, where the cold turns to the hot war, it must mean the end of civilization at least. and the experts tell us quite frankly that all life on this planet can be destroyed simply by exploding 250 atom bombs any place on earth. It is not the explosion of the bombs that will kill everybody, but the whole world will become so radioactive that no one can live; and we have hundreds of bombs. Yet we are considering drafting boys and putting them in uniform.

I have in my hand an article taken from the Gazette and Daily of York, Pa., the liberal newspaper I mentioned a while ago, under date of April 12, 1948. April 12 happens to be my birthday. It was saddened to the extent that it is difficult to celebrate nowadays, because President Roosevelt died on April 12.

The title of this editorial is "Nazi Opportunity."

Writing in the New York Times of yesterday, C. L. Sulzberger reported that Protocol M which raised a considerable storm about a year ago, was discovered by the British Intelligence Service to be a Protocol M was supposed to have been a Soviet document, giving instructions for action by German Communists against the Allied occupation. It created quite a dis-turbance when first released to the press by the British. Learned arguments of the intentions of the Communists—the Russian Communists-were based upon this docu-

Now the document turns up as a forgery, after the damage has been done.

Mr. Sulzberger adds that the market for such phony documents-

The market, Mr. President, mind youis probably better today than ever before in

If you are a good forger of documents you are all right; you can make plenty of money now.

He suggests that the Russians probably have been misled by the same sort of thing He points out that as recently as a few days ago, the French Ministery of Interior was duped by a similar document allegedly de-tailing the activities of the French Communist Party.
This is a sad state of affairs.

Hitler masqueraded his preparations for aggression in the garment of anticommunism. It resulted in the most disastrous war of all time. At a cost of millions of lives, Germany was finally defeated. We thought, too, that we had defeated fascism.

Franklin D. Roosevelt had envisioned a world at peace. He saw ahead a unity of purpose among the Allies toward that end. It was the only way the real defeat of the Fascists could be accomplished.

Let divisive forces split the wartime Allies, and the result easily could be the ultimate victory of fascism through the quarreling among those who fought against this scourge of the world.

Well, here we are today, on the third an-niversary of the passing of Roosevelt, on the verge of war with our recent allies—not really knowing to what extent the forgeries of our recent enemies have contributed to our growing war hysteria.

Here we are today, initiating a program for Europe's recovery, and west Germany—the sector of Germany occupied by the west-ern powers—included in our recovery program, and those who suffered most at the hands of Germany, not only excluded, but regarded by us as threats to the peace of the world, perhaps on the basis of Nazi-forged documents. Here we are today, rebuilding the Reich, forgiving the Nazi industrialists who made Hitler's aggression possible, openly declaring that our Nazi friends will be a great bulwark against dreaded communism.

The only way we could have prevented this was the Roosevelt way—through unity among the Allies until the affairs of a war-upset world were settled. We should have known that the Nazis would use any tricks to divide us. It should have been the constant aim of our Government to make clear to the people of this country how important unity was, so that we would not be misled by the vicious propaganda of certain sections of the press and certain special interests.

We lacked the wisdom to lay the ground work for unity. As a result, we now pay in ill will for giving the Nazis their chance to divide us and lead us to the brink of war. We weren't very smart, were we?

There is one aspect of the military preparedness business that has gotten everyone who considers it considerably worried as to whether the Army wants more manpower or not. That has been the Army's handling of enlistments. The Army apparently upped the requirements for its peacetime forces as against its wartime forces, thereby cutting down the proportion of men accepted into the service by enlistment. Then the Army comes along and offers more advantages to men who enlist for 3 years as against men who enlist for only 2 years. The result is that in the period April 1, 1947, to February 28, 1948, the Army discloses that 179,408 men enlisted as new 3-year enlistees, but during the same period they got only 10,219 men for 3-year enlistment periods. The reason is given in the fact that 3-year enlistees are given various options as to the type or branch of service and the place where they may serve, whereas the 2-year men are not given those options.

And yet the Army comes along and asks for a 2-year period for the draftees under the bill proposed. Giving the same privileges to 2-year enlistees would increase their number considerably more than the 3-year total, and a conservative estimate would give something like 350 .-000 men available by enlistment if these options are given to all alike. And if we increased the incentives for 3-year enlistments, those enlistments could be raised.

But that is not what the Army wants. apparently. They want a continuous state of crisis instead. I want to read a few remarks from a statement on this subject issued by the National Council for Prevention of War, entitled "A GI Mystery, or the Case of the Empty Barracks." The article is as follows:

Hardly anybody comes home these nights to the barracks at Fort Dix. In fact, all over the Army things are rough. It seems enough manpower just can't be had. So what does the Army do about it? Nothing. Or, worse, it remains as exclusive as a Chevy Chase country club.

Suppose you want to join up for 2 years.
"Go way, lad," says the recruiting sergeant.
The Army can't be bothered.
In fact, the Army during the entire 11 months prior to February 28, this year, only accepted 10,219 men for 2-year enlistments, forcing the other applicants either to sign up for 3 years or stay out. Army recruiters got 179,408 3-year men in spite of them-

WHAT'S BEHIND THIS MYSTERY?

Army recruiting methods, for one thing. They stack the cards against the 2-year recruits. A 3-year man gets everything but a chauffeur and a bronze-star to start out with. A 2-year man gets little more than KP.

CLUE FROM THE PENTAGON

"Incredible," you say? Well, here it is in the words of the "big brass."

"Individuals who enlist for 3 years are given enlistment options: First, choice of service, branch, or unit. Second, choice of geographical location. Men enlisting for years are not given these opportunities. This probably accounts for the fact that fewer men enlist for a 2-year period."

Source: Department of the Army, letter from Col. J. H. Riepe; file No. CS-GPA-032, June 16, 1948.

BUT THIS IS STILL A MYSTERY

While the Army practically says "No" to youngsters who are dying to get into the Army for 2-year enlistments, it at the same time lobbies busily for a draft which will force hundreds of thousands of others into the Army for the same 2-year period.

Mr. President, some telegrams were just laid on my desk. Perhaps it might be well to see how people feel about this. I have not read them. I do not know whether they say "Stay with it" or "Sit down and shut up." I shall read them, and we shall find out what the people think about this

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 19, 1948. Senator GLEN TAYLOR

Washington, D. C .: Am happy that one of our Congressmen has our people's welfare at heart. Congratulations. Keep up the filibuster on the draft bill. We don't want it I assed. SYLVIA A. SADKIN.

New York, N. Y., June 19, 1948. Senator GLEN TAYLOR,

Washington, D. C .: We support your splendid fight to defeat the draft measure. This bill is definitely an aggressive war move and not in the best interest of our country. Keep up the fight, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Atlas.

BROOKLYN, N. Y. June 19, 1948. Senator GLEN TAYLOR. Washington, D. C .:

Keep up your fight. God bless you. ROBERT GELLAR.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 19, 1948. Senator GLEN TAYLOR,

Washington, D. C .: Citizens of this Nation can congratulate themselves on having one honest Senator who respects his duty to represent the desires and interests of the people instead of special interests of enemies of peace. God give you strength.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I ask that the Senator take his seat, because of language unworthy of the conduct of a Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. IVES in the chair). The Senator from Idaho will take his seat, under the rule. The Chair will read the rule. Rule XIX, paragraph 4, reads as follows:

If any Senator, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the Senate, the Presiding Officer shall, or any Senator may, call him to order; and when a Senator shall be called to order he shall sit down, and not proceed without leave of the Senate, which, if granted, shall be upon motion that he be allowed to proceed in order, which motion shall be determined without debate.

Paragraph 3, immediately preceding, reads as follows:

No Senator in debate shall refer offen-sively to any State of the Union.

Paragraph 2 reads as follows:

No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming

Senator cannot raise a point of order.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is out of order. He will have to sit down.

EXTENSION OF TERMS OF MEMBERS OF ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I understand that the unfinished business is the bill providing for the extension of the terms of office of the members of the correct.

Atomic Energy Commission.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is

Mr. WHERRY obtained the floor. Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?
Mr. WHERRY. I yield.
Mr. KNOWLAND. The unfinished

Mr. WHERRY. Yes; that is the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Bushfield], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. Capper], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Robertson], and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Wilson] are necessarily absent.

Mr. LUCAS. I announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. Mc-Carran] and the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas] is absent by leave of the Senate, having been appointed a national delegate by the President to the annual-conference of the International Labor Organization, meeting in San Francisco, Calif.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eightyseven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present, and the Senate will proceed to its business.

PROMOTION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE— INCREASE OF PERSONNEL OF ARMED FORCES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside for the consideration of the conference report on the bill (S. 2655).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I submit the conference report on Senate bill 2655, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The re-

(For conference report, see House proceedings, p. 9253.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to adopt the conference report.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, is the Senator going to give us an explanation?

Mr. GURNEY. I shall be glad to do so. Mr. President, the Senate accepted the House figures on the total over-all manpower strength for the three services. In the case of the Army, the Senate figure was 790,000, the House figure 837,000. In the case of the Navy and Marine Corps the House and Senate figures were the same, 666,882. The Senate figure on the Air Force was 453,000; the House figure 502,000. The trainees, 18-year-olds, as in the Senate bill, 161,000.

The conferees adopted an amendment similar to the Capehart amendment, allowing 90 days before they would be subject to induction. The 90-day period comes automatically. The date is 90 days after the bill becomes effective.

With respect to conscientious objectors, the Senate yielded to the House. Those who oppose any military service, as differentiated from those who have religious scruples against kind of service such as medical aid, are deferred and are not put in a conscientious-objector camp.

We also agreed to exempt men who have 12 months' prior service instead of the Senate provision of 18 months' past service. That applies to veterans.

The conferees agreed, and it is so written in the bill, definitely, that the intelligence score for entrance into the armed services shall be not 80, but 70, as in the House provision.

Members of the enlisted Reserve components can volunteer for 21 months' active duty, the same as the selective-service period of duty, which is 21 months instead of the Senate provision for 24 months' service. Short-term enlistments of 21 months are also provided in the conference report for men 19 to 26 years of age; in other words, through 25, in the Army.

No provision was adopted by the conference for drafting doctors or dentists, feeling that no great numbers would come in until after Congress meets again. The conferees felt we could not set a special category to come under the responsibilities of the draft until we found out that volunteers did not come in under the medical and dental provisions. The conferees felt they would come in, and that at least we would have a chance to look at the situation after the first of the year, before we would be compelled to do anything in a mandatory way regarding doctors.

The plan for enlisting 25,000 aliens in the Army was not agreed to by the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report. [Putting the question.]

Mr. PEPPER and Mr. TAYLOR addressed the chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The "ayes" have it, and the report is agreed to.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. I am thoroughly opposed to the fillibuster which has been proceeding, but there is no question of the fact that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Taylor] and the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] were on the floor asking recognition long before the Chair put the question. I want to raise a point of order and ask for a ruling to set aside the Chair's ruling on the vote just announced by the Chair so that either the Senator from Florida or the Senator from Idaho can be recognized for remarks on the conference report. Important as passage of the conference report is, we cannot as individual Senators deny two Senators the right to be recognized by the Chair when they were so obviously, to the senses of everyone on the floor, seeking to be recognized before the vote was taken.

I raise a point of order as to whether the ruling of the Chair should stand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator make a motion as to whether the Senate will sustain the ruling of the Chair?

Mr. MORSE. I raise a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that he did not see the Senators of whom the Senator from Oregon speaks. He was merely putting the question, and the question was put and the decision was made.

Mr. MORSE. Then I raise a parliamentary inquiry as to whether the junior Senator from Oregon has the right at this time to make a motion that the Chair's ruling be reversed, the vote set aside, and the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] be recognized. I think it is obvious to the Presiding Officer that what the Senator from Oregon is seeking to do is to have the Senate pass on the question as to whether the Senator from Florida has the right to be recognized for remarks on the business which was pending before the Chair ruled that the report had been agreed to. After all, we are dealing here with a pretty fundamental right, so far as each and every Member of the Senate is concerned. I am standing here, Mr. President, to protest the ruling of the Chair, when two Members of this body were shouting for recognition before the time the Chair announced that the report was agreed to. We cannot, in my judgment, permit any Senator to be denied the exercise of his rights on the floor. I think the right of each one of us to unlimited debate under the rules shall have been denied if this action stands. I am simply making a parliamentary inquiry as to how I can give this body an opportunity to pass on whether or not the decision of the Chair is to be sustained.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. DONNELL. I am heartily in favor of the position taken by the Senator from Oregon, but I do not raise my point of order upon a mere parliamentary inquiry. I make the point of order at this time with reference to the Senator from Idaho and the Senator from Florida, respectively, for to my own personal knowledge I could see them and could hear them demanding recognition. In the sense of pride and in the sense of law I make the point of order—not a parliamentary inquiry—that the result of the vote was invalidly announced by the Presiding Officer.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, under the rules of the Senate the Chair undoubtedly has a discretion as to whom he shall recognize when a number of Senators are seeking recognition, but I doubt very much whether that discretion gives the Chair the right to exercise it by refusing to recognize any Senator who is seeking recognition. For that reason, and for the sake of future interpretation of the rules, not that I wish to give any advantage, parliamentary or otherwise, to any Senator who seeks to delay a vote on the matter, I doubt whether the Chair could refuse to recognize either one of the Senators. They were both seeking recognition. I hope that the Chair, in all fairness to himself and to the Senate, will hold that, notwithstanding the fact that he declared the conference report agreed to, one of the Senators was entitled to recognition.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I suggest that since there are so many Senators who feel that the Chair overlooked a request for recognition, if a majority think the Chair was incorrect, I suggest a unanimous-consent request that the ruling of the Chair be vacated and that the Senator from Florida be permitted to proceed.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

Senator will state it.

Mr. DONNELL, I want it perfectly clear, first, that just as the Senator from Oregon stated for himself, I am not countenancing or favoring the plan of filibuster which has been indulged in. I want it distinctly understood, in the second place, that I am in harmony with the thought of the Senator from Ohio as to the advisability of not shutting Senators off, as I am also in harmony with the idea of the Senator from Oregon; but I insist on my point of order which is before the Senate for determination. It is, Mr. President, that the announcement of the result of the vote was invalid. It is not a question of setting it aside. is void.

Rule XIX of the Senate provides as follows:

When a Senator desires to speak, he shall rise and address the Presiding Officer, and shall not proceed until he is recognized, and the Presiding Officer shall recognize the Senator who shall first address him.

It would be tyrannous, Mr. President, if the Presiding Officer had the right to disregard this rule and to hold that it is discretionary on the part of the Presiding Officer either to recognize or not to recognize a Senator.

So I insist on my point of order. Under the facts, of which I have personal knowledge, the two Senators referred to were on the floor demanding recognition. My point of order is that the announcement of the vote is invalid, and therefore insist, as against the Senator from Ohio, that the point of order has precedence and should be ruled upon.

Mr. TAFT. May I point out to the Senator that whether the Chair is mistaken or not is a question of fact, a question which is often difficult to determine, whatever the Senator may think. It seems to me that the proper way to proceed is by unanimous consent to vacate the order of the Chair and to permit the Senator from Florida to proceed. Many of the Senators were not present and do not know what the facts were. Where there is a question of fact of that kind, it seems to me only reasonable to reach the result by unanimous consent.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I will not give unanimous consent. My point of order stands and is made as forcefully as I know how to make it. I know what the facts were. I saw and heard. My point of order is presented again and at this moment to the present Presiding Officer of the Senate.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The PRESIDING OFFICER.

The Senator will state it.

Mr. FERGUSON. My question is as to whether or not the Senator from Idaho had the right to recognition, after a previous ruling of the Chair that he was called to order and ordered to sit down.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no question that the Senator from Idaho had the right to be recognized on a different question. The Chair wishes to state now that he did not see either the Senator from Idaho or the Senator from Florida on his feet seeking recognition.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the other hand, the Chair desires to be perfectly fair, and if there be any question in the mind of the Senator from Missouri, the Chair will reverse the order he made, and let the matter rest as it was when the Chair put the question.

Mr. DONNELL. I greatly appreciate the courtesy of the Chair. I may say, however, that there is no question in my mind. I know the facts, and I assert them and state that my point of order should be sustained.

If I may have the privilege of the floor for a moment more, I may say that I am not willing to surrender my point of order in favor of the request for unanimous consent. Suppose unanimous consent were not given, my point of order would be before the Senate, and I understand that the Presiding Officer has indicated his intention to sustain it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair, in his desire to be fair, has agreed with the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Chair. I understand the point of order is sustained. Is that correct?

PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair wishes to state the question now before the Senate. The question now before the Senate is on agreeing to the conference report. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. MORSE. I wish to say to the Chair that I deeply appreciate the ruling he has now made. I join with the Senator from Missouri in assuring the Chair that the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Oregon did see both the Senator from Florida and the Senator from Idaho on the floor calling for recognition, and I wish to assure the Senator from New York, the present Presiding Officer, that in reversing his decision the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Oregon can give him our honor-bound word that those were the facts, and that in reversing himself we feel he is protecting us, as well as every other Member of the Senate, and we deeply appreciate the action of the Chair in reversing himself.

Mr. DONNELL. I join in the statement of the Senator from Oregon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair would like to repeat once more that the Chair saw neither the Senator from Idaho nor the Senator from Florida on his feet.

Mr. MORSE. That is why I made the statement I did make, if the Chair will permit me to say so, because I knew that if I gave him my word as to what were the facts, and the Senator from Missouri would give him his word, the Chair would reverse himself.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President-The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senstor from Maine

Mr. BREWSTER. I should like to inquire whether this is to constitute a precedent, so that if any Member of the Senate at any time raises a question of this character on a ruling of the Presiding Officer, it will be a precedent that the ruling is immediately to be rescinded. All of us familiar with Senate procedure know that at times something resembling this situation has frequently arisen, when half a dozen Senators will be on their feet, and no Senator may be recognized and the pending matter may be disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would like to observe, in that connection, that nothing of this kind can really constitute a precedent. matters in each instance rest with the Chair.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida. The Chair apologizes to the Senator from Florida for failure to see him.

Mr. PEPPER. The Chair is characteristically gracious. We recall that it is a saying in the law that "hard cases make bad law," and probably extremities sometimes force us to decisions which are uncoubtedly regrettable and out of character.

I doubt very seriously if there is anything so important as preserving the democracy of this Republic, and I doubt if anything is a surer foundation of the abiding safety of the Republic than continuing recognition of democracy in the Senate of the United States. What has just happened is a new proof of the integrity of this body and of our democratic institutions in America.

For myself, I rose only to ask a question. I had not heard the statement of the able Senator from South Dakota as to what the length of the time of the draft was. I did not rise to address the Senate, and I do not now arise to address the Senate. The Senator from Idaho is no doubt quite capable of speaking for himself.

What I wish to ask, if the Senator from South Dakota will yield, is, What was the length of time of the draft that was agreed to in the conference report?

Mr. GURNEY. The Senator from Florida has the floor; and if he will yield to me to answer him, I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. PEPPER. I am asking the question. That is all I wished to be informed of. I do not care for the floor.

Mr. GURNEY. The period of service is 3 months less than what was provided in the Senate bill for those between 19 and 26 years of age. It is 21 months.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the Senator. Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. Pres-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield for a question?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield. Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. What is the length of the time of the draft?

Mr. GURNEY. The same as in the Senate bill-2 years.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. How much service is required in the Reserve?

Mr. GURNEY. That matter was not in conference, because the House and Senate provisions were both the same-2 years.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. And the same service is required in the Reserve? Mr. GURNEY. About the same as the Senate provisions originally required.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Dakota yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. GURNEY. I yield to the Senator from Florida for a question.

Mr. HOLLAND. Will the distinguished chairman of the committee advise the Senate as to what is the provision of the conference report for the beginning of the draft-for the initiation of the actual proceedings under the draft?

Mr. GURNEY. The proceedings of setting up all the agencies necessary under selective service are to start immediately upon the enactment of the bill. No one can be brought in under selective service until 90 days after the date of the enactment of the bill.

Mr. HOLLAND. Is it mandatory upon the President of the United States to begin the calling up of men under the selective service system set up by the conference report at the expiration of 90 days?

Mr. GURNEY. It is not necessary for the President to make the call. Calls will automatically come at the end of 90 days. Of course, monthly quotas are approved by the Commander in Chief.

Mr. HOLLAND. Do I understand the Senator correctly, then, that there is nothing left in the conference report by way of any question of discretion or judgment on the part of the President of the United States as to whether the draft will be placed in effect at the end of 90 days?

Mr. GURNEY. The President does not have to make any decision on that. It automatically comes into existence 90 days after the date of enactment.

Mr. HOLLAND. I thank the Senator. And Mr. President, I desire to express to the able Senator, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, and to his fellow conferees my feeling that he and they have done a difficult job exceedingly well in the conference. I want to state now my congratulations and my gratitude.

Mr. GURNEY, Mr. President, I make the motion that the Senate agree to the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President-PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho. The Chair also wishes to apologize to the Senator from Idaho for failing to see him.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BALDWIN. I should like to read paragraph 4 of rule XIX, as follows:

If any Senator, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the Senate, the Presiding Officer shall, or any Senator may, call him to order; and when a Senator shall be called to order he shall sit down, and not proceed without leave of the Senate, which, if granted, shall be upon motion that he be allowed to proceed in order, which motion shall be determined without debate.

I make the parliamentary inquiry as to whether or not the leave provided for has been granted to the senior Senator from Idaho.

PRESIDING OFFICER. The The Chair has already ruled on that point. That question arose on the motion to appoint the conferees, the first motion made by the Senator from South Dakota, to disagree and appoint the conferees. The ruling by the Chair was on that question. We are now on the second motion, that is, a motion to accept or agree to the conference report. So that the point the Senator from Connecticut raises does not apply. The Senator from Idaho will proceed.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, I had intended to, and I fully believe I could have held the floor until midnight tonight, or later. I believe I physically could have done so. But what I have just witnessed here in so many of these good Senators coming to my aid and assistance-

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

Senator will state it.
Mr. BALDWIN. The Senator from Idaho has had ample time to discuss this matter. I still press my point. It seems to me, Mr. President, that when a Senator has transgressed the rules of the Senate, as has been ruled by the Chair, and he has been directed to sit down, that then the only way he can get back on his feet in any manner is to ask the permission of the Senate to do so.

Now, the particular motion which was under consideration at the time and the motion now pending both pertain to the matter that was the subject of debate when the Senator from Idaho was speaking

Mr. President, I question the ruling of the Chair in that matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will have to insist on his ruling, and that is that the question on which the Chair ruled the Senator from Idaho out of order is another matter entirely; it is a different motion. That motion has been disposed of. Therefore the ruling of the Chair in that instance, that the Senator from Idaho should take his seat does not apply in this instance. Another motion is before the Senate at the present time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Idaho yield?

Mr. TAYLOR. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. In support of the decision of the Chair on that point, I might add that if the position of the Senator from Connecticut were valid it would be impossible for the Senator from Idaho to obtain the floor at any time during the day, although we may have in the meantime passed half a dozen other bills and been on some other questions. So the Chair is undoubtedly correct in his ruling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thanks the Senator from Kentucky. Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. TAYLOR. If I may do so without losing the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will see that the Senator from Idaho gets it back.

Mr. TAYLOR. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho yields to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator from Idaho yielded to the Senator from Kentucky not for a question. I want to raise the point of order whether the Senator from Idaho has not spoken once on this motion already.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho?

Mr. TAFT. Yes. He vielded to the Senator from Kentucky, not for a question, but for other observations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will have to hold in this particular instance that that is a pretty fine technicality. The Senator from Idaho is still on his original speech on this particular motion. The Senator from Idaho has been under some difficulty at the present time-which he brought on himself.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. President, as I said a while ago I think I could have held forth here indefinitely, but I deeply appreciate what has just taken place here, the evidence of devotion to the principles of democracy displayed by a majority of the Senators present at least. I have sincerely felt that this draft bill was jeopardizing our future as a democratic free people. I have disliked very much having to play the role I have indulged in during the night, talking at length. I disliked the inconvenience and discomfort that I have caused to the Members of the Senate. I feel that so long as the Senators have the regard for democratic procedures and principles which was displayed here a while ago this country is safe, although there will be other Senators elected later whose election will be influenced more greatly by the fact that the military has become strong, and I am afraid that we will permit the military to become even stronger to the point where our democratic freedoms will be seriously jeopardized.

Nevertheless, I do not want to inconvenience the Senate further, and inasmuch as the Members of the Senate have seen fit to come to my rescue when I felt that I was being unfairly treatedin spite of the fact that I have treated them sort of rough during the past several hours, I appreciate what they did, and I am going to take my seat, and just urge the gentlemen present, wnether as Senators or after they have retired from the Senate, to keep a close watch on the Military Establishment of this country, and be not afraid, should it become all-powerful, to oppose it and try to get it back under control, because I am afraid that is what we are headed toward in this country.

I want again to express my appreciation to the Senators who spoke up in behalf of the principles of unlimited debate in the Senate, which are basic in our rules, in spite of the fact that in doing so they were laying themselves open to further torture probably by having to listen to further extended remarks.

So with those statements, Mr. President, I am going to take my seat.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Gurney] on the adoption of the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS, 1949—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside, so the Senate may proceed to the consideration of the conference report on House bill 6705.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on House bill 6705, making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The conference report will be read.

(For conference report, see p. 8839 of the House proceedings of June 18, 1948.)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 6705, which was read, as follows:

> IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S., June 18, 1948.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 84, 101, 125, 150, 151, 152, 178, 190, 199, and 231 to the bill (H. R. 6705) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, and concur therein.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 126 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert: "$34,-132,439."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 189 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: Strike out lines 13 and 14 of said amendment, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(parcels of land adjoining Big Bend National Park necessary to connect the park road system with State Highway 227)."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 211 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert: "$250,000."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 212 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert: "$9.928.509."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 214 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert: "$9,928,509."

Mr. WHERRY. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 126, 189, 211, 212, and 214.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska state with what the amendments he just mentioned deal?

Mr. WHERRY. Senate amendment No. 126 is the over-all amount. It represents the adjustment of the total.

Senate amendment 189 is to strike out lines 13 and 14 of the Senate amendment and insert in lieu thereof "(parcels of land adjoining Big Ben National Park necessary to connect the park-road system with the State highway 227)."

Senate amendment 211 has to do with the purchase of wildlife management areas in California.

Senate amendments 212 and 214 represent a change of totals.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I thank the Senator. Mr. WHERRY. There is one statement that should be made about the conference report in the absence of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], who asked me to say for him there is an amount for a project in Owl Creek, Wyo. This project, Senator O'MAHONEY says, is in phase B, and in order that construction of this project may be provided for it must be moved into phase A. I want the Record to show at this point that while evidently no decision was made in the conference committee, yet that was apparently reason for the appropriation by the House, and the Senate conferees concur in that action.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question in on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Wherry].

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY subsequently said: Mr. President, I note that the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Wherry] is present in the Chamber. I take this occasion to say to him that I appreciate very much his action earlier in the day when the Interior Department appropriation bill was under consideration, in calling attention to what I conceive to have been a clerical oversight in the submission of the conference report by which the Owl-Creek project in Wyoming was listed as in phase B under the Missouri Valley project, instead of phase A, as was understood.

The Senator has made that statement upon the floor and I want him to know that it is very much appreciated not only by myself, but certainly by all of those in the State of Wyoming who will be benefited by the project.

I think I should add, Mr. President, that the Senator from Nebraska in his labors upon the Interior Department appropriation bill subcommittee has done very successful service in increasing the appropriations for reclamation in the West. He has not insisted upon working only for his own State, but he has included projects in other States. I wish it clearly understood that as one of the Senators who has been delighted to cooperate with the junior Senator from Nebraska, I very much appreciate what he has done.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, this is most unusual, because usually the Senator is needling me a little about the politics of the affair. I deeply appreciate the words spoken by my distinguished colleague and friend.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, let me add another word or two in connection with this reclamation matter.

In the Seventy-ninth Congress, the last Congress, the distinguished senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] and I were the authors of a bill to amend the Oil and Gas Leasing Act. The bill amending the Oil and Gas Leasing Act was considered by the Senator from New Mexico and myself as being a means of increasing the revenues of the Federal Government, of increasing the production of oil, and of benefiting reclamation. particularly. I have had a recent report made to me by the Geological Survey on the results of prospecting under those amendments. The results have been very satisfactory.

In 1947 there were 12 new fields discovered, 20 new pools, 15 extensions of old pools, and 1 field redeveloped. In 1948 there have already been discovered 10 new pools and 1 extension. The overall result has been that whereas the annual royalty of the Federal Government before the adoption of the measure to which I refer was running at a rate of approximately $10,500,000, it ran, during the year 1947, at the rate of $16,725,000, thereby indicating that there has been increased revenue to the Federal Government, largely as a result of the stimulation to exploration which was given by that law. This addition of $6,125,000 goes into the fund which is divided 10 percent to the Treasury for administrative expenses, 37½ percent to the States in which the oil is discovered, and 52½ percent to the reclamation fund. Thus the reclamation fund, out of which the appropriations contained in the Interior Department bill for reclamation are made, has been enriched as a result of that legislation.

I am one of the Members of the Senate who greatly regretted the decision of the distinguished Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Hatch] to retire from this body; and I wish to take advantage of this opportunity to pay tribute to the sagacity and ability and foresight with which he has served in this body. Particularly do I wish to compliment him on the great service he has been to the public-lands States. He was for years chairman of the Public Lands Committee, now the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. When the next Senate assembles without the presence of the Senator from New Mexico, it will be a loss to the Senate, to the State of New Mexico, and, I think, to the country,

The new discoveries have resulted in the addition to the estimated oil reserve of the Nation a total of approximately 411,665,000 barrels.

This addition comes at a time when the people of the United States are consuming more oil than at any time in history.

When I introduced the bill amending the Oil and Gas Leasing Act, I gave as one of the reasons for its enactment my belief that it would stimulate the search for new oil reserves and that it would bring into the public-lands States oil and gas operators who had never before drilled on the public domain.

This has proved to be the case, and if one is to judge by the present activity under the new law we may anticipate additional discoveries. This is particularly true in Wyoming and New Mexico where the rate of exploration is high.

Wyoming leads all of the States in the number and extent of discoveries. The total addition to the reserve is estimated at 255,285,000 barrels, with the other States showing the following results: Colorado, 2,000,000; Montana, 31,660,000; New Mexico, 56,100,000; and California, 66,620,000.

Mr. President, in connection with my remarks about the increase of discoveries of petroleum, I should like to have placed in the RECORD a table which I have had prepared by the Geological Survey. The table shows the unit discoveries which have been made in the States of Colorado, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, and California since January 1, 1947.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

1 No estimate.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield. Mr. HATCH. The Senator from Wyoming embarrasses me greatly. Needless to say, however, I deeply appreciate the most kind remarks he has just made.

However, it is not in connection with that matter that I desired that he yield to me.

I wish to refer to the Mineral Leasing Act which he has just discussed. I was not aware of the figures he has placed in the RECORD. I know that both the Senator from Wyoming and I were prompted by the matters he has mentioned and by the strong desire to secure exploration and development in the Western States.

I have not been able to keep up with the matter in the other States, but I have watched with great interest and gratification the development which has occurred in New Mexico, in large part as a result of this act. I may say now that it has even exceeded my fondest expectations. More pools are being discovered in New Mexico now than ever before, and a great part of that is due to this Minerals Leasing Act.

FEDERAL CHARTER FOR COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1322) to provide a Federal charter for the Commodity Credit Corporation, which was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

TITLE I.—COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION CHARTER

SEC. 1. This title may be cited as the "Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act."

SEC. 2. Creation and purposes: For the purpose of stabilizing, supporting, and protecting farm income and prices, of assisting in the maintenance of balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, products thereof, foods, feeds, and fibers (hereinafter collectively referred to as "agricultural commodities"), and of facilitating the orderly distribution of agricultural commodities, there is hereby created a body corporate to be known as Commodity Credit Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Corporation"), which shall be an agency and instrumentality of the United States, within the Department of Agriculture, subject to the general direction and control of its Board of Directors.

SEC. 3. Offices: The Corporation may establish offices in such place or places as it may deem necessary or desirable in the conduct of its business.

SEC. 4. General powers: The Corporation—
(a) Shall have succession in its corporate name.

(b) May adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal, which shall be judicially noticed.(c) May sue and be sued, but no attachment, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Corporation or its property. district courts of the United States, including the district courts of the District of Columbia and of any Territory or possession, shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all suits brought by or against the Corporation: Pro-vided, That the Corporation may intervene in any court in any suit, action, or proceeding in which it has an interest. Any suit against the Corporation shall be brought in the District of Columbia, or in the district wherein the plaintiff resides or is engaged in business. No suit against the Corporation shall be allowed unless it is shall have been brought within 4 years after the right accrued on which suit is brought. All suits against the Corporation shall be tried by the court without a jury. Notwithstanding any other pro-vision of this act, the Federal Tort Claims Act (Public Law 601, 79th Cong.) shall be applicable to the Corporation. Any suit by or against the United States as the real party in interest based upon any claim by or against the Corporation shall be subject to the provisions of this subsection (c) to the same ex-tent as though such suit were by or against the Corporation.

(d) May adopt, amend, and repeal bylaws, rules, and regulations governing the manner in which its business may be conducted and the powers vested in it may be exercised.

(e) Shall have all the rights, privileges, and immunities of the United States with respect to the right to priority of payment with respect to debts due from insolvent, deceased, or bankrupt debtors. The Corporation may assert such rights, privileges, and immunities in any suit, action, or proceeding.

(f) Shall be entitled to the use of the United States mails in the same manner and upon the same conditions as the executive departments of the Federal Government.

(g) May enter into and carry out such contracts or agreements as are necessary in the conduct of its business. State and local regulatory laws or rules shall not be applicable with respect to contracts or agreements of the Corporation or the parties thereto to the extent that such contracts or agreements provide that such laws or rules shall not be applicable, or to the extent that such laws or rules are inconsistent with such contracts or agreements.

(h) May contract for the use, in accordance with the usual customs of trade and commerce, of plants and facilities for the physical handling, storage, processing, servicing, and transportation of the agricultural commodities subject to its control. Except as provided in section 16, the Corporation shall not have power to acquire or lease any such plant or facility or to acquire or lease real property or any interest therein, except that it may rent or lease office space necessary for the conduct of its business, and it may continue to lease (by renewing or extending existing leases or entering into new leases) property leased by it on the date of the enactment of this act.

(1) May borrow money subject to any provision of law applicable to the Corporation: Provided, That the total of all money borrowed by the Corporation, other than trust deposits and advances received on sales, shall not at any time exceed in the aggregate $4,750,000,000. The Corporation shall at all times reserve a sufficient amount of its authorized borrowing power which, together with other funds available to the Corporation, will enable it to purchase, in accordance with its contracts with lending agencies, notes, or other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies under the Corporation's programs.

(j) Shall determine the character of and the necessity for its obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid.

incurred, allowed, and paid.

(k) Shall have authority to make final and conclusive settlement and adjustment of any claims by or against the Corporation or the accounts of its fiscal officers.

(1) May make such loans and advances of its funds as are necessary in the conduct of its business.

(m) Shall have such powers as may be necessary or appropriate for the exercise of the powers specifically vested in the Corporation, and all such incidental powers as are customary in corporations generally; but any research financed by the Corporation shall relate to the conservation or disposal of commodities owned or controlled by the Corporation and shall be conducted in collaboration with research agencies of the Department of Agriculture.

SEC. 5. Specific powers: In the fulfillment of its purposes and in carrying out its annual budget programs submitted to and approved by the Congress pursuant to the Government Corporation Control Act (31 U. S. C., 1940 ed., Supp. V, 841), the Corporation is authorized to use its general powers only to—

(a) Support the prices of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other operations. *

(b) Make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities,

(c) Procure agricultural commodities for sale to other Government agencies, foreign governments, and domestic, foreign, or international relief or rehabilitation agencies, and to meet domestic requirements.

(d) Remove and dispose of or aid in the removal or disposition of surplus agricultural commodities.

(e) Increase the domestic consumption of agricultural commodities by expanding or aiding in the expansion of domestic markets or by developing or aiding in the development of new and additional markets, marketing facilities, and uses for such commodities.

(f) Export or cause to be exported, or aid in the development of foreign markets for, agricultural commodities.

(g) Carry out such other operations as the Congress may specifically authorize or provide for.

In the Corporation's purchasing and selling operations with respect to agricultural commodities (except sales to other Government agencies), and in the warehousing, transporting, processing, or handling of agricultural commodities, the Corporation shall, to the maximum extent practicable consistent with the fufilment of the Corporation's purposes and the effective and efficient conduct of its business, utilize the usual and customary channels, facilities, and arrangements of trade and commerce.

SEC. 202. Section 4 (a) of the act entitled "An act to extend the life and increase the credit resources of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1941 (U. S. C., 1940 ed., Supp. V, title 15, sec. 713a-8 (a)), is amended by striking out "the expiration of the 2-year period beginning with the 1st day of January immediately following the date upon which the President by proclamation or the Congress by concurrent resolution declares that hostilities in the present war have terminated" and by inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1950."

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, request a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. Aiken, Mr. Young, Mr. Thye, Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma, and Mr. Ellender conferees on the part of the Senate.

POLLUTION-CONTROL ACTIVITIES IN THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on Senate bill 418, a bill to provide for water-pollution-control activities in the Public Health Service of the Federal Security Agency and in the Federal Works Agency, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report, which was read by the Chief Clerk, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 418) to provide for water pollution control activities in the Public Health Service of the Federal Security Agency and in the Federal Works Agency, and for other purposes having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments, as follows: Page 2, line 12, of the amendment of the House, strike out the words "hereinafter declared to be a public nuisance"; page 2, lines 13 and 14, of the amendment of the House, strike out the words "such interstate waters and tributaries thereof" and insert the following words "surface and underground waters"; page 9, line 11, of the amendment of the House, strike out the figure "$200,000" and insert the figure "$250,000"; page 11, line 25, of the amendment of the House, strike out the figure "$20,000,000" and insert the figure "$22,500,000"; page 12, line 25, of the amendment of the House, after the words "study of" insert the word "water", and strike out the word "of" after the word "pollution"; page 13, line 1, of the amendment of the House, strike out the words "interstate waters"; page 13, line 2, of the amendment of the House, before the word 'pollution" insert the word "water", and after the word "pollution" strike out the words "of interstate waters"; page 14, line 17 through line 23, of the amendment of the House, strike out all after the words "SEC. 9 (a)" and insert the following: "Five officers may be appointed to grades in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service above that of senior assistant, but not to a grade above that of director, to assist in carrying out the purposes of this act. Officers appointed pursuant to this subsection in any fiscal year shall not be counted as part of the 10 per centum of the original appointments authorized to be made in such year under section 207 (b) of the Public Health Service Act; but they shall for all other purposes be treated as though appointed pursuant to such section 207 (b)."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

LABOR DISPUTE AT OAK RIDGE NA-TIONAL LABORATORY—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT (H. DOC. NO. 726)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to the Labor-Management Relations Act, 1937, it is my duty to report to the Congress concerning the labor dispute which recently existed at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

The important facts concerning the dispute may be summarized as follows:

The Oak Ridge National Laboratory is Government-owned. Some 2,350 persons are there engaged in important atomic-energy research, but not directly in production of fissionable materials or weapons.

The dispute was between the Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corp., and the Atomic Trades and Labor Council, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The corporation operates the laboratory under a cost-plus-fixed-fee contract with the Atomic Energy Commission. The corporation also operates two other important plants of the atomic-energy installation at Oak Ridge. The council represents some 900 employees who perform maintenance, operating, and service functions at the Laboratory.

The recent dispute resulted from the failure of negotiations concerning both wages and working conditions. These negotiations were begun with the predecessor contractor in the latter part of November 1947 and continued with Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corp. beginning February 9, 1948.

It is clear that there was a difference in objectives sought by the council and the corporation. On the one hand, the council desired to preserve differentials over the two nearby atomic-energy plants as to wage rates and conditions of employment—differentials which have been in existence in the laboratory since its beginning. On the other hand, the corporation desired uniformity of wage rates and conditions of employment and the elimination of the laboratory differentials.

In a union meeting held Sunday, February 29, the employees voted to strike unless settlement were made by Friday, midnight, March 5, and this intention was reaffirmed by another meeting on the night of March 3. Accordingly, on March 5, I issued Executive Order 9934, creating a board of inquiry pursuant to the Labor-Management Relations Act. At my request, both parties agreed to maintain the status quo until March 19.

On March 15 the Board of Inquiry submitted to me its first report. It found the existence of a labor dispute at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, and it advised me of the facts of that dispute. It further found that grave danger to the national safety would result if the operations of the laboratory were interputed.

Thereupon, at my request, the Attorney General on March 19 instituted an action and obtained an injunction in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee. This order enjoined both the corporation and the council, and all persons in active participation with them, from engaging in any strike or lock-out or from interfering with normal continuance of work, or from making any change in terms or conditions of employment other than by mutual agreement.

On March 24, I reconvened the Board of Inquiry. Negotiations between the parties continued, with the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. On May 18 the Board of Inquiry submitted to me its second report, stating that the position of the parties remained unaltered and the dispute unsettled.

On June 1 and 2 the National Labor Relations Board conducted a secret ballot of the employees to ascertain whether they wished to accept the final offer of settlement as stated and made by the employer. The employees, by a vote of 771 to 26, rejected the employer's last offer. On June 7 the National Labor Relations Board certified to the Attorney General the results of this election. On June 8 the employees at a union meeting took action looking to a possible stoppage if the injunction were lifted and if the employer unilaterally placed in effect the terms proposed in its final offer.

On June 10, pursuant to section 210 of the Labor-Management Relations Act, the Attorney General moved the court to discharge the injunction. The injunction was discharged on June 11.

During this period the parties continued negotiations, with the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. On June 15 the parties reached agreement on the terms of a new contract.

All parties to this dispute and the Government agencies concerned complied with all legal and procedural requirements of title II of the Labor-Management Relations Act, 1947.

A number of additional facts concerning this dispute are set forth in the first and second reports of the Board of Inquiry. Copies of these reports are transmitted to the Congress with this message.

Both parties are to be commended for achieving settlement of this dispute without an interruption of work.

The dispute at Oak Ridge has raised some question, nevertheless, as to the sufficiency of present collective-bargaining methods in atomic-energy installations.

This question is somewhat different from others which have arisen in the past. On the one hand, it is clear that the national security and the development of the beneficial arts and sciences are bound up with the progress of our atomic-energy program. Thus, every dispute which threatens to seriously impair that program imperils the national health and safety.

On the other hand, it is equally clear that the progress of our atomic-energy program requires the support and drive of broad sectors of the American economy. In order to encourage such support, the Atomic Energy Commission has lodged in its contractors a large measure of responsibility and authority. The progress of the program is equally dependent upon the full and willing support of the men and women who work in atomic-energy plants and laboratories.

Under these circumstances, it is imperative that the most successful techniques of the collective-bargaining process should be adopted for the atomicenergy program.

The objective should be twofold. The parties should continue to enjoy the maximum of voluntary action and freedom of choice. Secondly, the public interest must be protected at all times.

I believe that special study should be given to the problem of peaceful and orderly settlement of labor disputes in Government-owned, privately operated atomic-energy installations, such as those at Richland, Wash.; Oak Ridge, Tenn; Los Alamos, N. Mex.; the Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago, Ill., and others.

I propose, therefore, to establish a commission composed of men having expert knowledge in the field of labor relations to study this problem and to make such recommendations as they may find necessary. The commission should explore the question whether any special legislation should be enacted to protect the national interest without depriving management or labor organizations of the initiative and freedom necessary for the progress of our atomic-energy program. The commission should study ways and means of adapting to the atomic-energy program the best of our experience in the complex field of labor The commission should concern itself also with special aspects of the problem, such as questions of bargaining representation, uniformity of working conditions and wages, and procedures for grievance handling.

The commission should concern itself, in short, with the broad code of conduct which should be observed by management and labor in their relations with each other in this vital program.

In appointing this commission I shall request the advice of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, both as to the membership of the commission and the specific questions to be studied.

I believe that the report of this commission, which should be submitted as soon as possible, will be of great value in guiding contractors, labor organizations, and the Government in this new and vital field. I am confident that this is the best avenue to follow to achieve and maintain that proper balance between freedom and responsibility which is the tradition in all our economic relations. including those between management and labor.

HARRY S. TRUMAN. THE WHITE HOUSE, June 18, 1948.

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to consider the conference report on Senate bill 2242. a bill to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from West Virginia?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report, which was read by the Chief Clerk.

(See conference report printed in House proceedings, p. 8855, Congressional Record, June 18, 1948.)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I wish to be heard on this question before it is disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida seeks recognition. Does the Senator from West Virginia wish to speak on the report?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I do not wish to interrupt the explanation. merely wish to be heard before the question is disposed of.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President-The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, in presenting this conference report on the displaced-persons bill, I desire to make a very brief statement respecting the displaced-persons bill as passed by the Senate, the bill as passed by the House, and the bill which has now been reported after an extended conference.

The Senate will recall the extended debate which took place when the bill was pending before the Senate. It is my position at the present time that the bill was debated on the floor of the Senate very fully and completely, and it is my belief that legislation dealing with the problem of displaced persons must be in accordance with two fundamental principles.

First, such legislation should be consistent with the best interests of the country; and, second, in view of the tremendous scope of the problem, the legislation dealing with it must, so far as practicable, be confined to displaced persons in Europe who were displaced as a direct result of the war, and who cannot be repatriated.

With respect to the differences between the bill as it passed the Senate and the conference report, the bill as it passed the Senate provided, after amendments were made on the floor of the Senate, for the admission of 200,000 persons within the course of 2 years. The bill, as reported by the conferees, permits the entry in 2 years of 205,000 persons, the difference being that the 3,000 displaced orphans to be admitted under the Senate bill had been included within the 200,000 limit. The conference bill lets the number of orphans come in over and above the 200,000 limit.

In addition, the conferees agreed to, and the bill as it comes from conference provides for, the entry of 2,000 persons who fled from Czechoslovakia prior to With the additions of April 1, 1948. these 2,000, as I say, the total number will be 205,000.

The bill also provides an adjustment of status, as it is called, for 15,000 displaced persons who are here on a temporary basis, that is, those who come in under temporary visas issued by the reppresentatives of this Government.

Mr. President, it cannot be said that the category of 15,000 is a definite number fixed to come into the country, or to stay here. The bill simply provides that 15,000 may have their status adjusted by the Attorney General of the United States, as may be done in the case of any immigrant into the country on a temporary visa or temporary stay. If the Attorney General extends the time beyond 6 months, he must report it to the Congress; and if the Congress, after reviewing the case, finds that the Attorney General's viewpoint is sustained. then the person is deportable. That applies in the case of any temporary entrance. On the other hand, if the Congress approves within the session within which the list of persons is sent to this country or within the succeeding term. then that person obtains permanent

It will be recalled that certain vocational preferences were provided in the bill as passed by the Senate. As I recall. 50 percent of those who were to be admitted into the country were to be persons who had engaged in agricultureagricultural workers-and who intended to go into agriculture in this country. In the conference report that figure has been changed to 30 percent, and a preference is given to the agricultural worker.

Under the bill as passed by the Senate, at least 50 percent of those admitted were to be persons who were natives of a land which had been annexed de facto by a foreign power. That would mean Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, and eastern Poland, east of the Curzon line. In the previous debate, I fully discussed the reasons for that preference.

The conference report incorporates the provisions of the Senate bill providing for a three-member commission, but leaving the administration of the act in the hands of the regular immigration officials.

The conference report also provides for the opening of the German and Austrian quotas, with a provision that up to 50 percent of such quotas for the next 2 years, may be assigned to the Volks-deutsche. The Volksdeutsche, as the Senator recalls, are those persons of original German descent who may for generations have lived in Poland, Czchoslovakia, or Yugoslavia, and who, after the defeat of Hitler, under the Potsdam agreement were driven from their homes back into Germany or Austria.

GOVERNMENT CORPORATIONS APPRO-PRIATION BILL-CHANGE OF CON-FEREES

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment. in order to ask that I may be excused from further service as a conferee on the Government corporations appropriation bill, and that a new conferee be appointed?

Mr. REVERCOMB. I yield. Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, if the request of the acting majority leader is granted, I shall ask that a new conferee be appointed.

Mr. WHERRY. I hope my request will be granted, because it is physically impossible for me to attend any further meetings of the conferees.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the request is granted.

Will the junior Senator from Michigan suggest whom he desires to have named as a conferee, in place of the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. FERGUSON. I should like to refer to the seniority list of the committee. As I understand, at the present time it will be the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Saltonstall].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Saltonstall] will be named as an alternate conferee.

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS-CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, I have stated, a first preference is to be given to agricultural workers

I wish to say that a second preference is to be given, as was provided in the House bill, to persons who are household workers or construction, clothing, or garment workers, and others who are needed in the locality in the United States in which such persons propose to reside, or eligible displaced persons possessing educational, scientific, technological, or similar qualifications. That provision was taken from the bill as passed by the House, in substantially the same

A third preference is given to eligible displaced persons who are the blood relatives of citizens or lawfully admitted aliens in the United States, such relationship in each case to be within the third degree of consanguinity, computed according to the rules of common law.

Within those preferences, certain priorities are to be issued, first, to eligible displaced persons who during World War II bore arms against the enemies of the United States and are unable or unwilling to return to the countries of which they are nationals, because of persecution or fear of persecution on account of race, religion, or political opinion; and, second, to eligible displaced persons who on January 1, 1948, were located in the displaced persons camps and centers. In exceptional cases, however, a preference may be given to persons outside, under the regulations of the Commission.

Mr. President, I believe that states the principal differences between the bill as passed by the Senate and the conference report.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REVERCOMB. I yield.

Mr. COOPER. As the Senator knows, the clothing industry in the United States is badly in need of qualified tailors and hand operators on clothing. I am informed that that need cannot be supplied in this country, but it can be supplied from European sources. Can the Senator state whether the words "clothing and garment workers" are intended to include and do include tailors and hand operators on clothing?

Mr. REVERCOMB. It is my understanding that the reference to clothing and garment workers, would include any-one who works with clothing and garments, and certainly it would be my understanding that it would include tailors. However, if there were any reason to doubt for a moment that such persons were covered by the words used in the conference report, the reference in the report to other workers needed in such places in the United States where such displaced persons would reside, would certainly cover the situation.

Mr. SALTONSTALL, Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REVERCOMB. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. As I read the conference report rather hastily, the number of persons who can come into the United States under it, from any one country could displace not more than 50 percent of the quota of immigrants from that country for that year. I should like to know this: If there are eligibles from Latvia, who are just the sort of people we want, and who qualify under this measure in every other way, will the fact that 50 percent of the quota for that country has been used for that year, keep other of such eligible persons from being admitted that year, but give them priority in the next year; or what will happen?

Mr. REVERCOMB. I should have mentioned that point in the opening statement I made. I am glad the Sen-ator has asked the question. I think it best that I read the provision of the conference report in that connection. It is to be found in subsection (b) of section 3:

Upon the issuance of an immigration visa to any eligible displaced person as provided for in this act, the consular officer shall use a quota number from the immigration quota of the country of the alien's nationality as defined in section 12 of the act of May 26, 1924 (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 212), for the fiscal year then current at the time or, if no such quota number is available for said fiscal year, in that event for the first succeeding fiscal year in which a quota number is available: Provided, That not more than 50 per centum of any quota shall be so used in any fiscal year: Provided further, That eligible displaced orphans may be issued special nonquota immigration visas, except that the number of such special nonquota immigration visas shall not exceed 3.000.

In other words, it does not block the number of persons who may be admitted into the United States in any one year. I know exactly what the able Senator has in mind. For instance, the quota of Estonia is very low; I do not recall, but it is probably around 200 or under The question asked by the Senator is, Would that primarily affect the number to come in in any one year? No; it would not. As many as are available, as many as will, may come in. As many as will, even beyond the whole quota, may come in. But the charge against future quotas is only chargeable to half the yearly quota. In other words, it leaves half the quota for persons, natives of that country other than displaced persons, to use it in those years.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. In other words, then, to finish with that, they can be admitted in any number, if they are otherwise eligible, from Estonia, but 50 percent of the quota from that country would be pledged for years to come until that number is filled up. Is that correct?

Mr. REVERCOMB. Yes, that is right. In other words, this is a provision that was in the House bill, which was insisted upon by the House, called by some a mortgaging of future quotas up to 50 percent a year. It does not affect the number who may come in within any year of the 2 years covered by the statute, or rather within the whole 2-year period covered by the statute.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. REVERCOMB. I yield. Mr. FERGUSON. I should like the floor in my own right.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I thought the Senator wanted me to yield for a ques-I tried to give an explanation of the bill as it came from conference. is the Senate bill as passed by the Senate by a large majority, with the differences I have tried to express in this opening statement. With that explanation, I am very glad to yield the floor at this time.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, as one of the conferees, I have not placed my signature to the conference report. and while the report was taken to the floor of the House and adopted, and I anticipate it will be adopted by the Senate, I still deem it my duty to state for the RECORD and to the Senate my reason for declining to sign the report.

Mr. President, there are two questions involved in the bill as to which I could not compromise the principle which I think is involved. While I realize a vote was taken upon each of the questions in the Senate, I still think the principle is so vital to the proper solution of the problem of displaced persons that it should now be called to the attention of the Senate, because I believe the bill is not workable in its present condition, and that in the future, amendments will of necessity be made, and therefore we should understand what we are about to do.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield for a ques-

Mr. REVERCOMB. Merely that we may understand the basis of the Senator's statement, did the Senator vote for the bill in the Senate on final passage?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes, Mr. President; I voted for the bill. I thought then it was as good a bill as the Senate at that time would pass; I believe now it is as good a bill as the Senate will pass: but I still think I should make these remarks to the Senate at this time because to me they deal with a vital matter. The questions I have in mind are two in number. The first has to do with the date for reckoning displaced persons under the bill. As I recall, the war ended on May 8, 1945. Some of the displacedpersons camps were in existence at that time, and were filled later by taking people who were displaced from wherever they were found.

Sometime subsequent to December 22. 1945, the President of the United States issued an Executive order allowing displaced persons from the camps to come into the United States under the regular quota. The report of the committee indicates that there were many. And, by the way, the President used the date of December 22, 1945, as being the date he would recognize persons as being displaced if they were in the camps prior to that date.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield for a question.

Mr. PEPPER. Can the Senator give us any explanation for the vigorous insistence by the majority on the December 22, 1945, date, which was known to deny eligibility status to large numbers of displaced persons?

Mr. FERGUSON. I think the record is quite full, because it was contended on the floor that the real displaced persons were those who were in the camps prior to December 22, 1945. But as the Senator from Michigan sees the proposition, all displaced persons in the camps prior to the time they were officially closed by the order of General Clay, are displaced persons.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield. Mr. PEPPER. I have before me an editorial from the Denver Post of June 13, 1948, the heading of which is "Cutting out the bias," in which appears this paragraph:

A second provision of the Senate bill, plainly containing an anti-Jewish bias, limits eligible DP's to those refugees who entered the camps of western Europe before December 22, 1945. Most Jews, who comprise 18 percent of the total displaced persons, came to the refugee centers after that date.

Certainly there is an inference in the editorial statement and in the fact that justifies a possible assumption there might have been some conscious design to deny eligibility to the Jews.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON, I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Let me at once remove from the mind of the Senator from Florida any conscious design to discriminate against anyone whomsoever because of religion or faith. I think the other members of the committee will bear me out in that statement, and will do so emphatically. This was a displaced-persons bill, and there was not, and should not have been, any idea of bringing the faith or beliefs of any persons into the discussion. Let that be put at rest.

So far as the Senator from West Virginia is concerned, this is a displaced-persons bill, whoever they might be, and the persons earliest displaced, those more certainly displaced, were the ones who should receive first attention. I point out to the Senator who has raised the question—and I do not desire to discuss it because it has no part in the consideration—that there are displaced persons all over the world. Under IRO camps are maintained not only in Europe but in north Africa, in the Middle East, and in China.

We are advised by Sir Arthur Rucker, who is the deputy administrator of the PCIRO, that the representatives of the new state of Pakistan came before him and reported that there were 10,000,000 displaced persons in that country. Those people would be qualified. It is limited to Germany and Austria, where the American, the British, and the French zones are located, with respect to who may come under this bill. Perhaps that is discrimination, but it is wise and necessary discrimination as to the area dealt with in the bill.

As to other discriminations, I think the Senator will find that there are none, in fact, regardless of charges by groups and by writers. I do not think that there would be any unjust discrimination whatever under the effects of this bill.

Mr. McGRATH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I would rather not yield. I have a conference to attend with regard to the Government corporations bill. It is very essential that I be present because of the closing of the session to-day. As soon as I can finish what I have to say, I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Rhode Island.

The question has been raised as to whether the bill is, in effect, discriminatory. There is no doubt that it is discriminatory. It does not make any difference to the people who are being discriminated against whether it is a conscious or an unconscious discrimination, but it makes a difference to the people who are exercising the discrimination.

The reason this bill will not work is that it will suggest the filing of fraudulent applications because on December 22, 1945, registration was not complete in the camps. It was not known who were in the camps prior to that date or who were in the camps after that date, and not until April 21, 1947, was there an actual investigation to the extent of taking fingerprints of those who were in the camps. So on April 21, 1947, it was known exactly what persons were in the camps, by photograph, by fingerprint, and by record.

I have not agreed with the committee. I had presented these problems on the floor previously. I have not signed the report, because under the circumstances I felt my conscience would not allow me to sign it. I merely came to the floor to present the picture, so that we may realize what we are doing. If we do not solve the problem of displaced persons we shall have a cancer in Europe that may lead even to disturbances which will affect the whole world. For that reason I raise my voice today upon the floor.

I yield to the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. McGRATH. Mr. President, I should like to address myself to the question propounded to the Senate by the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper] with respect to the date of December 22, 1945, which was made the effective date of this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized in his own right.

Mr. McGRATH. I join in the sentiments expressed by the distinguished Senator from Michigan. To me it is a matter of deep regret that after 18 months of sincere, honest, and courageous effort on the part of so many thousands of humanitarian Americans, we come to this sad moment in the Senate of the United States when we probably shall have to write into the law of this country principles of narrowness, intolerance, and bigotry.

Mr. President, the date of December 22, 1945, was deliberately written into this bill because that date prohibited Jews from taking part in this program. The committee may deny it had that deliberate intent, but I want the RECORD to show that the committee had full knowledge that such would be the effect. whatever the intention of the committee may have been. It was pointed out in the committee by myself, that on this date most of the poor wandering people who had been driven from their homes and were still wandering about the wartorn countries of Europe had not been collected together.

If we take the date of December 22, 1945, there will be no record. If a person is able to claim that he was in a camp prior to that date, he would be recognized as a displaced person. Therefore a dishonest person could get out of the camp as a displaced person. But if we take the official record, as of April 21, 1947, we have something on which to work. Those who will administer the act will have something on which to work.

I say, Mr. President, if we unconsciously discriminate against those who are actually displaced persons, it is still discrimination. If we discriminate, we are in effect un-American.

Mr. President, there is one other provision in the bill which I think discriminates against the same persons. When it was brought up on the floor and in the conference committee, it was turned down, but I think we should realize what we are doing. We tried to make it fair in the bill so that there would be no question about taking persons from the groups. The groups were the nationality groups, with one exception, and that was the Jew. He was treated under IRO as a nationality, and therefore if we had applied the rule that there would be no discrimination among groups, we would have discovered that there would have been no discrimination as to nationality. Therefore everyone would have been able to say we were trying to bring into America qualified displaced persons, no matter what their race, their color, or their creed might be.

So when we boil it down and reach the question of whether we are actually discriminating, we will be unable, in my humble judgment, to solve the problem of displaced persons unless at some time this bill is amended or a law is passed providing that there shall be no discrimination as to groups, and that we shall use a date on which there were official records so that we can ascertain whether the applicants are really displaced persons. They had not been put into camps, so they are ineligible to participate under this program.

this program.

I want the Record to show that another discrimination is writen into the bill, which is a discrimination against those who come from the Catholic parts of Europe, by giving a great preference to another segment of the area from which these displaced persons were driven.

Mr. President, I feel that before there is a final vote on the conference report I should make the observation I have previously stated, namely, that we have approached this problem from the point of view of seeing what we could do to prevent displaced persons from coming to the United States, rather than how to bring them here. Our whole aim and purpose, it seems to me, has been to find reasons and excuses for not passing any displaced-persons legislation whatsoever.

I am firmly of the conviction that the only reason why we have a bill before us is that we do not dare, in the months ahead, face up to public opinion if we dare to adjourn the Congress without passing some legislation on this subject. I hope the people of the United States will not be fooled into thinking that we are doing, by this bill, that which by tradition and honor the United States of America should do for the displaced people of Europe.

Mr. President, I was a member of the committee which was appointed to go to Europe to study the displaced persons problem. I regret that I could not stay in Europe during the entire tour of the committee, but I was there long enough to visit more than 15 of the camps, and I think I am equipped with knowledge of the problem.

We came back to the United States and worked diligently and laboriously upon the legislation. I disagreed wholeheartedly and vigorously with the majority of the committee. In committee I took the view which has been taken here today by the distinguished Senator from Michigan, and my reward for making that kind of a fight was that when a conference committee of the Senate was appointed to meet with the conferees of the House of Representatives and try to get a workable bill, though I had been one of the Democratic members of the committee all during the progress of the legislation, I was denied a place upon the conference committee. Instead of my going on the conference, where I could have discussed this question intelligently, there was sent the distinguished Senator from Mississippi to represent the Democratic Party, when his view has all along been that we should not pass displaced-persons legislation at all, that we owe no obligation to these people. That is the kind of situation we had when the Senate should have had an opportunity to get a reasonable bill out of the conference of the House and Senate.

I wish to say, Mr. President, that I resent such treatment at the hands of those who were responsible for it.

This morning the New York Times has a very splendid editorial very much in line with the editorial referred to by the distinguished Senator from Florida. We all have confidence in the fairness and in the integrity of the New York Times. It starts its principal editorial today by calling this bill a "shameful" displaced-persons bill, and I wish to read into the Record here and now the opinion of the distinguished editors of this newspaper:

Eighteen months ago a humanitarian drive, worthy of the best traditions of this country, was begun to save some of the lives of 850,000 men, women, and children in the displaced-persons camps of Europe. With sweeping support of Americans in every walk of life and of civic, government, labor, and religious groups, the Stratton bill emerged, symbolizing the highest principles as a basis for taking a fair share of the DP's—400,000 over a 4-year period—on the concept of justice for each group of DP's.

That bill died in committee, and two bills subsequently took the Stratton bill's place. In the House a more moderate bill, but nevertheless humane, was sponsored by Representative Frank Fellows, to admit 200,000 DP's over a 2-year period. In the Senate a bill written by Senators Revercome and Willey was the antithesis of humanitarianism and deliberately sought to scuttle every high concept of either of the House bills.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. McGRATH. I am glad to yield.
Mr. WILEY. The Senator knows I voted for the bill personally, does he not, but did not write into it one word, one sentence, or one clause? It came out as a subcommittee bill, and as a committee bill, and my name is on it without authority from me. Is not that the fact?

thority from me. Is not that the fact?
Mr. McGRATH. I am very happy the Senator has interrupted me to make that point. I am very happy to know that the Senator from Wisconsin is disowning this bill, as I would disown it myself if it had my name attached to it.

Mr. WILEY. Will not the Senator answer my question directly? He sat on the subcommittee. Did I have anything to do with writing the bill? I will have something to say on the merits of the bill later. The Senator was a member of the subcommittee, and I should like to get the matter straight, because all over this country I have been credited as being the sire of the bill, and I should just like to know definitely if the Senator does not know personally that I had nothing to do with writing the bill or shaping it. Is it not a subcommittee bill, a majority of the subcommittee voting for it, and was it not afterwards adopted by the full committee?

Mr. McGRATH. When anyone says that the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin is the father of this bill he is stating an untruth.

Mr. WILEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. McGRATH. I agree with the Senator that he had little or nothing to do with the bill as it came out in final form.

Mr. WILEY. Or with drafting the bill. I did not sit on the subcommittee that drafted the bill.

Mr. McGRATH. The reason why the Senator's name is on the bill at all is that we reported the bill bearing the number that had been given the original bill introduced by the Senator from Wisconsin, and the Senator had very little to do with the recommendation or the approval of the concepts we now find in the bill that is before us in this conference report.

Mr. WILEY. One other question, if the Senator will yield. Is it not true that this bill was written by the majority of the subcommittee, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Revercomb], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Donnell]?

Mr. McGRATH. That is correct.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator from Rhode Island yield?

Mr. McGRATH. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. REVERCOMB. The attention of Senators has been called to the responsibility for the bill. There was a subcommittee consisting of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath], who is speaking now, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Cooper], and myself. The bill was not written by any one individual. It came out of the subcommittee as a very definite compromise of the views of a subcommittee which wanted to present to the Congress an opportunity to vote upon a bill dealing with this subject.

The Senator from Rhode Island well knows that. He attended the meetings of the subcommittee. He knows of the extended and lengthy discussions had upon this subject in the subcommittee. He knows that it came out of the subcommittee as a compromise of the views of the subcommittee, that a majority of three voted to report the bill out, that one of the Senators did not agree with some of the provisions but did agree with others, and I think that the Senator from Rhode Island, while he did not agree with the terms of the bill as a member of the subcommittee, did want some bill brought out upon this subject.

That is the way the bill came before the Senate. No one individual, no one Senator, offered this bill or wrote it. This was a bill which came out of a subcommittee of five, in which there was definite disagreement about the terms, and eventually a sufficient number, a majority of the subcommittee, found a bill upon which they could agree, and reported it out.

That agreement was by way of compromise and settlement for the purpose of bringing this subject before the Congress of the United States so the Congress could determine it. There was no attempt here to bury the question of the displaced persons, but to give the Congress an opportunity to vote upon the question.

Mr. McGRATH. Mr. President, I am not surprised that the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee wants now to disown the paternity of the bill, and I think he will be more ashamed of it as time goes on, than he is now.

Of course the final form in which the report came to the Senate represents compromises which were reached by the conference committee. But I am not going to let the record stand without saying that in every way that he could the distinguished Senator from West Virginia whittled down this bill to the point where it was most distasteful to us, and we reached the conclusion in the committee that if we were going to have any legislation whatsoever upon this subject, the only way to get it would be by writing the legislation on the floor. We agreed to have the bill reported, unsatisfactory as it was, in the hope that we might accomplish that purpose. myself, joined with other Senators in offering an amendment on the floor as a substitute for the bill. I and other Senators who shared the same views withdrew the substitute in the hope that in the final analysis we would not, by voting on the substitute, foreclose the possibility of getting a fair bill from the House and Senate conference.

Mr. REVERCOMB. There is no question that the Senator from Rhode Island and the Senator from West Virginia were in disagreement on many points in consideration of the bill, and there is no question that the Senator from West Virginia today is not, as he previously was not, in favor of some of the terms contained in the bill today.

When the bill came to the floor of the Senate the figure was fixed at 50,000 persons a year. The Senate, by amendment, raised the number to 200,000 for 2 years. But regardless of that, the Senator from West Virginia accepted the verdict of the Senate, and went into conference to uphold the Senate's bill.

The Senate disagreed with and would not support the views of the Senator from Rhode Island, and now the Senator from Rhode Island complains about the bill. The Senator from Rhode Island denounced the bill as it came before the Senate, and when it was amended. The Senate has disagreed with the Senator from Rhode Island. The bill has been passed by the Senate, and although the Senator from West Virginia disagreed with the bill as it was passed by the Senate, he stood by the judgment of the Senate in the conference.

Mr. McGRATH. Mr. President, the Senator from Rhode Island realizes that the damage has been done, and that we are now considering a conference report on which there is no opportunity to make changes in the bill. I realize that it is a matter of voting it up or down, approving it or disapproving it.

I merely want to make my own posi-tion clear upon the record that I think the bill is not only unsatisfactory, but it is largely unworkable. Time alone, of course, can answer many of the doubts we have within us at the present time.

I rose, Mr. President, to answer the question propounded by the distinguished Senator from Florida, and I had started to read an editorial from the New York Times. I offer the complete editorial for insertion in the RECORD at the end of my remarks. I do, however, wish to make a reference to one more paragraph, which I think sums up the situation very adequately when

This week has brought a shameful victory for this latter school of bigotry. A joint conference committee approved virtually conference committee approved virtually every narrow concept of the Senate measure, and the House yesterday endorsed the conference report.

The editorial goes on to say:

This is a sad conclusion. There is also no assurance that the 100,000 proposed for the first year's admissions will come into the country, because of the bill's unworkability.

What is the position of those of us who have a deep feeling for the bitter experiences of fellow human beings who have for years been driven from their homes and countries, forced to live under cruel circumstances which the enemies of our democracy and our way of life have visited upon them?

Mr. President, I have weighed this matter carefully in my own mind, and I can see before me 200,000 human souls that may probably in some small way be benefited by this bill. I can see their confreres, some six-hundred-thousandodd of them, who can have no hope because we have seen fit to put a limitation of 200,000 on our action.

I have come to the conclusion, Mr. President, that if there is a chance to give aid and succor to any one of these that we should not miss the opportunity. I have come to the conclusion that it does not make a particle of difference whether a man is a Jew or a Catholic or a Protestant, whether he is a Balt, or whether he is something else, if he is in want and in misery, we ought to help him if we can. And while this bill discriminates against Jewish DP's, and while it discriminates against Roman Catholic DP's-and the Roman Catholics of this country know it, and they know that the Senate knows it; and the Jews of this country know it, and they know that the Senate knows it—yet these people have been persecuted before, and they have lived through it; and, Mr. President, neither of these groups because of further intolerant discrimination would want to deny what little aid may come to fellow human beings by this bill.

Doing therefore what I know in their hearts they would have me do, that is vote for this bill even though it does not do all it should for them, on that basis, Mr. President, I shall vote for the conference report in the hope that time will justify what I have said, and that our consciences will be aroused and that these wrongs will be righted in the not-toodistant future.

There being no objection, the editorial submitted by Mr. McGrath was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A SHAMEFUL DP BILL

Eighteen months ago a humanitarian drive, worthy of the best traditions of this country, was begun to save some of the lives of 850,000 men, women, and children in the displaced persons camps of Europe. With sweeping support of Americans in every walk of life and of civic government, labor, and religious groups, the Stratton bill emerged, symboliz-ing the highest principles as a basis for taking a fair share of the DP's-400,000 over a 4-year period on the concept of justice for each group of DP's.

That bill died in committee, and two bills subsequently took the Stratton bill's place. In the House, a more moderate bill, but nevertheless humane, was sponsored by Representative Frank Fellows, to admit 200,000 DP's over a 2-year period. In the Senate a bill written by Senators REVERCOMB and Wiley was the antithesis of humanitarianism and deliberately sought to scuttle every high concept of either of the House bills. It cruelly favored one DP group above another, injected the religious issue, and because of its unworkable administrative provisions was a bill of exclusion rather than admission of DP's.

This week has brought a shameful victory for this latter school of bigotry. A joint conference committee approved virtually every narrow concept of the Senate measure and the House vesterday endorsed the conference report.

It is to their honor that four of the Senate-House conferees refused to sign the bill-Senators FERGUSON and KILGORE, and Representatives Boggs and CELLER. This DP bill's main provisions are these: 205,000 DP's shall be permitted to enter over the next 2-year period, including 3,000 war orphans; 40 percent of admissions shall be allotted to DP nations of the Baltic States and Poland east of the Curzon line; 30 percent of admissions shall go to farmers, discriminating against other skills; those not in the camps by December 22, 1945, are not eligible for admission, discriminating against the bulk of Jewish DP's, who suffered the most cruelly during the war. Even the Volksdeutsche are given a boost-permitting these persons of German ethnic origin, many of whom had strong Nazi ties, to compete for regular quota numbers with bona fide DP's.

This is a sad conclusion. There is also no assurance that the 100,000 proposed for the first year's admissions will come into the country, because of the bill's unworkability. Perhaps most significant, this triumph for the Revercomb group holds disturbing portents for the future. Good bills have gone down the drain; a bad bill and a bad precedent bode ill for democracy, which finds discrimination on its books repugnant.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, the other day I read a little skit wherein a school teacher wanted to have an essay written about Socrates, and was going to give a prize. The boy who received the prize Socrates was an ancient philosopher. He went around giving advice. He got poisoned.

Mr. President, I am not going to give advice, but neither am I going to permit to go unanswered criticism of the subcommittee, three of whom agreed on the committee bill-one a Roman Catholic, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCar-RAN] and two Protestants, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Donnell] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Rever-COMB], while the other two—one a Catholice and one a Protestant—disagreed. I mention these facts much as I dislike to even mention the religious faith of a colleague, for I feel that such reference has no real place in our discussion. Unfortunately, references as to religion have already been made by others.

I heard no such argument in committee as I have heard on the floor of the Senate, as advanced by my friend Senator McGrath. The injection of what we have heard said by my good friend not only disappoints me, but adds, I believe, to the confused thinking that has gone on throughout this country in relation to the bill.

Because my name appeared on the bill I have been the target of the worst kind of misrepresentation. The kind of propaganda that has gone out to my people is beyond belief. Folks have sent me letters in which they have said "I am not reply-ing to this kind of rot," but many did, Mr. President.

Mr. President, the displaced persons in Europe today, although faced with many serious problems are, according to the record, better fed and better looked after in Europe than the people outside the camps in Germany. They are receiving more calories.

What was the real purpose of trying to get a workable bill? Senators realize how difficult it is to draft a bill that will work. I agreed wholeheartedly with the majority of the subcommittee, and I wish to tell the Senate why.

I appointed three men, one of whom is a former judge of the supreme court of his State, and a Catholic. He knew what was necessary to place in op-eration a working mechanism. He knew that 40 percent of all the applications for visas to this country were fraudulent. He knew that the record showed that this situation presented the finest vehicle in the world for Joe Stalin to get people into the United States. We know that 125,000,000 people have been taken over by the Communists without firing a shot but by penetration and infiltration.

When it is said that these three men, Christian, honorable men, Members of the Senate, permitted bigotry and religious bias to dictate their judgment, I think that is one of the nastiest things that has ever been said on the floor of the Senate. Knowing these men as I know them, working with some of them in Christian relationship, I know that what was said is not only wrong, but

These men have no prejudice against Jews or against Catholics. I, for one, absolutely detest and abhor every form of religious intolerance and discrimination. Senators sought to meet the impact of this DP problem in connection with all the other problems of America. sought to evolve a mechanism that would permit, between now and January, 50,000

DP's to be siphoned into America on top of the quotas. Those men knew that next January, once the mechanism was arranged, the tide would be coming in if we had the jobs, the facilities, and the people in America who would take them and give them jobs and housing. They knew that there were 2,000,000 veterans getting married who did not have homes. They knew that this program should be handled with judgment and not with unreason. So they brought forth this bill.

I sat with the subcommittee on one or two occasions when the bill was being discussed. There was the same opposition then that we apparently have on the floor of the Senate now. But not once did I hear the question of religion or the question of race interjected into those discussions. It is not there, Mr. President and should not be there. I say that to the people of the country. I say that editorial writers, yes even for the New York Times, who write in such a vein should read the letter which Donald Richberg wrote to a Washington newspaper the other day. He spoke of the obligation of the men who write for the press to be acquainted with the facts before they attempt to educate the American public. I agree with that sentiment, Mr. President.

This Immigration Subcommittee was appointed by myself. The subcommittee went to Europe. They did not know that I was going to Europe. As I have heretofore stated, I went to Europe at my own expense. I went through those countries. I saw the situation. I felt the vast humanitarian implications of this controversy. Yet I did not come back and say a word to the subcommittee as to my own personal conclusions. I refrained from trying to influence them. But when the subcommittee had arrived at its conclusion, after the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] and other members had arrived at their conclusion, I saw before me a working mechanism which, if it could be gotten through the two Houses would point to the solution of this problem.

As has been said by the Senator from West Virginia, we had before the Senate the question of who are displaced persons. We had that question in the committee. The distinguished Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] offered an amendment providing for the inclusion of 10,000,000 Sudeten Germans—the Volksdeutsche. If they had been included, what would have happened to the percentages? There are in India and China today tens of million of displaced persons.

But, Mr. President, we were facing a European situation of 800,000 displaced persons. If we pass this bill today, we are assuming that within the next 2 years this country will take one-fourth of them. But do not forget that we are feeding those DP's over there better than we are feeding the stricken German people. They receive more calories and have better housing conditions.

Since the day of victory in Europe 7,000,000 DP's have been handled and only some 800,000 remain.

This thing cannot be done overnight. The problem must be handled with reason, judgment, and foresight. We must have places to put these immigrants. How many of our people have come forth and told us how many displaced persons they would take? I wrote to the State of Wisconsin because the governor had appointed an able resettlement committee. I wanted to know how many the people of that State were prepared to take. A response came and I was glad to insert it in the RECORD, along with telegrams from my State, even though some of those wires disagreed with my own position. Last week 41 county agents sat downstairs as the guests of the junior Senator from Wisconsin, two House Members from Wisconsin, and myself. I asked how many offers to take DP's had been received, how many places could be found, how many would be taken in my own county. The county agent in my county said, "There was one offer in my county of 45,000 people."

Mr. President, we cannot take these displaced persons and simply throw them into this country. That would be a tragedy and a sin against the DP's them-We must have places to lodge selves. them. There must be folks who will feed them and look after them. Already the homes of America are crowded be-cause of our "ain folk." We are trying to build houses. We are trying to keep our economy stable, and all at once the charge is interjected that we have a prejudice against Jews and against Catholics. It makes my heart sick that that charge should be made against my associates, whom I know so well, whom I have learned to love because of their ability to work together for the general welfare and because they, like I, detest intolerance.

Here we are in the Senate, 96 Senators, no two of whom have the same educational, economic, religious, social, geographic, and political background. Consequently we do not see things just alike. But we all love our country. But, Mr. President, if we get to the point of misjudging our fellow citizens, if we completely unjustifiedly call them bigots, we lose our poise. We lose our perspective. We cannot see through the mist that divides us.

Of course this bill is not a masterpiece. No bill could be whipped into shape, under the conditions which exist today, which would fit the conditions of tomorrow. What we have here is a bill which is the result of Members of the House and Members of the Senate getting together. My distinguished colleague from Michigan voted for the bill as it left the Senate, and while he disagrees with some of the provisions I am glad to note he will vote for the same.

That brings up one other subject. I am partially responsible for what occurred in relation to the appointment of the Senate conferees. We were having a Republican convention in Wisconsin last Friday. I had to leave early. A fellow Senator came to me and said, "You will have to name the conferees." Without detailed thought, because I had not been in the midst of this thing, and because time was lacking with a thousand other things to be done, whom did I name? The ranking Democrat, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] was absent because of illness. I named among others the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON], the ranking Republican who was acquainted with the bill and the facts. I was informed afterward that my original appointments would not stand by the bill aimed at in the Senate. They would not fight for the Senate bill. Then I also recognized that I had inadvertently omitted two Senators, one of whom had been on the original subcommittee; but my original appointments had been made with the best intentions. Of course I had named the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Rever-COMB] chairman of the subcommittee.

That raises in my mind a very serious question. Personally I would not act as a conferee if I could not support a bill which went out of this body. I would not think it was my right to act as a conferee under such circumstances, if I could not basically support the measure which the Senate passed and what I was supposed to support. Perhaps others think differently.

I am not questioning the motives of anyone. But I think that matter should be thoroughly discussed on an appropriate occasion, and should be settled.

I am the guilty party because of necessary haste in desiring to go back to my native State and to attend the convention. Otherwise I probably would have appointed from the very start the ones I subsequently appointed. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. Donnell] should certainly have been appointed in the first instance; and I appointed the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND] instead of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], who was ill.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a privileged matter? I think an attack has been made upon me personally by the Senator from Wisconsin, and I demand that the Senator yield to permit me to inquire as to that.

Mr. WILEY. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. The Senator has inferred that I declined to go along with with the Senate version of the bill, and that the Senator made a mistake in naming me as one of the conferees. I think the Senator did make a mistake in naming me as one of the conferees.

Mr. WILEY. Then the Senator and I agree.

Mr. KILGORE. Because since I was appointed as one of the conferees, I received a letter—and I wonder whether the Senator from Wisconsin has ever seen the letter. It was sent on April 15, 1948; and it says that the Senate version of the bill is unworkable.

Mr. WILEY. Who wrote the letter? Mr. KILGORE. The Under Secretary of State, Mr. Robert A. Lovett.

Mr. WILEY. That answers itself, I think. I have no recollection of seeing such a letter.

I did not mean in any way to imply anything particularly derogatory. I wished to get the facts in the RECORD, and I think I have them in the RECORD.

Mr. President, I wish to return to the basic problem. Eight hundred thousand displaced persons, more or less, are involved. The Senate committee reported the bill to the Senate. The Senate amended the bill, and after the bill was passed by the House, the bill went to The conferees have reconference. ported.

When some say that the bill is not workable, only time will fell that. Of course, there can be all kinds of opinions as to that. I believe the bill has merit and will, if properly administered, do the job.

But, Mr. President, if we do not accept the conference report, in what situation will the displaced persons be left? Are we going to permit unfounded and loose statements to interfere with getting a mechanism which will serve the purpose so generally desired? I believe the bill we sent to the House was not only workable but would have done the job. It would have given us additional time to handle this problem. But this measure will permit the entrance of 105,000 DP's annually, plus 150,000 aliens under the quota, and probably an equal number of nonquota persons annually. I do not think the country could absorb more than that in 1 year.

So, Mr. President, if we sit back cooly and evaluate the situation, do we not arrive at the conclusion that we are doing the best we can? We are operating under trying circumstances, having to meet a number of difficult problems, staying up all night, and working during the following day, and probably during the following night.

I wish to say again that I believe that after we have rested and have had time to think about these matters, we shall arrive at the conclusion that although we have differed, although members of the subcommittee have differed, no Senator has meant to impugn the motives of any other Senator or has claimed that any Senator was anti-this or anti-that, or was anything but pro-American.

Mr. President, with those words, I shall take my seat.

INCORPORATION OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS CORPORATION

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 5904) to incorporate the Virgin Islands Corporation, and for other purposes, which was read twice by its title.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to consider the bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BUTLER. I now move that the bill be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and substituting the text of Senate bill 1183.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nebraska.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendment and third reading of the bill

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to continue the Virgin Islands Company as an agency of the United States."

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, request a conference thereon with the House of Representatives, and that the chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. BUTLER, Mr. CORDON, and Mr. HATCH conferees on the part of the Senate.

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS-CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I appeal to the Senators who are engaging in the debate on this bill to make their remarks as brief as possible. I think there is no question but that the conference report will be adopted. So I hope Senators will make their remarks brief, for there are very important bills awaiting action. There is the problem of increasing the pay of approximately one million and a half Federal employees, and there are other questions which we are very anxious to reach and to dispose of. If this conference report is going to be adopted anyway, as I think it is, I hope Senators will make their remarks on it as brief as possible.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Rhode Island has seen fit to criticize the appointment of the Senator from Mississippi as one of the conferees. The Senator from Rhode Island says he should have been appointed because he has seen the displaced-persons camps and could intelligently discuss the question.

Mr. McGRATH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. EASTLAND. I yield for a ques-Mr. McGRATH. I did not predicate my right to be a member of the conference committee on the fact that I had seen the displaced-persons camps. I predicated it on the fact that I was the only available Democratic member of the subcommittee who had been appointed to study this problem, and I pointed out that we did go to Europe and did study the problem, and that I knew of the various angles to it.

As I have watched the appointment of conferees here in the Senate since I have been a Member of the Senate, I have observed that the conferees appointed have always been those who have been charged with the construction and handling of the legislation.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, yielded for a question, not for a speech. I have only a few remarks to make.

Mr. McGRATH. The Senator has my

Mr. EASTLAND. I know that the Senator from Rhode Island is more intelligent than the Senator from Mississippi, and probably would have done better on the conference committee. But, Mr. President, I have seen as many displaced persons in Europe as the Senator from Rhode Island has seen.

As I conceive the situation, it is the duty of a Senate conferee to uphold the position taken by the Senate until a reasonable compromise can be worked out. I think that is our duty, under our oath of office.

I submit that that is all I did. We made one proposition to the House. That proposition was accepted, and a bill was worked out.

All that the Senator from Mississippi did was to uphold to the best of his ability the position taken by the Senate.

As I remember the debate, the Senator from Rhode Island complained about several provisions in the original bill. One was the provision that 50 percent must come from Baltic states east of the Curzon line, and he also complained about the provision that 50 percent must be farmers.

The fact is that the Senator from Mississippi and others of the conferees agreed to write in that restriction.

We brought back a conference report which certainly should be more palatable to the Senator from Rhode Island than the original bill passed by the Senate.

I submit that I considered it my duty as a matter of honor to uphold the position taken by the Senate of the United States. That is what I did without regard to religious or racial feeling of any kind or type.

Although I shall vote against adoption of the conference report, I think it is as good a measure as we could have gotten under the circumstances.

Mr. KILGORE obtained the floor. Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I wish to address a question to the Senator from Mississippi. I was trying to get him to yield to me before he concluded his remarks.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, did the junior Senator from West Virginia desire to ask a question? I understood that, after I sat down, the Senator desired to ask a question. Would the senior Senator from West Virginia yield for that purpose?

Mr. KILGORE. I yield to my colleague for the purpose of a question, most certainly.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I want to ask this question with respect to the attack made on this point by the Senator from Mississippi. Is it not correct that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] was on the subcommittee, and was the ranking Democratic member of the subcom-

Mr. EASTLAND. That is correct.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I do not know whether the Senator from Mississippi is even aware of it, but I want to say that on June 7, 1948, the Senator from Nevada wrote to the director of the staff of the committee, the Senator from Nevada being ill and confined to the hospital at that time, as follows:

With regard to the other matter about which is asked my opinion, namely, the appointment of a conferee in my stead on the displaced-persons bill, I suggest and recommend Senator EASTLAND.

That was the request of the ranking minority member of the subcommittee dealing with this subject.

Mr. EASTLAND. He was the ranking Democratic member, and, by the way, he is a fine gentleman, a member of the Catholic Church. But those arguments and those reasons should have no place in this discussion. As I understand the rules or the customs of the Senate, conferees are appointed on the basis of seniority. When the Senator from Nevada refused to serve, the next two ranking Democrats were appointed conferees, according to the custom of the Senate.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. President, as one of the two dissenters to the conference report, I desire at this point to call attention to one paragraph in a letter which only came to my attention, and, I think, only came to the attention of anybody, this week. It is a letter dated April 15, 1948. Under the heading of "Eligibility," it makes this statement:

The bill would exclude otherwise qualified displaced persons who entered Germany, Austria, and Italy after December 22, 1945. This would be extremely difficult to administer and would apparently result in discrimination against most of the Jewish displaced persons.

I ask at this time to include that as part of my remarks, and I would state that it is one of my reasons for dissenting in the report of the conferees. The principal reason is that, knowing that never before April 1947 was there an adequate census taken of displaced persons, I look forward to fraud, forged papers, and so forth, in an effort to obtain entry into this country under the pending bill. If we can place the date at the date on which General Clay made a census, which is April 21, 1947, I say that then there is no chance whatever of fraud, for forged passports, for forged birth certificates, or anything else.

There being no objection, the excerpt from the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(2) Eligibility.—The bill would exclude otherwise qualified displaced persons who enotherwise qualified displaced persons who entered Germany, Austria, and Italy after December 22, 1945. This would be extremely difficult to administe and would apparently result in discrimination against most of the Jewish displaced persons. The Committee's report explains that the date of December 1971 (1972) 22, 1945, was selected because it was the date applied under the President's directive of that date. There was justification for estab-lishing this deadline under the President's directive at the time of its issuance because the numbers applying for admission to the United States obviously exceeded those admissible under the quotas and also because it was desired to avoid an influx of refugees into the United States zone for the purpose of taking advantage of its provisions. ever, our own consuls subsequently found this date so difficult to administer that the Department of State, on February 12, 1948, changed the date to April 21, 1947. This later date was the one on which General Clay closed the displaced-persons camps to further admittance.

As far as discrimination against Jewish displaced persons is concerned, I should like to point out that almost all of the Jewish displaced persons who remain in Germany, Austria, and Italy arrived in those countries after December 22, 1945. They have been admitted to the displaced-persons camps and are fully eligible under the International Refugee Organization Constitution. Under the circumstances, it would be unfortunate to exclude most of this group from potential eligibility. It is therefore recommended that the date of eligibility be changed to April 21, 1947.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KILGORE. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I wish to press a question in connection with the Senator's having read a paragraph from a letter written to me under date of April 15, 1948, by Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett, in which, as I understand, Mr. Lovett went on to say that unless the date were moved back to April 21, 1947, there could be no satisfactory administration of it. I want to ask the Senator if he knows that up until February 1948, while this committee was meeting and when it had been meeting for months and months, for the first time, in February of this year, the date was changed or fixed for the admission of displaced persons by making it April 1947, and that for more than 2 years the State Department had administered the admission of displaced persons under the President's directive of December 22, 1945, under the deadline date of December 22, 1945. In other words, when the Under Secretary of State or anyone else comes forward and says the act cannot be administered, he is flying full in the face of the very thing that has been done for 2 years under that very State Depart-

Mr. KILGORE. That, I presume, is in the way of an interrogation. If I may counterinterrogate, I would ask my coleague if the contents of the letter were ever disclosed to any member of the Judiciary Committee, or to any member of the subcommittee? I certainly never saw it until this matter came up, or I would not have voted for the Senate bill when it passed originally.

CONVEYANCE TO CHEYENNE (WYO.) OF CERTAIN LAND

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRICKER in the chair) laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5734) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to convey to the city of Cheyenne, Wyo., for public-park and golf-course purposes, certain land situated within the boundaries of the Veterans' Administration center at Cheyenne, Wyo., and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I wish to say I have had a conference with the Senator from Wyoming and with the Representative from the Cheyenne district. The House bill contains a reservation which in my judgment protects the Federal Government. Also, the property is going to surround the Federal hospital and will be used for park and recreational purposes for the patients of the hospital as well as for other citizens. Therefore, I ask to withdraw my amendment and to have the House version of the bill approved by the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I rise merely to express my appreciation of the action of the Senator from Oregon in withdrawing his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS— CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, before I begin my brief remarks on the pending question of the DP's, I want to make it clear for the Record that I never have questioned and I never shall question, so long as I am in the Senate, the motives of any fellow Member of the Senate. I have no sympathy with the questioning of anybody's motives in what they do. I give credit to my colleagues for the same sincerity that I myself try to show in dealing with all the problems that are constantly before us.

Mr. President, I shall support the conference report, because of the conviction that it is time we began to show attention and interest and America's deep feeling for the courageous people who have been in these camps for the past few years. It is far too late for us to have acted, but we must act now, and we must get the movement under way, in order that the problem may be solved.

I supported the amendments offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] and others and myself on the floor. I am not going into those again. I support the position taken by the Senator from Michigan this morning in his presentation. I want to say also that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] who was called to a committee meeting a few minutes ago, asked me to say for him that he identified himself fully with the position taken by the Senator from Michigan, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Cooper], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath], and myself on the amendments which were offered during the debate and in our position with regard to the report.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I shall be glad to yield.
Mr. WILEY. Has the Senator in mind the number of displaced persons there were when the war ceased in Europe? I think it was approximately 8,000,000, and the number has been reduced to approximately 850,000. Is that correct?
Mr. SMITH. In round figures, that is

Mr. SMITH. In round figures, that is correct. In my opening statement in the debate I gave the figures. I think 8,-000,000 was the number. Approximately 7,000,000 were repatriated. Of those remaining to be cared for approximately 600,000 are in the American zones in Germany and Austria.

My difficulty with the bill is that it does not solve that problem. We shall be called upon to pass additional legislation, But I am in favor of the report and shall support it, because it is time we started the wheels moving to get the problem solved.

Mr. WILEY. The point I am making is that there has been not only a major solution of the problem, but seveneighths of it has been solved. I think the number is 150,000 less than oneeighth, and we are now seeking to solve the problem by getting information through the United Nations, by individual action; and by taking appropriate steps. The impression which has been given throughout the country, I am sure, is that nothing has been done, that we have just been sitting down and doing nothing.

Mr. SMITH. I agree with the Senator. Of course, the repatriation problem was largely solved after the war was over. Many persons went back to the countries from which they had fled. Our problem is to deal with those who were brought in as war prisoners and made to work, and those who fled from persecution.

I shall not discuss the Jewish problem, the Catholic problem, or the Protestant problem, as such. son I made as strong an argument as I made in the debate for fixing the eligibility date in 1947 rather than 1945 was that between 1945 and 1947 one of the most difficult situations arose in Europe, in Poland, where there was a pogrom, and the Jewish people were forced to flee for their lives. I consider that the members of that group which came over to our camps in Germany and Austria were received by General Clay because they were fleeing for their lives, and we said, "We will do for you what we do for the other persons." In was in 1947 that General Clay came to the conclusion that we would have to fix a date after which we would not take people into the camps. We did take them in up to that date, and they are our responsibility, whatever legislation we may pass at this time. So the fact that it affects the Jewish people particularly is only a coincidence. The best figures I can obtain show that if we leave the date in the bill as it is, 90 percent of the Jewish people in the camps in Germany and Austria will be left out, and only 10 percent will be taken care of.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. I am glad the Senator has made that statement, because it reflects my own idea, drawing the inescapable conclusion that by the adoption of the earlier date discrimination actually will be practiced. That is said upon the facts, and without charging any bad motive against anyone.

Mr. SMITH. I agree with the Senator completely. I am charging no bad motives against anyone. If we adopt the earlier date we shall still have the problem left on our hands, because 90 percent of the Jews in our camps will not be taken care of.

I am advised that the negotiations now going on in England with both the British and the Arabs with regard to the Palestine problem are being affected by the fact that the United States has not yet shown a willingness to take our share of these Jewish displaced people into this country. I am advised that our negotiations would be enormously strengthened with the Arabs and the British if it could be shown that we had been willing to do our share in taking in these persecuted and unfortunate people. It might be possible to help in the solution of the very tragic Palestine situation, and especially the immigration phase of that problem. It is a very important question, the significance of which I frankly do not think the Senators realized when they chose the earlier

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH, I yield. Mr. REVERCOMB. I appreciate the viewpoint of the Senator from New Jersey and that he does not impugn the motives of Senators. I want to say that the motives, so far as I know, have been of the highest order. There was no intent to discriminate, and, I will say further, there was no discrimination, as the Senator views it, against anyone on account of his faith or religion. I shall speak to that point later. I know that great pressure was brought to bear, but the idea of the religion of any of these persons did not and should not enter into the matter. There were people of all faiths who presented their cause together. They did not bring up the question of faith. It was a question of a displaced person, whoever he might be, regardless of his faith. Since the point has been injected into the debate, I should like to speak on it later.

Mr. SMITH. May I interrupt the Senator to say that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] asked me if I would make my remarks very brief because of the pressure on us today. I want to keep faith with the Senator.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Let me finish my sentence. I want to say to the Senator that I can understand someone injecting the religious question into the matter on the outside, but it is difficult to understand how it could be injected into the debate on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. TOBEY. Vote! Vote! Mr. SMITH. The displaced persons came into the camps after 1945 for the same reason that the Balts fled from their area of Europe before the Russian advance, prior to 1945. So far as the classification is concerned, we have exactly the same reason. It was because General Clay recognized that situation and thought he ought to find a dead line for closing the camps, that he finally set the closing date of April 21, 1947.

Mr. President, I shall vote for the report, but I want to serve notice that I propose to continue my studies and efforts which have been going on for 18 months, and in January, when we return for the next session of the Congress, after seeing what progress has been made this summer, it is my intention to offer amendments to the act if it is found that what I feel are restrictive practice in the act are preventing us from finally settling the problem of our over-all responsibility for these people who are in our camps in the United States zones in Germany and Austria.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President. I was very much pleased to hear the very frank and clear statement made by the Senator from New Jersey. I appreciate the fact that we are today laboring under stress, and the necessity for economy of I shall endeavor to recognize those conditions in the remarks which I shall

I think it only fair to the Senator from New Jersey to say that he has shown for many months a careful, honest interest in the solution of this problem. While last fall he was in Europe upon another matter primarily, nevertheless he gave generously of his thought and of his activities in the study of this problem.

Mr. President, I am happy to know that he will support the conference report. I think he is doing a wise thing in taking the action which he is taking.

It was indicated by the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Mc-GRATH], by his questions to the Senator from Wisconsin, and by his questions and remarks with respect to the answers of the Senator from West Virginia, that there was an effort on the part of the committee to escape responsibility, I want to say first, Mr. President, that, so far as I know, there is no Member of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary who seeks to escape responsibility for what he does, either in committee or upon the floor.

In the second place may I say, speaking with respect to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY], that he is entirely correct in what he has said with respect to his participation in this matter. He was the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, he evidenced some interest, he appointed a subcommittee, he has interested himself and has informed himself upon the subject; but so far as the authorship of the bill is concerned, his statement is entirely correct as to the relatively small part, if any, which he had personally in the authorship. Yet, Mr. President, he has studied the matter, and stands behind and supports the bill and the conference report.

While I am on that subject, I may say that with respect to myself I do not attempt to shirk my responsibility in connection with the bill. I share the responsibility and am proud to share it with the other members of the subcommittee and of the Committee on the Judiciary. It was my privilege, under appointment from the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, to make the trip to Europe. I was with the Senator from Rhode Island, the Senator from West Virginia, and members of our staff, and also the distinguished Senator from Washington [Mr. Cain] who, although not a member of the committee, as was mentioned by me on the floor of the Senate a few days ago, went over to Europe and contributed very materially to the work done by the committee and to the securing of adequate information.

Mr. President, this was a difficult problem. It was a problem in which we had human beings by the hundreds of thousands with whom to deal. It was a problem which appealed to the humanity of the situation and to the humane feelings of the members of our subcommittee and the members of the Committee on the Judiciary and, finally, the Members of the Senate and the House of Representatives themselves.

At the same time, our subcommittee and all these other Members of Congress were confronted with the fact that, after all, we are representatives in the Congress of the United States, and it is our duty to consider the effect upon the United States of America of any legislation, of whatever nature it is, that is before us for consideration and adoption. I say this was a difficult problem. It was one upon which it was difficult to secure an agreement from the members of the subcommittee. Day after day we had differences, and those differences were not reconciled until after the passage of days.

I wish to say that the distinguished members of the subcommittee which labored upon this matter, in my judgment, gave it of their best and of their conscientious thought.

The Senator from Rhode Island referred, as I recall his remarks, to what he thought was advisable in reporting the bill to the floor of the Senate, that upon the floor we would there have the opportunity of writing a bill.

In the first place, we all realize that it is difficult to write a bill upon any complicated situation on the floor of the United States Senate. Let me say in that connection that a very important part of this bill was at least preserved, and to that extent I would say it was corroborated, if I may use that term, by the action upon the floor. That was with regard to the fixing of the date of December 22, 1945. That matter was considered on the floor of the Senate, and the able Senator from New Jersey and others, I think, contributed strongly and vigorously to the argument in support of the adoption of the April date in 1947. But the Senate, after hearing the argument, and after considering it in the course of what the Senator from Rhode Island has called, I take it, the writing of the bill upon the floor, determined to adhere to the date of December 22, 1945,

Mr. President, we have heard here today the intimation, the very strong suggestion, that there were ulterior purposes in the selection of the date of December 22, 1945. I wish to say that, in my judgment, the problem we faced and the problem we attempted at least to make a contribution toward the solution of was the problem of taking care of a reasonable number of those persons who were displaced by the great global conflict, and who were in these countries of Germany, Austria, and Italy following the conclusion of the war as a result

The majority of the committee felt that, inasmuch as the German portion of the war had ended back in May 1945, we were certainly sufficiently liberal in extending the approximately 7½ months, of the war.

as I recall, until December 22, 1945, the date which should be the final date of determination of who should be considered within the range of displaced persons.

It was not the problem, as I conceive it, of the Senate and of the Congress as a whole to attempt to solve the problem with relation not solely to war displaced persons, but of subsequent infiltrees who for some 16 or 17 months thereafter were coming into these various camps.

So, Mr. President, the date of December 22, 1945, was fixed upon as a date which was thought to be and I believe is a fair date for the conclusion of the period as to persons coming into these various countries, within which they shall be deemed to be eligible displaced persons. It has been intimated that there are various ulterior reasons for the selection of the priority to the persons who came from countries which are now de facto attached to a foreign power. I take it that it is perfectly clear that if a person went from a country now in the possession of a power which has de facto attached it to itself, as is the case of Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, and the Polish portion of the country east of the Curzon line, there is very grave doubt as to the safety of the persons who would attempt to return to those particular sections.

Mr. President, we had before us the thought that many people could safely go back to Poland, and I myself shared that view to a very considerable extent from information which we had. But I may say that in visits to those displaced persons camps-and I had the privilege of visiting numbers of the camps in company with these other gentlemen-I inquired of person after person, and while I could not make affidavit as to the exact source from which they originally came, my impression is very clear that many them were from these countries which have been taken over and attached to a foreign power. My information was from them, in response to questions, that there was a widespread fear that if they should attempt to return to those countries or should return to those countries they would either become the victims of persecution from the people themselves, or would possibly become even the victims of murder, and there was fear in the hearts of these people that they might return there to a condition which had been already illustrated by the injury, persecution, and death of many of their own families and friends.

Mr. President, a statement was made, as I understood it, by the Senator from Rhode Island, to the effect that all the narrow concepts-I think he was reading from the New York Times when he used that expression, or possibly quoted it-that all the narrow concepts had been adopted into this bill as it comes out of conference. I wish to call attention to the fact that the bill as it comes out of conference is even more liberal than was the bill in the Senate. I say that advisedly with respect to liberality. After all, Mr. President, this country is faced with a situation in which there is no legal obligation upon it, but we do feel that there is a strong obligation of humanity. In addition to those who might have failed to pass the tests to be permitted to come into this country, the conference report provides that 15,000 persons who are already here may be permitted to remain in this country under certain conditions.

It provides further for the admission of 2,000 persons from Czechoslovakia. It provides that as to 3,000 orphans they shall no longer be charged as a part of the initial 200,000, but shall come in over and above the 200,000. So, Mr. President, we have here the original 200,000 for which the Senate provided in its process of writing a bill upon the floor of this body, as the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath] stated, and the conferees included 15,000 more, plus the 3,000 orphans, making a total of approximately 220,000 who are comprehended within the terms of the bill.

Now as to the alleged narrowness of concept. I undertake to say that in many respects the interests of both the United States of America and the interests and the comfort and the sanitation of the displaced persons who shall come into this country are identical, and are so recognized in the bill.

There is a provision, as the Chair will well recall, by which housing for these people is taken into consideration, but it is taken into consideration from the standpoint that it shall not force other people already in this country out onto the streets. And certainly it conduces both to the benefit of the displaced persons and to the people of our own country that when they arrive in this country they shall not find themselves confronted by the necessity of going into homes which are already overcrowded and forcing, possibly, some of those who are already in the homes out of them.

Then, Mr. President, as to these socalled narrow concepts, may I refer to the provision that a certain number are required to be persons who have been engaged in agricultural pursuits. That was put in the bill for an extremely wholesome purpose, and the purpose was this, Mr. President. It was the thought of the majority of the committee-I am not so sure but that it was the thought of the minority as well-that it was inadvisable to bring into already crowded centers of population, New York City or other great metropolitan areas, numbers of people to crowd out those who are already there, or to make living conditions well nigh unbearable.

So, Mr. President, it was thought advisable that the provision should be inserted which requires that a certain proportion should be from those who are in the agricultural-pursuits class.

I may call to the Senate's attention that in the conference the percentage of this type of persons was reduced from 50 to 30 percent.

Mr. President, I have spoken of these so-called narrow concepts to which the Senator from Rhode Island referred. I am going to mention one more, and that is that the bill sets forth in substance a provision to the effect that these people shall be admitted to go in the parts of the country where they are needed. I submit most respectfully that that is not an inappropriate concept to carry into this law.

Mr. President, the bill has received thoughtful, honest, honorable, and careful consideration. It is a matter upon which there is a divergence of opinion. It is one which the distinguished Senator from New Jersey recognizes possesses the possibility of difference of opinion but just as he does, I undertake to say that it is the part of wisdom to adopt this conference report, to approve it, and put it into the laws of our land. TOLL BRIDGES OVER THE DELAWARE RIVER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRICKER in the chair). The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representatives.

The bill (H. R. 6465) to amend and supplement section 2 of the act approved August 30, 1935, relating to the construction and financing of toll bridges over the Delaware River by the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey, was read twice by its title.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, on yesterday the Senate passed Senate bill 2667, a bill identical with House bill 6465, which has just come over from the House. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6465) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I enter a motion that the Senate bill (S. 2667) be recalled from the House with a view to its indefinite postponement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion will be entered.

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS— CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I had expected to accept the admonition of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Tafr] when he called our attention to the vast amount of work to be done, and asked Sentaors to be brief in their remarks on the pending matter. That had been my intention, and is now. I am not going to be disagreeable. But I also have certain deep convictions about the bill. I have been interested in it for a long time, and in the plight of the displaced persons.

I am going to cast a vote this afternoon of which I am somewhat ashamed. I think I have a right to say why I shall cast that vote. I say I am ashamed, because I am compelled to vote for a bill which in my judgment does amount to discrimination, unfair discrimination, and unjust discrimination. And because of the terms of the bill—not the conference report, but the bill itself which passed the Senate—it is my judgment that few if any displaced persons will come into this country, as was so ably pointed out by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY]. The other day in speaking upon this bill I stated that the cruelest and harshest thing this great Government could do to those unfortunate displaced people would be to hold out to them some promise and some hope that they would be able to come into this country to the extent of 200,000 or 205,-000, only to find that the restrictions in the legislation were such that they could not qualify, and that they would be denied admission to this land.

I think the restrictions and limitations in this bill are of that kind, and that but few people are going to find any advantage from the bill we passed in the Senate, which has been improved in some respects by the conference. Mr. President, because I think it will be a disappointment, because I think it will dash down hopes which have been raised, and because it does not even approach a solution of the problem, I hesitate to vote for it; but I know that the situation in the Congress is such that if we vote down the conference report in all probability there will be no bill at all at this session.

I do not want to take that responsibility, Mr. President. I am convinced that a few people can come in under this bill. A start will be made, and because the bill does make a start I shall vote for the conference report.

Mr. President, that is about as briefly as I can explain my position. From now on and throughout the remainder of the day I hope Senators will not resort to personalities, but will extend to each other those courtesies which are so absolutely necessary if the business of the Senate is to be transacted.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, as I stated earlier, I shall take only a few moments. I did not sign the report. I voted for the bill when it left the Senate because I considered it the lesser of two evils, and that we had better bring in some kind of a bill rather than none. But because I could not agree with the conference report, I felt it my solemn duty to protest. I want the Senate to understand my feelings and the reason why I did not sign the report. I made remarks earlier to the same effect.

I think we stand in this position at this time: We are again facing the lesser of two evils in relation to displaced persons. If we do not pass this bill as it is now. it is my opinion that no bill will be passed during this session. Therefore, I feel that I have no alternative other than to give some relief by my vote, and, therefore, I shall vote for the conference report, because if it is not adopted I feel certain that, the House already having voted by a great majority to change the date, so far as its bill was concerned, we shall not get any bill. Therefore, I shall cast my vote for the conference report. However, I believe that we should discuss it for a short time. If the act does not work-and I am convinced that it will not-in January of next year amendments should be made so that we shall have a better bill and give better relief in an effort to solve this problem.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I realize that it is most important today that we do not spend time on matters about which we can do little. But because of certain statements which have been made by members of the subcommittee with whom I served, and by others, I feel that I must spend a few minutes upon this subject.

I was a member of the subcommittee appointed to study the problem of displaced persons and served with the distinguished Senators from West Virginia [Mr. Revercomb], from Missouri [Mr. Donnell], from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], and from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath].

In our discussions in the subcommittee I found myself in agreement with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Mc-Grath] upon most aspects of the problem. Together we offered amendments in the subcommittee, which were rejected. We filed a minority report with the full committee. In the full committee we offered amendments which were again rejected.

Upon the floor of the Senate, when the bill came up for consideration, I joined with the distinguished Senators from Michigan [Mr. Ferguson], from New Jersey [Mr. Smith], from Massachusetts [Mr. Saltonstall], and from Oregon [Mr. Morse], and from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath], in offering amendments which we believed would improve the committee bill.

I am very sorry that the bill which was passed by the Senate, and the one which we consider today do not incorporate those amendments, and I am not personally satisfied with several provisions of the pending bill. Nevertheless, I must say in justice today that in my belief, the statements which have been made are not fair to the distinguished chairman of the committee on the Judiciary [Mr. WILEY], or to the distinguished members of the subcommittee, Senators Revercome, McCarran, and Donnell. It has been suggested that the deliberations of the committee were conducted with the intent to discriminate against certain nationalities and faiths. I attended all the meetings of the subcommittee, and of the full committee and no discrimination against any nationality or religion was at any time suggested or considered.

I deplore the fact that it is necessary to talk about discrimination, for unless it is evident that it was intended, such talk is inflammatory and does no good to any group.

Does this bill, in fact, discriminate against religious groups? If I remember correctly the statistics that were given the committee, I believe that about 20 percent of the total number of displaced persons are Jews, 15 percent are Protestants, and the remainder are Catholics. With the great number of the displaced persons to be admitted from eastern Poland and with the large proportion of people of Catholic faith among all the displaced people, I cannot believe that in fact there can or will be any discrimination against those of that faith. There should not be because they stood out strongly against fascism and stand strongly today against communism.

So far as the Jewish population is concerned, I must agree that the fixing of the date as of December 22, 1945, will cut off for the time being those who fled from Poland in 1945. I am informed that 20 percent of the displaced persons population are Jews, and that 20 percent of all displaced persons admitted should be Jews, upon the principle of fair treatment to all groups. If we assume that 200,000 will be admitted under this bill, and take into consideration that 40,000 have been admitted up to this time under the President's order, it follows that a total of 48,000 Jews should come in. is my understanding that more than 20,-000 have already been admitted. The committee statistics indicate that about 15,000 Jewish persecutees are eligible under this bill, and if Jewish people are taken from other groups the total will approach 48,000, and there should not be any discrimination as far as numbers of religious faiths are concerned. I give these facts in simple justice because I believe that the facts ought to be known.

This is a problem which can be greatly overemotionalized and overpropagandized because it is a human problem. I have made that statement before. My own interest in the problem was stirred because I saw them as a member of the armed forces. Since that time I have been greatly interested in the problem. When the question was before the subcommittee, I first believed that the date should have been fixed at December 22, 1945. Having seen the displaced people at first-hand I felt very strongly that those who had been forcibly and actually displaced during the war and who had been in slavery in Germany should have the preference over those who had been in their homes during the war but had come to Germany later. I so stated in the subcommittee; and that those who came later, who came by choice, should be treated as refugees and should come under the regular immigration quotas.

Later, when I saw that it would be difficult to administer the law on the basis of the December 22, 1945, date because complete records were not available as of that date I changed by mind; but in justice I must say that there is some strength to the argument that those who were forcibly displaced by war and who endured a type of slavery for years should have preference over those who made a choice later.

I also say that I do not believe the newspapers and others who are interested in the problem have given full importance to the affirmative positions of policy declared by this bill. It is the first declaration by a major nation that this problem shall be solved by resettlement. It is the first declaration by a major nation that these people shall not be required to come as single workers, and that they shall be permitted to bring their families with them and establish themselves as families upon our soil. These principles make a start toward the world solution of the problem. It must be solved on the basis of resettlement of family units.

I have great affection for my friend the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath]. We worked together on the bill. I know his deep and sincere interest in these unfortunate people. Yet I am sorry that the matter of suggested discrimination has been brought into the discussion today.

Mr. President, I hope that the passage of this measure will be the beginning of the resettlement of all the displaced persons. It is imperfect, but we cannot forget that it will bring into this country 200,000 human beings of diverse faiths and nationality who will find here the opportunity for a new life.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I believe that Congress will not be proud of its passage of this measure, and neither do I believe that the miserable people who are looking hopefully to the Congress for assistance will find any satisfaction in the measure.

I hold in my hand an editorial appearing in the Denver Post for June 13, 1948. The editorial is entitled "Cutting Out the Bias." It reads as follows:

[Denver Post, June 13, 1948] CUTTING OUT THE BIAS

As was to be hoped, the displaced persons bill passed by the House Friday omits the worst features of the Wiley bill, which the Senate approved last week.

Like the Senate bill, the House measure, sponsored by Representative Fellows (Republican) of Maine, would admit 200,000 homeless Europeans to the United States during the next 2 years. In addition, it would open our doors to 2,000 Czechs who fied after the Communist coup in their home-land, plus several thousand orphan children.

But the House version does not contain the provisions of the Senate bill which are a crudely camouflaged effort to exclude Catholics and Jews from the program.

The discriminatory Senate bill contains an amendment requiring 50 percent of the DP's to be from "countries annexed by a foreign power"—obviously referring to Lat-via, Lithuania and Estonia, whose populations are overwhelmingly Protestant

A second provision of the Senate bill, plainly containing an anti-Jewish bias, limits eligible DP's to those refugees who entered the camps of western Europe before De-cember 22, 1945. Most Jews, who comprise only 18 percent of the total displaced persons, came to the refugee centers after that date.

The House bill eliminates the Balt proviso and extends the date of eligibility to April 1, 1947. This is a great deal more harmonious with the United States traditions of generosity and tolerance.

The shape and spirit of the final legislation will depend upon the action taken this week when a Senate-House conference committee meets to compose differences between the two bills.

The conferees will meet in an atmosphere fortunately removed from the poisonous demagoguery with which such "statesmen" as Representative RANKIN and Senator East-LAND of Mississippi and Representative Gossert of Texas have polluted the atmosphere concerning the DP question.

With care in the choice of conferees, there is hope that the bill finally adopted will proclaim the sincerity of American brotherhood with freedom-aspiring peoples regardless of

Then, at last the United States will be doing something toward a final solution to one of the most heart-breaking problems left by

GOVERNMENT CORPORATIONS APPROPRIATIONS, 1949

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield, to permit me to propound a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. FERGUSON. I ask unanimous consent, as chairman of the conferees on the Government corporations appropriation bill, that I be permitted to move that the Senate recede on amendments Nos. 1, 2, and 3 to that bill, House bill 6481, and that the vote on this motion be taken without debate. I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to move to that effect objection?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, let me make an inquiry. If the requested agreement is not entered, would the result be that no opportunity would be provided to move to instruct the conferees?

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I was unable to hear the Senator, due to the confusion presently existing in the Chamber.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if I may be permitted to inform the Senator, the Senator from Georgia asked whether, in the event the motion contemplated by the Senator from Michigan were defeated, opportunity would be given to offer a motion to instruct the conferees.

Mr. FERGUSON. Then I would ask unanimous consent to have a vote to instruct the conferees.

Mr. RUSSELL. If that is included in the request, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President. may say that the reason for making this motion, which is unusual, is that the conference appears to be deadlocked. This is the last day. There is a grave question as to whether we would get any agreement, otherwise.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FERGUSON. I yield.

Mr. HILL. Do I correctly understand that the motion is that there be no opportunity to explain to the Senate what is involved in this matter?

Mr. FERGUSON. I considered that the matter was debated at considerable length, and I also considered the present parliamentary situation.

Mr. HILL. I realize that the matter was debated previously at considerable length, and I have no disposition to go over that debate. But there have been some developments which I think should be stated.

Of course, the ordinary, customary procedure would be for the House to have a separate vote on this amendment, by having the conferees on the part of the House take the amendment back to the House. The Senate having had a yeaand-nay vote on this amendment, and having thereby voted to place this amendment in the bill, the normal procedure would be for the conferees on the part of the House to take the amendment back to the House and have a vote taken on the amendment in the House. As I understand, up until today the conferees on the part of the House have refused to take the amendment back to the House. So the distinguished Senator from Michigan now presents the request which, as he has well said, is a rather unusual and extraordinary one, and is one which I know in my service here I have seldom, if ever, heard before.

I am not going to object to the request, but I wish the Senate to understand what this matter is.

The only thing we are asking now is the normal, regular thing, which is to have the Senate sustain its position by making an effort to have the House take a vote on this amendment. It is only fair, and only cricket, and only playing square that the House have a vote on the amendment. Certainly the Senate should not surrender or yield in its position until the House has had an opportunity to declare itself by taking a vote on the amendment.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, let me include in my proposal a further proposal that the debate be limited to 7 minutes for each side, and that the time be assigned by the acting najority leader and the minority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request will be modified accordingly.

Is there objection to the unanimousconsent request propounded by the Senator from Michigan?

Without objection, it is so ordered.
Mr. FERGUSON. I now make the motion, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I assign 4 minutes to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield, so that we may take up this matter, of course without causing the Senator from Florida to yield the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I shall be very glad to defer-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The floor is now under the control of the Senator from Massachusetts, who has yielded 4 minutes to the Senator from Michigan. The Senator from Michigan has the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida has the floor, and has yielded to the Senator from Michigan to propound the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request was agreed to, and there is to be 7 minutes' debate on each side.

Mr. SALITONSTALL. Mr. President, in order to avoid any controversy, I ask unanimous consent that when this particular discussion is concluded, the Senator from Florida again be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in view

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in view of the nature of the request and the importance of this matter and the fact that it relates to a conference report, although I hate to be, as it were, taken off my feet right in the middle of what I was saying, I yield for this purpose.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I desire to state the position in which the Senate finds itself at the present moment. We have been in conference for 8 or 4 days, during which time we have endeavored to get a settlement of the three items involving the building of a steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn., for the TVA. The bill now carries assent from the Senate to $4,000,000. The total cost of that would be $54,000,000, plus about $30,000,000 for transmission lines and various accessories to the steam plant. I had advocated on the floor that the steam plant be not included. I assigned the reasons for that, and I do not care now to discuss them as to the stand I have taken.

The House had taken a vote on this same issue, which was 192 to 152. The Senate took a vote by yeas and nays. which was carried 45 to 37. We found later, this situation which is unusual. We face the real probability, not the possibility, but the probability, of getting no bill at all unless we recede. The proper procedure is that the House should vote first, but there is no way the Senate can compel the House to vote first. Rather than to have no bill a method was conceived and brought to the floor. I am of the opinion that if we want a bill we should recede. That shall be my vote. Every other Senator will, of course, have reasons for voting either for or against the steam plant, and will have to decide for himself how he should

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I wish to say to the Senate that in my judgment the issue here presented far transcends in importance the mere question of whether we shall proceed with the construction of the steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn. There is involved the broader question as to whether we insist that all the ordinary parliamentary processes through which it is necessary that legislation should pass, if it shall ever be enacted, should be observed. This is the first time in my experience as a conferee that we have been met with the flat refusal of the Representatives of the other body to submit the matter to the House for a yea-and-nay vote when the conference could not agree and the matter at issue had been inserted by the Senate on a record vote.

Mr. President, I have seen on other occasions items in appropriation bills where there would be as many as four yea-and-nay votes in each House of Congress before the matter was finally determined. When conferees meet and cannot agree on any one item and have reconciled some 25 or 30 other matters at issue, the proper course is to sign a conference report and report back to the respective Houses the items in disagreement. In this case the conferees either have agreed, or can shortly agree, upon every one of the other 30 or 40 amendments to the bill, save and except this one. In the ordinary normal course of parliamentary procedure the report should go back to the House with the conference report signed as to the matters in agreement, and let the House take action on the matters in disagreement. After they have acted the papers can be messaged here and the Senate can determine its course. Until now, we have not had a free conference on this item, because of the fact that we were met with what amounted to an ultimatum that unless the Senate receded there would be no bill.

In these circumstances, Mr. President, we are not voting merely upon the New Johnsonville steam plant, we are voting to preserve the regular processes of parliamentary procedure, and in this case the Senate should vote down the motion to recede and overwhelmingly vote to insist, in order that we may not set a precedent here that will defeat legislation and degrade the Senate in the future. The matter should go back to the House. If the House then stands adamant in its position, that will be time enough to talk about a recession on the part of the Senate. Conference committees are the servants, not the masters, of the authority appointing them. When they cannot agree on important matters they should report the matters in agreement and ask for further instructions.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I yield i minute to the Senator from California

[Mr. KNOWLAND].

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I am not going to prolong the arguments that we discussed quite fully in regard to the steam plant at New Johnsonville, except to say that after listening to the arguments before the committee, I became convinced the plant was essential to the firming up of the power for the TVA, and that unless they have the opportunity of firming up the power, in my judgment it will throttle the development of that great area of our Nation.

I desire to join with my colleague, the Senator from Georgia, in saying it seems to me we should by all means insist on the committee amendments and refuse to recede at this time. After all, this is a two-House Congress, and if we are going to conduct the legislative business in the proper way I believe that the Senate of the United States has a right to expect that at least the House will act on the conference report with a yea-and-nay vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself 1 minute merely to say that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Ferguson] is slightly in error in saying the House voted on the proposition. What happened was, they voted on a motion to recommit, which was an indirect vote. They have never had a direct vote on this proposal. The motion to recommit was a motion to recommit the entire bill, not this particular item. It is not accurate to say they have voted directly on the amendment.

As the Senator from Georgia and other Senators have said, it seems to me the Senate should stand by its position, and that the House should take the amendment and vote upon it directly so we may have an expression of the views of the House.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. My time has expired. Mr. KEM. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no more time.

Mr. KEM. I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky if the motion to recommit in the House did not contain the steam plant amendment, so that in effect it was a direct vote on that question?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true; but it was not a direct vote. The vote was to recommit the whole bill, not merely the amendment.

Mr. KEM. It contained the steam plant amendment, did it not?

Mr. BARKLEY. It included all the items of the bill.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I yield myself the remaining 3 minutes. I would simply say to my colleagues in the Senate that I am a new member of the conference committee, by reason of the resignation of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] from that committee. I became convinced, sitting in the conference for the few minutes I was present, that we could not expect the House conferees to make any change in their votes. They refused to take the matter back to the House. The chairman of the committee was the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Ferguson] who on the floor of the Senate had voted against the so-called steam plant. I personally voted with him as against the steam plant, but we both thought, and the other conferees thought, we should ask the Senate for its position on the matter. It is important because there are various other matters in the appropriation bill affecting various Government corporations, which will have to be taken care of by means of a joint resolution if we cannot get together. That is the importance of the issue. It is for each Member of the Senate to decide for himself whether to substantiate his previous position or

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold the suggestion until we use the remainder of our time? Has the time expired?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. The Senator from Massachusetts has 3 minutes, the Senator from Kentucky, 2.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I assign the remainder of my time to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I shall not use all of the time that has been yielded to me. I do not think this is a matter of precedent. I think the rules of the Senate should be such as to permit us to meet situations as they arise. We cannot be held by precedent. We cannot vote or refuse to vote on a question merely because we think it will establish a precedent.

Mr. President, I want to say that I shall vote "aye," which will mean a vote to recede from insisting on the building of the steam plant. In other words, an "aye" vote would mean that the Senate would recede from the building of the steam plant and the appropriation of $4,000,000 to start the breaking of the ground and the initial start of the steam plant.

That is all I have to say at the present time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Tennessee the remainder of the time allotted to me.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, have been attending conferences for more than 32 years, but I have never seen a conference before that was conducted in the way in which this conference was conducted. I want to say that the Senate Members, even those who differed with me, were exceedingly considerate all the time. The House members declined to consider the question of the steam plant of the Tennessee Valley Authority at all. They said they had made up their minds on the steam plant—that they were not going to recede. They took part in the discussion, but they did not yield or discuss any method of getting together. I have never before seen a conference of that kind. They laid the law down to us, put a pistol to our heads, so to speak, as it were, and said, "We will not consider what you may think about it." That was the situation. Under the circumstances, the chairman of the committee, Senator FERGUSON, acted very courteously and politely, and suggested that the Senate conferees would come back to the Senate for instructions, and here we are.

It seems to me that the Senate owes it to itself to stand by the position it previously took by a vote of 45 to 37. By that vote the Senate decided that the steam plant should be constructed. The House Members claimed that this question was involved in some motion to recommit made in the House, but that was not a vote upon the question in the House as we voted upon it in the Senate. We voted on the direct question of building this particular steam plant. The House voted on a general motion to recommit.

I hope the Senate will vote as it previously voted and vote for the steam plant.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has a minute remaining.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I yield my time to the Senate and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken Hatch Murray Myers O'Conor O'Mahoney Hawkes Hayden Baldwin Barkley Hickenlooper Brewster Bricker Hill Pepper Reed Revercomb Robertson, Va. Bridges Holland Ives Buck Jenner Russell Johnson, Colo. Johnston, S. C. Butler altonstall Byrd Smith Cain Kem Sparkman Stennis Capehart Kilgore Chavez Knowland Stewart Connally Cooper Langer Lucas Taft Taylor Thomas, Okla.-McCarthy Cordon Donnell McClellan Downey McFarland Tobey McGrath Dworshak Eastland Tydings Umstead McKellar Ecton Ellender Vandenberg Watkins Wherry McMahon Magnuson Malone Feazel Ferguson Flanders Wiley Williams Martin Maybank Fulbright Millikin Young Moore

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eightyfive Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The Chair asks the clerk, for the purposes of the record and the information of the Senate, to read the three amendments from which the Senator from Michigan asks the Senate to recede.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 5, after the word "vehicle", to strike out "$27,389,061" and insert "$30,972,061"; on page 2, line 9, to strike out "$21,689,-000" and insert "$25,689,000"; and on page 2, line 11, after the word "dams", insert the words "one steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn."

Mr. KEM and other Senators asked for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KILGORE (when his name was called). I have a pair on this vote with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], who is absent because of a death in his family. If he were present he would vote "nay." If I were permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded. During the calling of the roll,

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, is it in order to ask what is the question before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] to recede from the position the Senate has taken on the Tennessec Valley Authority amendment providing for the steam plant.

Mr. MILLIKIN. A vote "yea" is to recede?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A vote "yea" is a vote to recede.

The Chief Clerk resumed and concluded the call of the roll,

Mr. WHERRY. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Bushfield], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. Capper], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Robertson], the Senator from Maine [Mr. White], and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Wilson] are necessarily absent. If present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Robertson] would vote "yea."

Mr. LUCAS. I announced that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. Mc-CARRAN], the Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas] is absent by leave of the Senate, having been appointed a national delegate by the President to the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, meeting in San Francisco, Calif.

If present and voting, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], the Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas], and the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] would vote "nay."

The result was announced-yeas 37, nays 47, as follows:

So Mr. Ferguson's motion was rejected. Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I understand that no further motion is necessary. Is that correct?

Mr. HILL. That was my understanding.

AMENDMENT OF THE TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRICKER in the chair) laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4044) to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act, as amended; to create a commission to make an inquiry and report with respect to war claims; and to provide for relief for internees in certain cases, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

Senator will state it.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I want to say that this is the second interruption we have had upon the consideration of a privileged matter, which is the DP conference report. A few moments ago there was an interruption and we were told that it would occupy but a few minutes to dispose of a matter, but extended debate occurred. I shall object from now on to the consideration of any further matters until we complete action on the pending privileged business.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President,

Senator will state it.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Was it not the unanimous-consent agreement that at the conclusion of the vote the Senator from Florida should have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That was agreed to by unanimous consent.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. If the Senator from West Virginia will yield, I will say that it is my understanding that it is not expected that there will be any further interruption before action on the DP measure is completed.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I am glad to hear that. I shall object to any further interruptions until the completion of the consideration of the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virgina object to action being taken on the conference report?

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, all that is required now is the appointment of conferees.

Mr. REVERCOMB. How much time does the Senator expect will be required. Mr. WILEY. All that is necessary is that a motion be adopted and that the Chair appoint the conferees.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Very well.

Mr. WILEY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Chair appointed Mr. WILEY, Mr. COOPER, and Mr. Magnuson conferees on the part of the Senate.

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS-CONFERENCE REPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2242) to authorize for a limited period of time the admission into the United States of certain European displaced persons for permanent residence, and for other purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I shall make my remarks very brief.

I have in my hand an editorial published in the St. Louis Star-Times of June 4, 1948, as follows:

DP BILL, A SORRY MESS

Earl G. Harrison, former United States Immigration Commissioner, now dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law College and chairman of the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons, resorted to fiery language the other day in paying his respects to the Senate-approved bill to admit 200,000 homeless Europeans to this country.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, how long does the distinguished Senator from Florida expect he will speak?

Mr. PEPPER. Not more than 10 minutes.

I continue to read from the editorial:

Dean Harrison finds-the bill a "sorry mess" and "a booby trap and a monstrosity which discriminates on the grounds of religion, nationality, and occupation." He charged it is "deliberately designed to exclude displaced persons, not admit them."

It is easier to believe that the bill was conceived in ignorance of the vital issues involved rather than a deliberate plot to circumvent American responsibility, but the effect is the same. If the bill became law, it would accomplish little toward enhancing American prestige abroad and contribute virtually nothing to the culture and eco-nomic advantage of this country.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I will yield, though it will prolong the time I had expected to consume.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Who is the Senator quoting?

Mr. PEPPER. I am quoting from an editorial published in the St. Louis Star-Times which quotes Earl G. Harrison, former United States Immigration Commissioner, now dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and chairman of the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons. I continue to read from the editorial:

The dean's bitter criticism on the grounds of racial and religious discrimination finds justification in the provision that 50 percent of the DP's must come from countries an-nexed by a foreign power, specifically Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, and eastern Poland. These constitute far less than half the DP population and are predominantly Protestant.

He finds discrimination also in the pro-vision that 50 percent of the DP's must be farmers and points out, as have other critics, that farmers are a small minority among them. The special provision admitting outside the quota regulations members of the notorious Volksdeutsche, the Nazi fifth column; the eligibility date which automatically eliminates most of the Jewish victims of Nazi barbarism and the provision that each ref-ugee must be hired by Americans, sight unseen, before he is granted a visa are obvi-ous cruel defects in the bill.

There is hope that the Fellows bill now awaiting action in the House, and which is far more liberal and realistic, will eventually get the congressional green light. The whole question must have much further exploration than it obviously has had in both Chambers if stupid and worthless legislation is to be avoided.

I have in my hand an article by Walter H. Waggoner, published in the New York Times of Friday, June 18. The heading DP bill approved; four refuse to sign. Compromise joint action hit as discriminatory—allows 205,000 entry in 2 years.

The article is as follows:

DP BILL APPROVED; FOUR REFUSE TO SIGN-COMPROMISE JOINT ACTION HIT AS DISCRIMINATORY—ALLOWS 205,000 ENTRY IN 2

(By Walter H. Waggoner)

Washington, June 17 .- A Senate-House conference committee agreed on an emergency displaced-person bill this evening, but only after a prolonged and bitter contest and harsh dissents from four members who refused to sign the agreement and two who did so "reluctantly."

The compromise measure signed by 8 of the 12 committee members provides for the entrance into the United States of 200,000 displaced Europeans and political refugees in the next 2 years.

In addition to 200,000 DP's proper, provisions are made for the admission of 2,000 anti-Communist Czechs who have fled their country since January 1, 1948; up to 3,000 homeless European orphans under 16 years of age, and 15,000 eligible DP's already in this country on temporary visas.

Senators Homer Ferguson (Republican), of Michigan, and Harley M. Kilgore (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Representatives J. CALEB BOGGS (Republican), of Delaware, and EMANUEL CELLER (Democrat), of New York, refused to sign the conference report.

Mr. CELLER, who has fought vigorously for the House [FELLOWS] bill since the beginning, assailed the conference measure as "worse than no bill at all."

"All it does is exclude all Jews," he exclaimed. "It is no solution to the problem. I will move to recommit it as soon as it appears. I'm heartsick about it."

Representative Frank L. CHELF (Democrat), of Kentucky, told reporters: "Please emphasize that when I voted for this bill in conference that I did it reluctantly—say that again, 'reluctantly.'"

The author of the House measure, Representative Frank Fellows (Republican), of Maine, was also indignant, but he declared:

"Listen, we had to have something. That's why I voted for it and I reiterate Mr. CHELF's

I did so 'reluctantly.' "

Principal features of the compromise bill, and those which were subject to the flercest debate and disagreement, are as follows:

Eligible displaced persons are those who were the homeless victims of nazism and fascism and in allied DP camps not later than December 22, 1945. This was the most sharply contested feature of the Senate bill. The House bill fixed the cut-off date at April 21, 1947, which, its advocates explained, gave DP status to the 10,000 to 15,000 Jews fleeing the Polish pogroms of January 1946.

Not less than 30 percent of the admission visas will be made available to DP's who are farmers, and intend to become farmers in the United States. This requirement is said by its opponents to discriminate against DP's of the Jewish faith.

Germany or Austria.

The House bill had no provision of this sort, but the Senate version placed the percentage requirement at 50 percent.

Not less than 40 percent of the DP's compared with an original Senate minimum of 50 percent, must come from the Baltic countries of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, and Poland east of the Curzon line. Discrimination against both Jews and Catholics is also charged of this provision, on the ground that the Baltic countries are primarily Protestant, and the 40 percent requirement weights the division in their favor.

The so-called Volksdeutsche provision, attached to the Senate measure but rejected by the House, is also part of the conference agreement. It requires that 50 percent of the quotas available to the Germans and Austrians under the law be limited exclusively to those persons of "German ethnic origin" who are nationals of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania and Yugoslavia, but on the effective date of the bill are in

This is felt by many friends of DP legis-lation to allow admission to persons who might have been closely associated with the Nazis, rather than those who were more clearly the victims.

CARRY-OVER FEATURE WINS

The bill provides, as the House measure also did, that the number of DP's by which the first-year limit of 100,000 is short may be admitted under the second-year allowance. Known as the carry-over feature, this means that 120,000 will be granted visas in the second year if only 80,000 are admitted

No one will be granted admission, however, who will displace an American from a job, or unless he has "safe and sanitary" housing in which to live.

In a prepared statement Representative CELLER said that the agreement "completely scuttled" the House bill, and assailed many of its provisions as discriminatory. The "strangest of all," he added, was the "Volksdeutsche" feature which granted admission "the quislings who fertilized the field for Hitler's panzer divisions."

Mr. President, I have read an editorial from the Seattle Times, an editorial from the St. Louis Star-Times, and a special report to the New York Times with respect to the conference report. Very serious charges are made by a responsible press.

Far be it from me to suggest that there was any intentional design or purpose on the part of honorable Members of the Senate to practice any un-American policy. But, Mr. President, we know the principle of law that a man is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his act. It is the effect of which I am speaking, not what was in the minds of Senators who conceived the language which provides the effect.

What do we have? When Europe's displaced people were stretching their plaintive appeals to America for succor and sanctuary, when they had been persecuted in their wretchedness and misery, when they had seen their families tortured and killed, this is what we give them. They plead for bread, and we hardly give them a stone.

What does the bill do? In the first place, the Stratton bill, which for months has been in this Congress, provided for 400,000 for a period of 2 years. That number has been cut in half. We now accommodate only 205,000 in 2 years, or 100,000 a year, on an average.

Secondly, what does the bill do? It weights the eligible groups to those who come from the Baltic countries, and gives a disproportionate number of the eligibles who come from that area the status of admission.

Mr. President, I am a Baptist and a Protestant.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. In just a moment. But, Mr. President, as a Senator and as an American I am not voting on the basis of religious principles or preferences, and I do not want to see any religion, any race, or any nationality dis-criminated against by Congress. It is out of harmony with the American character and Constitution.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I am certain that the Senator does not want to make a misleading statement on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. PEPPER. He certainly does not. Mr. REVERCOMB. The newspapers and the organizations which have been driving in on this subject have their own selfish ends. When the Senator talks about the Balts being given special preference, let me say to the Senator that if he will read the original bill and the one reported from the conference, he will see that there is no reference to the Balts. Those mentioned are the Lithuanians, the Latvians, and the Estonians, which are the Baltic nations, and the Polish people east of the Curzon line who have been taken over by Russia. There are twice as many people east of the Curzon line, whom the Senator has not mentioned, and whom the newspapers and organizations which are fighting for their own selfish ends have not mentioned. There are twice as many Poles as Balts affected by this bill. I am sure that the Senator does not mean to make a statement and exclude more than half the people affected by the bill.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator from Florida certainly does not. But when Members of the Senate such as the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. McGrath] and others who have been conversant with this subject from the beginning, and when other responsible authorities sustain the opinion of the Senator from Florida, when that is the understanding of the press, and when that is the understanding of so worthy an authority as the dean of the Pennsylvania Law School, a former Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, who is chairman of the Displaced Persons Citizens Committee-when they share the opinion expressed by the Senator from Florida as to the practical effect of the bill, the Senator from West Virginia will have to let me adhere to my own opinion of the practical effect it will actually have.

In the third place, what does the bill do? It has already been pointed out that in two ways it discriminates against the Jews. First, it denies eligibility to those 18,000 miserable Jews who fled from the pogrom of Poland in January 1941, fleeing for their lives to the sanctuary of the occupied American zone in Germany. Yet, Mr. President, in spite of every effort to get them into the eligible class, they have been factually excluded, whether by design or not. They are not permitted to be counted in the displacedpersons group, and for some strange reason the date has been tenaciously held to December 22, 1945, in spite of every effort of the House and of Senators who shared the opinion of Members of the House who wished the date moved up to April 21, 1947, so as to give those wretched people a chance of eligibility in this group of displaced persons.

In the next place, Mr. President, among the number who are to come in, 40 percent must be farmers. Is agriculture in America so needy of labor that we must consciously place a provision in this bill to require that a certain number be farmers? Was that done at the instance of agriculture? Was that pursuant to a policy of those who wrote the measure, knowing that the Jewish people affected do not have an agricultural background?

So, Mr. President, because of the date and because of the character of their employment and occupation, the practical effect of the provision in the conference report is to deny to the most wretched people of all, the Jews, the sanctuary which this bill was intended to afford.

Mr. President, I would hardly believe it possible that anyone who has been to the displaced-persons camps of Europe. anyone who has been to Dachau, Nuremburg, and to the other concentration camps under the evil Nazis, to see what the Jewish people have suffered, would ever countenance the possibility that they should be denied their proportionate share of eligible persons to seek sanctuary under this legislation.

Let me make one further point. The bill provides that those who may have been quislings or Nazi fifth columnists in the countries which were later the victims of Nazi aggression are included in the eligible class. We exclude the Jews fleeing from the Polish pogroms, but we reach out and extend the tender hand of welcome and sympathy and inclusion to the quislings and the Nazi fifth columnists who, as one of the spokesmen said, prepared the field for the Nazi aggression. Is that the kind of legislation to which the Senator wishes to attach his name? Is that the solution of the displaced-persons question?

There are three things which I wish to mention at this point. The first is that before a displaced person may come to the United States, under this measure, someone in this country must provide for him. That means that such a displaced person must have a rich relative in this country or a relative of such financial means that he can satisfy the Government of the United States that he will look after the displaced person, or there must be an arrangement of some sort along those lines. Mr. President, that is contrary to the American tradition. I suspect that the ancestors of most of us came to this country poor, without any particular sponsor, and I suspect that the ancestors of most of us would never have gotten into this country at all if it had been necessary for some relative of theirs to be in this country first and to give some such assurance prior to the arrival of our ancestors. Mr. President, I say that the poor must be permitted to come to the United States or else we shall be going contrary to the rich American tradition.

In the second place, no eligible displaced person can come to the United States if he displaces any American in a job, and that point must be determined before the displaced person comes to the United States. How can it be determined that there would not be some displacements? The displacements might be minor, but I say that this bill, instead of being a welcoming bill, has written into it every obstacle that it seems possible to conceive of to keep out the displaced persons.

The last provision which I wish to mention is the one to the effect that displaced persons cannot come into this country unless it can be assured that they will find sanitary and adequate housing, yet, Mr. President, today the Congress is deadlocked as regards the feasibility of passing any kind of a housing bill. We do not even provide housing for our veterans; due to the delinquency of Congress, we have failed to make such provision. So how are we going to say that we can be sure that the displaced persons who will come to the United States will find sanitary and adequate housing without displacing someone else?

I am saying that we must suffer some hardships if we are to perform this American and Christian duty of giving sanctuary to these most wretched of all peoples on the face of the earth today.

But what has been done by the conference report is to limit the class and put obstacles in the way of their coming -obstacles which will make it administratively possible to keep all of them out, if that happens to be the administrative policy in the execution of this act.

So I say this measure is unworthy of the Congress of the United States in the effect it has. The newspapers have said it will be considered abroad as out of character with American policy.

Yet, Mr. President, what can we do? We have protested against this measure: we have tried to improve it. Those efforts have been turned down or denied or spurned. Now we are presented with a choice between this measure or nothing. So if we are to do any good at all in this connection, this measure is the only vehicle we have.

So, like the able Senator from Michigan, the able Senator from Rhode Island, and other Senators who have voiced their conscientious objections to the provisions of this measure, I, too, state that I can do nothing other than support the measure: but I believe that the experience we shall have with it will rebuke the United States Congress and will reprove us for this policy.

I hope that in the new session of Congress it will be possible to correct the wrong we shall have done to these sad people.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, because of my long record of work in connection with the displaced-persons issue this year, I feel that I owe it to myself and to the groups with whom I have worked to place myself on record in connection with this conference report.

I had hoped that the Senate bill would be amended in the conference much more than it has been, and that the final report would much more closely resemble the House bill.

However, I wish to say a word about the conferees, because they are very good friends of mine, and I am perfectly sure that they are acting in good faith and in accordance with their honest convictions on this issue. I have worked very closely with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY], the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL] in some work outside the Senate of the United States, in the field of some religious brotherhood work; and I know of no two finer Christians than those two friends. I am satisfied that not only those two gentlemen, but also the other members of the conference committee, have taken action which, according to their sights and lights, represents their honest convictions on this

However, the final recommendations they make are not satisfactory to me. But under the circumstances, I find myself compelled, because of the realities of the situation which now confront us in the Senate, to vote to approve the conference report.

Nevertheless, the adoption of this conference report will not end this issue, in my opinion, Mr. President, because I think we shall have resting upon us at future sessions of Congress a further obligation, namely, to correct what many of us consider to be some shortcomings in this conference report. It was in 1945, as I recall, when I first came to the Senate of the United States, that in one of my speeches in this body I proposed an international conference on the dis-placed-persons problem. I have always felt, and I still feel, that the calling of an international conference is the best way to handle the problem.

We are following a different course of action today, but I do not think it will be as good a course of action as would have been the case had we taken a leading part in urging the other countries of the world, which I believe have responsibilities equal with our cwn in connection with the solving of the displacedpersons problem, to call an international conference, to the end of seeing to it that proper provision be made for those people, who were so much persecuted by our enemies in World War II. One of the causes of the war, after all, was to be found in our determination to end persecution of minority groups. In my judgment, we fought the war in part to make clear to the world that we would not stand by and permit the type of persecution of which Hitler's Germany was guilty in relation to minority groups.

But I know we are confronted with the practical situation that this is the best measure which under the circumstances we can pass this afternoon. Therefore,

I shall vote for it.

Mr. President, I close my remarks by saying that my difference with my dear friend the Senator from Missouri is an honest difference over a question of fact. I think it was a mistake to adopt in this measure the date of December 1945 which was adopted, because I think the bill will now result in an unintentional discrimination against Jews. But let us try this measure; let us put it into operation. Then, as reasonable men, on the basis of the facts which develop, let us seek to improve it at future sessions of the Congress, if experience shows that it needs to be improved.

Mr. President, there is great controversy in the country over this bill, as indicated by a statement which I hold in my hand. I ask unanimous consent that this statement may be printed at this point in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Frank Goldman of Lowell, Mass., president of B'nai B'rith, America's oldest and largest Jewish service organization, today issued the following statement on the Senate-House conference report on the displaced-persons

"The conference bill on displaced persons substantially embodies the provisions of the Senate's bill, which President Truman described as discrimination against national and religious groups. The date selected to determine eligibility for admission into the United States, against the advice and recommendation of the State Department, has the deliberate effect of such discrimination.

'In the 105 years of its existence, B'nai B'rith has never witnessed proposed congressional action so violative of American principles of equality and fair play. of the bill is aggravated by its sanctimonious pretensions

"In the guise of a humanitarian measure, we have a gratuitous insult to millions of loyal Americans, as well as callous rejection of the pleas of innocent and worthy refugees.

"As an organization dedicated to the preservation of American ideals, we are strained to condemn the conference bill as an affront to American traditions and a blow to American prestige in the eyes of the world.

"We respectfully call for the rejection of the discriminatory provisions of the bill by Congress.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I shall delay the Senate only a few moments on this matter. I was necessarily absent from the city when this bill passed the Senate several weeks ago, and therefore I did not have an opoprtunity to express my views with reference to this matter, either by my vote or by stating my position in a speech on the floor.

As the Senator from New Jersey knows, I have been very profoundly interested in the problem facing us today. Twice within the last year I had an opportunity to visit some of the displaced persons camps in Europe, first with the Senator from New Jersey, as a member of the Smith-Mundt Committee, which visited approximately 23 European countries last September and October, and more lately, during the Christmas holidays, when I myself was in Germany on official business.

I visited one of the largest of what they called the Baltic camps in Germany. some 6,000 people who had fled from the Baltic nations because they had the courage to take all the chances on leaving their homes and families rather than to submit to the domination of the Government which had been imposed upon them from without. I have never seen under such unfavorable circumstances a finer type of citizenship-doctors and lawyers and school teachers and farmers and merchants, many of them speaking English, many of them afraid to go back because some of their compatriots had gone back and perhaps for a month or two they would hear something from them, but finally there was no word and the conclusion was that they had either been liquidated or sent off into exile. I went through two of the camps in which Jews exclusively were cared for and I want to say I never saw a better-organ-ized camp of any sort. They also were housed in barracks which had previously been used in training the German soldiers, which brought about their disaster and brought about all the evils that have happened in Europe as the result of the training carried on by Hitler and his government of the German soldier.

I found that from the smallest child to the oldest person, they were orderly, they were of a type that might be welcomed into any country. When I walked into the room where there was a kindergarten school in progress in which there were some 15 or 20 young children, boys and girls, 3 and 4 and 5 years of age, as soon as I stepped in the door everyone of them rose and saluted me, and they did it very beautifully. I visited every school room from the kindergarten up to the graduating or senior class, and that same order, that same decorum, that same respect, that same consideration, and that same hopefulness I might say pervaded the entire body.

I took occasion during my visit in the camp to ask those in each room where they desired to go after they were discharged from the camp, and, from the little children all the way up to the senior class and to the parents of these children, all of them without exception expressed their desire to go to Palestine as soon as they were released or could be discharged from the displaced-persons camps.

I profoundly hope that order and government and peace and accord may come in Palestine, in order that all these displaced persons who want to go there may go. But I myself would not feel that our country had been injured or damaged in any respect if they came here instead of going to Palestine. For that reason I formed a profound sympathy for those people in every possible way, and while I know we cannot accept or receive in this country all the displaced personsit is not necessary to do it—I very strongly supported the provision that we should accept 200,000 instead of the original 100,000 in the bill as reported by the committee. While with regard to any of these classes, these unfortunate people, who either were driven out of their country or voluntarily left it because they were unwilling to submit to tyranny, are entitled to a refuge and a haven somewhere in the world.

We are a Christian nation. We preach in our churches every Sunday, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Certainly we can accept, with all of its injustices and its shortcomings and with all its failures, a bill that enables 205,000 to come in here. If I had been writing the bill myself I should no doubt have made some of the provisions different and more favorable, but it seems to me this is the only chance now to get any legislation whatever. It may be the only chance for several months or years to get any legislation whatever. I think if we find from experience we have done injustice to any class of these worthy and distressed and distraught people in the camps of Europe, we can remedy the situation by future legislation and by amendment, rather than take the initiative again to bring in legislation in the hope that we may enact a better bill than the one now before the Senate. For those reasons I expect to vote for the conference report.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to remind me when I shall have consumed 2 minutes. I shall then take my seat.

Mr. President, in the bill we are about to send to the President for his signature, we have made only a start at meeting a grave moral question. If I were to grade this branch of the Government upon the contents of the bill, I should say we have taken a grade C examination. I am hopeful that when this Congress, or a slightly different Congress may I say, returns next January, we can take a new examination and produce a grade A bill.

Mr. President, one of the cancers of nazism was racism, and I regret very greatly that, regardless of the fine and good intention of my honorable colleagues who served throughout the long months in drafting the bill, there are those—and the editorials were read this morning—who seem to find within the four corners of the bill ample grounds for concluding and contending that injustice and discrimination have been practiced. I hope when we come back in January we may rectify the errors we have committed in the pending legislation.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, above all I desire to bring this discussion to a close and have the Senate decide upon just what shall be done with the bill that has been reported from conference. However, in view of statements which have been made on the floor of the Senate, which I say are so unfair, so unwarranted, and so unsustained, I fear it is my duty as chairman of the conference, a position that fell to my part, that I should reply briefly and in a summary way to some of the things that have been said above the conference report.

I can understand, though I cannot commend, organizations representing certain groups of people who group themselves according to the common interest, driving hard to get an advantage. seeking to protect their own, as they may feel it; that is understandable. Yes. I sometimes can understand, but it is deplorable that individuals who write in newspapers, such as the editors, will become so zealous in their advocacy of their own personal desires they will go beyond the facts and try to prejudice the people. I can understand that somewhat. It is a deplorable situation in our country that that must occur.

I do not understand why upon the floor of a legislative body such as the Senate there should be brought in elements of discussion which have no place whatsoever, which are unfounded, and which cannot be warranted by the facts before us. As I recall, one of the Senators, in reading an editorial, spoke of the bill as "shameful." Of course, that is a very prejudiced and unfair remark. Looking into the situation, the idea of discrimination upon religious grounds is more shameful than is anything that I can think of in the legislation.

I repeat, Mr. President, that the conferees would not be guided or influenced by the idea of any man's faith. We have recognized in this country and in every part of the world that a man has a right to have his own faith. We are not dividing people upon that ground. We were asked to deal with the subject of displaced persons, and we went straight after that question. Representatives of the churches came before the committee. It was a grand thing to see them come in a body representing the various churches and to sit down together. I will say to the Senate that they did not raise the question of discrimination against one or the other. That question comes in from pressure groups which have been so active, and it has come from the prejudiced writers. So far as I am concerned, and I believe I may speak for my colleagues who signed this report. the subject of a man's faith plays no part in this bill.

Since it has been mentioned, however, let us get at some facts. I have before me a letter which is signed by the United Lithuanian Relief Fund of America, Inc., Latvian Relief, Inc., and Estonian Relief Committee, Inc. Witnesses representing those organizations appeared before the committee. Pressure groups, driving for their own ends, brought out this subject which seems to have influenced some persons. I thankful to say they have not influenced the members of the committee of the Senate who signed the report on behalf of the Senate.

I read from a letter of June 9, 1948, addressed to me, from the organizations which I have just named:

The alleged discrimination against Catholics and Jews by reason of the provisions granting 50 percent priority to persons with agricultural background and people originating from the nonenemy areas annexed by ign power, is found nonexistent in fact. As it is clear from the Judiciary Committee's report, the priority is intended for the people from the Baltic States, and Poland, of the Curzon line. In this large block of displaced persons, Luthuanian, Ukrainian, and Polish Catholics and Jews make up the bulk of the numbers eligible under this bill.

We know, Mr. President, from the facts which are before us, that the charge of discrimination against those faiths is utterly unfounded in fact. I have seen some of the articles and editorials which speak of preference being given to the Baltic states. They absolutely ignore the fact that the same 40-percent preference is given to those states east of the Curzon line and a large part of Poland which has been annexed by another nation. The people in the annexed land are largely of the faiths which have been said to be discriminated against.

Mr. President, I read further from a letter which is a copy of a letter written by the Reverend Dr. Joseph B. Koncius, of the United Lithuanian Relief Fund of America, and it is written to one of the writers who very bitterly and very falsely made the charge of discrimination. I read from that letter for the information of the Senate:

For your information I wish to state Lithuanians are 87 percent Catholic; Latvians, 35 percent, and only the Estonians 2 percent.

The Senator from Florida stated just a few minutes ago that there were none of that faith in the Baltic countries. Lithuania is the largest and most populous of the Baltic countries.

I read further:

This makes the average of Baltic people who are Catholics over 40 percent. The Senate Wiley bill-which is the bill we are now discussingrequires that 50 percent of the refugees allowed admission should consist of Poles and Ukranians from Poland's former territory east of the Curzon line.

Of course, that is a mistake. He means Polish nationals. That has nothing to do with the faith. We know that the faiths of east Poland, covered by this bill, in large measure are the faiths which are said to be discriminated against. I read further from the letter:

Seventy-five percent of these people are Catholics and their number is nearly twice that of the Baltic DP's.

I read further from the letter, which is a copy of a letter written to one of the news writers:

The Baltic DP's together with the Poles and Ukrainians from east of the Curzon line are among the first refugees who came to Germany, Austria, and Italy. Some of them had fled their native land from communistic aggression even as early as 1941. The majority of them arrived in 1944. The Senate bill is just in giving them priority as they have been the people who suffered the longest period in the concentration and DP camps of Germany, Austria, and Italy.

Mr. President, the reason that some preference, now 40 percent, was given to the people of those countries was this. Those people cannot return home. There is no question about that. If they go back to their native land, the people of East Poland, those of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, they are certain to suffer bodily harm and perhaps death. They were among the first who were seized by the Germans and forced into so-called slave-labor camps. That has already been explained, but it may well be repeated. Why was a dead line of December 22, 1945, fixed? It was fixed for only one reason, Mr. President, and that was that, knowing we could not take all DP's, we wanted to take those who were in truth and fact the earlier comers, the ones who were forced into labor, the real DP's who were, without their own choice, forced to go into camps and work during the war.

I have heard it said by one of the Senators critically—yes, unfairly critically—that December 22, 1945, was fixed "for some strange reason." There is no strangeness about it at all, Mr. President. The date of December 22, 1945, was first fixed by the President of the United States. When he issued a directive in December 1945 that the DP's should be given preference under the quotas into this country, the terminal date within which a person was to be considered as an admissible DP into this country was fixed in 1945, as December

Is there anything strange about the date being fixed in the bill? No; it is the date which has been set and which was acted under, and every displaced person who has come into this country-and the number is approaching 40,000 at this time-has come in under the limit of the date of December 22, 1945. They came here under that date.

Why was that date fixed originally? It was because in 1946 people began to come in from all directions, not as displaced persons, but as immigrants traveling to some other land, not forced to come. The war was over, the fighting was over in May 1945, but in 1946 and 1947, and even up until this time, they are moving out of their countries. We cannot blame them. It is because of the economic conditions of the countries, because they are war-torn, because they cannot get along as well and as comfortably as they would like.

Do Senators think the committee should have mixed those who were not displaced persons with displaced persons? Was it not the duty of the committee, Mr. President, when we were called upon to make a displaced-persons bill, knowing that America cannot take them all, to see that displaced persons were taken rather than other nationals who simply emigrated because they wanted to get out of their land, and were not displaced or forced out of it?

I say that date is a strange date. It is the date under which for more than 2 years the State Department has administered the law, it is the terminal date which fixed the time which made a displaced person eligible.

I say there is something strange. Not until the committee, which has worked for a year, was trying to agree upon a date, not until February 1948, this very year, did the State Department change the date and move it up suddenly without any reason to April 21, 1947

My colleague from the State of West Virginia asked the question-and I wanted to get the floor and answer itwhether or not a letter written by the Under Secretary of State, Mr. Lovett, was placed before the committee. I have the letter. The staff has a copy of the letter. Many things were placed before the committee. I have consulted with the staff. I do not know whether that exact letter was placed before the committee or not, but I take it it was, as were all data which came there.

The point in the letter was whether or not they could administer the act unless it was up to April 1947. That is the point I have raised, but I wish to say there can be no question about that point being opened before the committee, and not once, but time after time, by those who were advocating that as a permanent date for eligible displaced persons.

Not only was it before the committee, but here on the floor of the Senate, in extended debate with my colleague from West Virginia, present and voting, the Senator from New Jersey—and he has made the statement in this debate today-brought up that very question, saying that the State Department took the position that no law could be administered unless a terminal date were extended to April 1947. That does not stand up, it did not stand before the Senate when we voted upon the amendment, and it should not stand because for 2 years they administered the law under the date of December 1945.

I do not know why they make such a claim. No one knows. It is said they will bring in 50,000 by July 1, and they brought that many in under the December 1945 date. There has been no discrimination made until this time.

In order to have the date extended, what would have been done? They would have mixed in with the really displaced persons those who had chosen of their own free will to emigrate during 1946 and 1947.

Mr. President, we have covered this subject pretty fully. Some statement was made to the effect that we were going to permit to enter this country persons who had fought against America, persons who had supported Hitler. That is probably one of the most mistaken and unwarranted statements made in the debate, and I wish to read from section 13 of the reported bill, which rather indi-cates that Senators who make such a statement have not studied the bill or read it. I know they would not make a misstatement intentionally so misleading and so wrong.

Let me read section 13. Could language be clearer?

No visa shall be issued under the provisions of this act to any person who is or has been a member of or participated in any movement which is or has been hostile to the United States or the form of government of the United States.

Yet this bill is assailed. Do Senators want a bill to pass which will permit to come into this country men who are hostile to the form of government of the United States? Why would they advocate such a thing? This is the bill they said they wanted passed without that provision in it.

I wish to say, Mr. President, this bill is not all the Senator from West Virginia wants. I think it covers too many. I think the numbers are too large, for one thing. But there is one phase of the provisions of the bill upon which I stand, and which I think is justified, namely, that those who come must be found to be people who can fit into the life of America, must come here without displacing people who have jobs here, must come here in this day of housing shortage without displacing the people already here. Yet Senators complain of those provisions.

It seems sometimes that in the great sympathetic appeal to hearts—and I think it is a just appeal, I do not criticize it—Senators are willing that men generally are willing to turn their backs upon the situation in our own country—to the grave problems our own people confront.

Mr. President, I want to see the right thing done. There are two phases of the problem. One is a natural appeal to sympathy to help, and I hope the great heart of America will continue to feel for people anywhere in need. But there is another phase. With 2,000,000 families out of homes in this country, with 2,000,000 young servicemen entering schools, getting ready to go out looking for jobs, we cannot ignore them. That is why a provision is placed in the bill that those who come in must be able to find work. If there is work for them they must not displace others in that work. Secondly, whoever they may be and from whence they come they must not unhouse or displace other persons out of their homes in America. I think those provisions are fair.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper] read an editorial based upon statements made by Earl G. Harrison. I asked him the question, if Senators will recall, from whom were the quotations taken in the editorial, and the Senator from Florida, who had read it to the Senate, and who used the editorial as an authority for his position, said it was by Earl G. Harrison. I do not know Mr. Harrison, but I understand that he is the dean of the law school at the University of Pennsylvania, a highly responsible position. I do not know any-thing about that. I do not know anything about him as a law teacher. But he is the chairman of perhaps the most active committee upon this subject that has resorted to every high-pressure method known to lobbyists in this country. He is the chairman of the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons. And, as pointed out previously in the RECORD, this is the organization which has a lobby here in Congress and a pay roll aggregating $152,000 a year to lobby the Congress to break down these barriers on immigration.

Mr. President, do Senators want that kind of a man as their authority in the criticism of any bill of the Senate?

Mr. LANGER. In addition to all expenses of every kind and character.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Yes. That amount of $152,000 was the pay of some twenty-odd lobbyists who came here to Capitol Hill to try to influence the Members of the Congress upon this problem. I pay tribute to my colleagues who stood steadfast on this proposition, that all the high-paid lobbyists did not move them on this subject.

Let us see more about Mr. Harrison. Mr. Harrison, as I recall, was Commissioner of Immigration, and during the time he was Commissioner of Immigration from the year 1942 to August 1944, some very interesting things were done under the Immigration Act. That was the time when some 982 immigrants—whether it could be excused by saying that the war was on or not—were brought into this country in violation, I say, of the immigration law. That is just one incident in connection with him.

I am advised that on April 7, 1943, the American Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born gave a dinner for Mr. Harrison and awarded him their annual medal. This committee was, in April 1944, 1 year later, listed as subversive by the House Un-American Activities Committee and was on May 8, 1948, listed as subversive by the Attorney General of the United States.

I think Senators should stop and wonder when such an authority is used here. But when unfair attacks are made upon Senators and upon the conference committee upon which I served, and had the privilege of acting as chairman, and such arguments are presented from such sources as this, let the RECORD speak for itself.

I do not want to discuss the case any further. Men may differ upon the general idea of immigration and upon its basic ideas. They may well differ. I do not think men can exactly differ upon what is best for their own country. I do not charge that they ignore the rights of their own country. It is simply a matter of opinion as to what is best.

I have heard more speeches made against the bill, coupled with the statement that the speakers are going to vote for it, than I have ever heard in respect to any proposed legislation in this body. I can understand that. The bill is not all I want. It is a compromise bill. Much of the legislation that comes out of this body is in the nature of compromise. We are doing the best we can. The bill was offered to the Senate. The House passed a different bill. We have met in conference and the bill is now presented to the Senate to accept it or to reject it as in the judgment of Senators they feel should be done.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, I simply desire to say that I am not altogether happy about the bill. I wish it might have been better. I realize that all legislation that comes through Congress is a matter of compremise. More than a year ago, when the Stratton bill was first introduced into the House of Representatives, I came out in favor of it, and I would have favored that bill over the present bill. However, I support the present bill because I think it is the best bill we can get at this time, because of the great division of minds and opinions on this important matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report on Senate bill 2242.

The report was agreed to.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE GREAT WEST-STATEMENT BY SENATOR WATKINS

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, one of the most important questions that has been discussed recently is the reclamation program in the West. The President has referred to it. Publicists have been writing about it. I am convinced the public must be greatly confused over the conflicting statements.

I have prepared a speech for delivery in the Senate, which is too long to be delivered on what is probably the last day of this particular session. So I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the body of the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEVELOPING THE GREAT WEST

Mr. President, ever since the opening of the West for settlement, the development of the great region west of the Mississippi has been undertaken impartially by both political parties in Congress. Westerners of every political complexion learned to work and stand together for the reclamation program which is the heart of western progress and prosperity. They have realized it is difficult for other Congressmen coming from sections of the country where excess of water is the problem—not scarcity—to understand how desperate is their need for Government help in reclaiming the western lands and bringing water to the arid soil. With this realization came a unity of purpose between Democrats and Republicans alike in explaining and illustrating the needs of the West to their eastern colleagues.

DEMOCRATIC ADMINISTRATION TURNS RECLAMA-TION INTO POLITICS

The unity of western Representatives is now threatened in two quarters: (1) By those who seek to make political capital out of the reclamation program; and (2) by high-level officials in the Reclamation Bureau whose unwise tactics endanger western development. Both of these unfortunate occurrences have been blended together to make a political issue out of what was formerly a nonpartisan tradition.

The President of the United States is himself responsible for a partisan tinge. Speaking at Spokane and other places on his western tour the President made a sideswipe at Republicans and the present Republican Congress in these words: "You are not going to get those (water and power) projects as long as you have a Congress that believes in the theory of Daniel Webster: that the West is no good and there is no good in wasting money on it.

"There are still men in Congress who are following Daniel Webster, and they are chairmen of key committees which make these appropriations."

In this unfortunate remark the President made Reclamation a partisan issue by implying that Republicans do not care enough about the West to support western development programs. His charge is false and ridiculous in the face of the undisputable Republican championship of the West, as will be shown in this statement.

Taking cue perhaps from the President, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming also made an attack on Republican policy toward reclamation. The partisan nature of the attack seems evident from the very magazine chosen to carry it. Writing in the Democratic Digest (reprinted in the Appendix of the Congressional Record, p. 3283), a political publication, he declared: The reclamation program "stands in mortal peril at the hands of the present leadership of the Republican Party." The usually astute Senator from Wyoming had merely to look honestly at the record of the Eightieth Congress, controlled by this same leadership, to ascertain how false his statement is.

THE TRUE STORY OF RECLAMATION APPROPRIATIONS

Republicans have not been niggardly with western programs. During the first year of their control of Congress they voted more funds for reclamation than the Democrats had provided in the most lush days of New Deal spending. Senator O'MAHONEY'S assertion appears ridiculous when the $218,682,-000 the Bureau has to spend in the fiscal year 1948 is compared with $101,361,631 in 1942 which is the highest sum ever appropriated to the program by the Democrats in all the years since 1932.

While condemning the mythical congressional "cuts," Senator O'MAHONEY has only praise for the extravagant requests of the administration and of President Truman's free-spending policies towards reclamation. In this case the Senator was trying to find praise for the administration's big talk and small performances. He conveniently ig-nores, however, the fact that the severest set-back that the Bureau of Reclamation has had to weather in the postwar period came from the President himself-not the Con-

In August of 1946 President Truman-to use a favorite phrase of his Commissioner of Reclamation, Michael W. Straus—put "Reclamation on the merry-go-round" by freezing one-half of the money Congress had appropriated for the Bureau's construction program. Badly needed irrigation and power projects were slowed down, contract negotiations were canceled, and the whole program was thrown out of gear.

The President explained his action was to assure a balanced budget, provide for debt reduction, and to "hold back our capital outlay for construction so that we do not commit the Government to heavy expendiyears by initiating too much work at this time."

These sentiments might have been in line with the general reconversion policy, but they were certainly not pleasant to the ears of a thirsty and power-hungry West, overburdened by an unprecedented increase in population. Even Commissioner Straus complained bitterly that "once momentum is accumulated, it cannot be stopped short without wreckage, destruction, and waste."

If President Truman was sincere in his belief that construction should be held back so as "not to interfere with private construction and the over-all job of reconversion," his freeze order would have been respected in that light. But leaning as always to the political winds, the President turned around 4 months later and contradicted his previous statement by requesting a mammoth appropriation of $145,952,200 for fiscal year 1948.

Later in 1947, he decried the mounting inflation before a special session of Congress, but his fears over inflated prices were apparently not strong enough to induce him to take the most obvious course to curb them. Instead of recommending a reduction in Government expenditures, he presented Congress with a $40,000,000,000 budget which included an expanded reclamation program of $278,000,000. Here again was a display of Democratic contradiction of principles, as well as contradiction in fact.

This is what the President recommended, but how did he apply his proposals in practice? Let me illustrate:

The construction of the Provo River reclamation project in Utah had been delayed during the war. A special measure was passed by this Congress to expedite the early com-pletion of this project. In addition to the regular budget request, $1,000,000 of additional funds was determined by the Bureau tional funds was determined by the Bureau of Reclamation to be necessary to expedite the completion of this project.

In order to support my request to the Appropriations Committees of the House and the Senate, it was necessary for me to get a budget request from the Budget Bureau for the additional amount. When the matter was placed squarely before the Budget Bureau, which is an arm of the President and a part of his official family, I was told the President had issued a directive to the Budget Bureau that no new reclamation projects are to be undertaken and that there should be no acceleration of the construction of the old projects, unless it could be demonstrated that an emergency existed. This, of course, is a direct contra-diction in practice to what the President had been saying to the Congress when he urged a greatly expanded reclamation pro-gram. In other words, he talked one way and acted another.

This budget was so obviously padded as to make a cut by a Congress committed to sound economy an inevitability. The Democratic administration undoubtedly planned it that way. By raising hopes of a vast spending program in the West beyond all reasonable limits, the Democratic Party leaders knew disappointment would be felt even more acutely by the water-hungry public. Through the wide propaganda machine built up by the administration, blame for dashing these hopes could then be nailed to the Republican Congress.

Senator O'MAHONEY belittles the early record of the Bureau of Reclamation by saying that in 30 years only 3,500,000 acres were irrigated, whereas in the past 15 years the total has been raised to 5,000,000 acres. What he neglects to point out is that the predominantly Republican administrations brought 3,500,000 acres under irrigation with an expenditure of only $330,000,000, while the additional 1,500,000 under Democratic control cost an additional $1,184,000,000. dominantly

But the cost per acre cannot be realistically compared any more than the number of acres per year brought under cultivation, and the Senator is walking on thin ice when he tries to leave such an implication in his figures.

Naturally, the lands which could be irrigated most quickly and easily were provided for first. The very complex, long-range, and most expensive projects have only been feasible from an engineering and economic standpoint in the last two decades. In the pre-Hoover Dam period, Reclamation's scope was very much smaller, for nothing like this huge dam's magnitude had ever been tried before.

Senator O'Mahoney seems to forget that what he calls the "golden era" of reclamation was simultaneous with the worst depression in the country's history and that much of the money spent on reclamation projects during the thirties came from emergency funds appropriated to relieve unemployment. In other words, reclamation was looked upon as another "make-work" project by the New Dealers to help alleviate the depression primarily, and only secondarily to help the West. But to give recognition where it is due, this was perhaps one of the few "makework" programs that was of lasting and beneficial value and in which there was no boondoggling.

The Senator also observes that Democratic policy is creating in the West a new and prosperous competitive economy. Yet to any careful observer of the Government management of power facilities in the Columbia Basin, Central Valley, or Davis Dam, it would appear evident that the Government is doing its best to crowd private competition out of the power market. The recent fight in California over the Bureau's insistence that the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. could buy Government-generated power only if it agreed to act as a delivery boy for the Bureau of Rec-lamation is illustrative proof of the administration's disregard for competitive economy.

When the Congress does anything that meets with Senator O'Mahoney's disapproval he charges it against Republican leadership. But when Congress acts commendably, as the Senate did in restoring much of the House's 1948 budget cuts, Senator O'MAHONEY cuts himself and his Democratic colleagues in on it by asserting that "We were enabled in the Senate to restore a substantial part of President Truman's recommendations." No mention is made about how Republican leadership in this instance discovered that the House had been misled by the Bureau's confusing figures and restored the necessary amounts to insure a progressive and economical construction program. But in one of the Senator's less partisan moments, he did recall the thoroughness of this leadership for he said on the floor of the Senate on July 22, 1947, after the largest Interior appropriation bill on record had passed that body:

"I feel that there has been a substantial gain in the preservation of the public interest in the bill as it has been presented by the conference committee. I join with the Senator from California, WILLIAM F. KNOW-LAND, in expressing my gratification for the diligent, and I may say the combative, manner in which the Senator from Nebraska, KENNETH S. WHEREY, sustained the amend-ments of the Senate."

Even Commissioner Straus felt called upon to take off his hat to the generosity of the Republican Congress in providing for reclamation last year. The Commissioner told the National Reclamation Association in October of that year that "* * the Congress not the Congress not only last year but again this year made the largest reclamation appropriations in history. By any interpretation, Congress affirmed its appreciation, support, and confidence in the West's reclamation program. The Congress, as a whole, seems to be ahead of some selfappointed spokesmen or any pleaders amongst us for special interests. Just remember these facts when anybody tells you that the Congress does not support reclamation." Straus was speaking, let me remind you, of a Congress under Republican leadership. Does this sound like a Congress which the President charges is not interested in the development of the West?

THE ISSUE ON ELECTRIC POWER AND DEVELOPMENT

In true demagogic style, the Senator maintains in his later statement that the further development of hydroelectric power "cannot be entrusted to the tender mercies of the leaders of the Republican Party who have clearly demonstrated their complete lack of sympathy." Does a record appropriation for construction of power facilities as was voted by both Houses last year and the even greater one approved for the fiscal year 1949 represent a lack of sympathy? Never before has so much attention been paid or money appropriated for water and power development in the West as by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress

Both Senator O'MAHONEY and the President have tried desperately to create an issue on which they believe they can make politi-cal hay. At the risk of dividing the West itself and setting class upon class, they are trying to make it appear that the Republican Party represents "selfish interests" and the Democratic Party is the champion of the people. No such issue exists except in the political minds of these two partisans who are willing for their own advantage to plunge the people of the West into needless political strife.

The power policy of the Republican Party has always been clear and in the best American tradition of freedom to the people to decide their own programs in their own localities. Instead of pushing public power upon communities where it is not needed or wanted, the Republican Party has always adhered to the policy of providing public power in areas where the people have been long accustomed to it or have voted their desire for it. They have not tried to force upon the people anywhere programs dictated from Washington. Republicans have always respected local wishes on great national problems and have generously furnished the money to implement them.

BUREAUCRATS DRUNK WITH POLITICAL POWER

Rather than entrusting the vital function of reclamation to men with "lack of sympathy," it must be entrusted "to men of vision and leadership" says the Senator from Wyoming. By men of vision, he undoubtedly means the present Commissioner of Reclamation, Michael W. Straus * * a man whose policies and administration have been so questionable that he has endangered the whole reclamation program which his predecessors built up so painstakingly for many years.

This man, who for the last 4 years has been heading the largest engineering organization in the world, had had no engineering or administrative experience to speak of when he was appointed to this powerful office. His practice of running an engineering outfit as a mammoth propaganda organization had become so intolerable to men of good will that both Houses of Congress just recently voted into law the proviso that, henceforth, no man who was not an engineer with many years of experience could hold this important position. As was pointed out in debate on the Senate floor, it had never before been necessary for Congress to prescribe qualifications for the Commissioner of Reclamation because it was commonly assumed by both parties that only the highest caliber men of the engineering profession would be considered for the office. Experience with the propaganda administration operated by Straus compelled Congress to take extraordinary steps to protect the western program.

The type of administration provided by this particular man of vision was aptly displayed during the spring and summer of 1947 by a mixture of confusion, cajolery, and direct attempt to thwart the spirit of the Antideficiency Act.

Commissioner Straus dipped more heavily than usual into his bag of political tricks a year ago April and May. He has always exhibited symptoms of grandiose delusions and unbridled liberties in the use of taxpayers' money entrusted to his Bureau, but ever since the spring of 1947 he has been like a man obsessed with the political possibilities of his power.

Fully aware that inflation demanded economy in Government spending and that Congress was compelled to be careful with the taxpayers' money, Straus set out to block every attempt at economy even if he had to resort to highly questionable tactics.

By presenting incomplete and confusing figures to Congress, he first misled the House into an error in their appropriation of funds for the reclamation program. Instead of appealing to the Senate for what he might have considered unnecessary cuts in vital projects, the Commissioner went over the heads of the people's elected representatives, and appealed to the reclamation users and supporters in the West to help him denounce Congress even before legislative action was complete. With the propaganda machine he has built up in the Bureau of Reclamation, he directed premature blasts at the Republican Congress from all over the West. This action, whether he planned it that way or not, had the effect of turning the reclamation program into a political instrument.

Westerners were led to believe that these great wealth-producing projects which they so sorely needed would be closed down and abandoned because of false economy upon the part of Congress. It was never brought out to them that the legislative process was only half completed and that the Senate had yet to act. Nor were they told of the confusion created by the Bureau itself because of its faulty figures and accounting procedures.

Straus was not interested in fact or equity. He was engaged in a political experiment to discover how far it lay within his power to inflame the West against a Republican Congress. After he started the political fire, his chief, Secretary Krug, fanned it into flame with the extraordinary scare that "the proposed budget reduction * * would cause a tremendous set-back in the Nation's economy. That set-back might be enough to set off a major depression."

A flood of supporting propaganda thereafter flooded the 17 Western States and the people there, unaware of how they were being used, responded angrily exactly as the Bureau of Reclamation desired. They bombarded western Senators and Representatives with letters, telegrams, and phone calls reprimanding Congress and demanding enlarged appropriations for the Bureau of Reclamation. The manner in which this effect was achieved stamped it for a plain attempt to discredit a Republican Congress before completion of final legislation.

before completion of final legislation.

Mr. Straus has had much better preparation for propaganda activity than for directing a huge engineering and technical institution such as the Bureau of Reclamation. His Government experience started as public relations director for the Public Works Administration and later in the same capacity in the Department of the Interior. He worked hand in glove with the master of Government-inspired pressure groups, Harold L. Ickes, and has carried on the same practices even after his teacher had been dismissed from office. Since he has taken over the direction of Reclamation, the fine tradition established by his competent predecessors, all highly qualified engineers, has fallen to the point where the interests of the West are sacrificed to politics and enhancement of the power of bureaucrats.

PLAYING POLITICS AND JUGGLING THE TAXPAYERS'

Mr. Straus was so pleased with the results of his 1947 trial run into politics that he went to the annual conference of Reclamation officials held at Salt Lake City a week after Congress recessed and boasted that by the same tactics he could get even more appropriations from Congress. Disregarding the plain and legal limits of the appropriations just provided by Congress he brazenly announced a program for 1948 totaling $195,000,000, which was $36,000,000 more than allowed by law. He was fully aware that he was exceeding his authority but with cocksurety he announced he had "decided to go full steam ahead" on the Bureau's own program regardless of the fact that congressional appropriations were plainly intended to curb the Straus dreams of expansion.

He sought by his boast to the Salt Lake Conference to project a 6-year program of additional expenditures totaling $1,335,000,000 through 1954. Two months later his superior, Secretary Krug, expanded this into a 7-year program and called for an over-all expenditure of $2,148,000,000. Such was the arrogant assumption of power of these officials as against the people's representatives in Congress.

When called to task for these unwarranted statements, Straus and Secretary Krug released assurances that "the program is proceeding in strict accordance with the law and the determination of the Congress. No deficiency has been or will be incurred * * *. Any supplemental funds required to permit construction to proceed without waste of funds will be determined by Congress." They maintained that the appropriation would be spent as Congress wanted it spent, that it would all last until late in the fiscal year, and that Congress would have ample time to act before any project was shut down from lack of funds.

At the same time these solemn promises were being made publicly by Krug and Straus, the Bureau had overobligated itself on at least 19 different projects and had issued orders to its regional directors to "crowd construction to the utmost." In California, the assistant regional director informed his subordinates after Secretary Krug had visited the Central Valley project that "the Secretary and the Commissioner are insistent that 1949 funds be spent early in the year—by January 1, if possible."

in the year—by January 1, if possible."

When enough of the money had been spent so that shut-downs would be unavoidable if additional money was not provided, Mr. Straus finally notified Senator Kennerh S. Wherr, chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on the Interior Department, on September 29, 1947, of the accomplished fact.

The fiscal year for Straus had begun on July 1 and was to last 12 months, but within three, he claimed he was running out of money. He admitted that Congress had provided generously for most of the projects, and yet shut-downs would occur "no matter how much rescheduling and spreading on money is done * * * preliminary reports show that we cannot finish the fiscal year with funds available." Either by coincidence or design these shut-downs took place on a group of large and carefully dispersed projects from which could flow the maximum political dissatisfaction with Congress if the Bureau by propaganda could settle the blame there.

Mr. Straus talked of slow-downs and rescheduling only when it was past the time they would do any good, but neglected to explain why he did not consider them as possibilities 2 months earlier when he announced a program far in excess of the intent of Congress.

And so Straus' plan for creating discontent in the West and forcing Congress to appropriate more money than it deemed prudent continued as scheduled. Contractors were deliberately taken by surprise by unexpected notices that funds would soon be exhausted and they in turn protested to their Congressmen who were home for the recess. The familiar New Deal cycle was put into operation again—Government officials using a propaganda to mislead the public into lobbying for them.

Commissioner Straus had stated on October 30, 1947, that funds would begin to be exhausted some time after February 1. But within 2 weeks after Congressmen were unexpectedly called back to Washington for the special session on November 17, they were notified by their constituents that the Bureau had announced that some of the projects would be out of money on November 30, some December 15, and others on December 31. It was as if the progressive shut-down of projects was deliberately contrived to produce a rising intensity of anger against the

The only conclusion that can be reached for such a drastic change of schedule within such a short period is that originally Straus had decided to turn on the "heat" during the second session of Congress, but the unexpected special session provided too good an opportunity for the crafty Commissioner to ignore. He quickly revised his program of shut-downs when he saw a chance of getting more appropriations at an earlier date.

The notices of exhaustion of funds in the Central Valley project were not received by contractors until 4 days before the dead line, November 30. Four of the five large contractors completely shut down their vast operations and did not return to work until the latter part of February. They lost millions of dollars—and the Government and the project lost 3 months of the best construction weather due to the prolonged California draught. This loss of money and time is all the more condemnable in the light of evidence submitted to a House committee investigating the Bureau of Reclamation. In this investigation it was revealed that the Bureau had on hand $7,000,000 in unobligated funds which it could have allocated to prevent the Central Valley shut-down.

The impact of these shut-downs on the economy of the West was so apparent and the criticism against the Bureau from Republicans and Democrats alike so strong that joint hearing by both the Senate and the House Appropriations Subcommittees were held even before a request for supplemental appropriations was received from the Presi-

Although this joint hearing revealed many interesting and pertinent facts about the operations of the Bureau, it also proved again what a master of subterfuge is the Commissioner of Reclamation. Again and again Senator Wherry asked Commissioner Straus why he announced within 5 days after Congress adjourned that he was going to spend $36,000,000 more than Congress had appropriated. Repeatedly Senators Cosson and Cain inquired why they, as legal representa-tives of affected States, had not been forewarned of the pending shut-downs and why the matter had not been discussed with them before it was promiscuously announced all over the Western States. These questions were met with vague and evasive more carefully calculated to divert the Sen-ators away from inquiries embarrassing to Commissioner Straus and the Bureau officials than to reveal the true state of their opera-

Even though it had been grossly imposed upon by the tricks employed by Mr. Straus and the Bureau, the Republican leadership quickly provided more funds than the President requested to meet the deficiencies created by the Bureau. In making its recom-mendation, the Senate Appropriations Committee regretted the lack of time to make a more thorough investigation of the Bureau's operations. From the testimony it did hear, the committee stated that the Bureau deliberately designed to exhaust its funds prior to the end of the fiscal year in clear violation of the intent of Congress. On this point the committee concluded: "If such a policy is allowed to be followed in the future, it would take out of the hands of the Congress and put into the hands of the Bureau and the contractors the control of the rate of ex-penditures on reclamation projects."

CONGRESS DEMANDS INVESTIGATION OF THE BUREAU

The committee's irritation lay not with the need for the additional money but with the highly questionable methods used by the Bureau to compel Congress to enlarge precipi-tously a program which it had carefully planned in the regular fiscal year appro-

The committee also took the stand as it had the previous spring, that the data furnished it by the Bureau was so varied as to clearly evidence the fact that "the whole accounting system of the Bureau needs com-plete overhauling. Contradictory data were such as to destroy the confidence of the committee in the reliability of the figures furnished by the Bureau."

At the time the bill was on the Senate floor for consideration, several Senators called for an investigation of the Bureau. They believed that the charges made against Straus and his cohorts deserved much fuller consideration. Among many charges leveled at the Bureau were those which maintained that public funds had been misused in disregard of express law, that the Bureau violated the Antideficiency Act, and its officers had issued false and misleading statements for the purpose of influencing Congress with respect to legislation.

This demand for an investigation had already been put in the form of Senate and House resolutions by Senator Sheridan Dow-NEY and Congressman ALFRED ELLIOTT, both Democrats from California, and members of Straus' own party. Senator Downey had been battling with the Bureau for many years as chairman of the old Irrigation and Reclamation Committee and particularly over the administration of the Central Valley project of California. During this time, he had unearthed much evidence and had participated in many incidents which led him to believe that the Bureau was guilty not only of mal-administration but of trying to "impose by high-pressure lobbying and propaganda an economic strait-jacket upon a sector of free and successful enterprise." We find no mention of this in Senator O'MAHONEY'S article in the Democratic Digest magazine.

It was Senator Downey who successfully accused the Bureau of planning to exhaust all available funds for the CVP before January 1. He produced a letter sent out by the assistant regional director to his subordi-nates which corroborated the Senator's accusations. On the floor of the Senate, Senator Downey read a very significant paragraph from this letter dated June 17-1 day after the Senate had acted on the regular Interior appropriation bill. R. S. Calland, assistant regional director and chief engineer of the

CVP, wrote:

"The Secretary and the Commissioner are insistent that 1948 funds be spent early in the year—by January 1, if possible. We are concerned here lest we end the fiscal year with another carry-over.

"I wish to emphasize the Secretary's, the Commissioner's, and our regional policy which is to crowd construction to the utmost regardless of individual opinions as to adequacy of funds, and to repeat that I am now convinced of our ability to spend the amount that will be available in fiscal year 1948 "

From June 17 onward and while this letter remained the secret of the Bureau, Commissioner Straus had been assuring California Congressmen that there were ample funds to carry the Central Valley project through the spring of 1948. But the Bureau, by undercover methods, had been driving ahead by every possible means, at any cost, however wasteful, to spend the full appro-priations in half the allotted time. They succeeded in doing so by December 1.

Senator Downer, through years of association, had come to so doubt the integrity of Mr. Straus and his cohorts that during the Senate appropriation hearings, he went through the unusual practice of having a Government official put under oath. He also accused Straus of attempting to organize pressure groups in northern California in violation of the Federal law (sec. 201 of title 18 of the Criminal Code which prohibits a Federal official from using funds appropriated by the Congress to influence Congress on pending legislation). The purpose of this propaganda was to take away from the Army engineers and turn over to Straus Bureau the job of building and control of a dam on the American River. On the basis of statements made to the press, Senator Downey claimed that Straus was not only guilty of gross impropriety in lobbying, but had also violated the penal statute of the United States.

He declared, and furnished evidence to support his view, that "the prosecution of this work (the CVP) was designedly held back at a lamentably low level in 1946 and 1947 for political reasons and was expedited to the utmost for political reasons in this year (fiscal year 1948). * * Representatives of the Bureau of Reclamation for months now in the Central Valley by the hundreds have been gossiping over the Central Valley that the Bureau of Reclamation would show up Congress on this appropriation, and the Republican Party.

Senator Downer is so sincere in his feelings and so confident of his facts that he deliberately removed himself from senatorial immunity by independently publishing a book containing the same charges he had made previously on the Senate floor. By publicly printing his assertions, he put himself in a position to be sued in criminal and civil actions for libel. Up to the present date, neither Commissioner Straus nor any of the other Reclamation officials who stand accused by Senator Downey have started proceedings.

Senator Downey is not the only Democrat who has had the courage to denounce "in-competency and maladministration" when he has seen it growing in his own garden. Congressman ALFRED J. ELLIOTT, Democratic Member of the House for 12 years and one of the best friends that Reclamation has had during those years from either party, also became incensed over the operations of the Bureau in the Central Valley. He took an active part in exposing the tricks of Bureau officials. Disgusted with them, he sponsored the amendment in the House to the 1949 Interior appropriation bill which takes the highly technical direction of the Bureau of Reclamation out of the hands of propa-gandists who now control it and will place eminent engineers at the helm instead.

The full details of wrongful manipulation by a few individuals of the huge Government investment in reclamation and power projects makes sordid reading for those who count upon steady development of the great West. The story belies Senator O'MAHONEY'S attempt to shift the blame to Republicans for Democratic political gain. Republicans are not in charge of a Bureau whose affairs are now so badly mishandled.

REPUBLICAN CONTRIBUTIONS TO DEVELOPMENT OF THE WEST

Contrary to Senator O'MAHONEY's insinuations, Republican administrations have an unsurpassed record of solid achievements in building up the West from the days of Lin-coln onward. The very foundation of west-ern settlement stems from the Homestead Act of 1862, upon which the basic reclamation law also rests; and its wise provision that no man should own more than 160 acres of public land is still in effect today. It was Republican administrations which created the Department of Agriculture, authorized Government aid in building the first transcontinental railroad, bought Alaska, organized the Weather Bureau, and enacted the Reclamation Act itself in 1902. The father of reclamation by any standard is Theodore Roosevelt and those men of true vision in the Republican Congress of 46 years ago which established the plan for which Democrats, nearly a half century later, claim credit.

Senator O'MAHONEY also conveniently forgets that it was Republican leadership which gets that it was Republican leadership which fostered rural free delivery. They established a majority of the national parks of the West, which brought recreation, business, and trade to this growing area. Republicans passed the Agricultural Marketing Act to build farm prosperity. They organized the Bureau of Mines to assist the West in the development of its basic natural resources. It should also he remembered that the

It should also be remembered that the protective-tariff policies of the Republican Party gave the necessary help to many infant western industries, such as mining, sugar, cattle, and sheep, and agricultural fields generally. This protection came at a time when it was badly needed.

No amount of political chicanery can becloud these contributions from men of vi-sion in the Republican Party. They worked unceasingly, efficiently, and economically for the betterment of the West in the firm belief that thereby the Nation as a whole is enriched.

TRIBAL FUNDS OF CONFEDERATED TRIBES OF WARM SPRINGS RESERVA-TION, OREG.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1243) to provide for the payment of revenues from certain lands into the tribal funds of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, and for other purposes, which were, on page 3, to strike out all after line 19, over to and including line 4 on page 4, and on page 4, line 5, to strike out "Sec. 4" and insert "Sec. 3."

Mr. CORDON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

CERTAIN ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES OF POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT—CONFER-ENCE REPORT

Mr. LANGER. I submit a conference report on Senate bill 2510 to provide for certain administrative expenses in the Post Office Department, including retainment of pneumatic-tube systems, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be read.

The conference report was read, as follows:

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the final issue of the Congressional Record a statement which I am preparing on the subject of the oleo controversy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE MUNDT-NIXON BILL

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement I have prepared concerning the so-called Mundt-Nixon bill and a copy of the bill as proposed to be revamped.

There being no objection, the statement and the bill were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Judiciary Committee received the Mundt-Nixon bill on the 21st day of May. The committee held hearings, assigning to the proponents about one-fifth of the time allotted and to the opponents about four-fifths.

Because the bill raised two questions—(1) of law, whether the bill is constitutionally written, (2) of policy—the committee called for opinions from distinguished counsel in New York and Washington and received a number of opinions from counsel representing various groups.

The committee also asked the Attorney General of the United States for an opinion. The opinions reflected generally the conclusion that there were constitutional objections to the bill. Thereafter, the chairman consulted with the subcommittee and with counsel, including Donald Richberg, in relation to the bill and, as a result, the objections that were raised were, in large measure, met by a revamped bill, but in view of the time element, it was found that the bill could not be brought to the calendar and action taken thereon in the Senate unless there should be a special session.

I ask that the revamped bill be printed in the RECORD so that it can have further study by not only the committee members, but by anyone interested in the subject.

At this time there is no need to dwell upon the amount of unhelpful opposition; amounting in some instances to hysteria and emo-tional unbalance, and in some instances almost threats. The chairman of the committee feels that the subject of the penetra-tion of communism is one that merits the consideration of every thinking American. He realizes that no legislation is an adequate cure for any crime—that it needs helpful cooperation of the citizenry, the officials and, in many instances, a tremendous lot of edu-cation. That is particularly true in this case where so much lo found, and so forth. loose thinking has been

Mr. President, I stated, when we originally received the Mundt-Nixon bill, that we would not act with rash haste on it, but would seek to make sure that the civil liberties of every American were protected, even the civil liberties of Communists.

Because we undertook to conscientiously consider all phases of the bill, we have been subjected to criticism by those who would have preferred for the Senate Judiciary Committee to simply rubber stamp the House bill and send it to the Senate floor.

I have condemned rubber stamping of administration measures, and I am completely opposed to rubber-stamp measures which are opposed by the administration, or for that matter, any rubber-stamp measure which is presented to any committee of which I am a

Let it therefore stand on the record, that the fact that the Mundt-Nixon bill did not reach the Senate floor was not in any way due to dilatory tactics by the members of the Judiciary Committee. Exactly to the con-trary. We worked night and day on this trary. We worked night and day on this bill. We used every available second and minute to analyze it. We met for many hours at a time, skipping luncheon periods, abandoning all other work, however press, abandoning the adapted to our responsiing, in order to be adequate to our responsibility on this bill.

We have no apologies. We have no excuses. We do want this description of our effort, however, to stand in the RECORD.

We did not allow Communist and Communist-minded individuals to sabotage our consideration by extending the hearings in-definitely, nor did we allow those who wanted us to simply rubber stamp the bill to sabotage the congressional process by simply having us approve the bill without any consideration.

It is my earnest hope that the Senate Judiciary Committee and the entire Senate will have the opportunity to further explore this important subject of Communist in-filtration in America. At the same time, in order to defeat the menace of communism, we will never resort to the tactics of fascism or any totalitarian method. We will act, as I humbly believe we have acted, in a truly American, fair, and democratic manner.

In summary may I say that the Mundt-Nixon bill arrived too late in the Senate. Let there be no recriminations, no accusations, because, unfortunately, time was not available to consider it in committee and the full Senate, with all the time and all the detail that its importance justifies.

Let not the Communists, however, take heart and crow about the fact that the Senate did not act on his bill. Let them not attempt to imply that they had anything to do with killing the bill. On the contrary, we emerged from committee meetings with a firmer conviction than ever before that the Communist threat must be met and will be met. The lack of action on the Mundt-Nixon bill is not, therefore, a victory for the Communists. It is merely due to the lack of time that was available. However much we despise communism, we love more our constitutional processes of congressional government, and we will not foresake them even to meet the Communist threat.

H. R. 5852

An act to protect the United States against un-American and subversive activities Be it enacted, etc.,

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This act may be cited as the "Subversive Activities Act, 1948."

NECESSITY FOR LEGISLATION

SEC. 2. As a result of evidence adduced before various committees of the Senate and Hous: of Representatives, Congress hereby finds that

(1) The system of government known a totalitarian dictatorship is characterized by the existence of a single political party, or-ganized on a dictatorial basis, and by an identity between such party and its policies and the government and governmental policies of the country in which it exists, such identity being so close that the party and the government itself are for all practical purposes indistinguishable.

(2) The establishment of a totalitarian dictatorship in any country results in the ruthless suppression of all opposition to the party in power, the complete subordination of the rights of individuals to the state, the denial of fundamental rights and liberties which are characteristic of a representative form of government, such as freedom of speech, of the press, of assembly, and of religious worship, and results in the maintenance of control over the people through fear, terrorism, and brutality.

(3) There exists a world communist movement which, in its origins, its developcommunist movement which, in its origins, its develop-ment, and its present practice, is a world-wide revolutionary political movement whose purpose it is, by treachery, deceit, inflitra-tion into other groups (governmental and otherwise), espionage, sabotage, terrorism, and any other means deemed necessary, to establish a Communist totalitarian dictator-ship in all the countries of the world through the medium of a single world-wide Communist political organization.

(4) The direction and control of the world Communist movement is vested in and exercised by the Communist dictatorship of a foreign country.

(5) The Communist dictatorship of such foreign country, in exercising such direction and control and in furthering the purposes of the world Communist movement, establishes or causes the establishment of, and utilizes, in various countries, political or-ganizations which are acknowledged by such Communist dictatorship as being constituent elements of the world Communist movement; and such political organizations are not free and independent organizations, but are mere sections of a single world-wide Communist organization and are controlled, directed, and subject to the discipline of the Communist dictatorship of such foreign

(6) The political organizations so established and utilized in various countries, acting under such control, direction, and discipline, endeavor to carry out the objectives of the world Communist movement by bringing about the overthrow of existing governments and setting up Communist totalitarian dictatorships which will be subservient to the most powerful existing Communist totalitarian dictatorship.

(7) In carrying on the activities referred to in paragraph (6), such political organiza-tions in various countries are organized on a secret, conspiratorial basis and operate to a substantial extent through organizations, commonly known as "Communist fronts," which in most instances are created and maintained, or used, in such manner as to conceal the facts as to their true character and purposes and their membership. One result of this method of operation is that such political organizations are able to obtain financial and other support from persons who would not extend such support if they knew the true purposes of, and the actual nature of the control and influence exerted upon, such "Communist fronts."

(8) Due to the nature and scope of the world Communist movement, with the existence of affiliated constituent elements working toward common objectives in various countries of the world, travel of members, representatives, and agents from country to country is essential for purposes of communication and for the carrying on of activities to further the purposes of the movement.

(9) In the United States those individuals who knowingly and willfully participate in the world Communist movement, when they so participate, in effect repudiate their al-legiance to the United States and in effect transfer their allegiance to the foreign country in which is vested the direction and control of the world Communist movement; and, in countries other than the United States, those individuals who knowingly and willfully participate in such Communist movement similarly repudiate their allegiance to the countries of which they are nationals in favor of such foreign Communist country.

(10) In pursuance of communism's stated objectives, the most powerful existing Communist dictatorship has, by the traditional Communist methods referred to above, and in accordance with carefully conceived plans, already caused the establishment in numerous foreign countries, against the will of the people of those countries, of ruthless Communist totalitarian dictatorships, and threatens to establish similar dictatorships in still other countries.

(11) The recent successes of Communist methods in other countries and the nature and control of the world Communist movement itself present a clear and present danger to the security of the United States and to the existence of free American institutions and make it necessary that Congress, in order to provide for the common defense, to preserve the sovereignty of the United States as an independent nation, and to guarantee to each State a republican form of government, enact appropriate legislation recognizing the existence of such world-wide conspiracy designed to prevent it from accomplishing its purpose in the United States.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 3. For the purposes of this act—
(1) The term "person" means an individual or an organization.

(2) The term "organization" means an organization, corporation, company, partnership, association, trust, foundation, or fund; and includes a group of persons, whether or not incorporated, permanently or temporarily associated together for joint action on, or advancement of views on, any subject or

(3) The term "Communist political or-anization" means any organization in the United States having some, but not necessarily all, of the ordinary and usual characteristics of a political party, which (A) is substantially dominated or controlled by the foreign government or foreign governmental or political organization controlling the world Communist movement referred to in section 2, and (B) operates primarily to advance the political objectives of such world Communist movement.

(4) The term "Communist-front organiza-tion" means any organization in the United States (other than a Communist political organization and other than a lawfully organized political party which is not a Communist political organization) which (A) is under the control of a Communist politi-cal organization, or (B) is operated primarily for the purpose of giving aid and support to a Communist political organization, a Communist foreign government, or the world Communist movement referred to in sec-

(9) The term "Board" means the Subversive Activities Board established by section 12 of this act.

(10) The term "final order of the Board" means an order issued by the Board under section 13 of this act, which has become final as provided in section 14 of this act, requiring an organization to register under section 7 of this act as a Communist political organization or a Communist-front organiza-

CERTAIN PROHIBITED ACTS

SEC. 4. (a) It shall be unlawful for any person to combine or conspire with any other person to perform any act which would substantially assist in the establishment within the United States of a totalitarian dictatorship the direction and control of which is to be vested in, or exercised by or under the domination or control of, any foreign government, foreign organization, or foreign individual, with intent to assist in the establishment within the United States of such totalitarian distatorship. For purposes of this subsection, the term "totalitarian dictatorship" means a form of government, not representative in form, characterized by (1) the dominance of a single political party to such an extent that such party and its policies are indistinguishable for all practical purposes from the government and governmental policies of the country in which such party exists, (2) the suppression of opposition to such party, and (3) the denial of those fundamental rights and liberties of individuals which are characteristic of a representative form of government, such as freedom of speech, of the press, of assembly, and of religious worship.

(b) Any person who violates subsection (a) of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or by both such fine and such imprisonment, and shall, moreover, be thereafter ineligible to hold any office, or place of honor, profit, or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States.

SEC. 5. (a) When there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring an organization to register as a Communist political organization, it shall be unlawful for any member of such organization, with knowledge that such order has become final—

(1) in seeking or accepting any office or employment under the United States, to conceal the fact that he is a member of such organization; or

(2) to hold any nonelective office or employment under the United States

(b) When there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring an organization to register as a Communist political organization, it shall be unlawful for any officer or employee of the United States to appoint or employ any individual as an officer or em-ployee of the United States, knowing that such individual is a member of such an organization.

DENIAL OF PASSPORTS TO MEMBERS OF COM-MUNIST POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) When there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring an organization to register as a Communist political organ-ization, it shall be unlawful for any member of such organization, with knowledge that such order has become final-

(1) to make application for a passport, or the renewal of a passport, to be issued or renewed by or under the authority of the United States; or

(2) to use or attempt to use any such pass-

(b) When there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring an organization to register as a Communist political organi-zation, it shall be unlawful for any officer or employee of the United States to issue a passport to, or renew the passport of, any individual knowing that such individual is a member of such organization.

REGISTRATION AND ANNUAL REPORTS OF COMMUNIST ORGANIZATIONS

7. (a) Each Communist political organization (including any organization required, by a final order of the Board, to register as a Communist political organization) shall, within the time specified in subsection (c) of this section, register with the Attorney General, on a form prescribed by him by regulations, as a Communist political organization.

(b) Each Communist-front organization (including any organization required, by a final order of the Board, to register as a Communist-front organization) shall, within the time specified in subsection (c) of this section, register with the Attorney General, on a form prescribed by him by regulations, as a Communist-front organization.

(c) The registration required by subsection (a) or (b) shall be made-

(1) in the case of an organization which is a Communist political organization or a Communist-front organization on the date of the enactment of this act, within 30 days after such date;

(2) in the case of an organization becoming a Communist political organization or a Communist-front organization after the date of the enactment of this act, within 30 days after such organization becomes a Communist political organization or a Communist-front organization, as the case may be; and

(3) in the case of an organization which by a final order of the Board is required to register, within 30 days after such order becomes final.

(d) The registration made under subsection (a) or (b) shall be accompanied by a registration statement, to be prepared and filed in such manner and form as the Attorney General shall by regulations prescribe, containing the following information:
(1) The name of the organization.

(2) The name and last-known address of each individual who is at the time of the filing of such registration statement, and of each individual who was at any time during the period of 12 full calendar months preceding the filing of such statement, an officer of the organization, with the designation or title of the office so held, and with a brief statement of the duties and functions of such individual as such officer.

(3) An accounting, in such form and detall as the Attorney General shall by regu-lations prescribe, of all moneys received and expended (including the sources from which received and the purposes for which expended) by the organization during the period of 12 full calendar months preceding the filing of such statement.

(4) In the case of a Communist political organization, the name and last-known address of each individual who was a member of the organization at any time during the period of 12 full calendar months preceding the filing of such statement.

- (e) It shall be the duty of each organization registered under this section to file with the Attorney General on or before February 1 of the year following the year in which it registers, and on or before February 1 of each succeeding year, an annual report, prepared and filed in such manner and form as the Attorney General shall by regulations prescribe, containing the same information which by subsection (d) is required to be included in a registration statement, except that the information required with respect to the 12-month period referred to in paragraph (2), (3), or (4) of such subsection shall, in such annual report, be given with respect to the calendar year preceding the February 1 on or before which such annual report must be filed.
- (f) (1) It shall be the duty of each organization registered under this section to keep, in such manner and form as the Attorney General shall by regulations prescribe, accurate records and accounts of moneys re-ceived and expended (including the sources from which received and purpose for which expended) by such organization.

(2) It shall be the duty of each Communist political organization registered under this section to keep, in such manner and form as the Attorney General shall by regulations prescribe, accurate records of the names and addresses of the members of such organization and of persons who actively participate in the activities of such organization.

(g) It shall be the duty of the Attorney General to send to each individual listed in any registration statement or annual report, filed under this section, as a member or as an officer of the organization in respect of which such registration statement or annual report was filed, a notification in writing that such individual is so listed; and such notification shall be sent at the earliest practicable time after the filing of such registration statement or annual report.

(h) In the case of failure on the part of any organization to register or to file any registration statement or annual report as required by this section, it shall be the duty of the executive officer (or individual per-forming the ordinary and usual duties of an executive officer) and of the secretary (or individual performing the ordinary and usual duties of a secretary) of such organization, and of such officer or officers of such organization as the Attorney General shall by regulations prescribe, to register for such organization, to file such registration statement, or to file such annual report, as the case may be.

(i) If there is in effect with respect to an organization a final order of the Board requiring it to register under this section—

(1) such organization shall, upon conviction of failure to register, to file any registra-tion statement or annual report, or to keep records, as required by this section, be punished for each such offense, by a fine of not less than $2,000 and not more than $5,000; and

(2) each individual having a duty under subsection (h) of this section to register or to file any registration statement or annual report on behalf of such organization, shall, upon conviction of failure to so register or to file any such registration statement or annual report, be punished for each such offense by a fine of not less than $2,000 and not more than $5,000, or imprisonment for not less than 2 years and not more than 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

For the purposes of this subsection, each day of failure to register, whether on part of the organization or any individual, shall constitute a separate offense.

(j) Any individual who, in a registration statement or annual report filed under this section, willfully makes any false statement or willfully omits to state any fact which is required to be stated, or which is necessary to make the statements made or information given not misleading, shall upon conviction thereof, be punished for each such offense by a fine or not less than $2,000 and not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment for not less than 2 years and not more than 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

KEEPING OF REGISTER: PUBLIC INSPECTION: REPORTS TO PRESIDENT AND CONGRES

SEC. 8. (a) The Attorney General shall keep and maintain in the Department of Justice are gister of all organizations which are registered under section 7, and such register shall be known as the "Register of Communist Organizations." Communist political organizations and Communist-front organizations shall be listed separately in such register.

(b) Such register, together with the registration statements and annual reports filed under section 7, shall be kept and maintained in such manner as to be open for public inspection.

(c) The Attorney General shall submit to the President and to the Congress annually (and at any time when requested by either House by resolution) a report with respect to the carrying out of the provisions of this act, including the names of the organizations listed in such register and of the data (including the names and addresses of the individuals listed as members of such organizations) contained in registration statements and annual reports filed under section 7.

MEMBERSHIP IN CERTAIN COMMUNIST POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 9. It shall be unlawful for any individual to become or remain a member of any organization if he knows that (1) there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring such organization to register under section 7 of this act as a communist political organization, (2) more than 30 days have elapsed since such order became final, and (3) such organization is not registered under section 7 of this act as a communist political organi-

DENIAL OF TAX DEDUCTIONS AND EXEMPTION

Sec. 11. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no deduction for Federal income tax purposes shall be allowed in the case of a contribution to or for the use of any organization if at the time of the making of such contribution (1) such organiza-tion is registered under section 7, or (2) there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring such organization to register under sec-

(b) No organization shall be entitled to exemption from Federal income tax, under section 101 of the Internal Revenue Code, for any taxable year if at any time during such taxable year (1) such organization is registered under section 7, or (2) there is in effect a final order of the Board requiring such organization to register under section 7.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES BOARD

SEC. 12. (a) There is hereby established a Board, to be known as the Subversive Activities Board, which shall be composed of three members, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. One of the original members shall be appointed for a term of 1 year, one for a term of 2 years, and one for a term of 3 years, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of 3 years each, except that any individual chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. The President shall designate one member to serve as Chairman of the Board. Any member of the Board may be removed by the President, upon notice and hearing, for neglect of duty or malfeasance in office, but for no other cause.

(b) A vacancy in the Board shall not impair the right of the remaining members to exercise all the powers of the Board, and two members of the Board shall, at all times, con-stitute a quorum. The Board shall have an official seal which shall be judicially noticed.

(c) The Board shall at the close of each fiscal year make a report in writing to the Congress and to the President stating in detail the cases it has heard, the decisions it has rendered, the names, salaries, and duties of all employees of the Board, and an account of all moneys it has disbursed.

(d) Each member of the Board shall receive a salary of $ a year, shall be eligible for reappointment, and shall not engage in any other business, vocation, or employment.

(e) Upon application made by the Attorney General under subsection (a) of section 13 of this act or by any organization under subsection (b) of section 13 of this act, the Board shall determine whether any organization is a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 13 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 13 of this act, the Board shall determine whether any organization is a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 13 of this act, the Board shall determine whether any organization is a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" within the meaning of paragraph (3) of section 3 of this act, or a "communist political organization" which is a "comm munist-front organization" within the meaning of paragraph (4) of section 3 of this act, as the case may be.

(f) Subject to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, the Board may appoint and fix the compensation of a clerk and such examiners and other personnel as may be necessary for the performance of its functions.

(g) All of the expenses of the Board, in-cluding all necessary traveling and subsist-ence expenses outside the District of Columbia incurred by the members or employ-ees of the Board under its orders, shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the Board or by any individual designated by it for that purpose.

(h) The principal office of the Board shall be in the District of Columbia, but it may meet and exercise any or all of its powers at any other place.

(i) The Board shall have authority from time to time to make, amend, and rescind such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the performance of its functions.

(j) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Board such sums as be necessary for the performance of its functions

PROCEEDINGS BEFORE BOARD

SEC. 13. (a) Whenever the Attorney General shall have reason to believe that any organization which has not registered under subsection (a) or subsection (b) of section 7 of this act is in fact an organization of a kind required to be registered under such subsection, he shall file with the Board and serve upon such organization a petition for an order requiring such organization to register pursuant to such subsection.

(b) Any organization registered under subsection (a) or subsection (b) of section 7 of this act may, not oftener than once in each calendar year, make application to the Attorney General for the cancellation of its registration and for relief from obligation to make further annual reports. Within 60 days after the denial of any such applica-tion by the Attorney General, the organization concerned may file with the Board and serve upon the Attorney General a petition for an order requiring the cancella-tion of such registration and relieving such organization of obligation to make further annual reports.

(c) Upon the filing of any petition pursuant to subsection (a) or subsection (b) of this section, the Board (or any member thereof or any examiner designated thereby) may hold hearings, administer oaths and affirmations, may examine witnesses and receive evidence at any place in the United States, and may require by subpena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, and other records deemed relevant to the matter under inquiry. Subpenss may be signed and issued by any member of the Board or any duly authorized examiner. Subpenas shall be issued on behalf of the organization which is a party to the proceeding upon request and upon a statement or showing of general relevance and reasonable scope of the evidence sought. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such documentary evidence may be required from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing. Witnesses summoned shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the district courts of the United States. In case of disobedience to a subpena the Board may invoke the aid of any court of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence. Any of the district courts of the United States within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on may, in case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena issued to any person, issue an order requiring such person to appear (and to produce documentary evidence if so ordered) and give evidence relating to the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. All process in any such case may be served in the judicial district whereof such person is an inhabitant or wherever he may be found.

(d) All hearings conducted under this section shall be public. Each party to such proceeding shall have the right to present its case by oral or documentary evidence, to submit rebuttal evidence, and to conduct such cross-examination as may be required for a full and true disclosure of the facts. The testimony in any hearing conducted under this section shall be reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Board.

- (e) In determining whether any organization is a "communist political organization", there shall be taken into consideration—
- (1) the extent to which its policies are formulated and carried out and its activities performed, pursuant to directives or to effectuate the policies, of the foreign government or foreign governmental or political organization in which is vested, or under the domination or control of which is exercised, the direction and control of the world communist movement referred to in section 2 of this act:

(2) the extent to which its views and policies do not deviate from those of such foreign government or foreign organization;

(3) the extent to which it receives financial or other aid, directly or indirectly, from or at the direction of such foreign government or foreign organization;

(4) the extent to which it sends members or representatives to any foreign country for instruction or training in the principles, policies, strategy, or tactics of such world communist movement;

(5) the extent to which it reports to such foreign government or foreign organization or to its representatives;

(6) the extent to which its principal leaders or a substantial number of its members are subject to or recognize the disciplinary power of such foreign government or foreign organization or its representatives;

- (7) the extent to which in order to conceal its foreign connections (i) it falls to disclose, or resists efforts to obtain information as to, its membership (by keeping membership lists in code, by instructing members to refuse to acknowledge membership, or by any other method); (ii) its members refuse to acknowledge membership therein; (iii) it fails to disclose, or resists efforts to obtain information as to, records other than membership lists, (iv) its meetings are secret; and (v) it otherwise operates on a secret basis; and
- (8) the extent to which its principal leaders or a substantial number of its members consider the allegiance they owe to the United States as subordinate to their obligations to such foreign government or foreign organization.
- (f) In determining whether any organization is a "communist-front organization", there shall be taken into consideration—
- (1) the relationship of persons who are active in its management, direction, or supervision, whether or not holding office therein, to any communist political organization, communist foreign government, or the world communist movement referred to in section 2:
- (2) the extent to which its support, financial or otherwise, is derived from any communist political organization, communist foreign government, or the world communist movement referred to in section 2;
- (3) the extent to which its funds, resources, or personnel are used to further or promote the political objectives of any communist political organization, communist foreign government, or the world communist movement referred to in section 2; and
- (4) the extent to which the positions taken or advanced by it from time to time on matters of policy do not deviate from those of any communist political organization, communist foreign government, or the world communist movement referred to in section 2.
- (g) If, after hearing upon a petition filed under subsection (a) of this section, the Board determines that the organization is a communist political organization or a communist-front organization, as the case may be, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and cause to be served on such organization an order requiring such organization to register as such under section 7 of this act.

- (h) If, after hearing upon a petition filed under subsection (a) of this section, the Board determines that the organization is not a communist political organization or a communist-front organization, as the case may be, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and cause to be served upon the Attorney General an order denying his petition for an order requiring such organization to register as such under section 7 of this act. A copy of such order shall be sent to such organization.
- (i) If, after hearing upon a petition filed under subsection (b) of this section, the Board determines that the organization is not a communist political organization or a communist-front organization, as the case may be, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and cause to be served upon the Attorney General an order requiring him to cancel the registration of such organization and relieve it from the requirement of further annual reports. A copy of such order shall be sent to such organization
- (j) If, after hearing upon a petition filed under subsection (b) of this section, the Board determines that the organization is communist political organization of a communist-front organization, as the case may be, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and cause to be served on such organization an order refusing to cancel the registration of such organization and to relieve it from the requirement of further annual reports.

JUDICIAL REVIEW

SEC. 14. (a) The party aggrieved by any order entered by the Board under subsection (g), (h), (i), or (j) of section 13 may obtain review of such order in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Colum-bia by filing in the court, within 60 days from the date of service upon it of such order, a written petition praying that the order of the Board be set aside. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon Board, and thereupon the Board shall certify and file in the court a transcript of the entire record in the proceeding, including all evidence taken and the report and order of the Board. Thereupon the court shall have jurisdiction to review the proceedings of the Board. In such review, the court shall review the evidence contained in the record so certified, make its findings of fact and conclusions of law thereon, and enter an order affirming or setting aside the order of the Board. If the court sets aside an order issued under subsection (j) of section 13 it may enter a judgment canceling the registration of the organization and relieving it from the requirement of further annual reports. The judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court upon certiorari, as provided in section 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1940 ed., title 28, sec. 347).

(b) Any order of the Board issued under section 13 shall become final—
 (1) upon the expiration of the time al-

(1) upon the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for review, if no such petition has been duly filed within such time; or

(2) upon the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for certiorari, if the order of the Board has been affirmed or the petition for review dismissed by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and no petition for certiorari has been duly filed; or

(3) upon the denial of a petition for certiorari, if the order of the Board has been affirmed or the petition for review dismissed by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; or

(4) upon the expiration of 10 days from the date of issuance of the mandate of the Supreme Court, if such Court directs that the order of the Board be affirmed or that the petition for review be dismissed.

PENALTIES

SEC. 15. Any organization which violates any provision of section 10 of this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for each such violation by a fine of not less than $2,000 and not more than $5,000. Any individual who violates any provision of sections 5, 6, 9, or 10 of this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for each such violation by a fine of not less than $2,000 and not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment for not less than 2 years and not more than 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

APPLICABILITY OF ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT

SEC. 16. Nothing in this act shall be held to make the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act inapplicable to the exercise of functions, or the conduct of proceedings, under this act, except to the extent that this act affords additional procedural safeguards for organizations and individuals.

SEPARABILITY OF PROVISIONS

SEC. 17. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remaining provisions of this act, or the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

MAINTENANCE OF DOMESTIC TIN-SMELT-ING INDUSTRY

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRICKER in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2830) to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry, which were, in line 8, to strike out "June 30, 1954" and insert "June 30, 1950", and to amend the title so as to read: "An act to extend for 1 year the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry."

Mr. GURNEY. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House, ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Morse, and Mr. Hill conferees on the part of the Senate.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 6712) to provide for revenue revision, to correct tax inequities, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

NATIONAL MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT APPROPRIATIONS - CONFERENCE RE-

Mr. GURNEY. I submit a conference report on House bill 6771, making appropriations for military functions administered by the National Military Establishment, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be read.

The conference report was read. (For conference report, see House proceedings of today's RECORD, p. 9218.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to. The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to the House bill 6771, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,

June 19, 1948.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19 to the bill (H. R. 6771) making appropriations for military functions administered by the National Military Estab-lishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, and concur therein.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"Military construction, Army: For construction, installations, and equipment of temporary or permanent public works, military installations and facilities, as authorized by the Act of June 12, 1948 (Public Law 626), without regard to sections 1136 and 3734, Revised Statutes, as amended, includ-ing hire of passenger motor vehicles; payment of claims under the Act of July 3, 1943 (31 U. S. C. 223b), and pursuant to section 403 of the Federal Tort Claims Act of August 2, 1946 (28 U. S. C. 921); $76,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, including not to exceed $205,000 for the purchase, development, or construction in connection with, land adja-cent to the Percy Jones Hospital, Michigan; and in addition, the Secretary of the Army is authorized to enter into contracts for the purposes of this appropriation in an amount not to exceed $75,000,000: Provided, That the funds made available in this paragraph by appropriation and contract authorization shall not be subject to section 10 of this Act." That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$70,000,-

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 28 and 30.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a compilation of the amounts involved in the bill and the results of the conference.

There being no objection, the compilation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I was called out of the Chamber a moment ago when H. R. 6248 was disposed of. I should like to make some remarks, which will take about 3 minutes, which I should like to have inserted immediately following debate on the Military Establishment bill.

Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the conferees of the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress for so courageously, so forthrightly disregarding the wishes of the common lay Members of the Senate and the House.

Mr. President, the Members of this body well know how the House and the Senate has on several occasions, in no uncertain manner, expressed its views about the extraordinary restrictions and controls, which for 62 years, have been adopted to protect the American people from that dangerous, that alien, that un-American, Fascist, communistic, subversive substance, legally denominated—oleomargarine, and sometimes illegally and unconstitutionally called just plain margarine.

Mr. President, in spite of the unprecedented pressure, the insistent presumption of the great majority of the common Members of both the Senate and the House, the conferees have gallantly resisted that presure and have reinstated the provisions of this bill which protects the flower of our manhood from the subtle and invidious influence of oleomargarine, sometimes known as just margarine.

Incidentally, at the same time, Mr. President, I also wish to call this to the attention of the distinguished senior Senator from Virginia, the conferees have successfully required the Army to get rid of 10,000,000 more of the surplus dollars which so grievously burden our National Treasury.

Mr. President, it would be impossible I think, in any walk of life throughout our great land, to find a group of men more completely devoted to the higher law, to their own divinely inspired conscience, than are these conferees.

Their devotion to their own conscience is so strong that they are able, apparently, to resist the combined influence of practically all the housewives of America, in addition to that of the ordinary, garden variety, Member of Congress.

Mr. President, there is talk in the cloakrooms of another session of this Congress later this summer. I submit, Mr. President, in all sincerity that there is no need whatever for the ordinary, lay Member of Congress to come back to Washington for a special session.

It is clearly evident, Mr. President, that to save the world and the people of this country from disaster, all that is needed is to reconvene, preferably in secret, only those incomparable sages, the conferees of the Appropriation Committee.

From their deliberations the same results would be achieved and without the expense and trouble to everyone that is involved in going through the archaic ritual of pretended legislation. It is quite clear that regardless of what the common Members of this body may wish, the conferees make the decisions.

PAYMENT TO MEMBERS OF RED LAKE BAND OF CHIPPEWA FROM SALE OF TIMBER AND LUMBER

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside, and that the Chair lay before the Senate House bill 5355.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representatives, which will be read by title for the information of the Senate.

The bill (H. R. 5355) authorizing a per capita payment of $50 each to the members of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians from the proceeds of the sale of timber and lumber on the Red Lake Reservation; was read twice by its title.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, the bill merely provides for payment to the Chippewa Tribe of Minnesota $50 per capita out of a balance of $1,000,000 in their timber fund.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, this matter has come to my attention, and I am in agreement with the purposes of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARYLAND SENATORIAL ELECTION CONTEST

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I do not wish this session of Congress to close without expressing my thanks and appreciation to the subcommittee of the Rules Committee, headed by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. JENNER], for the very fair, judicial, and thorough way the election contest between General Markey and my colleague, Senator O'Conor, was considered and decided. I appreciate the fact that inasmuch as Maryland is close to the District of Columbia, no doubt the committee was subjected to constant pulling and hauling by the advocates of both the contestants. fact that the committee decided in favor of the Democrat, when the committee was composed overwhelmingly of a Republican membership, is not only a high compliment to the committee itself, but reflects credit on the entire Senate as being above politics and meanness in a matter of so much magnitude.

On behalf of the people of Maryland, both Democrats and Republicans, and on behalf of my colleague, as well as myself, I thought this word of appreciation of the fairness and impartiality of the subcommittee headed by the Senator from Indiana should stand in the Record as a guide for all of us, should we again be confronted with a contest for a seat in this body.

EXTENSION OF TERMS OF MEMBERS OF ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2589) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, what is the business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business is Senate bill, S. 2589, a bill to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I should like to straighten out a parliamentary situation. House bill 6402 is a companion bill, and identical to Senate bill 2589. House bill 6402 was passed by the House of Representatives yesterday, and was sent to the Senate and now lies on the desk. I ask unanimous consent at this time, rather than waiting until some time later in the discussion, that House bill 6402 be now read, and that it be substituted for Senate bill 2589 as the business of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read by title for the information of the Senate.

The bill (H. R. 6402) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, I want the Record to be clear that House bill 6402 is substituted as the business of the Senate with the same force and effect as would apply to Senate bill 2589. It is an identical bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

STUDY OF CIVILIAN PERSONNEL BY JOINT COMMITTEE ON REDUCTION OF NONESSENTIAL FEDERAL EXPENDI-TURES

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the Record a report, together with tables, from the Joint Committee on the Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, on the subject of civilian personnel.

Among other activities of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures has been a continuing study of civilian personnel in the executive branch of the Federal Government which now has been constantly pursued since 1942.

There are other reasons for such a study, but the committee has found by experience that inefficient use of public personnel almost invariably is a clue to other—and frequently more costly—waste. Excessive employment is the smoke from nonessential fires.

In the course of its 7 years of operation the committee has made numerous recommendations. Those which have been adopted have resulted in savings averaging approximately a billion dollars a year. The average cost of the committee has been $15,000 a year. This year the committee was without funds although its authority was continuing.

Working without funds, the committee's activities naturally have been curtailed, but it has managed to continue its personnel studies.

There being no objection, the report and tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

There could be no better occasion than this to sum up the civilian employment of the executive branch of the Federal Government. Briefly it is this:

1. As of this date civilian personnel in the executive branch numbers somewhere in excess of 2.050,000. This was the total in April and since then it has been increasing by the hundreds on a daily average.

2. This number is more than twice the World War I peak.

8. It is more than three and one-half times the level at the end of the last previous Republican Congress and administration.

4. It is more than twice the prewar emergency peak of 1939.

5. In the civilian establishments, departments, and agencies, exclusive of the Military Establishment, civilian employment totals nearly 80,000 more than the World War II peak, and it is 165 percent of the prewar emergency peak of 1939.

6. The Military Establishment in April was employing nearly three times as many civil-ians per man in uniform as it employed at the World War II peak.

These figures are developed from studies by the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, and in order that the record may be complete and documented I shall submit seven tables compiled from the records of the committee, Every figure in these tables for the period since 1942 is based upon signed statements from the agencies involved (with exceptions which are noted). Prior to 1942 the figures are based upon such information as is available from the Bureau of the Budget and the Civil Service Commission.

I shall not burden the Senate with reading the tables, but I shall summarize them in text and request that the tables be made a part of my remarks.

COMPARISON WITH WORLD WAR II PEAK

These tables will show an interesting comparison between Federal personnel by agencies as between now and World War II peak. In discussing this comparison it will be simpler to consider first employment in the civilian agencies and departments as distinguished from civilian employment by the agencies of the Military Establishment. Each is a whole subject in itself.

CIVILIAN DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES

Federal civilian personnel in all agencies, including those of the Military Establishment, is still more than half of the World War II peak. (See table 1.)

In civilian departments and agencies, exclusive of the Military Establishment, civilian employment actually has increased a net of 77,592 since World War II peak. (See table 1.)

This is an increase of 6 percent in the civilian agencies, after taking into account all reductions, including those in the temporary war agencies which could no longer be justified. In April there were 38 agencies with personnel greater than the war peak and 36 with less. (See tables 2 and 3.)

Among the 8 regular departments of Cabinet level, excluding those in the National Military Establishment, 4 in April were employing a combined total of 124,128 more personnel than they were at the war peak. The other 4 recorded a combined decrease of 26,373. The net increase for these departments was 14 percent over the war peak. (Increases in the Post Office Department should be noted.) (See tables 2 and 3.)

Employment in the Executive Offices of the President, including the Mansion and Grounds, in April was 66 percent greater than at the war peak. (See table 2.)

The 36 agencies, exclusive of the Military Establishment, with net reductions since the war peak, included 19 of the so-called war emergency agencies. All of these except Selective Service and Office of Defense Transportation have expired. The net reduction by these 36 agencies totaled 222,922 as of April.

More than 75 percent of the total net reduction was accounted for in the demise of war emergency agencies. Net reductions in all other civilian agencies totaled only 57,055. (See table 2.) Reduction in these agencies more than offset increases in the Veterans' Administration. (See table 3.)

As a partial offset to the 165,867 reduction resulting from expiration and curtailment of 19 war emergency agencies, there was 34,763 in new employment as of April for 10 so-called new postwar agencies. (See table 3.)

If employment in the new postwar agencies is added to that of other independent agencies, exclusive of the Veterans' Administration, there is a postwar increase of 7 percent in the independent establishments. (See table 3.)

Including the Veterans' Administration, there was an increase in the employment by regular independent agencies of 43 per-Twenty-one of these agencies show net increases over their war-peak personnel. There were decreases in 13. (See tables 2 and 3.)

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT

Between July 1945-the war-peak monthand April 1948 net reduction in civilian personnel employed by agencies of the National Military Establishment was 77,592 greater than the net reduction in the executive branch of the Government as a whole, including the civilian employment by the military agencies.

Civilian employment in the National Military Establishment was reduced from 2,630,-361 in July 1945 to 853,611 in April 1948-a net reduction of 1,776,750.

Civilian employment in the executive branch as a whole, including the Military Establishment, was reduced from 3,749,578 in July 1945 to 2,050,420 in April 1948—a net reduction of 1,699,158.

This of course means that there was a net increase during the period in civilian agency employment of 77,592. (See table 4.)

Of the total net civilian reduction in the Military Establishment, 1,776,750, nearly half, or 865,787, were industrial workers. And more than half of these, 527,059, were employed outside of continental United States. Among these a great many were foreign laborers, native to areas in United States military installations and activities are located overseas. (See table 6.)

The War and Navy Departments were forced down to a total of 276,000, classified employees (exclusive of industrial workers) during fiscal year 1947, under the graduated personnel ceiling provisions, but civilian em-ployment in all categories began a steady climb in January of this year. This was despite unification, and prior to any suggestion of the new military expansion program. (See table 4.)

The National Military Establishment in April was employing nearly 3 times as many civilians per man in uniform as it employed at the war peak. And this was true before the new military expansion program was proposed. In April there was a civilian employee for every 1.7 men in uniform. peak of the war effort there was a civilian employee for every 4.7 men in uniform. Since the postwar low point in December 1947, civilian employment in the National Military Establishment has increased 24,378, while the military personnel declined 48,333. (See table 4.)

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYEES

One category of Federal employment frequently overlooked, but still on the pay roll, are the so-called industrial employees. group includes those employed in Navy yards, arsenals, and so forth, and it includes also a great many foreign native laborers employed outside of continental United States.

A quick summary of the industrial employee situation would include the following

Eight hundred and sixty-two thousand eight hundred and fifty-two of all Federal civilian personnel separated since the war peak-or more than half-were so-called industrial employees. (See table 5.)

Five hundred and twenty-seven thousand and fifty-nine—or nearly one-third of the total reduction in all categories since the war peak—were industrial employees of the Military Establishment employed outside con-tinental United States. Many of these were foreign natives. (See table 5.)

Three hundred and thirty-eight thousand seven hundred and twenty-eight of the civilian reduction in the Military Establishment were industrial employees working inside the United States, in arsenals, Navy yards, and so forth, where continuation of strictly war projects could not be justified after the war ended. (See table 5.)

Although the National Military Establishment reduced civilian industrial employment heavily, civilian agencies actually have in-creased industrial employment by 2,935 since the war peak.

TREND

Federal civilian employment reached a war peak of 3,749,578, including civilian employment by the agencies of the Military Establishment which totaled 2,630,361 in July 1945. The civilian agency employment at that date totaled 1,119,217.

Employment in Federal agencies outside the Military Establishment rose sharply in the year that followed, and by July 1946 civil-ian agency employment had risen nearly a a million, or about 19 percent. quarter of

Fiscal year 1947 (July 1946-July 1947) was the best civilian employment year from the standpoints of both the net number of separations and percentage of decrease ex-clusive of the Military Establishment. This was the year in which graduated ceiling reductions were in force as a means of com-pensating for the 1946 pay raises. The net reduction in civilian agency employment was approximately 8 percent, or 104,618, exclusive of the Military Establishment.
In fiscal year 1948—the first year under appropriations voted by a Republican Con-

Thirty civilian agencies (most of them old line) requested and received more personal service funds for fiscal year 1948 than they received in 1947. (See table 6.)

One agency requested more personal service funds for 1948 than it had in 1947 and received the same amount. (See table 6.)

Six agencies requested more personal serv ice funds for 1948 than they had in 1947 and received less. (See table 6.)

Three agencies requested less personal service funds for 1948 than they had in 1947 and were actually given more. (See table 6.)

One agency requested less personal service funds for 1948 than it had in 1947 and was given the same. (See table 6.)

Fourteen agencies requested less personal service funds for 1948 than they had in 1947 and received less. (See table 6.)
Funds available for personal service in fiscal year 1947 totaled $6,407,239,891. Funds available for personal service in fis-cal year 1948 totaled $5,655,238,259.

Over-all reduction in personal service funds between 1947 and 1948 totals $752,001,632.

(See table 7.) Personal-service funds for 1948 for the Military Establishment and other agencies still clearly overmanned on the basis of war requirements and immediate postwar conditions were reduced by a total of $718,331,120.

These agencies include Office of Defense Transportation, Office of Scientific Research and Development, War Assets Administration.

Maritime Commission, Selective Service System, Reconstruction Finance Corporation subsidiary activities, and the Veterans' Administration, which had reached the end of the first phase of its postwar program. (See table 7.)

It was natural for these agencies to be reduced by their own postwar weight. these items omitted, the reduction in personal-service funds which resulted from real efforts for economy in government routine for fiscal year 1948 totals $33,670,512. This reduction amounts to 0.005 percent.

Under appropriations by the current Republican Congres

Thirty-one civilian agencies requested and were granted authorization for greater average employment in fiscal year 1948 than they had in 1947. This was more than half of the agencies of the Government. table 6.)

One agency requested authorization for greater average employment in 1948 than it had in 1947 and got the same. (See table 6.)

Eight agencies requested authorization for greater average employment in 1948 than they had in 1947 and were granted less. (See

One agency requested authorization for less employment in 1948 than it had in 1947, and actually was granted more. (See table 6.)

Fourteen agencies requested authorization for less average employment in 1948 than they had in 1947, and were granted less. (See table 6.)

During the first 10 months of the current fiscal year the net reduction in personnel employed in the executive branch of the Government, exclusive of those in the Military Establishment, was 56,406, or less than 5 percent. (See table 1.)

In the executive branch as a whole, civilian personnel reached its low point in December when that total was 1,995,388. In January it rose at the rate of a little more than 200 a day. In February the increase was at the rate of about 400 a day. In March the rate of increase was 500 a day. In April it was increasing at the rate of 650 a day. The increases were in all categories, civilian agencies and military agencies, and in classified and industrial workers. In April the total stood at 2.050,420.

The President requested funds for 1948 employment averaging 2,151,537. Congress voted funds for an average employment of 2,012,163. The average for the year through April is 2,022,695. (See table 7.)

Original budget requests by the President for fiscal year 1949 would provide for employment averaging 2,086,000. While accurate calculation is impossible pending final enactment of all the pending appropriation bills, I venture the prediction that this figure will be increased 10 to 20 percent on the basis of personal-service funds authorized in the various money bills approved in the current session.

OBSERVATIONS

It is obvious to those who have studied the subject that over a long period of years the executive branch of the Government has indicated no inclination to reduce its own personnel, except in strictly emergency positions, or to furnish adequate information so that Congress might accomplish proper reductions without impairment of essential functions.

It is likewise obvious that Congress is reluctant to reduce appropriations for personal service as a means of requiring more efficiency in the administration of essential functions, and deflating the emphasis which is too frequently placed upon luxury func-

The table above shows:

1. Civilian employment in the executive branch, exclusive of the National Military Establishment, during April 1948 was 77,592 higher than the war peak—an increase of more than 6 percent net including deducmore than 6 percent net including deductions for temporary agencies which have expired such as OPA, WPB, War Manpower Board, OWI, Censorship, etc. There are 88 agencies with personnel greater than the war peak, and 36 agencies with less.

2. Among the 8 regular departments of Cabinet level, excluding those in the Military

Establishment, 4 are employing a combined total of 124,128 persons more than they were the war peak. The other 4 recorded a combined net decrease of 26,373. The net increase for these departments was 14 percent over the war peak.

3. Employment in the Executive Offices of the President, including the mansion and grounds, in April was 66 percent greater than at the war peak.

4. The 36 agencies, exclusive of the Military Establishment, with net reductions since the war peak included 19 of the so-called war emergency agencies. All of these, except the Selective Service System, the Office of Defense Transportation have expired. The net reduction by the 36 agencies totaled 222,922. More than 75 percent of the total net reduction was accounted for by the demise of war emergency agencies. Net reduction in all other civilian agencies totaled only 57,055.

5. As a partial offset to the 165,867 reduction resulting from the expiration and curtallment of 19 war emergency agencies, there was 34,763 in new employment for 10 so-called postwar agencies.

6. The net increase in 34 regular independent agencies over the war peak totaled 110,480, or 43 percent. Of course, the Veterans' Administration expansion accounted for a large part of the increase but, even so, increases were reported by 21 agencies whereas agencies with net decreases numbered 13.

7. The civilian employment total for agencies outside the Military Establishment rose sharply above the war peak during the first postwar year. By July 1946 the net increase totaled nearly a quarter of a million, or about 19 percent.

8. Fiscal year 1947 (July 1946-July 1947) was the best civilian employment reduction year from the standpoints of both the net number of separations and percentage, exclusive of the Military Establishment. This was the year in which the graduated personnel ceiling reductions were in force as a means of compensating for the 1946 pay raises. The net reduction in civilian agency employment was approximately 8 percent, or 104.618.

It may be noted from the table above that-

1. Employment in the eight executive departments, exclusive of the military departments, increased 14 percent. (Post Office Department increases should be noted.)

2. If employment in the new postwar agencies is added to that of other independent agencies, exclusive of Veterans' Administration, there is a 7-percent increase.

3. Reduction in emergency war agencies employment-which by no stretch of the imagination could be further justified-more than offsets the increase in the Veterans' Administration.

The table above shows that-the National Military Establishment was 77,592 greater than the net reduction in the executive branch of the Government as a whole.

From the table above it may be seen that civilian employment in the Mililtary Establishment was reduced from 2,630,361 in July

<sup>2</sup> The Air Forces were divorced from the War Department as of September 1947 pursuant to the Unification Act, Public Law 253, Eightieth Congress. Air Force civilian personnel outside United States is still included in the Army civilian personnel reports. The Air Force figures set forth above are included in those for the Department of the Army for purposes of comparison between June 1945 and February 1948. Therefore, it should be noted that the civilian and military personnel figures for the Air Forces are compiled for current information.

Note.—Of the total decrease in the civilian employment of the Department of the Army and Department of the Air Force combined, 659,754 were industrial employees and

Note.—Of the total decrease in the civilian employment of the Department of the Navy, 206,033 were industrial employees and 211,157 were classified employees.

Note.—Of the total decrease in the civilian employment of the National Military Establishment, 865, 787 were industrial employees and 910,963 were classified employees.

<sup>1.</sup> Between July 1945—the war peak month—and April 1948 net reduction in civilian personnel employed by agencies of 1945 to 853,611 in April 1943—a net total reduction of 1,776.750.

From table 2 it may be seen that civilian employment in the executive branch as a whole, including the Military Establishment, was reduced from 3,749,578 in July 1945 to 2,050,420 in April 1948-a net total reduction of 1,699,158.

This, of course, means that there was a net increase during the period in civilian agency employment of 77.592.

2. Of the total net civilian reduction in the Military Establishment (1,776,750) near-ly half, or 865,787 were industrial workers. And, more than half of these-527,059-were industrial workers employed outside of continental United States, a great many of whom were native laborers; 910,963 of the total net reduction were among other categories of employees, including those of the classified civil service.

The War and Navy Departments were forced down to a total of 276,000 classified employees during the fiscal year 1947 under the graduated personnel ceiling provisions, but civilian employment in all categories of personnel began a steady climb in January this year. This was despite unification, and prior to any suggestion of the new military expansion program.

3. The National Military Establishment in April was employing nearly three times as many civilians per man in uniform as it employed at the war peak, and this was true before the pending military expansion program was proposed. In April there was a civilian employee for every 1.7 men in uniform. At the peak of the war effort there was a civilian employee for every 4.7 men in uniform. Since the postwar low point in December 1947 civilian employment in the National Military Establishment has increased 24,738, while the military personnel declined 48.333.

No records are available on civilian industrial employment prior to November 1945, but from trends in total employment it may be readily assumed that industrial employment in the war peak month of July 1945 was equal to, if not greater than, the number recorded above for November

The over-all World War II employment peak in July 1945 totaled 3,749,578. The net reduction from this peak through April 1948 totals 1,699,158.

Using the November 1945 industrial employment figure as the peak in this category, the table above shows:

 Eight hundred and sixty-two thousand eight hundred and fifty-two of the separated personnel—or more than half—were so-called industrial employees.

2. Five hundred and twenty-seven thou-sand and fifty-nine—or nearly one-third of the reduction—were industrial employees of the Military Establishment employed outside continental United States. Many of these were foreign natives.

3. Three hundred and thirty-eight thousand seven hundred and twenty-eight were employees outside the classified service working in military establishments within the United States, such as navy yards, arsenals, etc., where it was impossible to justify continuation after the cancellation of

4. Industrial employees hired by the civilian departments and agencies actually have increased by 2,935 since the war peak pay roll. The majority of these employees work inside continental United States.

TRYGVE LIE, SECRETARY GENERAL OF THE UNITED NATIONS

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement which I have prepared on a topic of world-wide concern; namely, the job of Secretary General of the United Nations, and in particular, Secretary General Trygve Lie.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

One of the most arduous and trying jobs in the world today is that of the Secretary General of the United Nations. I believe that the Secretary General, Mr. Trygve Lie, deserves the commendation of every Member of this body for the admirable manner in which he has been fulfilling his difficult role as top administrator of the top world organization. Mr. Lie carries on his work under far greater pressure than any official of any national government. He is the focal point of the multiple, combined, and conflicting pressures of more than 50 sovereign nations.

I consider it a tribute to his character and to his judgment that he has been able to perform his appointed tasks with a minimum of friction and a maximum of effectiveness. Mr. Lie has slowly but surely developed the prestige of the office of Secretary General to the point where it is not merely a post of administrative authority over the Secretariat, but a platform from which he can address the conscience of mankind.

I am particularly moved to offer this praise of Mr. Trygve Lie by the news of an action he has taken within the past few days with regard to the tragic Palestine war. United Nations mediator on that war, Count Bernadotte, had requested the Secretary General to circulate an appeal from the mediator in the Middle East to all member states of the United Nations urging them to aid United Nations observers at ports throughout the world in an effort to control, restrict, and halt the migration of people into the truce This request, like most of the truce area. terms themselves, was rankly discriminatory against the one people that wants to reach that truce area, in particular, that part of the area controlled by the state of Israel. In effect, Count Bernadotte's proposal would have set up a world control over the movements of the exiled Hebrew people who now, at long last, have their own country, under their own government, and who naturally are making every effort to reach home.

Upon receiving this request, Mr. Lie, however, showed himself to be above any participation in such a discriminatory maneuver against the people whose state has been attacked by seven satellite countries Great Britain. Mr. Lie suggested to Count Bernadotte that he address his request for world control of migration to the Security Council, on the grounds that the legality of such an action was questionable and could best be decided by the Council itself.

Mr. Lie thereby refused to associate his high office with the Bernadotte scheme for a world-wide dragnet-a scheme which the British have for several years been trying to put over in one guise or another, even in the American occupation zones of Europe. In Count Bernadotte's revised request—this time addressed to the Security Council—there was no mention of the original plan. The mediator had understood that Mr. Lie was too astute to be caught in this web.

Yes, Mr. President, the Secretary General of the United Nations is to be complimented. Not only did he refuse to allow the machinery of the UN Secretariat to be employed in a most dubious political maneuver, he also protected the sovereign rights of every member nation of the UN with respect to control of their own immigration policies. I, for one, would have opposed with my strength any scheme to restrict the movement of persons out of American harbors on the grounds that they might be heading for Israel.

It is worth remarking at this time that the very crux and core of this crisis in Palestine is precisely the issue of the right of the Hebrew people to return to the land of their fathers. This right, time and again affirmed in international covenants, to which our own country has subscribed with the approval of the United States Congress, is the basic right of the Hebrew nation to selfdetermination and settlement in its own country.

For what other purpose, may I ask, has the state of Israel been established and been recognized by our country and a dozen others, if not to prove a homeland and a haven for the stateless and oppressed Hebrews of the world, especially of post-

Nazi Europe?

Mr. Lie is to be felicitated, in my opinion, for his rejection of any plan to distort the purpose of the United Nations-which itself voted in General Assembly to establish a state in Israel—by transforming it into an international control agency to deprive the Hebrew people of their rights as human beings to go to the land they now hold as their

WYOMING POSTMASTERS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I observe that the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] is in the Chamber. I should like to address a question to him.

For some time there have been pending before the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service several postmaster nominations for the State of Wyoming.

One of these was the nomination of Kenneth L. Wingo, of Encampment, Wyo., a veteran of World War II, who enjoys the preference of veterans under the law. He was No. 1 on the eligible register—as a matter of fact, the only eligible on the register. His qualifications to serve are well established.

Also the nomination of Mr. George L. Gibson, of Powell, Wyo., likewise a veteran with veteran's preference, who successfully met the civil-service test and was No. 1 among three eligibles on the

The third nomination is that of Mr. Silvio J. Pedri, of Reliance, like the other two, a veteran of World War II, with 10 points disability preference. He was No. 1 upon the Civil Service Commission's list of two eligibles.

The fourth nomination was that of Mrs. Roxanna M. Smith, of Lingle, Wyo. She is currently acting as postmaster of that community, and has been since August 1946. Her popularity and effi-ciency are so well recognized by the people of her community that she had no competition. She was the only applicant for the postmastership, and therefore was No. 1 on the eligible register. All four of these nominees have complied with the requirements of the merit system.

These matters were called by me to the attention of the distinguished Senator from North Dakota and to the attention of other members of the committee early in the session. At the time that was done there were no protests of any kind against any of these nominations from any person in their respective communities and I have heard of none since. I understood that the committee had voted unanimously to report the nominations about 2 weeks ago. The Senator from North Dakota so advised me. Thereafter, however, something hap-pened. The nominations have not been reported despite the committee action.

Would the Senator from North Dakota indulge me by stating what the situation is with respect to these nominations?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, let me say to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming that the resolution adopted by the Post Office and Civil Service Committee provides that, first of all, both Senators of the State in which the post office is located must concur in the nomination. At the time the nominations were before the committee, the understanding of the office staff was that no one had objected, and that both Senators had agreed to these four nominations.

Later the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Robertson] objected to each of these four nominations; and I am satisfied that he will take full responsibility for having objected to their being reported.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Objection was filed after the committee had voted unanimously to report the nominations favorably, is that correct?

Mr. LANGER. The junior Senator from Wyoming stated that he objected to them before they were reported; but through some mistake the office staff felt that he had concurred when, as a matter of fact, he never had. I am sure that if the junior Senator from Wyoming were here he would take full responsi-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator for his explanation.

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement which I have prepared relative to Senate Joint Resolution 76 guaranteeing equal rights for women, together with a letter which I have written stating my position on this issue.

There being no objection, the statement and letter were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. President, it now appears that the Congress is about to adjourn without fulfilling a pledge made by both political parties. I refer to the pending Senate Joint Resolution 76 guaranteeing equal rights for women, which eight of us in this Chamber introduced.

Apparently no determined effort will be made by the leadership to consider this proposal which merely provides that the people of the several States be given this oppor-tunity to accept or reject the question. It seeks only justice and equity for one-half of our population.

But the ironical aspect of the situation is that the two major political parties are about to meet in Philadelphia. And we can be sure they again will solemnly adopt a plank in their platforms promising women to sanction an equal-rights constitutional amendment.

If the two parties really mean what they say they will take favorable action today on our resolution, which has been in the Senate since February 21, a period of 4 months.

No more propitious year could be found in which to set in motion the constitutional processes which eventually would lead to inclusion in our great Constitution of this guaranty of equality for womanhood.

We are within a few weeks of the one hundredth anniversary of the first meeting on record, in behalf of woman's rights, held at Seneca Falls, N. Y., in July 1848. Women have progressed far within that century in their search for full equality under the law.

In the professions, in public life, in the scientific world and in the economic pursuits of our Nation, they have given incon-testable evidence of their capacity for any duties or responsibilities of citizenship that may be assigned them.

The only handicap to their full and complete participation in all civic and national affairs is the discrimination that Senate Joint Resolution 76 would seek to remove.

I sincerely urge that the Senate consider and approve this resolution today, so that it may be put before the legislatures of the several States for their consideration and approval. Under our democratic system, the people have the right of decision on all matters. Let us give opportunity for their voice to be heard, through their elected representatives in the 48 States.

JUNE 15, 1948.

Hon. ARTHUR CAPPER, United States Senate,

Washington, D. C.
DEAR SENATOR CAPPER: You may count upon my earnest support for the submission of the equal-rights amendment, of which I was privileged to be a cosponsor, to the States for their consideration. I sincerely trust that our efforts to secure action on this amendment at this session will be entirely successful,

Increased participation by women in the political, professional and economic life of the Nation is greatly to be desired. The pending amendment fills a long-felt need in its provision that "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

To all intents and purposes this equality is now freely granted, but the United States has been hesitant in giving constitutional guaranty of such equality. The splendid guaranty of such equality. The splendid record made by women in public life, in the professions and in all phases of business and in many industries is evidence of their largely untapped capacities for public good in every walk of life.

This year would be an appropriate one in which to proclaim the constitutional equality of rights for men and women, marking it does the one hundredth aniversary of the first women's rights meeting ever held in the world, at Seneca Falls, N. Y., in July,

Inasmuch as the amendment must be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States, to become effective 3 years after the date of ratification, the operative data of the proposed legislation is at least 10 years away, which makes it all the more important that no time be lost in passing the amendment at this session.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,
HERBERT R. O'CONOR. SECOND DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS, 1948

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar 1882, House bill 6935, which is the second deficiency appropriation bill, which we must pass and get to conference if we are to finish action on it tonight.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Minnesota that I presume I should yield willingly. I have been used to this for the past 3 days. How long does the Senator feel that, within reason, it will take?

Mr. BALL. I do not believe that there are any controversies in the bill. I believe that as fast as we can consider the committee amendments and dispose of them, together with one or two correctional amendments, action on the bill can be completed. We did not finish work on the bill until late last night.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I can assure the Senator that there are no serious controversial matters in the bill.

Mr. BALL. I think we can finish consideration of the bill in 10 or 15 minutes at the most.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I have the utmost confidence in the opinion of the Senator from Minnesota and the Senator from Arizona. Therefore I yield, hoping that their judgment is sound.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6935) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I ask that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the amendments of the committee be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will state the first committee amendment.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Legislative Branch-Senate," at the top of page 2, to insert:

For an aditional amount, fiscal year 1949, for the Office of the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper, $8,020: Provided, That the rates of basic annual compensation for the following positions shall be: Four laborers at $1,320

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I have four minor amendments proposed by the committee, which I send to the dask.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the four committee amendments submitted by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Ball] on behalf of the committee.

The first amendment was, on page 2, line 5, after the word "each," to insert "Provided, That the provisions of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended, shall not apply to two positions of special employees under the Office of the Sergeant at Arms, and the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act for 1949 is amended accordingly."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, line 17, to insert:

Salaries and expenses: For an additional amount for "Salaries and expenses," fiscal year 1949, $100,000: Provided, That appropriations under this head for fiscal year 1949 shall be available for the preparation of plans and specifications for the National Institute of Dental Research buildings and facilities provided for in H. R. 6726 which shall be available for transfer to the Federal Works Agency, Public Buildings Administration: Provided further, That appropriations made herein shall be available only upon the enactment into law of H. R. 6726, Eightieth Congress, second session."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 18, after line 14, it is proposed to insert the following:

For payment to the following-named contractors in the following designated amounts in full settlement of their claims, legal or equitable, of any nature whatsoever arising out of or connected with the notice by the United States Reclamation Service of the exhaustion of funds for payment of contractors' earnings in connection with the construction of the Friant-Kern canal, California, Peter Kiewit Son's Co., $186,195.33; Arizona-Nevada Constructors, $348,867.62; Morrison-Knudson, Inc., and M. H. Hassler, $217,618.47; Bechtel Bros.-McCone Co., $32,018.51; in all, $784,699.93.

HAYDEN. Mr. President, should like to make a brief explanation of the amendment. The Senate will remember that last year a serious situation arose in the Central Valley, Calif. Because of lack of funds, as the contractors thought, they shut down their work. I am offering the amendment out of a feeling of conscientiousness. I offer it because I feel I was in part at fault because that situation arose. The only objection that can be made to the amendment is that it might set a precedent for similar claims at some later time; but I assure the Senate that under no circumstances within the lifetime of any Senator in this body could a similar situation arise. There would be no difficulty about the matter at all if in a half-dozen different places appropriate action had been taken. If the Bureau of the Budget had notified the Bureau of Reclamation that it was possible for them to divert funds to pay the contractors, the situation would not have arisen. If the contractors themselves had made inquiry in Washington, they could have learned that at the very moment they shut down the work Congress was in process of providing the necessary funds. If their attorney had done so, it would have been all right. I am offering this amendment because I feel that as a member of the Committee on Appropriations I did not do my full duty to ascertain the facts when the matter was under consideration by the Senate.

In good conscience, therefore, I offer the amendment. The figures in the amendment are based upon instructions given by a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations to the contractors and the Bureau of Reclamation to get together and determine what would be a fair settlement of the damages. The contractors presented a bill for approximately $2,000,000. These figures were worked over and agreed upon between the Bureau of Reclamation and the contractors as being a fair settlement of the loss.

In my opinion, the bill should be paid. Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield. Mr. FERGUSON. Why do they not go to the Court of Claims.

Mr. HAYDEN. Because they cannot get into the Court of Claims.

Mr. FERGUSON. Why not?

Mr. HAYDEN. Because, under the law, a contract made with any con-tractor, whether it be by the Board of Engineers or the Bureau of Reclamation, if the contract is subject to appropriations by Congress, they have notice that if they do any work beyond that, however beneficial it might be to the United States, they have no standing in the Court of Claims.

Mr. FERGUSON. Why did they not file their claim in the regular way so that it would go through the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. HAYDEN. My judgment is that neither the Judiciary Committee nor any other committee would devote the weeks of time that our committee devoted to a study of the problem, and give it any better judgment as to what should be

Mr. FERGUSON. I wish to say that I think the amendment should not be agreed to. There is a committee which could proceed to hear the claim in the regular way, and that is the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. BALL. Does the Senator from Arizona move to suspend the rule?

Mr. HAYDEN. No point of order was made. If the point of order is made, I shall move to suspend the rule.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I make the point of order that the amendment violates rule V.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order raised by the Senator from Minnesota is sustained.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I invite the attention of the Chair to page 8410 of the Congressional Record of June 16, wherein I filed a proper motion for suspension of the rules. I move that the rules be suspended and that my amendment be adopted. I shall not ask for a yea-and-nay vote.
The PRESIDING OFFICER.

question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Arizona. [Futting the question.]

Mr. HAYDEN. I ask for a division. On a division the motion was not agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, should like to have the attention of the Senator from Michigan with reference to the committee amendment on page 21 of the bill, relating to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. I notice that it reads as follows:

Contingent upon the enactment of the Federal Housing Act of 1948, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget is hereby authorized to increase in the aggregate not to exceed $2,000,000 the allocation for administrative expenses of the Office of the Administrator, Federal Housing Administration, National Home Mortgage Corporation, and the Public Housing Administration for carry-ing out the provisions of said act.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Ball] to answer the question. Mr. SPARKMAN. I will address the question, then, to the Senator from Min-

Mr. BALL. I did not get the point of the Senator's question.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I have not yet stated the question. I was simply referring to the amendment on page 21 and calling attention to the fact that an additional amount of $2,000,000 is provided upon the passing by this Congress of the Federal Housing Act of 1948. I very much fear that as a result of the attitude expressed by the House of Representatives, or those who are in charge of that legislation, there will not be enacted into law a Federal Housing Act of 1948. But there exists this condition, that as a result of the $750,000,000 authorization which we gave to FHA in December, and an additional $400,000,-000 authorization that we gave in March-

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I should like to finish my statement, if I may.

Mr. BALL. I think the Senator is laboring under a misapprehension, because this item was put in in pursuance of testimony which came up in that form in connection with the Housing Act of 1948. It has nothing to do with the situation of which the Senator is speaking.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I realize that. It is a figure that certainly ought to go in some other bill, rather than in this deficiency appropriation bill. This is the only place that there is any additional money provided for administrative expenses for the Federal Housing Admin-

Mr. BALL. It was the only budget figure before the committee concerning this subject.

Mr. SPARKMAN. And is this the only place in this bill?

Mr. BALL. That is correct.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, there is outstanding throughout the United States today approximately a billion dollars in commitments for buildings to be erected under title 6 of the FHA Act. It is not 1949 money. In fact, we do not put up the money at all. We simply insure the loans. The loans were authorized in December 1947 and in March 1948, but as to the buildings, the money has not yet been spent. The commitments have been made.

There have been no inspection of these buildings because they have not been erected, and there is no money available with which to make the inspections or to process the loans or construction commitments which have been made. It is estimated that they need $1,650,000. Of course, we discussed this matter a few days ago when the Government corporations appropriation bill was under consideration, and I believe that the Senator from Michigan at that time misunderstood the situation from the statement he made.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, 1 thought the Senator was talking about a question that was connected with the pending bill. The matter the Senator is discussing is covered in the Government corporations bill.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Yes; but there was no money carried in that bill, and if it was not carried, and if they need money, it seems to me it should be in this deficiency bill, and the payment should not be made contingent on the happening of something that is not going to happen.

Mr. FERGUSON. I understand what the Senator is requesting.

Mr. SPARKMAN. They are going to come here July 1, or even today in connection with the various buildings for which commitments have been made throughout the country, and there will be no money with which to process those commitments, and no money with which to inspect the buildings when they are erected. This is not money which is appropriated, it is not money that is paid out of the Treasury of the United States. It is simply an authorization for the FHA to use a part of the fees which are paid in for that particular purpose. I believe, Mr. President, that some provision should be made in this bill to take care of these outstanding commitments.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Ball, and myself, I send to the desk an amendment which I wish to offer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 31, after line 8, it is proposed to insert, under a new heading "Rural Electrification Administration," a new paragraph to read as follows:

Salaries and expenses: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses Rural Electrification Administration for the fiscal year 1949, including the objects specified under this head in the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill, 1949, $450,000, such sum to be in addition to amounts otherwise appropriated for such fiscal year.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, an amendment increasing the amounts for REA administrative expenses was adopted on the floor of the Senate a few days ago, but was an amendment to the independent offices bill, where it did not belong, and the House conferees rejected it. When the deficiency subcommittee was considering the same amendment, we figured the Senate action of a few days ago would stand, and therefore we did not accept it. I think the committee would have been in favor of the amendment, because since then it has been thrown out of the other bill. So I am going to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. question is on agreeing to the amend-

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President. I should like to ask the Senator from Minnesota if any consideration was given to an appropriation under the authority of the Smith-Mundt Act, Public Law 402, for the cooperative exchange of persons authorized by that act.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, we considered the estimate submitted by the State Department for $5,000,000. We were working under pressure at the time and did not have time to go into the estimate. What we had before us did not seem adequate, and the committee was unanimous in rejecting the item and in telling the State Department to come back January 1. We did not think a delay of 6 months would do any harm. We simply did not have time to go into the estimates the way they should have been examined.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, this matter was discussed when the first deficiency appropriation bill was under consideration, and the committee withheld the appropriation from that bill on the understanding of the Department that it would be considered in connection with the second deficiency appropriation bill

It seems to me that this is but another instance of the practice which has become very common in both Houses of Congress, that a legislative act is adopted by a very substantial majority, authorizing certain things, and in a way committing the country, as in the case of the ECA authorization, and then the appropriation committees follow along and completely disregard what the Congress has determined to be a policy.

For that reason, Mr. President, and in order to keep the record straight, I should like to propose an amendment, which I assume, from the attitude of the committee members, will be rejected, but I do think that an amendment carrying at least a million dollars should be offered to carry out the cooperative exchange of persons as authorized by Public Law 402.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator submit his amendment?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I offer such an amendment, to be inserted at the proper place, on page 53, I think it is, but I should like to have the clerk insert it at the proper point. I believe it would be in proper form if it provided "to carry out the exchange of persons under Public Law 402, $1,000,000."

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. For what purpose?
Mr. HOLLAND. I should like to support the amendment.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I am glad to yield to the Senator.

Mr. HOLLAND. I have a telegram in my hand from the president of the University of Florida calling attention to this omission, and stating in so many words that the commitments already made are going to be seriously affected, and that there will be disappointment and ill will instead of the good will that is intended to be created by the exchange of scholarships.

I certainly hope that the very modest sum requested by the Senator from Arkansas will be approved. He requests only one-fifth of the amount of the estimate of the State Department, and I am not at all certain that even that will be sufficient to carry on the program until, as the Senator from Minnesota has said.

the matter can be presented in a subsequent bill.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I realize the amount is wholly inadequate, but in view of the attitude of the committee, if it does not intend completely to nullify the policy of the act referred to, I thought surely they would accept this amendment calling for this appropriation. In order to get this program going the committee did approve a small appropriation of $60,000, which was simply to get some organizational work done. That was not intended actually to finance any exchanges. That is hanging up in the air, and there will be no money for the actual exchange of persons under the law.

I reiterate, if we are not going to carry out the program we should not have adopted it, and if we have changed our minds I think those who have undertaken in the Committee on Appropriations to nullify the policy should offer a repealer of that part of the law. It should not be left in force, both our own people and other people expecting something to be done under it.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I agree with the distinguished Senator from Arkansas. It seems to me that with a program under way, and relying upon an announced policy of the Congress, in good faith we should go ahead and finance the program. We are leaving our educational institutions and our educational leaders in the lurch by not backing them up in the efforts which they have already started in pursuance of legislation we have adopted. I hope the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I ask for a vote on the amendment.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be defeated. I rather resent the remarks of the Senator from Arkansas that the Committee on Appropriations pays no attention to authorization acts passed by the Congress. have in the regular bill $28,000,000 for this informational and educational program. The bill was passed early this year. The State Department had ample time to bring these estimates to the committee. Instead, they come in on the last day of the session, practically, asking us to approve estimates totaling $5,000,000 for this program. Just glancing through the items, I think most Members of Congress are of the opinion that this program is an exchange-of-students program. Out of $5,000,000 which the State Department requested, $500,000 went for exchange of students, and the rest of it went largely to employ war personnel here in Washington in about 20 different departments.

There was one item we did not have time to go into, and I do not have the faintest idea of what it means. That was an item of $250,000-plus for grants to labor unions. I do not have the faintest idea of what it means. But as a responsible Member of the Senate and as a member of the Appropriations Committee, I am not prepared to approve items of a quarter of a million dollars or any other amount, having no idea of what is planned to be done with the money. I have been in fayor of exchange of students, but I must say that under the socalled Fulbright Act, which provided for exchange of students with the countries in the Orient, several hundred thousand dollars have been spent, and so far there have been only four students exchanged, which is a pretty expensive per capita proposal. I think the Appropriations Committee is entitled to enough time to go into estimates of this kind before we vote such amounts of funds.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I believe I understood the Senator from Minnesota to say that the State Department has made no effort to present these estimates. I was informed that the State Department presented them to the House committee and asked for hearings on them, but that the committee refused hearings, and, therefore, they had no opportunity until the measure got to the Senate. They could not, of course, make the House committee consider them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Ecton in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Fulbright] on page 16. after line 6.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. FULBRIGHT subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the remarks I made just a short time ago with regard to the appropriation for the Cooperative Exchange of Persons, the report I hold in my hand from the Committee on International Interchange of Jurists, Section of International and Comparative Law, American Bar Association, be included, together with the remarks of Prof. Claude Horack, former dean of Duke University Law School, at the dinner given in his honor by the Inter-American Bar Association and the Duke University alumni, at the Dodge Hotel, Washington, D. C., June 16, 1948.

I merely wish to say that this report and statement applies directly to the matter which was being discussed with regard to the failure of the Committee on Appropriations to include an appropriation for the Smith-Mundt Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL IN-TERCHANGE OF JURISTS, SECTION OF INTERNA-TIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW, AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION

To the Members of the Section of International and Comparative Law:

Since the meeting of the association at Cleveland, Ohio, September 21-23, 1947, there have been a number of important developments in the various activities covered by the work of this committee. The following developments are of particular interest:

developments are of particular interest:
1. Fulbright Act: The Fulbright Act, approved August 1, 1946 (Public Law 584, 79th Cong., 60 Stat. 754), provided for the education of students from the United States in foreign countries on scholarships financed by the proceeds of surplus war materials sold in those countries. Transportation of foreign students to and from the United States may also be paid from these funds. All grants to American citizens under the act may include tuition or salary, maintenance, and travel expenses, and will be paid to the recipient in the currency of the country to which he goes. Grants will normally be made for the period of one academic year. Selection of candidates in general will be guided by excellence of scholastic or professional achievement, and preference will be given to veterans of World Wars I and II. Applicants will be expected to demonstrate a proficiency in the language of the country to which they go wherever it is essential to the project which they propose to undertake.

As previously reported considerable delay occurred in the negotiation of agreements to give effect to the provisions of this act. It is a pleasure to report now that the following agreements have been completed:

(a) Agreement between the United States and China signed November 10, 1947 (press release No. 890; Department of State Publication No. 3050).

(b) Agreement between the United States and Burma signed December 22, 1947 (press release No. 980; Department of State Publication No. 3051).

(c) Agreement between the United States and the Republic of the Philippines signed March 23, 1948.

(d) Agreement between the United States and Greece signed April 23, 1948.

Many other agreements have been trans mitted to eligible governments, the eligibil-ity being established when a foreign government purchases surplus war materials from the United States.

A board of foreign scholarships to select American students for study abroad under the act has been appointed. As of April 1,

1948, the membership of that board was as

Col. John N. Andrews, personal representa-Col. John N. Andrews, personal representa-tive of the Administrator, Veterans' Admin-istration, Washington, D. C. 2. Latin-American student excharge: Pursuant to the provisions of the Convention for the Promotion of Inter-American Cultural Relations of 1936, the exchange of students with Latin-American countries has been increased during the past year.

There are 35 students from Latin America who are now studying law in the United States as indicated in the following list:

Dr. Felipe Gil, secretary of the University of Montevideo, visited the United States on a Department of State grant. There is one United States student, Irving Glenne of California, studying labor legislation in Mexico under the United States Government travel-maintenance grant program. Mr. Tragen, who is carrying out independent research, is a member of the California bar.

3. Privately financed interchange of law students: The Institute of Inter-American Law, organized by Arthur T. Vanderbilt, dean of New York University Law School, began its work on September 2, 1947, with 17 students enrolled from eight countries in the Americas. Dean Vanderbilt was appointed chief justice of New Jersey. The work of the institute is being actively carried for-ward by Dr. Miguel A. de Capriles who is the director of the institute. Its work was the subject of an interesting address delivered by Dr. de Capriles at the Lima Conference of the Inter-American Bar Associa-tion. It is believed that this institute is performing a highly important function and we hope that it will succeed.

Another similar organization, namely, the Southwestern Legal Foundation of Southern Methodist University has been organized under the leadership of Dean Robert G. Storey, of the law school of that university. This institute is holding inaugural ceremonies on the date of our spring meeting, May 22, 1948. We wish it success in its activities. Its proximity to Mexico and Central America gives it a particularly favorable location for stu-dents from those countries. Exchange of students and professors from foreign ccuntries will be stimulated.

4. No interchange with Russia: As indi-cated in our previous report, the United States Ambassador at Moscow, the Honorable Walter Bedell Smith, has endeavored to arrange for the interchange of persons for the advancement of cultural and scholarly understanding and knowledge with Russia. Although further efforts have been made to bring about such exchanges, no progress has been accomplished.

5. Fifth conference of the Inter-American Bar Association: The fifth conference of the IABA was held at Lima, Peru, November 25-December 8, 1947. The deans of several law schools of this hemisphere met at the University of San Marcos and under the chairmanship of Dr. Luis Alberto Sanchez, many important resolutions were drafted which were later adopted at the closing plenary session. The conference adopted 133 resolutions and brought together the leaders of the tions and brought together the leaders of the bar in an interchange of views on the problems of the legal profession which will be far-reaching in its effects on the legal history of their nations.

6. Survey of Pan American law schools: Resolution LXIV of the fourth conference of the Inter-American Bar Association, held at Santiago, Chile, October 20-29, 1945, provided that the association "recommend to the various nations of the American Continent, in regard to the credit in other countries of professional degrees and diplomas granted by a recognized university in one of them, that such degrees and diplomas be accredited in the other countries, giving credit for studies which do not deal with the legislation or case law of the country in which the approval is given, and requiring an examination in studies which deal with such legislation and case law and the other requisites of practice in said country.

"(c) To recommend to the law schools of the universities of America that a congress of the professors of law be convened in order to study and determine the measures tending to achieve uniformity in the studies, pro-grams, and curricula in the said schools.

"(d) To recommend that the same congress shall determine the qualifications that may be necessary for entrance in said law schools."

At the fifth conference at Lima it was decided to recommend as follows:

"Resolution 92: (1) To reiterate the recommendations made by the fourth conference of the Inter-American Bar Association to the law schools of the universities of the Americas, that a congress of professors of law be convened in order to determine the role of law schools in legal education; to study measures which might tend to achieve uniformity in studies, courses, and programs; and to determine the qualifications that may be required for entrance to said law schools."

In order that students throughout this hemisphere may be encouraged to carry on their studies in different law schools it is essential that they should be able to receive credit for work previously done in accredited law schools. No complete up-to-date in-formation with respect to the work of the law schools, however, is available and con-sequently no satisfactory arrangement for interchange of credits has been made between the law schools of the United States and those of the other nations of the hemisphere. In order to remedy this situation, the Inter-American Bar Association has arranged with the aid of a grant from the Department of State to send Dr. Claude Horack, retiring Dean of Duke University Law School, to the Latin-American nations to conduct a survey of their law schools including their curricula methods, physical equipment, personnel, and exchange opportunities. Dr. Horack is scheduled to leave the United States from New Orleans on June 25, 1948, and after visiting practically all of the Latin-American countries will return to the United States about May 1, 1949. His report will be presented at the Sixth Conference of the I. A. B. A. to be held at Detroit, Mich., May 22-June 1, 1949.

Respectfully submitted.

MAY 14, 1948.

REMARKS OF PROF. CLAUDE HORACK, FORMER DEAN OF DUKE UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL, AT THE DINNER GIVEN IN HIS HONOR BY THE INTER-AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION AND THE DUKE UNIVERSITY ALUMNI, JUNE 16, 1948, DODGE HOTEL, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The objectives of the trip through Central and South America and the Caribbean area are to help promote a better understanding between the law schools of the United States and the Latin-American countries. At the present time it is safe to say that only three or four law schools in the United States have a fair understanding of the type and objectives of legal education in these countries, and it is a fair assumption that the Latin-American countries know as little about North American legal education. Each group has a long history and tradition behind it which has affected its viewpoint. Should we be able to effect in even a slight degree a friendly and understanding attitude of one group toward the other, that in itself will be most worth while.

Already there is a very great interest in the interchange of students. Many young men from the United States are applying under the GI bill to study in Latin-American law schools because they see in this an opportunity to represent United States interests in these countries. On the other hand, there are now about 40 students from Latin-American countries who are studying law in the law schools of the United States. It seems quite apparent that this movement will accelerate, and within the next few years we may expect a very great interchange. The business interests of the Latin Americas that deal with United States business interests are equally concerned about having in their offices, or in the offices of their legal advisers, young men who know something of United States business and traditions and law.

The provision for extension of credit to Latin-American students has already been made by the Association of American Law Schools, which now provides for at least 1 year of transfer credit, and in some cases, such as in the schools of Louisiana, as much as 2 years.

to the present time the difficulty in most schools has been that a school in the United States has not known what to do with a student from Latin America or how evaluate his credits, either for entrance or for law-school credit. In the short time I have been interested in this matter, I have already made a great discovery, and that is that I could send transcripts to Dr. Jorge Basadre, of the Pan American Union, or to the United States Bureau of Education, and would be told what the credits were worth from the standpoint of requirements for admission. If I did nothing else, I would do a great service to the law schools of this country by bringing this fact to their attention. In a few cases on which I had to dean of the law school, I wrote to all the law schools I could think of which had had some experience, to try to obtain some help, at least enough on which to pass a judgment as to the students' qualifications. The information I received was very sketchy and some-times very inaccurate, yet here was a source of information about which I knew nothing and which would have made it much easier for a student to enter the law school of his choice. As this movement of students gains force, I know that Dr. Basadre's help and that of the Bureau of Education, will be of inestimable value and will do much to promote cultural relations in the Western Hemisphere. So our main objective is to secure better understanding of the purposes and methods of the schools involved in these interchanges and seek to effect a better understanding so that we may get to see the other fellow's viewpoint, with the result of securing better relations between lawyers and the countries they represent.

As to the manner in which the trip has been arranged, it is sponsored by the Inter-American Bar Association, the membership of which, as you know, is composed of various bar associations in the hemisphere. We are much indebted to the support given by the American Bar Association, the Bar Association of the District of Columbia and the Women's Bar, the Federal Bar Association, and the many other legal organizations which are members and have contributed through their membership to the support of the association which sponsors this trip. The major portion of the funds has been provided by the Department of State through a grant-in-sid, and I am also indebted to Duke University for the aid which it has given me to make possible this venture.

As to the countries to be visited, this takes in nearly all of the Latin-American Republics. After visiting with a number of law-school deans in Washington, I will proceed to Louisiana, the one civil-law jurisdiction in the United States, where I will talk with the three schools there to get their ideas about the interchange of students and how it can be best effected. Some day I hope to visit the interesting institution which was established by Judge Arthur Vanderbilt at New York University where at the present time a large portion of the Latin American law students are studying. There is a most sympathetic interest in the problem in Southern-Methodist University where, under the leadership of Dean Robert Storey, an institute similar to the one started by New York University is now beginning operations, Many other schools are considering the problem and are establishing courses which will be of particular value to Latin American students.

Because of the vast territory involved, it will not be possible at this time to visit all schools, but at least one law school in most of the Latin-American Republics will be visited. The first stop will be in Ecuador, then to Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, Venezuela, and Colombia, where the South American trip must necessarily end because this takes up to the 1st of December at which time the schools of most South American countries begin their summer vacations. The first begin their summer vacations. The first stop in Central America will be at Guatemala, then to Honduras and to Mexico, and finally a hop to the Dominican Republic, Haiti, and Cuba, and then back to the United States after almost 11 months. A survey can in no way be complete in this length of time, but at least it is a start and I hope it may be carried on by others in subsequent years until we have as full information about Latin-American schools as the American Bar Association now has through its system of school inspection and surveys covering the law schools of the United States.

It is interesting to note that a movement has started in South America for an association of law professors which in general outline seems to correspond with the objectives of the Association of American Law Schools, so that they may discuss law-school problems and secure a better understanding of each other, their objectives and methods, and establish somewhat uniform standards for those who are expecting to practice law.

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Minnesota a question about an amount on page 32, for the Bureau of Census, a matter in which I am very much interested. It applies, I take it, to my bill, S. 554, which was recently enacted. I take it also that it is not proposed to go ahead with the 20 percent of the budget estimate for the preparatory work unless the Appropriations Committee is going to provide for continuing the work after January 1; so that amount of money would not be lost if the work were continued after January 1, 1948.

Mr. BALL. We had estimates of mineral resources, transportation, and business totaling nearly $14,000,000. In the limited time available to us we could not go into those estimates thoroughly, but the Bureau representatives told us that they wanted to get the preparatory work done and the maps drawn in the next 6 months, but they would not actually employ the enumerators until 1949. So we allowed 20 percent for the preparatory work, with the understanding that we will early in January examine the estimates for the full enumeration work.

Mr. HAWKES. I thank the Senator for his explanation. I am quite sure that this is something which is vital to business and industry. Colleges and other educational institutions are very much interested in it.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the senior Senator from Minnesota a question or two with regard to the matter referred to by the junior Senator from Alabama. Is it not true that there is no provision made in the general appropriation bill for administering title VI mortgages, FHA mortgages?

Mr. BALL. I am sorry, I cannot answer the Senator. I am not on the subcommittee that handled the bill.

Mr. FLANDERS. May I then make a suggestion, at least for the sake of the record. There are many millions of dollars of title VI FHA mortgages still unprocessed for which administrative funds are necessary. Would it not be appropriate for the record for the chairman in charge of these appropriations to state that it would be proper to use title II funds temporarily for administering title VI funds, and come back next January if necessary?

Mr. BALL. I am sorry, but I cannot answer the Senator. I think the Senator is under a misapprehension. I am merely substituting for the Senator from New Hampshire, chairman of the committee in charge of the bill. I certainly cannot take the responsibility. I am not an expert in the housing field. I could not take the responsibility when we did not consider anything in the committee of authorizing transfers of funds or in effect authorizing a deficiency.

Mr. FLANDERS. There have been no applications for these funds?

Mr. BALL. We had no estimates before the deficiency subcommittee involved in this bill.

Mr. FLANDERS. Then, Mr. President, I think perhaps this little colloquy is about as far as we can go, and I hope it will serve some useful purpose.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the committee amendment on page 2, beginning in line 22, was agreed to be reconsidered.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, this amendment deals with the Joint Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies of 1949. We had a budget estimate of $108,000, and the committee cut it down to $75,000. The Senator from Illinois is much more familiar with the subject than any of the other members on the committee. Unfortunately he was not present when we considered this item. He wants to have inserted the full budget estimate and have it taken to conference. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois has asked unanimous consent for reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment on page 2, beginning in line 22, was agreed to. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote agreeing to the amendment is reconsidered.

Mr. BROOKS. I now move that the amount $75,000 on line 4, page 3, be stricken, and in lieu thereof $108,000 be inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, is the bill still open to amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert "Federal Security Agency, Bureau of Employment Security: General administration, for an additional amount for general administration, $72,500."

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, this is an item which I understand came up from the Bureau of the Budget to the House too late to get into the bill, and was presented to the subcommittee probably in one of its last sessions. I wonder if the Senator in charge of the bill will accept the amendment.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota cannot consider the amendment, because the committee considered it specifically and turned it down. The item is for $72,500 for additional employees in the United States Employment Service to specialize on employment of handicapped persons. Frankly, the committee felt that there was no justification whatever for adding employees at the Federal level to deal with this question, since the only employment of handicapped people that can possibly take place is managed at the State level by employees of the various States, for whom we made grants in the regular bill this year.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President. should like to say just a word about the amendment.

Two or three years ago Congress passed a resolution which set aside a National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week. If I correctly recall, in the resolution we requested the President to set up a committee or commission for the purpose of carrying on this program. Each year since that time the President has declared 1 week of the year to be National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, and Congress has appropriated money in the past to help defray the expenses of this week. That is what this small item is for.

Of course it is true that most of the employment is at the State level. A great deal of it is in private industry, but a great deal of good has been done by the program which has been put on, urging people both in Government and in private industry to employ physically handicapped persons.

I dare say there is not a Member of the Senate who has not had the experience of trying to obtain employment for physically handicapped persons. We all know the difficulty we run into every time. Seventy-two thousand five hundred dollars is a pitifully small sum for us to give in extending help toward the employment of this great army of physically handicapped people throughout the country. It is a much bigger army than most of us realize.

I certainly urge upon the Senate favorable action upon this amendment to provide a small amount to help the physically handicapped people of the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN].

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendments to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third

The bill (H. R. 6935) was read the third time and passed.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. BRIDGES, Mr. Brooks, Mr. Gurney, Mr. Ball, Mr. McKellar, Mr. Hayden, and Mr. Tydings conferees on the part of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills of the Senate:

S. 165. An act for the relief of Doris E. Snyder;

S. 1715. An act for the relief of Archie Hamilton and Delbert Hamilton;

S. 1717. An act for the relief of the estate of William R. Stigall, deceased;

S. 2440. An act for the relief of Charles Duncan Montieth;

S. 2698. An act to authorize the transfer of horses and equipment owned by the United States Army to the New Mexico Military Institute, a State institution, and for other purposes;

S. 2705. An act to reimburse the Hames & Phelps Construction Co.; and

S. 2709. An act for the relief of Stefan Magura and Michal Magura.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2510) to provide for certain administrative expenses in the Post Office Department, including retainment of pneumatic-tube systems, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 2830) to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry, disagreed to by the Senate, and agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Wolcott, Mr. Gamble, Mr. Smith of Ohio, Mr. KUNKEL, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. BROWN of Georgia, and Mr. Patman were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H.R. 2352. An act to provide for sale to the Crow Tribe of interests in the estates of deceased Crow Indian allottees;

H. R. 3999. An act to authorize the Attorney General to adjudicate certain claims resulting from evacuation of certain persons of Japanese ancestry under military orders; H. R. 4816. An act to amend section 624 of the Public Health Service Act so as to provide a minimum allotment of $250,000 to each State for the construction of hospitals; and

H. R. 6116. An act to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act.

The message further announced that the House had severally agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H. R. 1734. An act for the relief of Gabel Construction Co;

H.R. 2729. An act for the relief of the legal guardian of Rose Mary Ammirato, a minor

H. R. 6707. An act to amend the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Cong.), and for other purposes; and

H.R. 6308. An act to permit refund or credit to brewers of taxes paid on beer lost in bottling operations.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT ' RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

H. R. 564. An act for the relief of Sarah Lee

Cregg; H.R. 700. An act for the relief of Anthony

H. R. 851. An act for the relief of Adney

H. R. 1409. An act for the relief of Frantisek

AMENDMENT OF HOME OWNERS' LOAN ACT OF 1933-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on House bill 2798, to amend section 5, Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, and for other pur-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report, which was read by the Chief Clerk, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the (H. R. 2798) to amend section 5, Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"That subsection (i) of section 5 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is hereby amended by adding the following provision at the end thereof:

'Any Federal savings and loan association may convert itself into a savings and loan type of institution organized pursuant to the laws of the State, district, or Territory (here-inafter referred to in this section as the State) in which the principal office of such Federal association is located: Provided, (1) That the State permits the conversion of any savings and loan type of institution of such State into a Federal savings and loan association; (2) that such conversion of a Federal savings and loan association into such a State institution is determined upon the vote in favor of such conversion cast in person or by proxy at a special meeting of mem-bers called to consider such action, specified by the law of the State in which the home office of the Federal association is located, as required by such law for a State-chartered institution to convert itself into a Federal association, but in no event upon a vote of less than 51 percent of all the votes cast at such meeting, and upon compliance with other requirements reciprocally equivalent to the requirements of such State law for the conversion of a State-chartered institution into a Federal association; (3) that notice of the meeting to vote on conversion shall be given as herein provided and no other notice thereof shall be necessary; the notice shall expressly state that such meeting is called to vote thereon, as well as the time and place thereof, and such notice shall be mailed, postage prepaid, at least 20 and not more than 30 days prior to the date of the meeting, to each member of record of the Federal association at his last address as shown on the books of the Federal association and to the General Manager of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, Washington, District of Co-lumbia; (4) that, upon the effective date of the conversion, the association has repurchased the total amount invested in its shares by the Secretary of the Treasury; and (5) that if, upon the effective date of conversion, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will hold of record shares of the association, its approval of the conversion has been obtained; (6) that, in the event of dissolution after conversion, the members or shareholders of the association will share on a mutual basis in the assets of the association in exact proportion to their relative share or account credits; (7) that such conversion shall be effective upon the date that all the provisions of this act shall have been fully complied with and upon the issuance of a new charter by the State wherein the association is located; it being pro-vided that its act of converting into a Statechartered institution shall consitute an agreement to be bound by all the requirements that the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation may legally impose under section 403 of title IV of the National Housing Act, as now or hereafter amended, and the association shall upon conversion and thereafter be authorized to issue securities in any form currently approved at the time of issue by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation for issuance by similar insured institutions in such State, District, or Territory.
"In addition to the foregoing provision for conversion upon a vote of the members only any association chartered as a Federal savings and loan association, including any having outstanding shares held by the Sec-retary of the Treasury or Home Owners' Loan Corporation, may convert itself into a State institution upon an equitable basis, subject to approval, by regulations or otherwise, by the Home Loan Bank Board and by the Fed-eral Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation: Provided, That if the insurance of accounts is terminated in connection with such conversion, the notice and other action shall be taken as provided by law and regulations for the termination of insurance of accounts.'

"SEC. 2. Section 19 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, and subsection (c) of section 402 of the National Housing Act, as amended, are hereby each amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: 'All necessary expenses in connection with the making of supervisory or other examinations (except examinations of Federal home loan banks), including the provision of services and facilities therefor, shall be considered as nonadministrative expenses."

And the Senate agree to the same.

HARRY P. CAIN, JOHN W. BRICKER, JOHN SPARKMAN, Managers on the Part of the Senate.

JESSE P. WOLCOTT, RALPH A. GAMBLE, FREDERICK C. SMITH, JOHN C. KUNKEL, BRENT SPENCE, PAUL BROWN, WRIGHT PATMAN, Managers on the Part of the House. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Ecton in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2877) to amend the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert "That section 4 (c) of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out "$25,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$35,000,000."

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate agree to the amendment of the House with an amendment to strike out "$35,000,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$40,000,000." The motion was agreed to.

CONSIDERATION OF RESOLUTIONS

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside for the immediate consideration of a number of routine resolutions which were unanimously approved by the Committee on Rules and Administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I should like to know what they are.

Mr. HAYDEN. They are a group of resolutions giving assistance to committees, and so forth.

Mr. BROOKS. They will be read, one by one, and the Senator can object to them.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not intimating that I am going to object, but I have the right to know what they are.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside for the consideration of a number of resolutions? The Chair hears none.

PRINTING OF ADDITIONAL COPIES OF MANUSCRIPT ENTITLED "TOWARD PEACE," A HANDBOOK ON AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS, 1941-47

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration I report favorably without amendment Senate Concurrent Resolution 28, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Con. Res. 28) submitted by Mr. Vandenberg on July 23, 1947, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the manuscript entitled "Toward Peace," a handbook on American international relations, 1941-47, be printed as a Senate document, and that 1,000 additional copies shall be printed for the use of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate.

INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES
BY COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICE AND CIVIL SERVICE—REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration I report favorably without amendment Senate Resolution 260, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, Senate Resolution 260, reported by Mr. Langer on June 15, 1948, from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service is hereby authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate during the Eightieth Congress $2,500 in addition to the amount and for the same purposes specified in section 134 (a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, approved August 2, 1946.

PRINTING AND BINDING OF CANNON'S PROCEDURE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, with amendments, House Joint Resolution 190, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 190) authorizing the printing and binding of a revised edition of Cannon's Procedure in the House of Representatives and providing that the same shall be subject to copyright by the author, which had been reported from the Committee on Rules and Administration with amendments.

The amendments of the Committee on Rules and Administration were, in line 4, after the word "copies", to strike out "of a revised edition"; in line 11, after the word "domain", to strike out "such revised edition of", and to amend the title so as to read: "Authorizing the printing and binding of Cannon's Procedure in the House of Representatives and providing that the same shall be subject to copyright by the author."

The amendments were agreed to.
The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time and passed.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES—INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration I report favorably, without amendment, Senate Joint Resolution 263, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 263) submitted by Mr. Saltonstall on June 17, 1948 (an original resolution from the Committee on Armed Services), was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That in carrying out the duties imposed upon it by section 136 of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (Public Law 601, 79th Cong.), the Committee on Armed Services, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized during the period ending March 31, 1949, to make such expenditures, and to employ upon a temporary basis such investigators, technical, clerical, and other assistants as it deems advisable.

SEC. 2. The expenses of the committee under the resolution, which shall not exceed $25,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY—INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 262, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 262), submitted as an original resolution from the Committee on the Judiciary on June 16, 1948, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary is hereby authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate during the Eightieth Congress $5,000 in addition to the amount and for the same purpose specified in Senate Resolution 120, agreed to July 26, 1947.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON PUB-LIC WORKS—INCREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 247, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 247), submitted by Mr. REVERCOMB on June 2, 1948, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Works of the United States Senate is hereby authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate, during the Eightieth Congress, $5,000 in addition to the amount, and for the same purposes, specified in section 134 (a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS—IN-CREASE IN LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 265, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 265), an original resolution reported by Mr. Bridges from the Committee on Appropriations, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations hereby is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate, during the Eightieth Congress, $10,000 in addition to the amounts, and for the same purposes, specified in section 134 (a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act approved August 2, 1946; Senate Resolution 130, agreed to June 26, 1947; and Senate Resolution 201, agreed to March 11, 1948.

STUDY OF OPERATION OF MARITIME COMMISSION — AUTHORIZATION TO MAKE CERTAIN EXPENDITURES

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Rules and Administration, I report favorably, with an amendment, Senate Resolution 259, submitted on June 11, 1948, by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN]. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on Rules and Administration with an amendment, to strike out all after the resolving clause, and in lieu thereof to insert:

That the authority, powers, and duties of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, under Senate Resolution 152, Eightleth Congress, agreed to July 25, 1947, and Senate Resolution 189, Eightleth Congress, agreed to January 28, 1948, are hereby extended until February 15, 1949.

SEC. 2. In studying the operations of the United States Maritime Commission with a view to determining its economy and efficiency, the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments is hereby authorized to expend, in accordance with the authority conferred upon said committee by said Senate Resolution 189, Eightieth Congress, such sums as it may deem advisable from the moneys made available to said committee under the provisions of said Senate Resolution 152.

The amendment was agreed to.
The resolution as amended was agreed to.

SUMMARY OF LEGISLATIVE RECORD OF THE EIGHTIETH CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to have printed in a subsequent issue of the Congressional Record a summary of the legislative record of this session of the Eightieth Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, consent is granted.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, let me ask about the request.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is the usual request to have inserted in the Record a summary of the legislative record of the present session—in this case, the present session of the Eightieth Congress.

Mr. TAFT. Does the Senator mean a summary which he has prepared?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; prepared under my supervision.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the right to insert in the Record—did the Senator from Kentucky mean to have the summary to which he referred inserted in the Appendix of the Record?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. Then I ask unanimous consent to have the right to insert a summary of the accomplishments of the Eightieth Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, does the Senator from Ohio wish to compare his summary with mine, to see whether they are identical?

Mr. TAFT. They might not be identical. [Laughter.]

Mr. WHERRY subsequently said: Mr. President, a moment ago the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. Taft] asked unanimous consent to print in the Record a digest of the major legislation of the Eightieth Congress. He asked that it be printed in the Appendix of the Record. I now ask unanimous consent that it also be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY subsequently said: I omitted to make the same request in connection with the summary I asked to have printed in the RECORD. I also ask that it be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VALEDICTORY OF SENATOR HAWKES

Mr. HAWKES. Mr. President, and my distinguished friends and colleagues in the United States Senate, when the Eightieth Congress ends, my term of office in the United States Senate will likewise end.

I shall have completed almost 50 years of active service in the harness of American business and a full 6-year term in this great deliberative body. I have always tried to make my service an effort to preserve our great form of government and the American system of free men. This effort will not end until my power to think and act have ceased.

I was born in Chicago November 20, 1878, of highly respectable parents whose ancestry on both sides of the family dated back to the early colonial days in America.

These ancestors grew up under New England traditions in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. They taught me that even though our family was of modest means, no boy who was reared under the American flag with the freedoms and opportunities guaranteed by our American constitutional system of government could possibly be rated as poor.

They told me no man is poor who is the beneficiary of the choice blessings and benefits of life provided through the wisdom of our forefathers, who courageously gave us the Declaration of Independence and then successfully fought to establish and preserve its principles through the creation and adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

They taught me further that the most precious possessions in this world, such as the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, could be lost unless we continually recognize that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

They taught me that my duty was to obey the law, uphold the Constitution, and stand out in the open for the principles which are necessary if our great way of life is to be preserved.

Many of my friends in the State of New Jersey and throughout the Nation came to me in 1941 and 1942 to urge that I be a candidate for the Republican nomination to the United States Senate from

I acquiesced in their plan to support and nominate me, for the reason that I felt—regardless of my lack of political experience—that I might nevertheless invoke my experience in our industrial and business system throughout the Nation, and make a contribution to the thinking of the people's representatives which would, in some small way, contribute to the preservation of the principles and practices which I consider necessary if we are to endure as the greatest nation of freemen on earth

I want to say to my colleagues in the Senate that I have had here the greatest experience of my life. I have formed, on both sides of the aisle, many friendships which I shall cherish the rest of my life. I am deeply indebted to a number of Senators for their kindly interest in trying to help me understand what they were doing and how they were doing it. I believe I have acquired a little knowledge of such matters.

I have known for a great many years that the label "Republican" or "Democrat" is not the vital thing in the preservation of the United States of America. The great question is this: Does a citizen or representative of the people believe in the American system and wish to preserve and improve it or is he one of those who wish to exchange a success for a failure, by following what I call un-American activities?

My experience here will enable me to continue making a contribution toward the preservation of our form of government and our institutions.

From the standpoint of service to his country, no man could fail to have sorrow and regret at leaving the Senate. No personal gratification in looking forward to more ease and comfort could possibly compensate for the loss of opportunity to continue in this great deliberative body as a servant of the people.

There was nothing here I wanted for myself when I arrived, except the opportunity to serve the people and help preserve in our mutual interest the rights and opportunities which developed under our American system of freemen.

As I leave the Senate, there is nothing I want for myself, except to continue working toward that same objective.

I am thinking of the existing generations following me and of those generations yet unborn. They should be allowed to follow in the paths of liberty and opportunity through our system of reward for work, thrift, and the use of genius, coupled with the acceptance of individual responsibility to the limit of individual capacity.

Of course, every man in public service should like to have his acts meet with public approval; but it is far more important that he should stand on principle, in the hope that what he does will receive approval when the people understand, than it is that he should seek public approval at the expense of sacrifice of principle.

Alexander Pope said:

What's fame? A fancied life in others' breath; a thing beyond us, even before our death:

Benjamin Franklin made a remarkable public statement which should give comfort to every servant of the people who is trying to do his duty by standing on principle rather than acceding to political expediency. He said:

We must not in the course of publick life expect immediate approbation and immediate grateful acknowledgment of our services.

But let us persevere thro' abuse and even injury. The internal satisfaction of a good conscience is always present, and time will do us justice in the minds of the people, even of those at present the most prejudic'd against us.

The recipe which Lord Macaulay gave to the British people in 1830, when the United States was in its infancy, was a good plan for the free people of Britain, and is still a good plan for the United States of America. The British people failed to follow that plan and they have ended in socialism.

Lord Macaulay appreciated that the siren voice of political promisers could easily lead many people away from the principles vital to the preservation of a government of freemen. He recognized if the leaders of a free people induced them to adopt temporary expedients at variance with the principles vital to their permanent welfare in an effort to avoid the problems and hardships of the day, it could only end in having the government become the master and the people, its slaves. This is what he said:

Our rulers will best promote the improvement of the people by strictly confining themselves to their own legitimate duties—by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course, commodities their fair price, industry and intelligence their natural reward, idleness and folly their natural punishment—by maintaining peace, by defending property, by diminishing the price of law, and by observing strict economy in every department of the state. Let the government do this—the people will assuredly do the rest.

I urge all my colleagues in all seriousness and kindness to reflect on what has been happening in this great Congress the past 2 or 3 weeks at the close of the session. No government can support its people and assume all the individual burdens of its citizens without becoming the master of the people and defining what liberties they shall have left.

I am not attempting today to criticize the acts of any of my colleagues or any political party. I wish to set down in simple form the things which I believe must be done if we are to preserve our form of government—our system of human relations—our economic system based on freedom of the individual and his opportunity to improve his own relative position in life. Freemen must be willing to pay the price of success so far as that price lies within their ability and the talents which God Almighty has given them.

It is perfectly clear to me that we should immediately recognize the following basic things which must be solved if our system is not to succumb to the ofislaughts which are being made by unthinking people who have come under the domination of shrewd, skillful planners throughout the world. If these planners are successful, it will mean the destruction of the underlying philosophy, principles, and privileges of our American system of freemen.

First. We must recognize that one of the principal routes to socialism and communism is national bankruptcy. Our national debt of $253,000,000,000 is, in reality, a mortgage upon every private business institution and all personal property in the United States because of the constitutional power to tax, which, if misused, is the power to destroy

Few people appreciate that the national debt through the power of taxation is a burden on each citizen and a mortgage on his earning power and property rights. That applies from the highest to the lowliest individual in the land who owns property and has earning power. The distinguished and able senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd], in a factual and realistic speech which he made in this Senate on May 19, 1948, pointed out to his colleagues and to the American people the fact that as we are now going our annual budget by 1951 will be just slightly under $50,000,000,000.

It should be apparent to all that when the rest of the world is able to provide the materials and when demand is less than production or supply, problems which we cannot now calculate will come before the American people.

We should all understand at this time that if we have less production, less profits, and higher taxes to meet the "must" bills, we shall then likely be confronted with a decreased initiative which in other countries has gone to the point where the Government has had to take over—and then socialistic or communistic practices have supplanted individual freedom and opportunity.

Second. Unless we soon recognize that if our Government uses its power to tax to raise funds for investment in fields of private business which heretofore have always been left to private citizens, we will find the same thing happening in our country that has already happened in Great Britain.

Governmental invasion of the business field, which we call the field of free competitive enterprise, is dangerous if our system is to endure.

Perhaps Abraham Lincoln expressed in simple terms as well as any other American the thought I have in mind. He said—and this is very simply expressed:

In all things which the people can do for themselves as well as or better than the Government—then the Government should never interfere.

Mr. Lincoln was a champion and defender of the common man. He was more interested in the common man than almost any other man in public life of whom I have ever heard.

Our people must first understand the meaning of these encroachments by Government into the field of private business, and then they will have to decide whether our citizens as a whole have fared better under our American way of doing business than have the citizens in the other countries which have indulged in these socialistic practices which have ultimately led to complete control by the state.

The real cost to the people for things produced by private enterprise would be found to be less than the cost the people will pay for the same services from Government-built plants managed by Federal employees who are held to no accountability or responsibility for results attained. Under Government ownership it has been proved to my satisfaction that there is no way possible for the public to check operations and know real costs.

Third. We must soon get back to the place where all excess powers granted to the Chief Executive by the Congress must be returned to the Congress if we are to keep the wise balance between the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the Government which were thought by our forefathers to be the safeguards of the people's rights and the protectors of individual freedom.

Fourth. We must in all our laws regarding employment relations never forget that our American system is one primarily based upon voluntary cooperation.

In enacting laws affecting or governing employment relations, we must bear in mind that America was made successful because the workingman of today has often become the owner or employer of tomorrow. That opportunity must always be kept alive under our system for the great majority of our people are in the employee class.

If we are to remain a free people, the solution of the greater part of all human relations problems must be left to the people, and must be brought about by voluntary action.

The whole history of the world shows that the more Government invades the field of regulating human relationship and action, the more it curtails the liberties of its people. When that intrusion has gone far enough, the Government becomes the master and the people have lost the freedoms and rights of action which made possible the development of the United States of America.

Fifth. The Chief Executive, the representatives in the Congress, and the judiciary must so conduct themselves as to convince all fair-minded citizens that none of them represents any special group or interest.

Respect for government is vital. That is why we should be careful in this great body always to remember that when we discuss or criticize our Government and try to improve it—we should recognize it as the most sacred thing we have, outside of our religion.

Therefore, the people's representatives must seek to find a fair balance in equity and justice between all groups and interests in the United States and thus retain that respect.

Sixth. Our Government and people have a definite obligation to do the fair and sound thing so far as it lies within our power to do it for all those who have given their service in defending the Nation in war.

The veteran and the veterans' organizations have a like obligation to seek only those things which are vital and necessary to them and which lie within the power of the people to do, without destroying the very thing the veteran sought to preserve on the battlefield.

I should like to interject here to my good colleagues and friends that I do not think any man had a better understanding of the veteran and what the Nation owed him, since I have been old enough to remember, than did Al Smith. I have always gone along with his philosophy and admired his feeling with regard to the veterans.

I have frequently said that those veterans who are substantially or totally incapacitated through their great service to their fellow Americans are entitled to the maximum aid within our power to give while yet we are preserving the liberties and freedoms of our people for which they fought.

Seventh. I have been alarmed at the growing tendency of different citizens and groups, which make up our American economy, to ask the Government to solve all their problems and guarantee them against the ordinary contingencies which free men under our system of free competitive enterprise have, up to the last quarter of a century, accepted as their own responsibility. Our system is not a profit system but it is a profit and loss system. We seem to be trying to get rid of the loss and turn it over to the Government, and keep the profits. That is something for all Americans to think about.

If our American citizens expect to remain free men and preserve the free competitive enterprise system and yet operate under the philosophy that they can keep their profits if they are successful and, on the other hand, the Government will pay their losses or guarantee them against substantial loss if they experience such losses—then to my mind there will be no hope of ending anywhere except in statism with state control and state direction in the affairs of our citizens.

If group after group of our citizens are willing to raid the public treasury, and I say that advisedly, not because they approve of that course but because some other citizen or group of citizens has been successful in raiding the Treasury, then my conclusion is that we will soon be through with our great system which has been the outstanding success of the world.

We will find ourselves on a common level with the people throughout the world who are now engulfed in socialism and statism because they were willing to have the government assume their responsibilities rather than to accept those responsibilities themselves.

Eighth. My votes on foreign policy and foreign gifts and loans have been based upon my knowledge of the people in the various countries selected as the recipients of the unusual favors we have been granting.

There has never been a time when it would not have been more pleasant for me to have "gone along" than it was to vote as I did. Parts of certain legislation against which I voted would have been acceptable to me, but I have felt and still feel strongly that the representatives of our people must soon take an inventory of our debts and obligations-must analyze our power to continue with the programs they have undertaken—must an-alyze what could happen to our Nation if we have a depression-must recognize that the very things we are doing to build up foreign nations in competition with us must of necessity decrease our own earning power and ability to pay-and finally must recognize that we will have committed a crime against ourselves and the world if we find we have exceeded our ability to do things and thus have destroyed our vital leadership for the peace and stability of free men throughout the

Even those running an eleemosynary corporation must be guided by the amount of funds within their power to accomplish their objectives. Regardless of where their hearts might take them, their brains must direct every action if they expect to complete their kindly deeds and accomplish their objectives.

They must know how much a thing will cost, how far they must proceed with it, what funds are available now, and whether the source for future funds to complete their objective will be available.

Ninth. Everything I have learned in life teaches me that there are certain fields dealing with human relationship among a free people which can never be successfully covered by law.

I feel strongly that a compulsory law can never accomplish the desired results in fair employment practices which I use simply as an illustration. I have taken that position on the floor of the Senate, before this.

No law under our system can ever successfully force an employer to give any person satisfactory employment with hope for the future. Take the reverse. In the fourteenth amendment, we decided that no man in the United States should be forced to work against his will for another man. Fair employment practices can and should be developed in our Nation.

I might say at this point that in my business affairs I have had the most remarkable success in absorbing all kinds of people, colored and white, Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant, and mixing them together. The businesses with which I have been connected have never taken any cognizance of what a man's religion may be. Nor have we determined a man's rate of pay by the color of his skin. Performance is the best test. That development can best be brought about through voluntary processes-greater understanding between and through the making of an effort to eliminate all misunderstandings based on race, color, and creed.

I think it would help all of us if we

I think it would help all of us if we could always remember that we had no choice for ourselves when we came into this world. We could not decide whether we would be black or white, Jew or gentile. But we all came from a common source, from God Almighty. If we try to treat one another properly, try to get along together, try to do the best we can and practice the Golden Rule, perhaps we shall make much more progress than by trying to put hard and fast laws upon the people.

Tenth. One of the most important things this great deliberative body should consider more completely than it has in recent years, and I think it is faced with it now, is the demarcation between States' rights and the Federal field of operation.

You, my colleagues, will soon be confronted with problems of leaving with the States the things which they can do for their own citizens as well as or better than the Federal Government. For example, this means you will be confronted with deciding what taxing areas are to be left to the States and what taxing areas are going to be preempted by the Federal Government. There may be areas where a different division than that now in existence will be necessary.

Unless the Congress shows that the Federal Government can stay in its own sphere as planned under our Constitution, and leave unadulterated to the States the rights which belong to the States, then I rather feel our people will be a little wary about how far we go into the United Nations and interalliance with other nations of the world.

If we cannot adhere to the form of government we started to build in this country, what right have we to assume that if we become entangled with nations throughout the world, some overall power will not take all our rights

If the Federal Government will function in the sphere it is intended to occupy and leave to the States the conduct of the affairs of the citizens of the States, then in my opinion the Representatives in the Congress and in the Federal Government will be able to apply themselves to the more important affairs and have time to do a better job for the Nation in keeping with the plan of our forefathers.

Mr. President, I went to Europe in 1945. I left the United States the day after VE-day and flew across the ocean. We spent Decoration Day at the Anzio beachhead, one of the most remarkable and memorable days I ever spent, because there I attended the Decoration Day services as the only funeral service for my boy, who had been buried at Milne Bay, New Guinea, out in the Pa-I thought of every one of the 6,900 fine American boys buried in that Anzio beachhead cemetery the same as I thought of my own son. We went on to Rome, and in Rome on June 3, 1945, as a member of the Communications Subcommittee of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, I talked to a group of American soldiers.

Those American soldiers expressed themselves quite freely. They stood up and said that from what they heard, apparently the war was not over, and they expressed the thought that unless the war was over they would like to stay in Europe and finish it.

I shall never forget a staff sergeant who had been through the war for 4 years. He rose and said, "Mr. Senator, I have at home two little boys. One is 8 years old and the other five. I have been through hell's half acre over here for 3½ years. I have lain out in the mud and have endured many hardships." He added, "If this war is not over now, I should like to stay over here and finish it, because I don't want those little boys of mine ever to have to do what I have done." He added, "We have this wonderful manpower on continental Europe, such as no nation ever had."

I commented that we as a nation could no more stay in partnership with a partner who was accused of heinous crimes and offenses against civilization than could a private individual remain in a business partnership with a man accused of dastardly crimes. I did not say that such accusations against our allies were true, but I said that we should ascertain the facts and know the truth, that it was our duty to do so if we expected to stand before the world as true disciples of justice and peace.

Further I said we should restate at that time the objectives for which we fought the war and announce the course we planned to take toward peace.

My reason for that statement was that we had 3,400,000 of the best trained and armed soldiers in the world on continental Europe at a cost considerably exceeding $200,000,000,000 and the loss of precious lives. The British had 750,000 similarly armed forces. If we had defined our plan of action and course for peace and justice then, our ally's attitude might have been entirely different than it was after that great force and power was removed from continental Europe months before we ever knew what we were talking about, and what our peace objective was. I am not sure that we know yet. Our course then was the most vital thing in the world. I felt action at that time could definitely prevent another war and definitely establish an agreement on principles which would lead to peace and might save us from complete exhaustion of our material wealth and thus save us from statism, which has almost engulfed the earth.

Every statement I made was misquoted back home, without my knowledge, while I was yet abroad in the service of my country, riding 25,000 miles through the air. For making my suggestion I was accused of trying to incite more war. Now, more than 3 years after the statement, those who criticized me are agreeing with what I said, and regretting that the course suggested was not followed.

Unfair attacks upon any group in our American life can be productive of division among our people. The maximum unity, respect, and confidence that we can obtain are vital to the protection of the rights and interests of every man in our country from the lowest to the highest.

If men in high places say publicly untrue things about each other for political reasons or any other reasons, and hire commentators, newspapers, or other public relations agencies to assassinate character, then how can we expect to preserve our Government and our freedoms? Only people who can and will find a way to get along with each other with due regard for honesty and the truth can remain free.

If the current abuse of free speech and propaganda is continued, it could well lead to the destruction of the safeguards which protect free speech. Thus free speech could prove to be its own executioner.

My whole statement means that if we want to preserve our liberties, we will have to pay the price. The price at times seems high to some because it means self-denial, self-control, self-restraint, standing squarely on principle out in the limelight where one is open to the fire of unjust and unfair criticism.

It means, as Mr. Farley, a distinguished Democratic national chairman, said, "Willingness to surrender office rather than compromise with principle."

It means refusal to compromise with principle for the sake of what some call temporary expedients.

It means acceptance of the consequences for acting as one's intelligence and conscience tell him is right.

It may mean loss or gain in material things.

Our forefathers were willing to pay the price of freedom. That price exacted from them all the things I have mentioned, including the supreme sacrifice in hundreds of thousands of cases.

I have often asked myself: Why were they willing to pay the price? The answer has always come back to me: Because they considered individual freedom, coupled with opportunity for self-improvement, the most valuable thing in the world.

Unless we as a people redeem our morals, rebuild our character, and recognize the mandates of our God differently than we have been and are doing, then we will not have the fiber and the courage to do the things necessary to pay for the preservation of individual freedom in its true sense.

So long as a majority of our people seek to give less for a dollar, they will get less for a dollar, and if they are going to be led astray by the philosophy that they can get something for nothing or that the world owes a living to the indolent, the shiftless, and the sluggards-there is no hope for the redemption of America.

Honest people should beget honesty in their representatives. Intelligence in the selection of representatives is vital to the preservation of representative democracy.

Our system of government and human relationship will not be preserved by the representatives of the people unless the people show by their votes that they wish it preserved.

On June 14, 1948, I received unanimous consent to insert in the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an address I made entitled "Who Can Preserve Representative Democracy?" This speech, which subsequently appeared on page A3884, contained thoughts which had accumulated in my mind over a period of more than 45 years in American business.

During the coming adjournment period, I ask that you, my colleagues, read this speech for it is my humble opinion that the conclusions contained therein apply with as much if not more force today than they did when that speech was delivered on November 27, 1939.

To increase American voluntary cooperation, the keystone of our American system, we must redevelop respect for one another, invoke equity in our relations, and thus rebuild confidence between our citizens. One recipe for that program is set forth in the following little poem, The Man in the Glass:

THE MAN IN THE GLASS

When you get what you want in your struggle for self

And the world makes you king for a day, Just go to a mirror and look at yourself, And see what that man has to say.

For it isn't your father or mother or wife Whose judgment upon you must pass, The fellow whose verdict counts most in your life

Is the one staring back from the glass.

You may be like Jack Horner and chisel a plum And think you're a wonderful guy,

But the man in the glass says you're only a

If you can't look him straight in the eve. He's the fellow to please-never mind all the rest,

For he's with you clear up to the end, And you've passed your most dangerous, diffi-cult test

If the man in the glass is your friend.

You may fool the whole world down the pathway of years

And get pats on the back as you pass, But your final reward will be heartaches and tears

If you've cheated the man in the glass.

[Applause, Senators rising.]

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I may say as acting majority leader that I know I express the sentiments of every Member on this side when I say that ALBERT Hawkes is our friend: that we will always remember him as one who has proven himself to be of the utmost sincerity, honesty, and high integrity. He is a man of great ability. He has always fought for what he thought was right. He has always acted from the highest principles.

Mr. President, it has been my great and good fortune to know him. As he leaves this body, I wish for him continued health and happiness. He will carry with him our high regard. We will remember him for years and years to come.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator from Iowa yield to me?
Mr. HICKENLOOPER, I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I want to say that I am glad I have had the privilege of being on the floor of the Senate this afternoon to listen to the splendid advice, the very sound admonitions that have been given to us here today by the Senator from New Jersey. The Senator from New Jersey and I entered the Senate together. I have grown to know him over the course of years-now almost six. I know him as a man who is absolutely devoted to his country, a man who is thoroughly courageous in advocating those things in which he believes, and as one who is fair.

We have not always agreed, but this much I know-whether in agreement or whether in disagreement-he was earnest and sincere in those things he advocated. Now, Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey has chosen, through his own decision, not to be a candidate again for membership in this body. But that does not mean-certainly to me-that we shall not have his advice, that we shall not have his splendid help. I express the hope to him that he will frequently return to Washington and to the Senate Chamber, where he has served with such distinction and with such great service to his country.

EXTENSION OF TERMS OF MEMBERS OF ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6402) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, I may say at the outset that I request that in the few remarks I shall make I be not interrupted until I have concluded. I expect to speak a very few minutes and at the conclusion of my remarks I shall be happy to answer any questions that may be raised.

But before I discuss the bill under consideration I should like to take just a moment to pay a personal tribute to the Senator from New Jersey who has just

When I came to this body almost 4 years ago, he was one of the first Members of the Senate I met.

I became better acquainted with him, of course, as the years went on. I have come to the complete conviction that, while this statement is applicable to every other Member of the Senate, in connection with his particular habits, his particular attitude, his particular accomplishments, there is no man whom I have met who has proved more conclusively by his life and by his attitude the verity and the truth of the fundamental philosophies and policies which have guided him. He has been a great stimulus. We regret to see him leave; but, as the Senator from West Virginia has so ably said, his councel and his advice will remain

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I yield.

Mr. McFARLAND. I wish to add that I concur in the kind remarks which the Senator has made in regard to the Senator from New Jersey. I have worked with him on committees. It has been a pleasure to know him. He has my best wishes in his future work.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, a combination of circumstances has entered the situation at this moment to cause me to alter my original intentions of about 10 days or 2 weeks ago, when the bill was placed upon the list of bills which must be passed before this session is over. It has been the unfinished business of the Senate for several days, but matters of urgent consideration which had to be decided have displaced it and postponed it from time to time, and certain other considerations have caused delay. So we come to what perhaps is the last day of this session, for the consideration of this bill, which now is House bill 6402, that bill having already passed the House of Representatives and having been substituted earlier today for Senate bill 2589, the bill to extend the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission for a year and 11 months from next August 1.

A few weeks ago the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, through the Senate Members, filed a rather comprehensive majority report setting out the reasons, and, I believe, insofar as the real interests of national safety and genuine confidence in the progress of the Atomic Energy Commission will permit, the details as to why it is an utterly sound, utterly sensible, and utterly practicable, as well as utterly indicated procedure for those terms to be continued en bloc for almost 2 years after the original expiration date fixed by the McMahon Act on its original passage.

The majority report is not only on the desks of Members, and has been for days, but it was placed in the body of the RECORD at the time of filing. I feel confident that Members have seen the report. While it is a report of some length, Senators have undoubtedly gone through it and examined the very logical and sound reasons why this bill should become law.

There is a second matter which has arisen by virtue of the circumstances of the moment, which has caused me to alter my plans somewhat, and that is that on this last day of the session a most important bill to a great many people is now waiting to be considered and acted upon by the Senate, along with others which will follow. The bill is the Federal employees pay bill. I hope that we can proceed with expedition to consider and act upon that bill.

There is another consideration which moves me, and I think I should say it to Members of the Senate in all frankness and candor. It is simply a practical fact, and I think it goes without argument, that the bill which has already passed the House of Representatives and is here must, in the interest of atomic energy and the smooth and confident continuity of the atomic energy program itself, be passed today and become law. Any other course at this moment would be detrimental, and in some ways damaging indeed, to the atomic energy pro-

The realization that this bill must become law is contained in the statements made by Members of the House of Representatives yesterday or the day before, when the bill was passed there. I invite the attention of Senators to the statement and reasoning of Mr. Durham, who is a member of the joint committee. Mr. Durham was one who voted against the bill in committee. While he feels that other proceedings would be better, he nevertheless makes this statement:

I feel that it is in the best interests of the country to adopt this measure at this time.

Mr. Price of Illinois, also a member of the joint committee and one of the Members who voted against the recommendation of this bill, makes the same statement.

I merely refer to these statements as indicating that there is a realization of the vital necessity of this bill becoming law.

I had prepared, and have on my desk, and originally intended to deliver, a statement of some length, in which I attempted to outline in detail the supporting reason why this bill is a good bill, why it is a solution to the difficult problem facing us in connection with atomic energy, and why it must be passed.

The remarks which I had prepared for delivery amplify to some extent, but generally follow, the reasoning of the majority report. That report has been in the hands of Senators for perhaps a month—at least 3 weeks—and I assume that members therefore are familiar with it. It would be in some ways a recapitulation or a rehashing, perhaps, of the general outline contained in that report. I therefore propose to take 5 minutes or so to give merely a few highlights in the reasoning as to why this is a good bill, and then ask that the remarks which I had prepared to deliver at some length be printed in the Record as a statement, so that the reasons can be better amplified for the Record. Then if any questions arise in the minds of Senators I shall be happy to try to answer them. I then hope that Senators who have comments on the bill will be permitted to proceed with as little interruption as possible. I would then be confident that we could reach a vote very shortly on this measure. Later I shall ask that my prepared statement be printed in the Record.

Mr. President, atomic energy descended with a suddenness and startlingness upon the world, at the close of the Japanese war, that was beyond imagination. We suddenly found that we had on our hands the greatest explosive force that had ever been conceived by man, and we had to do something about it. It had vast areas of possibilities for humanitarian and peacetime uses, too. Having this great force on our hands and having the responsibility of it in connection with war, as well as peace, it became incumbent upon this country to find some solution for its control and its safeguarding.

In summary, without going into detail, I call attention to the fact that the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, called the McMahon Act, was passed after lengthy hearings, exhaustive examination, and exploration of the possibilities and the avenues of travel down which we might go. It became the law of the land, and today we are operating under that law.

In that act itself there is a recognition that it was a pioneering adventure into an unknown field, and that undoubtedly it would require amendment, change, and alteration from time to time as conditions unfolded.

It has created the greatest monopoly this Nation has ever seen. It has put in the hands of a commission more power, more authority, and more right to go into more economic and social fields than any other bureau or body of this Government has ever enjoyed before, with the possible exception of the martial emergency We made the provisions contained under this act because the committee and the Congress knew of no other way to handle the matter with the greatest possible safety and security. But in doing so, as I say, we created this great monopoly, interlocked and interlaced with every business, industry, science, electronics, and all the technical professions. We set up a commission to administer this great authority and great power.

We provided in the law that the Commission should hold office for a 2-year period, and it was fully explained that during that period the administration of the policies of the atomic energy set-up under the act could be examined and judged and evaluated.

The law set up a unique relationship between an administrative body of the Government and the Congress of the United States, when it established the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, and gave it power to examine and inquire into and learn about this new venture in public monopoly and public operation. Contrary to the original intent of the law, there has not really been a 2-year period in which to evaluate the administrative policies of the Commission, as applied to the over-all atomic-energy policy as prescribed and laid down in the act.

The bill we are now considering, I wish to make very clear, has nothing whatso-ever to do with the policy of our Government on atomic energy. That policy is outlined and set forth in the act. This bill goes only to the administrative programs to implement that policy. That point must be kept clearly in mind. Nothing in this measure changes the policy on atomic energy as prescribed in the law. This bill touches only the question of the further examination of the administrative programs that are applied to the policy in the development and progress of atomic energy. I said that the full 2-year period for the examination of the beginnings of this program in its administrative part has not been had. The terms of office of the first commissioners would expire 2 years after the effective date of the act. The act became effective on August 1, 1946, and that would make the termination period of the terms of office of the Commissioners August 1, 1948. However, the President did not appoint the Commissioners until about the 1st of November 1946. He did not appoint the General Manager until about the 1st of January 1947; I think it was on December 30, 1946. The nominations of the Commissioners did not come to the Senate until January 20, 1947, and they were not confirmed until some time in April 1947, or approximately 1 year ago. then for the first time got a reliable hold on their offices, and they then began to feel an assurance in the tenure of the office they had, so that they could go ahead with some confidence in the establishment of their administrative programs. The joint committee could not function until about a year ago. So the Commission and the joint committee began almost in infancy, on a reliable basis, approximately 1 year ago.

The Commission has adopted policies. The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy began its studies and has carried them on: but up to this time the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, in my opinion and in the opinion of the majority of the members, has not had sufficient time or sufficient opportunity in volume of experience, in learning about this subject itself, to give to the Congress any sound, reasonable judgment upon which it would ask the Congress to rely in fixing a permanent program or a permanent administrative policy for the Commission, in relation to this subject which is so vitally integrated into the American system.

Therefore, the joint committee by a vote of 11 to 5, with two members not voting, recommended to each House of the Congress that this bill be passed and that the terms of all the Commissioners be extended, en bloc, 1 year and 11 months after the 1st day in August next.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Under that arrangement, there would be no need of confirmation; would there?

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. That is correct.

Mr. CONNALLY. In other words, this measure would automatically extend the present terms of office; would it?

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Yes. We would simply take August 1, 1948, out of the calendar, really, and would insert in its place June 30, 1950.

Mr. CONNALLY. So the Senate would not have to act on the question of confirmation: is that correct?

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. The Senator is quite correct.

Mr. President, there are certain advantages to this procedure. One is that it will establish an uninterrupted continuity of service on the part of the entire Commission, without the chance of having any new appointments next year to the Commission. The entire Commission thus can go forward with confidence and with assurance for over 2 years from this date, and their administrative programs and patterns can be approached with a reliability which might not be the case under any other plan or

The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Congress can have opportunity to see the further development of their plans and programs; and then the Congress—the Senate and the House of Representatives—at that time, if sufficient evidence then exists and if sufficient confidence and judgment have then been established, can determine the permanent administrative pattern, whether it be this type or a slightly changed one, or whatever the developing facts shall show or indicate.

facts shall show or indicate. Just to illustrate, and not by way of suggesting that this should be done, but to illustrate the fact that responsible bodies in this country are now considering that we might well begin at this time to think about whether the basic philosophy of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 should be changed or not, I call Members' attention to the fact that I received yesterday by mail a copy of an article which is to appear in the July issue of the technical journal called Nucleonics. I have checked it and I find it is a reliable, reputable scientific journal, written perhaps for the education of the layman but nevertheless with a high degree of reliable scientific background, and it is published by McGraw-Hill Publications. This article, with the endorsement of the editorial staff of the journal takes up some suggestions under the heading "New legislation to replace McMahon ' and it discusses for instance a com-Act. pletely new theory of administrative control of atomic energy. I do not say it is a good program or a bad program, but I use it merely to illustrate the fact that there is responsible thinking going on in this country now outside the Government, if you please, wondering whether we have the right approach to the control of atomic energy, wondering whether the interests of the country itself would not be better served by some other approach. I do not necessarily think it would; I have not come to those conclusions at all. But I do say that any organization that operates in secrecy as this must, that has such a limited economic power as this organization has,

and as this program has, that is so vitally in control of perhaps the very safety and salvation of this Nation, can well afford to be examined carefully and scrutinized minutely by the Congress of the United States in calmness and over a sufficient period of time so that when a permanent program is finally decided upon, whether it be this one or another one, the Congress will have available the best and most voluminous supporting data, proved by experience, if you please, upon which the American people will rely and for which the Congress need not later be apologetic.

Just one other thing, and then I am through. Unfortunately in the past the cry of politics has been raised about this bill. May I call Members' attention to the fact that of the five members of the Atomic Energy Commission and the General Manager of that Commission, of those five members I know the partisan politics of only two members. They are Republicans, and I am a Republican. I do not know the partisan politics of the other three members, nor do I know the partisan politics of the General Manager. The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy of the Congress, of which I have been honored by being selected as chairman, employs a staff of 16 people. I have never inquired the partisan politics of a single employee of the committee. and I have not been informed as to the partisan politics of any member of the Commission, directly or indirectly, by innuendo or insinuation. The knowledge of the politics of the individual has never been involved in the employment of a single member of that staff, with one exception. I know the politics of one man on the staff, and it is entirely collateral and not applicable at all to the question of his job. He was never asked his politics as a matter of qualifying for his job, and it has been a nonpartisan staff and a nonpartisan activity. I think it is safe to say that in the deliberations of the joint committee-composed of Democrats and Republicans-there has never been a partisan issue as a matter of discussion or action in the committee. I think every member of the committee will agree with that. So I say it is not partisan political activity from that standpoint

Now let us see if it is partisanly political from the standpoint of the criticism that has been raised in certain quarters that all I want to do, or all we want to do on this side is to let a Republican President appoint the Commissioner. Let us see. If the present law, which provides for staggered terms from 1 to 5 years, goes into effect, the next President of the United States under existing law will appoint four of those Commissioners anyway, because four terms will expire in the next Presidential term. The bill extends the whole kit and caboodle of the Commission, if you please, for approximately 2 years; they do all expire at that time, but there would be five appointed at that time instead of four under the situation that presently exists under the law.

No, Mr. President, there is no controlling politics in this matter. There are differences of opinion, there are those who genuinely believe that the staggered terms should be put into effect now, and I respect them for their opinion. There are those who do not believe in this type of Commission, if you please, and I respect them for their opinion. There are those who, for one reason or another, oppose the present provisions of the law, and I respect them for their opinion. But I have found there is the greatest unanimity of opinion in the Congress, among the public, among the scientists, and among the technical people that the 2-year proposition is a workable, a practical proposition and that it will, in fact, enable the Commission to continue with confidence in the development of its programs and its plan.

I said I was going to say just one more thing. I want to mention just one other This was a tremendous job. The Manhattan District that had it during wartime developed a multibillion dollar corporation. It ramified throughout the country. It was in many ways a mysterious and a complicated establishment. The Commission took it over and is today still operating in great measure upon the pattern and the plan and the program of the Manhattan District. Certain changes have begun to be made. certain experiments have begun to be gone into, but the records and the history and the proof of the soundness of present administrative policies is not sufficiently mature at this time to warrant final conclusions in a matter of such vital im-

Mr. President, I merely wish to quote one paragraph which I think is significant, to me, at least, in closing my remarks. I wish to call attention to the fact that this legislation is not to be interpreted or accepted as a criticism of the present Commission. Rather do I interpret it as a cooperative activity to enable them to go forward with greater confidence and with greater continuity of authority and operation of the Commission for an additional year and

Personally, I believe this view is shared by the majority of the joint committee, I hope to see the present Commission given further and adequate opportunity to bring its administrative plans to a higher state of completion by extending their terms until June 30, 1950. I think it is fair to the Commission members. I think it is fair to the scientists, the technicians, the contractors, and the employees. I think it is in the best interests of the American people. The thing which would contribute to restlessness within the atomic-energy project would be the precipitate establishment of a permanent administrative arrangement. the advisability of which is now seriously questioned by many who have only the vigorous development of the program at

I may have a word or two to say later, before the final vote, in an effort frankly and factually to discuss matters that might be in doubt. Above all I want to see atomic energy kept on a basis of acceptance by the Congress, of acceptance by the American people, and of united support and vigorous support by the Congress. I see no reason why that cannot be. I see no reason why the bill cannot contribute to that end, and I see every reason why the enactment of the bill will contribute to it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record, following my verbal statement, my prepared remarks.

There being no objection, the remarks were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. President, in considering the passage of H. R. 6402, the sole effect of which is to extend the expiration date of the terms of the present Atomic Energy Commissioners from August 1, 1948, to June 30, 1950, the Senate is considering a vital matter deeply affecting our national economy, our pattern of Government operation, and our national security.

The Atomic Energy Act of 1946 was passed as a result of the urgent necessity for setting up the most reliable controls over atomic weapon production and development in order to maintain the preeminence of the United States in this field. In considering the provisions of the act, it became the inevitable conclusion of the committees of the Senate and of the House, and of the Congress itself, that a monopolistic enterprise in the hands of the Government was the unavoidable device by which security and progress could be combined and so the act was so designed.

The program for the operation of the atomic energy enterprise was defined in that act and still is the program of this Nation. I point out now that H. R. 6402 does not alter or change the program of atomic-en-ergy activities in this country, but that it only goes to the matter of further time for the examination, consideration, and reliable establishment of administrative policies as set up and carried out by the Atomic Energy Commission, that most efficiently put into effect the program already established and confirmed by law. A commission of five civilians and a general manager were provided for with broad authority to adopt and put into effect these administrative policies. At the time of the passage of the act it was fully realized that this was a new venture in governmental operations; the theory of Government monopoly in this field was accepted by the Congress and the Nation because there seemed to be no other way to handle it. This theory demanded and the law confirmed the placing of vast and exclusive powers in the hands of the Atomic Energy Commission. These powers are more extensive than any peacetime powers heretofore possessed by any Government department and these powers are exercised through-out innumerable fields of our social and economic system. Tremendous appropriations and authorizations, which, when combined, exceed a total of over $1,000,000 a year are requested by this Commission and have been granted by the Congress without the furnishing of or the requirement of detailed break-downs as to their need and expenditure universally required in other agencies and departments of Government. Without specific comment at this time, I call the attention of the Members of the Senate to the fact that this situation is causing concern within the Congress and quote from the report of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives in connection with the independent offices appropriation bill filed with the Committee of the Whole House on June 13, 1947, as follows:

"The committee considered a budget estimate totaling $250,000,000 for this purpose together with a contract authorization for an additional $250,000,000. The committee heard the Commission in connection with the estimates on two different occasions. On the first occasion, the committee found it impossible to obtain definite information as to the distribution and use of personnel requested or to secure a reasonably comprehensive break-down as to the distribution of funds requested for other objects of expenditure.

"The committee thereupon requested the Commission to make a further survey and report back at a later date, giving an administrative break-down as to personnel and a somewhat detailed break-down of other estimated expenditures in order that a concrete picture could be obtained as to the distribution of funds under the estimate of $250,000,000.

"The committee regrets to report that the second hearing of this agency falled to produce any substantial additional information which would warrant appropriation of the amount requested in the budget estimate."

In order to show that this impression of the House Appropriations Committee has not substantially changed in a year's time, I call your attention to the statement of that committee submitted to the Committee of the Whole House on June 8, 1948, in connection with the supplemental independent offices appropriation bill, in which the committee states:

"The committee is not satisfied with its relations to date with the Atomic Energy Commission. The committee is fully aware of the vital importance, particularly under present world conditions, of the work of the Commission and of the technical aspects connected with it, and is desirous of making every provision for its adequate support. However, the Commission's refusal to furnish the committee with information and appraisals of its various budgeted items, based on technical information which can be available only to the Commission, because of the scientific and secret character of the work involved, leaves much to be desired in establishing the confidence which the committee must have if it is to continue to supply these large grants of funds conditions of secrecy which prevent full dis-closure of the details involved.

"As a matter of fact, there is some feeling among the membership of the committee that the Commission has taken advantage of its strategic position in modern military defense to avoid facing the practical realities on less important and subsidiary elements of their budget. The impression left with the committee is one of general extravagance."

These passages are quoted above to show that the operations of the Commission and the Atomic Energy Enterprise are clothed with secrecy and with authority and that the absence of detailed information creates areas of uncertainty and dissatisfaction within important and responsible committees of the Congress.

This is not an unanticipated situation. The Congress realized that full examination into the activities of the Commission would not be in the public interest. Therefore, the Congress, also realizing that it must in some manner set up a mechanism by which information could be secured as to the development and the progress of the whole atomic energy project, established by law the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy to which the Commission is required to report with full and current information in connection with its activities in this program. The joint committee is further charged with making continuing studies of atomic energy activities and to make such recommendations to the Congress, from time to time, as it feels to be in the public interest.

to be in the public interest.

The Atomic Energy Act wisely provided that the terms of the first commissioners should extend for 2 years after the effective date of the act thus giving a minimum of 2 years' time during which the joint committee, the Congress, and the public might have an opportunity to evaluate the progress of the administrative policies which would administer the program set up by law. However, while the Atomic Energy Act became effective by the President's signature on August 1, 1946, the first commissioners were not appointed by the President until October 28, 1946, while Congress was in recess, and the general manager was not appointed until December 30, 1946. The transfer of the affairs of the Manhattan district to the commission did not occur until January 1, 1947. Thereafter the Congress convened and the nominations of the commissioners and the general manager were sent to the Senate by the President on January 20, 1947. Hearings on these nominations consumed a substantial portion of the time of the commissioners and of the general manager their confirmation on the 9th of April 1947, slightly over a year ago. Under the law, the expiration date of the commissioners is August 1, 1948. It is only fair to say, in justice to the commissioners themselves, that the uncertainty resulting from the circumstances surrounding the late appointments of the commissioners and the general manager, and the period of time consumed in their conation, made it difficult if not impossible for the commission prior to April 1947, to feel any reasonable security in the tenure of their offices or in the appropriateness of their attempting to set up substantial administrative policies for a peacetime opera-tion under the act. In fact, it has been stated in hearings before the joint committee with the commission, that the commission actually did not feel that they were in "effective control" until approximately June of

By the same token, the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy set up by the Congress for its own service, was unable to begin a satisfactory organization until late in April 1947. It was necessary for the Joint Committee to pioneer in the field of staff selection and to begin the development of a pattern of study of the atomic-energy program. The Joint Committee's responsibilities, by law, are more extensive than receiving information as furnished it by the commission. It is affirmatively charged with making continuing studies of the program and its administration. During the past year, the committee has been developing organization and techniques for the most effective receipt of information as well as initiating its own studies of the various phases of the entire operation.

The Joint Committee in a unanimous report of January 30, 1948, made to each House of Congress, clearly stated the inadequacy of cumulative information and the need for continued examination of policies and program, as follows:

"As a legislative committee, it does not feel that it should at this time draw any final conclusions respecting the operation of this program or the administrative policies in effect. Sufficient time has not elapsed to warrant conclusions of this kind. This is not to be construed either as an attitude of hostility or an attitude of approval, but on the contrary, expresses an attitude on the part of the committee to objectively evaluate the various phases of the program as a result of more mature operation."

Less than 3 months after this unanimous statement by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and approximately 4½ months prior to August 1, 1948, the expiration date of the terms of the Commissioners, the President sent to the Senate the nominations for commissioners with terms of 1 to 5 years beginning August 1, 1948. To the best of my knowledge no member of the Joint committee or other Member of the Congress was consulted. I do not suggest that the President is under any compulsion to consult with members of the committee or Members of Congress as to his appointments. I respect the President's constitutional prerogative of exercising his judgment in connection with nominations which he is authorized to make. Atomic energy, however, has been approached by the Congress as a nonpartisan and therefore a nonpolitical common interest of the whole American people and the joint committee and the Congress have respected the nonpolitical nature of this program. It is surprising, therefore, and not without peculiar significance, that the President neglected to cooperatively consult with the joint committee or others in the Congress as to the progress, efficiency, or propriety of the present administrative plan.

As quoted above, the joint committee on January 30 expressed the need for more time to study the administrative pattern. Several members of the committee were giving serious consideration to the necessity for an extension of the terms of the present Commissioners and the reasonable postponement of the permanent 5-year term plan. The exceptionally early submission of the nominations by the President precipitated this issue and caused it to be passed upon by the joint committee and recommended to the Congress at a somewhat earlier date than might have otherwise occurred.

The joint committee did consider S. 2589, together with its companion bill, H. R. 6402, and reported both bills to the respective houses of Congress on May 17, 1948. The report of the joint committee on S. 2589 is on the desk of each member and sets out in more detail than time will permit in these remarks of mine the general reasons why the bill should be passed. Without taking the time to read that report now, I call attention of Members to the report and ask unanimous consent that a copy of that report be printed as a statement at this point in my remarks.

The report (No. 1342) is as follows:
"The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, through the Senate members thereof, to whom was referred S: 2589, a bill to extend the time of the expiration date of the terms of the members of the Atomic Energy Commission from August 1, 1948, to June 30, 1950, report the bill back to the Senate with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

"The atomic-energy program was developed during World War II as a military project for the production of atomic weapons. They were successfully produced under military direction as a result of the unprecedented coordination of the highest degress of scientific, engineering, and industrial skills ever mobilized.

"In the process, startling and revolutionary scientific discoveries were made which suggested unlimited future possibilities for research and development in the field of social and humanitarian benefits. Complete emphasis, however, was placed on the development of a weapon and these other discoveries or possibilities were laid aside, at the time, for future investigation, research, and development in a peaceful atmosphere.

development in a peaceful atmosphere.

"With the end of the war the problem of how to handle atomic energy for the good of mankind became paramount. It was universally agreed that the bomb must be secured, if possible, against international use in war, and this principle became a major consideration in all domestic approaches or suggestions to the problem. It also became a special and intensive problem of the United Nations within which a special Atomic Energy Commission was immediately set up with specific terms of reference directed toward a solution of this problem.

"Meanwhile, the Congress commenced immediate studies for the purpose of passing proper legislation for the control and for the advancement and development of the limitless possibilities of this science. A special committee of the Senate and the Military Affairs Committee of the House over a period of months devoted time and held extensive hearings which eventually resulted in the passage of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, approved by the President on August 1, 1946.

"In considering the original legislation, the Congress, and eminent citizens who testified, recognized the pioneering nature of the project; the revolutionary power of the bomb; the perils of unrestricted tampering with the dangerous products of atomic fission and the possibilities of new and unforeseen dislocations in industry and social fields. The fact that there was no historical experience for guidance, when considered with other factors, indicated that any legislation and any program undoubtedly would be subject to future change as a result of mature experience.

"In section 1 (A) of the act, it is clearly stated as follows:

"The effect of the use of atomic energy for civilian purposes upon the social, economic, and political structures of today cannot be determined. It is a field in which unknown factors are involved."

"The declaration continues:

"Therefore, any legislation will necessarily be subject to revision from time to time. It is reasonable to anticipate, however, that tapping this new source of energy will cause profound changes in our present way of life."

"In section 1 (B) (5), the law further

"'A program of administration which will be consistent with the foregoing polices and with international arrangements made by the United States, and which will enable the Congress to be currently informed so as to take further legislative action as may hereafter be appropriate.'

"The report from the Senate Special Committee on Atonic Energy, which accompanied S. 1717, states:

"'It is recognized that many unforeseeable developments may arise in this field requiring changes in the legislation from time to time."

"The Congress recognized that under the provisions of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, which placed this vast enterprise in the hands of a commission to operate, there was being created the greatest administrative monopoly with the most far-reaching power ever set up in this country; but there was no other course. The authority of this Commission is greater than any other commission or bureau either heretofore or presently established in Government. It ramifies throughout industry, management, labor, and natural resources. Its authority extends into the international field of atomic energy. Because of the secrecy necessary to preserve the knowledge essential to the production of atomic weapons the operation of this vast set-up is clothed with restrictions and mandates for security, and the opportunity for public examination and evaluation of its progress and of the impact of its activities upon our normal peacetime or even potential wartime economy are nonexistent. This situation is unique in administrative policy of our Nation. It places solemn responsibility upon your joint committee.

"The Atomic Energy Commission is presently operating on an annual basis of over $600,000,000 in cash and $300,000,000 in contract authorizations. It has unlimited discretion in the types and kinds of goods and raw materials it buys; it has complete control over the extent to which private enter-prise may venture in this field; it preempts patents; it has full authority over all phases of production and activity in atomic energy; it has, subject to certain responsibilities of periodic direction by the President, complete discretion and control over the production of atomic weapons; it can make foreign contracts and arrangements; it can contract with State and local governments; it operates municipalities, is the landlord, and subsidizes many local services traditionally within the province of private enterprise; it has the duty of extensive participation in the fields of public health; it is authorized to participate and is participating in agricultural and industrial research and development and may give or withhold its aid in its discretion. broad powers enable it to establish and maintain countless programs which are not clearly defined. It employs, either directly or through its operating contractors, over 55,000 people who, with their families, probably total 200,000; it has discretionary authority over the release or the withholding of information affecting the program.

"The Atomic Energy Commission, because of the nature of its duties and the extent of its power, can exercise decisive control over the destiny of our Nation and the lives of our people.

"The Congress, under the Atomic Energy Act, and in consideration of the inherent dangers and problems involved, deemed these broad powers essential for the protection of the public and in order to prevent if possible the devastating use of atomic weapons in war. In addition, these powers have been deemed initially essential in order that we may make the greatest progress and maintain our preeminence in the advancement of the science of atomic energy. Your committee refers to these powers therefore to illustrate the magnitude of the social and economic area within which atomic energy operates and to emphasize that its growth and integration into the American system of individual free enterprise must be carefully measured and that hasty decisions as to a permanent administrative pattern are unwarranted and unwise.

"Because of the unprecedented monopolistic control of atomic energy set up in the Government through the Commission, the Congress, in section 15 of the act, created the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy com-posed of nine Members of each House. This committee has a responsibility to 'make continuing studies of the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission and of problems relating to the development, use, and control of atomic energy."

"This section further provides that—
"The Commission shall keep the joint committee fully and currently informed with respect to the Commission's activities.

'It was intended that by setting up such a joint committee, necessary secrecy of the project could be preserved, but at the same time a responsible body of Congress would be constantly kept informed so that it would be able, from time to time, to make such recommendations for legislation affecting the policy and operation of the atomic-energy program, and to make such reports, as might be indicated in the public interest.

"Although the law went into effect on August 1, 1946, the President did not appoint the members of the Commission until October 28, 1946, and the general manager was not appointed until December 30, 1946. transfer of the affairs of the Manhattan district (which was the wartime agency in charge of this project) to the Commission occurred on January 1, 1947. The nominations were sent to the Senate by the President on January 20, 1947, and thereafter beginning on January 27, a substantial portion of the time of the Commissioners and the general manager was devoted to hearings on the question of the confirmation of their nominations until their confirmation on the 9th of April 1947. The first terms of the Commissioners were fixed by law for expira-tion 2 years after August 1, 1946, which was the effective date of the act.

"In fixing the term of office for the first Commissioners at 2 years after the effective date of the act, it was the purpose of the Congress to provide at least a 2-year period for examination and observation of the program. The legislative intent to provide an initial 2-year term was predicated upon the sound reasoning that in an undertaking of this magnitude a minimum of 2 years would be necessary before any valid evaluation of the administrative policies could be made. These terms all expire on August 1, 1948. Since the Commission was not confirmed unsince the Commission was not commissed un-til the 9th day of April 1947 and from a prac-tical standpoint has had uninterrupted and unquestioned security in the performance of its duties only since that time, it is obvi-ous that there has been but 1 year for the reliable formulation of programs and for observation and study instead of the 2-year period wisely contemplated by the law.

"The transition from the military opera-tion to eventual full control by the Atomic Energy Commission was accompanied by many dislocations and uncertainties. lowing the confirmation of the Commissioners, they and the joint committee undertook the coordination of their respective duties; on the one hand, the Commission went forward with plans for the development of their administrative policies under the act and, on the other, the joint committee began to in-form itself and receive information as to the entire situation and the proposals for future development.

"As noted before, the necessary activities of the Commission ramify throughout the general economy and the national policy of our Nation. It is a pioneering venture of a new, vast, and startling nature; there was no history or experience of a similar peace-time operation upon which the Commission or the joint committee could rely. In this year that has passed some programs have been set up and many policies considered, some of which have been adopted; many have remained under consideration without determination; others have been rejected. There has been some reorientation of attitude in connection with the setting up and expansion of these policies and programs. Not only have problems of personnel, science, industry, and labor been confronted, but many questions involving the interpretation of the act and the powers and responsibilities of the Commission have arisen.

"Many of the key members of the Commission's staff have been employed in recent months in connection with the establishment of new policies and new administrative approaches. Many of the Commission's policies are in the process of formulation. Many of the plans of the Commission are on the drafting table. These are conditions to be reasonably expected. Fairness to the Commission dictates that additional time be allowed for the Commission to develop more definitely its administrative policies in order to justify conclusion as to the final direction of this program.

"The Commission has just announced the recent test of an atomic weapon which is the culmination of researches and plans begun 3 to 4 years ago. The results of such progressive developments cannot now be adequately or properly evaluated as to their long-range effect upon the national needs.

"In the field of patents, while the law sets up a framework for establishing a program patent acquisition and compensation, no such program has as yet been finally estab-lished in this field hitherto sacred to the in-"Recent events have shown that labormanagement disputes in vital installations have threatened continuity of operation. In one instance a settlement was had 2 hours after the so-called deadline for a walk-out. At the time of filing this report, this same installation is again in the throes of a labor dispute and is presently operating as a re-sult of injunction proceedings instituted under the Taft-Hartley Act. The effective period of that injunction is rapidly running out. The joint committee is determined that labor-management policies be reliably established so that continuity of operation can be assured in these vital plants. committee has held hearings on this subject, but no satisfactory formula was presented or developed. The joint committee has asked the Atomic Energy Commission to provide it with its plans for the accomplishment of this purpose. The joint committee is aware that the Atomic Energy Commission is also vitally interested in the accomplishment of this purpose, but the Commission has not as yet developed its specific proposals for the reliable solution of this problem.

"The Commission recently has begun to put into effect a changing theory of sectional operation of the program which is in the na-ture of decentralization. This method of This method of operation may have much to recommend it but only experience can demonstrate whether or not it is a progressive move.

"While many advisory groups have been set up by law and by the Commission, to give it advice and suggestions as to the development of pertinent phases of the atomic energy program, it is to be noted that the joint committee has received few reports of these advisory groups and, therefore, is in no position to reliably gage either the extent of these recommendations or the degree to which such recommendations have been accepted and put into effect or held in abeyance, or rejected, by the Commission.

"In a number of areas the joint committee has requested, from the Commission and other vital coordinating agencies, information, conclusions, and recommendations which will aid in evaluating the national program and its operation. Information has not as yet been furnished to the joint committee enabling it to fully comprehend or determine long-range goals of production and operation policies of the Commission. This reference is not made by way of criticism but merely to indicate that the composite circumstances involved in our public affairs and within our economy create a certain indefiniteness that needs time and the unfolding of events before long-range policies can be fully justified. "It is to be noted that the Military Liaison Committee, the vital link between the defense establishments and the Atomic Energy Commission, has undergone a reorganization within very recent weeks. What the bene-ficial results of this action may be cannot be presently evaluated.

"Due to the nature of the Commission's operation, its budgetary and accounting problems are ramified and very extensive. The accounting situation has been more complicated because of the fact that under previous wartime operation of this project necessitating complete secrecy, utmost speed, etc., standardized accounting procedures were not in effect; therefore, historic detailed costs are not fully available. A satisfactory system has not yet been set up. This fact is recognized by the Appropriations Committees of the Congress as well as by the Com-mission itself in its most recent report of February 2, 1948.

"It is to be noted that, in addition to strict scientific and production activities of the Commission, it is involved, under existing policies, in the operation of cities and towns within the project. The problems of such operations are under serious consideration, both by the Commission and by the joint committee. Complicated problems of jurisdiction, of administrative authority, of voting rights, including prerogatives attendant upon residence, town management, court jurisdiction, heavy subsidies, schooling, pub-lic utilities, and other problems, demand careful and more mature experience and examination before any final policies with respect thereto can be adopted by the Congress or by the Commission.

"A vital section of the efficient and progressive advancement of atomic science is the reactor program. Recently a basic change in the operation of this program has been decided upon and certain preliminary steps to effectuate this change have been undertaken. The operation of this proposed program will be and must be continuously under the most careful observation for a substantial period of time. Only experience can evaluate this move.

"The importance of establishing satisfactory and adequate personnel programs in the operation of this project is evident. The necessity for security cannot be disputed. Policies for assuring the personnel security of the project under conditions of fairness to individuals but at the same time protecting inviolate the rights of the public and the integrity of this national venture, have been and still are in a state of study and trial. The Commission has been searching for a final formula and the joint committee has been concerned with the necessity that a reliable formula be established.

"The unsettled international situation has a direct effect upon the pattern of our atomicenergy program. Had a satisfactory system of international control been established, certain provisions of the Atomic Energy Act, in due time, would have automatically become void and many vital powers of the Commission would have been transferred to an international agency. It is now conceded, however, after nearly 2 years of exhaustive effort in the United Nations, that satisfactory universal agreement for reliable international control of atomic energy is presently impossible. Only time and maturing events will enable us to determine the permanent direction of our administrative policies in this field.

"It is important to emphasize that these matters which have been referred to are conditions which suggest the formative nature of our atomic-energy program and by no means indicate a lack of progress. Further, they must not be interpreted as a criticism of the Commission or as evidence that the joint committee lacks confidence in the present Commission. Since the confirmation of the Commissioners on April 9, 1947, very definite progress has been made in our atomic-energy program. This fact is encouraging but would in no way justify any hasty conclusions based upon insufficient knowledge as to the advisability of any particular permanent administrative pattern in this gigantic but infant national venture.

"On January 30, 1948, your joint committee filed a unanimous report to each House of the Congress and, clearly recognizing the present inadequacy of the cumulative information and the definite need for continued examination before a final conclusion of any kind could be drawn about the long-range administration of this program, stated:

"'As a legislative committee, it does not feel that it should at this time draw any final conclusions respecting the operation of this program or the administrative policies in effect. Sufficient time has not elapsed to warrant conclusions of this kind. This is not to be construed either as an attitude of hostility or an attitude of approval, but on the contrary expresses an attitude on the part of the committee to objectively evaluate the various phases of the program as a result of more mature opportunity.'

"The passage of this bill will immediately give assurance of uninterrupted continuity in office for 2 years and 2 months following the date of this report during which the present Commission can continue without disruption or without the necessity of reappointment. Any programs and policies now under way can be observed and brought into substantial operation; it will give approximately 2 years more for the over-all evaluation of the atomic energy program and its theory of operation. It will insure continuity and confidence and it will give assurance of continuity of operation and program upon which all employees, contractors, and consultants may rely.

"The joint committee strongly emphasizes to the Congress that in the performance of its duty it has conducted, and intends to conduct, its business relating to atomic energy, and to the Atomic Energy Commission, on a totally nonpolitical basis. The joint committee unequivocally declares its determination to support the best and most progressive atomic energy program which can be developed to maintain our preeminence in this field. The committee has been guided, at all times, by one paramount principle and that is to maintain a course of conduct which will best serve to build confidence in, acceptance of, and support for a sound and vigorous atomic energy program. This is essential for the safety of the United States and for the peace of the world. It is in furtherance of this principle that your committee considered this legislation.

"Your committee therefore recommends that the bill do pass."

This report gives a general indication of the extensive powers, the ramified activities, and the many undetermined areas in which vital decisions and vital administrative programs have not been and perhaps as yet cannot be reliably established.

This report sets out the reasons why the joint committee urges that the Congress pass S. 2589 and continue the present terms of office of the atomic energy commissioners to June 30, 1950. This course of action will permit a more firm establishment of administrative policies and will allow time for an objective evaluation by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. Before fixing the permanent administrative organization, additional mature experience will be available and therefore the interests of the American people will be served.

Unfortunately and without any justification, the cry of politics has been raised in certain quarters about this bill. The genesis of the injection of this political charge is in the White House, as evidenced by a news story in the New York Times of April 21, 1947, the date on which the President sent the nominations to the Senate, quoting an alleged White House spokesman who was said to have charged the Republicans with politics in connection with the Atomic Energy Commission. From then on every attempt has been made from administration sources to insinuate partisan politics in this issue.

I would like to make the record clear. I am informed as to the partisan politics of only two members of the Atomic Energy Commission and they, I am told, are Republicans. I do not know to what political party the other three members belong. I do not know the partisan opinions of the general manager of the Commission. Partisan affiliations have not been an element in the selection or employment of any member of the staff serving the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy.

I have never inquired, and so far as I know the others members of the joint committee have never inquired, as to the partisan association of any member of the staff.

The joint committee has kept entirely free of partisan activities or influences, believing atomic energy and its development should and must be nonpartisan and should and must be approached from the standpoint of the broad interest of the American people. This bill is sponsored by a Republican and a Democrat. It is true that if this bill be-comes a law the terms of all five commissioners would expire on June 30, 1950; and, therefore, if the pattern of 5-year terms was put into effect at that time, the next President would nominate five commissioners. It is to be emphasized and understood, however, that in any event the present situation were all present terms expire August 1 this year, the terms of four of the five commissioners would expire within the next 4 years and would be subject to the nomination and appointment by the next President of the United States.

Therefore, it is not a question, Mr. President, of Presidential appointments but rather a vital question concerning the establishment of a reliable and a satisfactory pattern of administration for atomic energy. By passing this proposed legislation, the Congress will eventually have before it a substantial history of development which will furnish guidance in the adoption of the permanent administrative pattern.

Again I call to your attention the fact that the joint committee and the Commission itself has had, for all practical purposes, only I year to operate in this unique field of Government activity. As pointed out in the report of the joint committee on this bill, many policies of the Commission have not been finally adopted and no evaluation thereof can be made by the joint committee. The joint committee has collected and is collecting considerable information but it cannot evaluate any over-all program until the policies of that program have been more adequately developed.

The statement has been made that the extension of these terms would disrupt the organization or interfere with progress in the development of atomic energy. I think it should be clear beyond argument that, to the contrary, the proposal would contribute to confidence and would insure continuity of authority and operation of the Commission for an additional year and eleven months. During this time the Commission can work out and put into effect policies that are now embryonic or in the early stages of proof. It is also to be recalled that this bill does not affect the tenure of the general manager of the Commission.

The members of the Atomic Energy Commission have worked zealously but in most instances they are still operating under the program and pattern of the Manhattan engineer district. This is not pointed out by way of adverse criticism but as plain fact. Our atomic-energy program as a peacetime program is vast and far-reaching. No doubt it has been grafted permanently upon our social and economic system but it is a matter of plain common sense that it be examined with caution and with thoroughness if it is to be successfully developed as an integrated part of our future life. Its monopolistic phases, its secrecy, its delegation of unprecedented peacetime powers demand the most careful study and the most reliable assurances that can be obtained.

Nor should any final policies be governed by personalities or individuals. If we are to remain a nation of laws and not of men, a nation in which fundamentals control and individuals administer, then we must realize that the atomic-energy program and the interests of the American people are the controlling factors and that individuals who administer the program, capable though they must be, are only important, temporary elements. Personally, and I believe this view is shared by the majority of the joint committee, I hope to see the present Commission given further and adequate opportunity to bring its administrative plans to a higher state of completion by extending their terms until June 30, 1950. I think this is fair to the Commission members; I think it is fair to the scientists, the technicians, the contractors, and the employees; and I think it is in the best interests of the American people.

The thing that would contribute to restlessness within the atomic energy project would be the precipitate establishment of a permanent administrative arrangement, the advisability of which is now seriously questioned by many who have only the vigorous development of the program at heart. The extension of 2 years will certainly give time for more satisfactory examination and proof and should represent a more satisfactory solution. I believe it represents a perfectly sound and practical compromise between those, on the one hand, who desire to set up the permanent administrative arrangement as originally contemplated in the law and those on the other hand who are presently definitely opposed to the beginning of the long-term arrangements at this time. I earnestly hope that the Senate will act favorably on H. R. 6402, and I give you my assurance and, I believe, the assurance of my colleagues who support this measure, that the passage of this bill will be in the genuine interest of the vigorous development of the atomic energy program.

MAINTENANCE OF DOMESTIC TIN-SMELT-ING INDUSTRY-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BALDWIN. I submit a conference report on Senate bill 2830, to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be read.

The conference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2830) to extend for five years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tinsmelting industry, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the text of the bill and agree to the same with amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert "June 30, 1951"; and the House agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the title of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amended title proposed by the House, amend the title so as to read: "An Act to extend for two years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestie tin-smelting industry"; and the House agree to the same.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

PRICE POLICIES OF LARGE INDUSTRIAL CORPORATIONS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I gave notice yesterday that it was my intention to make some remarks about the price policies of large industrial corporations. It would be altogether inappropriate to make those remarks at this time. I therefore ask unanimous consent that I may offer the remarks for printing in a succeeding issue of the Congres-SIONAL RECORD, to be printed in the same manner as though I had delivered them on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I did not understand the request of the Senator.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. My request was simply this, that yesterday I gave notice that it was my intention to make some remarks on the Senate floor on the problem of price policies of large industrial and commercial corporations. I say it is altogether inappropriate to make those remarks in the present state of the session, and I merely ask unanimous consent, in accordance with the practice in former years, that the remarks be printed in a subsequent edition of the Congres-SIONAL RECORD.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. I was not aware that it was the practice to have editions of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD subsequent to the day of adjournment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, yes, that has been customary for years.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Did I not also hear the Senator add that he wished to have the remarks printed precisely as though he had delivered them on the floor of the Senate?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct. Mr. VANDENBERG. I dislike ever to disagree with my friend from Wyoming, but I believe that is in complete violation of the practice.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I know it is a violation of the practice that was followed prior to the assembly of the Eightieth Congress, but during the Eightieth Congress I have noticed that rule has been more honored in the breach than in the

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not believe that is quite a fair statement.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The President pro tempore is in constant touch with the Chief of the Official Reporters on this subject, and whenever a situation of this sort occurs, it is usually brought to the attention of the President pro tempore. What the Senator suggests is not a good habit. The Senator I am sure will agree in that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. O'MAHONEY. I quite agree. Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senate does not operate on the same basis with the House with respect to the publication of undelivered remarks.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I know that, and would not make bold to make such a request if it were not for the fact that Senators did not want matters which were not pertinent discussed. Of course, I can take the floor and make the speech.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I was about to say to the Senator that I have no objection in the world to the publication of his statement as a statement in the RECORD, but I do not think it should be printed as though delivered on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I shall ask that it be printed in the Appendix, if that will satisfy the Senator.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is entirely satisfactory.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. My desire in requesting that it be printed as though it had been delivered was merely to be sure that the remarks were not printed in the minute type which we cannot read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CONFERRING OF JURISDICTION ON NEW YORK STATE RESPECTING OFFENSES COMMITTED ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRICKER in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1683) to confer jurisdiction on the State of New York with respect to offenses committed on Indian reservations within such State, which was, in line 8, after "State", insert "Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to deprive any Indian tribe, band, or community, or members thereof, hunting and fishing rights as guaranteed them by agreement, treaty, or custom, nor require them to obtain State fish and game licenses for the exercise of such rights."

Mr. ECTON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House. The motion was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF TERMS OF MEMBERS OF ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6402) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, I am fully conscious of the fact that we are not many hours away from the adjournment of this session of the Congress. I am also conscious of the fate that awaits my efforts. I shall be defeated. The bill upon which we will be called to vote has been before the Senate now for about 5 weeks. It had been my earnest hope that we would have had plenty of time to deliberate and consider a proposal which may well have such far-reaching consequences on the life and the peace and the happiness of the people of the United States and of the world.

I think that the present proposal which has been advanced by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Hickenlooper] can only be properly considered in the framework of the situation which confronts the United States and the world today—a situation in which the informed know that only the possession of a stock of atomic bombs by the United States of America maintains the balance of power in a very uncertain peace.

Mr. President, as the Senator from Connecticut, who was the former chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee, I wish to take a moment to pay a tribute to my colleague from Iowa, who succeeded me as chairman, for the diligence with which he has undertaken his duties. and his unfailing courtesy to me at all times. It is with real regret that I find it necessary to disagree with the proposal which he has advanced.

Mr. President, our record in the field of atomic energy is something of which we can be rightfully and truly proud. I do not intend to take the time now to review the efforts which we have made to get this force under international control. I shall only briefly allude to it, because I have been the recipient of a bitter attack by the Soviet delegate, Mr. Gromyko, at the last session of the Commission seeking atomic agreement. Mr. Gromyko on the night before last said that the Senator from Connecticut and the former eminent Secretary of State, Mr. James Byrnes, were clanking their atomic armor, and that we have been backing a proposal to which the Soviet Union could not agree, and which was designed to promote war and not peace. I stated to the press at that time that I could no better answer him than to quote the immortal words of Bernard Baruch, when on June 14, 1946, in opening these negotiations he stated "that the world was engaging in a race be-tween the quick and the dead." It is my sincere and heartfelt conviction that I have voted for life with all of the American policymakers in this field, and Gromyko has voted for death.

I say, Mr. President, it was the vision of some of us that we might be well today on the road to world disarmament if we had been successful in concluding an agreement with the other countries of the world, including Russia, for the complete control of this force, a force which can destroy and a force out of which can come life and good.

After interminable negotiations, and after interminable hours, and weary hours, and days of debate, all countries that were members of that commission came to the final conclusion that the only satisfactory and effective agreement for the international control of this force was the program that had been advanced by the Government of the United States. All governments agreed except the Soviet

Mr. President, if they had agreed there would not have been need for appropriation in the Congress, as we have done, the sum of billions and billions for our defense. If they had agreed at Lake Success the dawn of a new and glorious day would have broken over a war-weary world. Today we would have been marching down the blessed paths of peace to which all decent men hope and

Mr. President, I know why the Senator from Connecticut has been singled out for the animadversions of Mr. Vishinsky and Mr. Gromyko. When they are attacked on their policy in Europe, when they are attacked on their policy in South America, when they are attacked on their policy in Turkey, or when they attack us respecting our policy in Greece, they bring forth their propaganda from Moscow, and if Senators listen to it, they will find that much of it has a certain ring of truth. So they do not particularly care what any Senator should say in this Chamber regarding their policies, economic propaganda, or social policies that they are advancing to seek domination of the world. But, Mr. President, they do care when you start to put the wood to them on this policy, because on this policy it is as demonstrable as that two and two make four that it is right. that it is objectively right, and that they cannot answer.

That is why I shall be expecting more and more attacks, not only from Vishinsky but from Gromyko and the rest of them, because they know that it is dangerous to have their obstinancy and intransigence shown on this vital and key policy upon which the world must depend for peace. They know it is absolutely necessary that they suppress the truth, if they can, regarding our efforts. Those efforts we must take forward to the world. We must advertise them to the world. We must let the world know that we are for total disarmament, and that this is the first and vital step. If the peoples of the world understand that. then we need have no fear whether they will back us in our determination to give our total support to a policy that there shall be total and complete peace and not total war.

Mr. President, I merely allude to our international policy as more or less of a framework for our domestic policy which is so vitally affected by the pending proposal.

The bill which became an act and which bears my name was an act upon which more work was done than by any Senate committee I know of, at least in my 4 years in the Congress. It was pursued line by line, comma by comma, paragraph by paragraph. It was torn apart and put together and torn apart and put together again. In the determinations and the deliberations that gave birth to this act there was not the slightest bit of partisanship, there was not the slightest suggestion of Democratic or Republican or any other kind of politics.

It would seem unnecessary to make such an assertion, Mr. President, because after all sane men know that what we are dealing with is a force that underlies the universe. It is the basic force of nature. There is no politics in the atom, gentlemen, and any suggestion that it has even barely attained the faint aroma of the pork barrel must be resisted with all the force at our command.

Mr. President, Senators know what that act provides. Senators know the law under which the Commission is operating this enterprise, the most gigantic of all Government operations and works.

I now wish to call attention to the statement of the former Secretary of War, Mr. Patterson, for whom Senators on both sides of the aisle have such a deep and abiding respect. Mr. Patterson said:

The news that reappointment of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission is to be resisted in the Senate on lines of political partisanship is bad news for the people of the United States. Under the law the five members of the Commission are appointed by the President, sub-ject to confirmation by the Senate. The terms of all five members will expire on August 1. The President has reappointed The question now is whether the Senate will confirm. We must assume that those opposing confirmation are unaware of the immense risks that a disruption of the atomic energy program at this time would produce.

Our survival as a Nation may well depend on the intelligence, the skill, and the vigor with which the atomic energy project is carried forward. Of all activities in the country, there is none more vital to our safety than this activity. If a hostile power should get the lead on us in the development of atomic energy, the future would be

There has been some argumentation to the effect that the pending proposal has not been politically inspired. I regret to say that I must take issue with my colleague from Iowa. I shall take issue because I shall advert to facts which seem to me demonstrably and conclusively to prove that the pending proposal was politically inspired.

On April 19, the morning press of New York City carried a story to the effect that nominations for the Atomic Energy Commission were about to be made by the President. Later, on the same day, the Republican policy committee met, and at noon the chairman of the policy committee, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] gave an interview to the press. In this interview he stated that the committee, at its meeting that morning, had resolved "to go slow on all confirmations of appointments made by the President.'

On April 20, the next day, the President sent the following nominations for the Atomic Energy Commission to the Senate: Mr. David E. Lilienthal, Mr. Robert F. Bacher, Mr. Sumner T. Pike, Mr. Lewis L. Strauss, and Dr. William W. Waymack. On April 23, three days later, over a Nation-wide hook-up, on a program entitled "Meet the Press" chairman of the Republican Policy Committee was asked if he included in this go slow" policy Mr. Lilienthal, and he stated that he most assuredly did.

The fat was in the fire. Now, how to get it out?

The Senate Members had a meeting. In that meeting it was suggested that perhaps a further testing period for the Commission would be in order-say a I immediately protested, and pointed out what I thought was the error in the proposal. Then that proposal went to the people and the press of this country. There began an outcry and an uprising which soon made itself evident, and the next proposal we got was that it should be changed to 2 years. Then we met again, and this time we met with some distinguished scientists, with men whose work had been of a key nature in the production of this atomic phenomena.

One of them was Dr. Oppenheimer. He probably did more at Los Alamos to bring the thing about than any other man. Dr. Rabi, of Columbia, also recognized as being preeminent in the field, was there, as was Dr. DuBridge, who at one time, I believe, was in charge of Los Alamos.

We talked over the problem with them, and they were told that if we were to bring the nominations before the Senate for confirmation there would be "a dirty political fight." In view of that fact, the scientists were asked what their advice would be in this situation.

I invite attention to the letter of Dr. Oppenheimer, addressed to the chairman of the committee, under date of April 29, after he was let into the secret that a proposal was to be made to avoid "a dirty political fight." Dr. Oppenheimer wrote:

DEAR SENATOR HICKENLOOPER: Thank you for inviting us to learn of your plans for the future of the AEC. You have asked us to write to you of our views, and this I gladly do. To my mind the way to assure the continuity of the work of the AEC and inspire confidence in its policies is to confirm the Commissioners. In all areas in which I am qualified to judge, they richly deserve confirmation; and above all, by their success in the "paramount objective of assuring the common defense and security."

You and other Senate members of the joint committee assured us that confirmation could be achieved, if possible at all, only after a long-bitter struggle and a long period of uncertainty, delay, and sustained attack on the Commission.

It is not appropriate for me to judge to what extent these difficulties are beyond the control of your committee. However, we may almost agree that a worse fight than last time over the issue of confirmation would gravely and perhaps fatally impair the work of the Commission and confidence in its stability.

The doctor concludes that if it is to be extended, for the sake of the United States, extend it for 2 years. But, first, he says "confirm them now to conform to the McMahon Act." Now, let us see what the other consultative witnesses who were brought in to pull the fat out of the fire say. Under date of April 29, Dr. DuBridge addressed the Senator from Lowa and said:

I wish to state right off that I am convinced that the AEC has made enormous progress toward its statutory objectives in the year that has elapsed since it was confirmed by the Senate. Furthermore, I have confidence that the AEC will be even more successful in the future in developing a sound basic program and an organization to carry it out.

It is of the most vital importance to the AE program of the United States that confidence and continuity should exist in its direction. It is necessary that the personnel of the Commission, of industry and of the national defense establishment should work in harmony toward the common end of the welfare and security of the United States.

To quote from the letter of Dr. DuBridge:

We were shocked to hear that such a controversy—

That is, unjustified attacks against the Commissioners and their work—is even a possibility. I would hope that your committee could find a way to confirm the Commissioners in such a way as to avoid such controversy.

Then he goes on and states in great detail his estimate of the fine work which has been done by the Commission.

Mr. President, that may be rather amazing. Nevertheless it is the record; and it is well that that record should be told to the Senate and to the people of the United States. I beg to point out that the reasons which are given in the report of the majority to the Senate are not really the reasons which have dictated this proposal. The committee has seen fit to point out that in its estimation a further period of time is necessary for testing the qualifications of these commissioners.

Mr. President, every 3 months this committee receives a highly secret report of the work of the Commission. Twice a year a report of the Commission goes to the Congress, containing the reports which have been made. They are made in great detail—as much as can be given out for public consumption.

We have had the Commission before us hour by hour. I suppose that there is no activity of this Government that has received the continuing and close scrutiny that this group has received.

Mr. President, what is their job, and how have they done it? Their job is to assure the security of the United States of America through the production of fissionable material at the greatest rate they can, and to promote peacetime use and research.

I do not think I violate secrecy when I say that the Commission, at this date. is meeting the requirements of the Joint Chiefs of Staff laid down by them as necessary for the defense of this country. I think it is bitterly unfortunate that we cannot tell in much more detail of the accomplishments of the Commission since they took over from the Manhattan District. It is no secret now, because it has largely been told, that when they took over this project, Los Alamos was a shambles. We had succeeded, it is true, in making some laboratory bombs. but the Commission has succeeded in putting them on the production line

In my talks with them, I find that they are regretful, as I am regretful, and as everyone of good sense is regretful, that they must devote so much of their time and their effort to the production of these weapons of war. That is one of the reasons why at the beginning of my remarks I outlined that unfortunate necessity and where the blame if any there is must rest in the verdict of history.

They have not been derelict in their trust in setting up the proper devices and administrations for the peaceful production and use of this God-given force.

Mr. President, those who see in this new development nothing but the atomic bomb are of but little faith and but little hope in regard to the possibilities of constructive progress in the future in this new field; their attitude is much the same as that of those who, with the advent of electricity, saw in the possibilities of its future use nothing but a chair for the electrocution of convicts.

But, Mr. President, there are achievements in the field of medicine and in the field of chemical substances and in the developments and work in that great building at Hanford, into which we are putting hundreds of millions of dollars. that hold wonderful promise for the future. For instance, the contributions in the way of the development of the breeding process, on which we reported to the Congress a few months ago, hold promise for the future the like of which has not been dreamed of by free men in all the ages of history. These men, whom we are so fortunate to have, see that vision . and have that light of the future. They are going ahead bravely in every proper direction.

There has not been one word of criticism against the basic attitudes of the Commission from any responsible source. Of course they are not perfect. They are men. They have made mistakes, because they have done things, and they will make more mistakes. If they did not make any more mistakes, I would want to get them out of their present positions instantly.

Of course, the provisions of the measure now before us, carrying an extension of their terms for 2 years, constitute complete recognition of the fact that they should be confirmed for the appointments which the President has wisely sent to the Senate. If they are good for 2 years in this undertaking, then they are good for the statutory terms which are set out under the act.

Mr. President, if there is a determination by some to get rid of the Chairman of that Commission just as soon as it can be accomplished, I simply wish to point out that I see and observe signs and indications of an effort to take this force and put it back into the Pentagon Building. The evidence that was given by the Chairman, as contained in an article by the McGraw-Hill Publication Co., is not the first evidence that the senior Senator from Connecticut has had that that is the fixed intention of a very powerful group in our country.

When the distinguished junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Wherry] introduced a bill, a few months ago, to turn this whole program back to the military, I pointed out to the Senator from Nebraska that there were so many things wrong in the world that it seemed a shame and a crime that we could not leave alone something that seemed to be in good measure right. I anticipate the efforts of those who wish to place others than civilians in control of this program, and expect them to persist; I thank God that with the help of the voters of the State of Connecticut who have given me a franchise to remain on this floor for two more years, I shall during that length of time be here to resist that move with all the force at my command.

The members of the Commission seem to have done a good job. They seem to have carried out the responsibilities and duties which have been placed upon them by the statute. We know they are honorable men.

We tried for about 3 months to prove that they were not, but our efforts met with flat and complete failure; and a year and a half ago they were confirmed by the Senate by an overwhelming vote.

Despite that fact and despite the fact that they have done their job magnificently and have carried out the duties with which they have been charged by the law, their nominations have lain here since April 20, 1948, and they have not even been accorded the courtesy of a hearing before the committee.

Mr. President, the thing that the Senate should do with this bill is to reject it. It is now 25 minutes of 6. If the Senate will reject this bill, we on the committee can adjourn to a room just outside the door of this Chamber, and certainly there is not a Senator on the committee who will be able to voice a single objection that I believe to be worthy of consideration to the confirmation to which these men are richly entitled.

Mr. President, I could go on, but I am conscious of the hour. I said when I started that I would take 25 or 30 minutes. I notice that I have taken 35.

One editorial writer said that this proposal constituted fiddling with fission-a very apt description.

Mr. President, I advert to the sage advice of Bob Patterson. He indicated that the only safe course now, in the absence of international control, is to keep ahead in this matter, because if any other nation ever surpasses us, and if that country has designs against the peace of the world, then peace will be of very short duration.

So, Mr. President, it seems to me that we can strike a blow here that will notify not only our own people, but the peoples of all the world, that we do understand that with which we are dealing; that we are determined to treat it in an absolutely nonpolitical, nonpartisan way. If we do that we will add to our strength and we will add to the defense of America.

WALLACE H. WHITE, JR., OF MAINE

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I cannot allow this session of Congress to adjourn without paying tribute to one of the kindest, most lovable, conscientious men who has ever graced this Senate Chamber. It has been my privilege to have served with him and under him in committee for 8 years, and it is a privilege that I will never forget, for he has exemplified all that is right and decent and fair-minded in the consideration of all legislative matters and in his relations with his colleagues.

I refer, of course, Mr. President, to the esteemed senior Senator from Maine [Mr. White], who some time ago announced that he would not be a candidate for reelection, and is retiring at the end of this Congress to a well-earned rest after 31 years of continuous service in the two Houses of Congress. I regret exceedingly, and I know that everyone of my colleagues regret, that Senator White decided not to return to the Senate—I say "decided not to return" advisedly, because I am sure the people of Maine would have returned him by an overwhelming majority.

No man in this body, so far as I know, has earned greater esteem from his fellow members than has the senior Senator from Maine. Possessed of a fine sense of courtesy, an unfailing good humor, a rare tact, and equipped with legislative experience second to none, he has endeared himself to all who know him.

He has devoted his life to the public service. He came to Congress following his graduation from Bowdoin as secretary to his esteemed grandfather, the late great Senator Frye who during his long service was not only President pro tempore of this body but also chairman of the same committee which his grandson, the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE], heads today. His 4 years as a secretary and clerk proved valuable to him when he was elected to the Sixty-fifth Congress, the First World War Congress, in Following 13 years in the House, he came to the Senate in 1930, and in the 18 years that have followed he has made a mark to which all of us may aspire and seek to emulate.

The senior Senator from Maine will not be with us next year but he has left a mark which will keep his memory bright. He may well be called the father of two major legislative policies-communications and shipping. His work on the Safety-of-Life-at-Sea Convention, which set a new standard for all maritime nations to follow, is a monument to him that all who know anything about shipping will remember always. His interest in telecommunications, and particularly in the early days of radio when it was regarded as a tcy, has carried through to this day. He was the principal author of every communications law now on the statute books and he worked indefatigably to the very end of this Congress in an effort to secure the enactment of new, more comprehensive and urgently needed revision of the present Communications Act. It is a matter of sincere regret to me, and, I am sure, to every member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce as well, that the difficulties in reconciling diverse views in the industry, prevented the earlier consideration of a bill which would have gone far to clarify and resolve some of the more pressing problems in the broadcast industry today. I am sure, however, that when communications matters are considered in succeeding Congresses, whether Republicans or Democrats are in control, the views and opinions of the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE], as expressed in the bill authored and reported by him in this Congress, will be reflected in whatever legislation is finally enacted.

I find it difficult to find the words to express the feelings that I have for our esteemed colleague. Those of you who have served with him know what I mean when I say there is about him an indefinable graciousness and decency—a lovableness that is beyond my poor means of explaining. Never a partisan, I know that his Democratic colleagues on the committee as well as on the floor regard him fully as highly as do his Republican friends, and in saying that I believe I am indicating the true measure and character of Senator White.

The senior Senator from Maine is a great American in every sense of the word; he is a true gentleman in every sense of that word. His State, the people of his State, and his family may well be proud of what he has done for the people of this Nation in his 31 years of service here; he leaves with the warmest good wishes of all of us who wish him many years of health and happiness in his home.

PRINTING OF REPORTS OF ADVISORY COUNCIL ON SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, I am informed that the Advisory Council on Social Security to the Senate Committee on Finance expects to submit two or more reports during the coming recess or adjourned period of the Senate. I ask unanimous consent that at the time these reports are submitted to the Secretary of the Senate they be printed as Senate documents with illustrations, and that thereafter a compilation of the various reports by the Advisory Council with other relevant materials on the subject be printed as a Senate document with illustrations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXTENSION OF TERMS OF MEMBERS OF ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6402) to provide for extension of the terms of office of the present members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I desire to comment very briefly on the pending bill and the situation which the Senate confronts in respect to it. I dislike to be in the middle between my distinguished friend from Iowa [Mr. Hick-ENLOOPER ] and my able friend from Connecticut [Mr. McMahon] in an argument over atomic energy, because it has been my privilege to cooperate with both of them for a considerable period, and I am unable to recall a single instance where we have had anything but the happiest relationships and cooperations. But, Mr. President, I feel that I owe it to the able Senator from Iowa as the ranking Republican Member on the Senate side of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, and chairman of the committee, to state emphatically and categorically and without any reservation whatever that I think the course which he has recommended to the Senate in the pending bill is in the interest and welfare of the uninterrupted advantage of atomic energy as an American asset.

I am sure I shall be acquitted of engaging in any conspiracy against Mr. Lilienthal, as intimated by the Senator from Connecticut, as being one of the impulses of the pending bill. I am sure I shall be acquitted of any sort of political racketeering in connection with either Mr. Lilienthal or his associates on this Commission. I simply feel, Mr. President, on the basis of the facts as I see them and as I think I know them, that I must submit my total disagreement with the conclusions of the Senator from Connecticut and my complete adherence to the thesis submitted by the able Senator from Iowa. When the Senator from Connecticut was speaking, he read from a letter from Mr. L. A. Du-Bridge, of the general advisory committee of the Atomic Energy Commission, and he read one sentence which I want to reread. That sentence, which is from the testimony of a witness for the Senator from Connecticut in behalf of his appointment, reads:

I would hope that your committee could find a way to confirm the Commissioners—

Referring to the Atomic Energy Commissioners—in such a way as to avoid controversy.

Mr. President, I think this bill is the precise and prayerful answer to those exact specifications. I suggest that the Senate contemplate the alternatives to the passage of the bill, a bill which horizontally extends for 2 years the terms of all the Atomic Energy Commissioners, pending the subsequent staggered appointments for from 1 to 5 years each.

I suggest that the Senate consider the alternatives to the passage of this bill. The first alternative would be an effort to confirm the existing Commissioners under the reappointments which the President has sent to the Senate. Surely it is an axiom that that is impossible, short of another controversial contest of substantially the same nature as that which plagued the subject when the appointments were originally submitted. Surely it is obvious that it could not be done in the closing days of this session.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. McMAHON. Does the Senator feel that if such a contest were pitched on the floor of the Senate there would be any consideration that would move the Senator from Michigan to do other than he did so magnificently a year and a half ago?

Mr. VANDENBERG. My answer to the Senator is that I am unable to respond conclusively to his question at the moment. So far as my own information goes, I should be inclined to stand precisely where I stood before, with respect to the Commissioner to whom the Senator refers. But since the Senator faces me with this inquiry, I am bound to say that I have heard from other Senators a suggestion of dissatisfaction regarding divers and sundry alleged exhibits, let us say, upon which I would not care to pass final judgment until I knew precisely what is involved. Therefore I am unable to say with finality that my position would be the same. But my expectation is that it probably would be. I submit to the Senator that that is beside the point, because there are those Senators who very deeply feel that they do have a justification for challenging the record of several members of the Commission, as the able Senator from Connecticut understands and well knows. I am bound to say for myself that I think it has been an act of very generous cooperation with the viewpoint of the rest of us, Mr. President, that some, let us say the minority of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy—the minority which does feel very deeply and sincerely and conscientiously that some of these nominations should not be confirmed—I think it is a very great tribute to their lack of political impulse in this situation to be willing to join with the rest of us in stabilizing the entire situation for another two highly critical years.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield.

Mr. McMAHON. I should like to point out to the Senator that if there is any member of this body who has in his possession any information which would lead him to vote against the confirmation of the Commissioners, I submit he will have to challenge his conscience before he votes to extend the terms of the Commissioners as provided under this bill. That, I submit, is really the heart of this whole difficulty. By confirming their appointments for 2 years, by extending their service for 2 years, we are giving a vote of confidence to the Commissioners and are demonstrating that they are highly worthy. If any Senator on the floor believes that they are not worthy of confidence, he should vote "no" on the bill, and we should call up the confirmation and fight it out. God in his heaven did not ordain that this Congress should end tonight. That determination comes from the majority leadership.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator from Connecticut for his concluding contribution, by which he has so clearly demonstrated that he is anxious to discuss political partisanship in connection with the subject. I do not respond to him, because I am not interested in that phase of the matter at all.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Virginia. President, I wish to associate myself with the Senator from Michigan in the remarks he has made. I have a friend on the Commission, Mr. Lewis L. Strauss, of New York, but formerly of Virginia. I voted for his confirmation last year. He is an able and valuable member of the Commission and an exceptionally fine man. I am personally interested in seeing him confirmed again. Considering the fact that we have only a few hours left before we expect to adjourn this session of the Congress sine die, and there is a division of opinion as to what should be done, it would be in the interest of my friend on the Commission for me to vote for an extension of the term of 2 years and at least stabilize the situation for that period.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator from Virginia for his comment. It is completely in line with my own irresistible conviction on the subject.

Mr. President, if we must discuss the question of whether this is a political bill, I want to submit one or two exhibits.

Under the presently existing law the President has 20 years of appointive tenures in respect to these Commissioners. Under the proposed new law, the new President who comes in next January, has 25 years of appointive tenure. I respectfully submit that the difference between 20 years and 25 years does not constitute a ripper bill.

Secondly, so far as the tenures of the existing Commissioners are concerned, under the existing law, they would have a total tenure of 15 years maximum. Under the proposed law which is now pending, and which is supposed to be some sort of a political racket, they would have a total tenure of 10 years, plus a subsequent chance for further appointment. I again submit that we cannot make either a political racket, a political conspiracy, or a ripper bill out of those unanswerable equations.

Mr. President, let me get back to the contemplation which I was submitting to the Senate. If we do not pass this bill, we confront one perfectly obvious alternative. We cannot have the interim appointments confirmed, and everyone knows it, including the Senator from Connecticut. All that we can have as a result of the refusal to pass this measure is a group of five interim appointments which will be good only until next year and which will clothe the entire enterprise with complete insecurity and completely inadequate reliance.

Mr. President, there is one thing upon which the able Senator and I will completely agree, and that is that we both are dedicated to the best welfare of atomic energy as a resource and asset of the Government of the United States. I agree that the Senator from Connecticut has that objective in his heart, and I know he will yield the same concession to me

I do not see how, in choosing between these alternatives—and that is the sole question concerning the Senate; there is no political conspiracy here, there is no ripper bill here, the facts deny both these indictments—the only question pending is the choice of alternatives, and I again say that I cannot see how any Senator who is devoted to the continuity of reliable, dependable atomic development, which is of such vital concern to the United States, can say that a set of temporary interim appointments which have no stability whatever can possibly be a preferable choice to two solid years of reappointment for the entire Commission, with a report which asserts that the bill is passed without any prejudice against any of them.

So, Mr. President, with this brief word I wish to associate myself with my distinguished friend from Iowa not only in behalf of the necessity of the pending measure, but equally in behalf of its good faith.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I do not desire to make any lengthy statement; in fact, I shall make a very brief statement. Everything has been said that can be said on this question, I think, and my only reason for rising now is because I associated myself with the Senator from Iowa in sponsoring the pending legislation.

I realize that there are differences of opinion with respect to Mr. Lilienthal and some of the other members of the Commission. I wish to make it plain that when I associated myself in sponsoring the bill with the Senator from Iowa, I was not reflecting any dissatisfaction or any criticism whatsoever of Mr. Lilienthal. If I had the opportunity I would vote today for his confirmation. I have full confidence and faith in him. I know he is a great administrator, and I believe he is doing a splendid job. That is not the situation we are facing. I hope that the Senate will not follow the advice of the Senator from Connecticut and vote down the pending bill, because I think it would be a very reckless thing to do, a very reckless thing for the safety of our country.

Atomic energy is a new science. We are not able at the present time to measure its potential, but we do know enough about it to realize that we must regard it with great respect, and that we must give it every possible assistance and cooperation in its development.

At the present time the Atomic Energy Commission are carrying on a very large program. They are building a great plant near Chicago. They are enlarging the work at Hanford, Wash. They have contracts outstanding with many of the universities of the country. They are right in the middle, of a very great program, and to interrupt that program at the present time with any break in the continuity in the terms of the Commissioners might be a very serious thing indeed. Two years will give them an opportunity to finish the enterprises upon which they are now engaged.

Mr. President, for this reason, and for other reasons which have been mentioned by others, I sincerely hope that the Senate will vote the continuance of 2 years rather than insist upon bringing these men up for confirmation or for rejection by the Senate.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado yield to me?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. A great many Members of the Senate are somewhat confused and disturbed as to the alternative which faces the Senate on this proposition. As I understand, if the bill shall not be passed, these nominees would not be confirmed, and the President would then probably appoint all of them during the interim, which would terminate in January. They would have 6 months tenure under interim appointments. If the bill is passed, as I understand, it will extend the terms for 2 years without confirmation. Is that the fact?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. That is true. The original bill gave them an extension of a year and a half, 18 months, and no new appointments would have to be made. After that period they are to be appointed in a staggered relationship one to the other, one for 5 years, one for 4, another for 3, the fourth for 2, and the fifth for 1.

The pending bill extends the terms of all the commissioners a full 2 years, and at the end of the 2-year period they will come up in their staggered relationship for appointment. So that the 2-year interim, the 2-year continuance in office which the bill provides, will add stability, and will not make any changes at a time when stability is an absolute essentiality.

There is nothing quite so important as that, because, as I have said, they are engaging in new enterprises, a big plant at Chicago, and the other plants, and these men are right in the very beginning of that work. They are undertaking something, and they should not be removed from office until they have an opportunity to fulfill and complete the assignments which they have assumed in the interest of our defense, and in the interest of the United States generally.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator's answer, and the situation which prompted me to ask the question, present an unpleasant alternative on both sides. Personally I am for these men. I think they have done a good job, and I should be willing, of course, to confirm them for the entire period provided in the law as it is now. But we cannot confirm them. No matter what happens here with regard to the pending bill, I assume we cannot confirm them.

If that is true, the question is, Which is better for the program and the Government and the people, regardless of any politics which may have been injected into the matter originally that prompted the reduction of the term and the introduction of the pending bill or the original bill?

What I was seeking from the Senator, who is a member of the joint committee, was as between the two alternatives, assuming the impossibility of confirmation and the possible interim appointments which would last until January—and assuming they were reappointed in January, the question of their confirmation would then arise again—as between that situation and the 2-year period for which the terms would be extended, which, in the Senator's judgment, is better for the program, for the Government, and the people? That is what is disturbing me.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I do not think the choice is very hard to make. I had very little difficulty in making it myself. Looking at the matter from the point of view of the good of the country, and the good of the new art and the new science, it is not very difficult for me to make the decision, and I hope it will not be difficult for others to make it.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will permit me in his time, I should like to ask the Senator from Connecticut the question. He has done a wonderful job, I wish to say, in regard to the whole program. He has been not only industrious and sincere, but he has been patriotic, and he has devoted himself to this matter with a singleness of purpose which I think is as highly commendable as could have been expected from any Member of this body.

I ask this question of the Senator from Connecticut: If we are faced with the alternative which I posed to the Senator from Colorado of 2 years certain tenure for all these commissioners, or failure to confirm and interim appointments for 6 months, and assuming even that they would be reappointed at the end of 6 months and the fight would again arise over their confirmation, which of these two alternatives, if there is an alternative, would best serve the program of continuity of the work the Commissioners are now doing, and the program, which is essential, as I agree with the Senator from Connecticut, to our national defense? I will say that that question has been posed to me by a large number of Senators, and I should like to have the benefit of the Senator's judgment in regard to the alternative, if it is an alternative.

Mr. McMAHON. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that the best thing that could happen for the welfare of this Commission, in the opinion of the Senator from Connecticut, and therefore the best thing in my opinion for the welfare of the United States, would be the rejection of this bill and the confirmation, before the Senate recesses, of these Commissioners. I cannot accede to the dilemma that is posed by the Senator from Kentucky, because in my opinion the issue that is raised here is so vital, and so basic to our whole future system of preparedness that I cannot accede to the dilemma upon which the senior Senator from Kentucky finds himself impaled.

I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that these men are in a real sense like the Commander in Chief of the Navy, Admiral Denfeld, or General Bradley of the Army. We must not establish a precedent in this matter that shall serve those who might wish for political reasons to change the Chiefs of our Army or Navy. In my opinion the bill should be rejected, and if it is rejected, then I say to the Senator from Kentucky that this Congress may adjourn at 12 o'clock tonight, but if it adjourns sine die at 12 o'clock tonight those Commissioners will be confirmed for the statutory time provided for under the law.

Mr. BARKLEY. May I further pursue the matter? If I were as sure as the Senator from Connecticut seems to be, that the rejection of this bill would result in their confirmation for the full term, I would certainly agree with him. But I am wondering on what basis we have any assurance that if the bill is rejected, the nominees would be confirmed, and if they are confirmed, whether the dilemma of which I spoke would then arise.

Mr. McMAHON. The reason I am so confident, I will say to the Senator from Kentucky, that that would be the course of events, is that I cannot conceive that the leadership on the other side of the aisle would permit the Congress to recess and go home leaving this situation to interim nomination.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank both Senators.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I shall speak but briefly. It was not my intention to speak at all, but I understand there may be a question as to whether a record vote will be taken. Therefore, I wish to make my record on the bill. I still hope we can have a record vote, because I know of no good reason why Members of the Senate should not be willing to put themselves on record on this question.

I have analyzed this problem to the best of my ability. I have listened to the able arguments of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McMahon] and my dear friend the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. Although I seldom find myself in disagreement with the Sanator from Michigan. I regret that on this occasion I do, because the issue to me is very simple. These men are either qualified or they are not qualified for the positions to which they are appointed. If they are qualified, then it seems to me they are qualified for the statutory period and not for any compromise period that has been worked out short of that statutory period. I think the interests of the country are so great and so serious in this matter, Mr. President, that we ought to know for a certainty whether or not these men should be entrusted with the solemn duties and obligations which are theirs under this assignment.

As the Senator from Connecticut has pointed out, these nominations have been before the committee now since some time in April. I think the issue should be met here as to whether or not we ought to confirm them because we think they are able to do the work for the statutory period, or reject them, and if they are not able to do it for the statutory period, then I say we ought not to confirm them for a lesser period.

Therefore I shall reluctantly vote against the proposal to confirm them for a 2-year period.

EXTENSION OF TIME TO PRINT TRIBUTES TO DECEASED SENATORS

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senators having statements on the life, character, and public service of the deceased Senators for whom memorial services were held on April 21, 1948, may have leave to insert them in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to be issued subsequent to the adjournment or recess of the session today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INCREASE IN COMPENSATION OF POSTAL AND OTHER GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate House bill 6916.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representa-

The bill (H. R. 6916) to provide for permanent postal rates and additional compensation for postmasters and employees of the field service in the Post Office Department was read twice by its title.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I ask for immediate consent of the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, as the Senate knows, there have been on the calendar for some time bills recommended by our Civil Service Committee for increasing the pay of postmasters and also a bill increasing the pay of Government employees in general. There have been constant conferences with the House as to what they might be willing to accept, and we finally worked out an agreement, so far as we can reach an agreement, under which the House agreed to a $450 increase for postal employees. House up to this time has been unwilling to increase the pay of other employees, and the House has sent to the Senate a bill which merely increases the pay of postal employees by $450, and also imposes certain increases in postal rates.

It is my proposal that we amend the bill by a substitute which increases postal employees pay $450, and which increases the pay of other employees $360, and which provides certain other increases in the upper brackets, which will be explained by the distinguished Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS].

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the able Senator from Ohio say that the total amount of the increase for postal employees is $450? Mr. TAFT. Yes, $450 per person.

Mr. President, very roughly it seems to me that both of these classes of employees ought to be increased, and if my proposed substitute is adopted it will be sent to conference with the House, and I hope the House may take the increase for the other employees as well as the postal employees. I cannot guarantee that they will do so. Some House Members seem to be in favor and others not, but I think very likely the conferees on the part of the House might accept that addition to the bill.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the House bill provide for an increase of $450?

Mr. TAFT. The House bill provides an increase of $450, and we propose to go along with the House on that amount. It is the highest figure it is possible to get the House to accept. We also propose to add a general increase of $360 for other Government employees as well as a provision for reclassification, which would give them on an average an additional increase of perhaps something a little less than $100. That increase will be $88, according to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer]. It provides also for an increase in the salaries of those above $10,000 which will be explained by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS]. Both these groups are entitled to an increase. Very roughly, the figures show that whereas the cost of living has increased about 70 percent, the postal pay increase will be about 70 percent, both over 1939 figures.

Mr. President, will the Mr. BYRD. Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield. Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator from Ohio have an estimate of the cost of those two increases?

Mr. TAFT. The two increases will cost approximately half a billion dollars. I will leave it to the Senator from Vermont to say exactly what it is. I think the postal increase is about $185,000,000.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. FLANDERS. I will say to the Senator from Ohio, and for the information of the Senator from Virginia, that the postal increase amounts to about $206,000,000. The increase to classified workers amounts to about $305,000,000. There are certain other officers and employees with respect to whom the increase would amount to about $1,000,000. Those are the top figures.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President. I cannot hear what the Senator says.

Mr. TAFT. Roughly speaking, postal increase is $200,000,000, classified employees, $300,000,000 and one or two million for the upper brackets.

Mr. BYRD. The postal employees increase is more than $200,000,000.

Mr. TAFT. The figure is $206,000,000. Mr. FLANDERS. Two hundred six million dollars for the postal employees, $305,000,000 for the classified employees; and then the higher executive officers, from the Cabinet class down through heads of bureau, amounting to $1,000,000. Then there is $11,000,000 for legislative, judicial, customs clerks, and other miscellaneous workers, making a total of $523,000,000.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. May I ask the Senator from Ohio whether he proposes to increase the postal rates in his substitute?

Mr. TAFT. No. The substitute does not increase postal rates. The Committee on Post Office and Civil Service felt that there were a number of those rates brought into question. They did not want to accept the rates. They want to have the question in conference, where they can discuss the individual raises which are proposed. It seemed the wise thing to substitute a bill without those rates, so that they will all be in con-

Mr. BYRD. This will involve an increased burden on the Treasury, so far as Senate action is concerned, of $523,000,000.

Mr. TAFT. Yes. I think the rates should clearly be increased.

On the general question of the justice of the increase, I cannot see any answer to the fact that if the cost of living has increased 70 percent since 1939, if the general salaries of workmen in factories today have increased about 110 percent or 120 percent, if the average of all nonagricultural workers has increased 80 percent, it seems to me that we cannot be criticized. I do not see how we can avoid the duty of at least a 70-percent increase for general employees. proposal works out almost exactly as a 69-percent increase for civil-service employees over prewar, and about a 75-percent increase for postal employees, over prewar. In 1939 postal employees had gone for a much longer period without an increase-practically since 1922, as I remember-and they were comparatively lower at that time than other civilservice employees. I think the additional 5 percent is justified.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator takes into consideration, does he not, the other increases made since 1939?

Mr. TAFT. Oh, yes. This includes everything. I have all the figures. I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD at this point the table, from which I will eliminate the unnecessary matter.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Note.—The $23,807 employees shown above in Federal positions under the Classification Act of 1923, represent only those in the executive branch within continental United States (exclusive of clerical-mechanical employees who are paid on an hourly basis) as of July 31, 1947. (This group numbered 794,000 as of Dec. 31, 1947.) The figure, therefore, is lower than the $46,155 employees upon which the estimates of annual pay-roll costs of proposed pay increases were based, which covered all employees in positions under the Classification Act of 1923 (exclusive of clerical-mechanical employees) as of, roughly, the first quarter of 1948, including employees outside continental United States and those in the legislative and judicial branches and District of Columbia government.

The 296,209 employees of the Fost Office Department, shown above, represent the average number of regular employees during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, whereas the figure of 458,000 on which pay-roll cost estimates were based represent the estimated average number of both regular and substitute employees, including substitutes hired for the Christmas season, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. O'CONOR. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio whether he agrees with the statement which was made before our committee in investigating this subject, in justification of the increase. The statement was:

In 1947 Federal employees in classified positions received an average gross salary of $2,856, as compared with an average of $2,140 in August 1939; but in terms of what the current salaries buy, the $2,856 is worth only $1,719 today. It is also important to note that up until the early part of 1941 the purchasing power of the Federal employees remained fairly constant. From then on until the latter part of 1942 it declined rapidly.

Mr. TAFT. I agree with the general statement. I have not had time to check the exact figures, but the general effect of the statement is entirely correct.

Mr. O'CONOR. Does the Senator from Ohio see any justification for raising one group of employees without giving a general raise to the other Federal employees?

Mr. TAFT. I think they all ought to be increased. I cannot see any reason for a distinction.

Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment in the nature of a substitute. I think there may be an amendment to be considered before the substitute. The substitute is marked "Committee Print No. 2" and has been distributed on the desk of Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Taff was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That this act may be cited as the "Federal Employees Pay Act of 1948."

TITLE I—INCREASES IN PAY RATES OF POST-MASTERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE POSTAL SERVICE

INCREASE IN BASIC PAY RATES OF POSTAL EMPLOYEES

SEC. 101. The rate of compensation of each postmaster, officer, and employee in the postal service whose rate of compensation is prescribed by the act entitled "An act to reclassify the salaries of postmasters, officers, and employees of the postal service; to establish uniform procedures for computing compensation; and for other purposes." approved July 6, 1945, as amended, and by the act entitled "An act to provide additional compensation for postmasters and employees of the pastal service," approved May 21, 1946, is increased by $450 per annum, except that any such rate which is paid on an hourly or partitime basis shall be increased 22.5 cents per hour, and rates of compensation of postmasters at post offices of the fourth class shall each be increased 22.5 percent.

INCREASE NOT TO DEFER PROMOTION

SEC. 102. The increase in any existing rate of compensation provided by this act shall not be construed to be such an increase in the rate of pay as, under the provisions of the act approved July 6, 1945, as amended, would defer an increase in pay by reason of promotion.

INCREASE IN EQUIPMENT ALLOWANCE FOR RURAL CAPRIERS AND SPECIAL-DELIVERY MESSENGERS

SEC. 103. (a) Sections 17 (e) and 22 (d) of such act of July 6, 1945, as amended, are each amended by striking out "6 cents per mile" and inserting in lieu thereof "8 cents per mile."

(b) Section 22 (d) of such act of July 6, 1945, as amended, is further amended by striking out "75 cents" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1."

(c) The act entitled "An act to increase the equipment maintenance of rural carriers 1 cent per mile per day traveled by each rural carrier for a period of 2 years, and for other purposes" (Public Law 467, 80th Cong.), is hereby repealed.

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS OF THE CLASSIFICATION ACT OF 1923, AS AMENDED

COMPENSATION SCHEDULE

SEC. 201. (a) Hereafter the rates of basic compensation for officers, employees, and positions in the departmental and field services, who are required to be compensated in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, shall be in conformity with the following compensation schedule of per annum rates:

Charwomen working part time shall be paid at the rate of $1.07 an hour, and head charwomen working part time shall be paid at the rate of $1.12 an hour.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 13 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended:

Grade 1 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 1 of the crafts, protective, and custodial service under such act.

Grade 2 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grades 1 and 2 of the subprofessional service, grade 1 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, grades 2 and 3 of the crafts, protective, and custodial service, and grade 1 of the clerical-mechanical service under such act.

Grade 3 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grades 3 and 4 of the subprofessional service, grades 2 and 3 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, grades 4 and 5 of the crafts, protective, and custodial service, and grade 2 of the clerical-mechanical service under such act.

Grade 4 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 1 of the professional and scientific service, grades 5 and 6 of the subprofessional service, grades 4 and 5 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, grades 6 and 7 of the crafts, protective, and custodial service, and grade 3 of the clerical-mechanical service under such act.

Grade 5 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 2 of the professional and scientific service, grades 7 and 8 of the subprofessional service, grades 6 and 7 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, grades 8 and 9 of the crafts, protective, and custodial service, and grade 4 of the clerical-mechanical service under such act.

Grade 6 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 3 of the professional and scientific service, grades 8 and 9 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, and grade 10 of the crafts, protective, and custodial service, under such act.

Grade 7 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 4 of the professional and scientific service and grades 10 and 11 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, under such act.

Grade 8 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 5 of the professional and scientific service and grade 12 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, under such act.

Grade 9 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 6 of the professional and scientific service and grade 13 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, under such act.

Grade 10 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 7 of the professional and scientific service and grade 14 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, under such act.

Grade 11 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include all classes of positions that are or would be properly placed in grade 8 of the professional and scientific service and grade 15 of the clerical, administrative, and fiscal service, under such act.

Grade 12 of the compensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) shall include posi-tions the duties of which are to plan and direct or to plan and execute frontier or unprecedented professional, scientific, or other specialized programs of outstanding difficulty. responsibility, and national significance, requiring extended professional, scientific, or other specialized training and experience which has demonstrated outstanding leadership and attainments in professional, scientific, or other specialized research, practice. or administration; to serve as the head of a professional, scientific, or other bureau where the position, considering the kind and extent of the authorities and responsibilities vested in it, and the scope, complexity, and degree of difficulty of the activities carried on, is exceptional and outstanding among the whole group of positions of heads of such bureaus; or to perform consulting or other professional, scientific, or other specialized work of equal importance, difficulty, and responsi-

No position shall be placed in grade 12, and no officer or employee to whom the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, applies shall be compensated at any of the rates of such grade, except by provision of an act of Congress referring to that specific position, or after prior approval by the Civil Service Commission. Such prior approval shall cover the evaluation of the duties, responsibilities, and qualification requirements of the position and the qualifications of any proposed appointee thereto.

XCIV-572

The Civil Service Commission shall submit to the Congress, not later than December 31 of each year, a report setting forth the number of positions placed in grade 12 in the respective departments and agencies during that calendar year, and the name, rate of compensation, and description of the qualifications of each incumbent, together with a statement of the functions performed by each: Provided, however, That in any instance where the head of the department or agency may consider full public report on these items detrimental to the national security, the Commission is authorized to omit such items from its annual report, and in lieu thereof, the head of the department or agency shall present such information in executive sessions of such committees of the Senate and House of Representatives as the presiding officers of those bodies shall

(c) Whenever payment is made on the basis of a daily, hourly, weekly, or monthly rate, such rate shall be computed from the appropriate annual rate specified in subsection (a) according to the method prescribed in section 604 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945.

(d) The following paragraphs of section 13 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, under the headings indicated, are hereby repealed:

"PROFESSIONAL AND SCIENTIFIC SERVICE

"Grade 9 in this service, which may be referred to as the special professional grade, shall include all positions which are or may be specifically, authorized or appropriated for at annual rates of compensation in excess of $10,000."

"CLERICAL, ADMINISTRATIVE, AND FISCAL SERVICE

"Grade 16 in this service, which may be referred to as the special executive grade, shall include all positions which are or may be specifically authorized or appropriated for at annual rates of compensation in excess of $10,000."

INITIAL SALARY ADJUSTMENTS

SEC. 202. (a) The existing rate of basic compensation of any officer or employee in a pay status in a position required to be compensated in accordance with the com-pensation schedule set forth in subsection (a) of section 201 shall be initially adjusted as follows:

(c) Upon adjustment of the salary of any person pursuant to subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph 11 of subsection (a) any creditable service in excess of that required for such adjustment shall be credited toward the first within-grade salary advancement subsequent to such adjustment.

(d) Each of the rates, $2,438.28 and $2,-513.52 in grade 2, $2,889.72 and $2,964.96 in grade 3, $3,541.80 and $3,667.20 in grade 4, and $4,294.20 and $4,419.60 in grade 5, is authorized to be paid only to those employees whose existing compensation is initially adjusted to that rate under this section.

BASIS FOR CLASSIFYING POSITIONS

Sec. 203. Section 2 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is amended by inserting "(a)" before the first sentence thereof, and by adding at the end of such section a new subsection as follows:

"(b) (1) Each position shall be placed in its appropriate class and grade. The basis for determining the class and the grade in which each position shall be placed shall be the duties and responsibilities of such position and the qualifications required by such duties and responsibilities.

"(2) In placing positions in classes and grades, there shall be taken into consideration all material facts which, in a given case, are relevant to the degree of difficulty, the weight of the responsibility, and the qualification requirements of the work involved in the position, such as (1) kind and variety of work; (2) nature and extent of available guide lines for performance of work; (3) nature of supervisory control exercised by others over the work; (4) initiative, originality, or judgment required; (5) purpose and nature of personal contacts required by the work; (6) nature and scope of recommendations, decisions, commitments, and conclusions involved; (7) kind, scope, and extent of knowledge, ability, and other qualities required; (8) kind, length, and quality of experience necessary; and (9) nature and extent of supervisory control over the work of other employees.

"(3) Additional duties and responsibilities assigned to an employee because of his exceptionally efficient service shall be given due weight in placing his position in its appropriate class and grade.

"(4) Supervisory positions shall not be placed in a class and grade solely on the basis of the size of the group, section, bureau, or other organization unit or the number of subordinates supervised. Such factors may be given effect only to the extent warranted by the work load of the organization unit and then only in combination with other factors, such as the kind, difficulty, and complexity of work supervised, the degree and scope of responsibility delegated to the supervisor, and the kind, degree, and value of the supervision actually exercised."

STANDARDS FOR CLASSIFYING POSITIONS

SEC. 204. The third paragraph of section 3 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is further amended by inserting "(c)" before the first sentence of such paragraph; by inserting "(e)" before the sixth sentence of such paragraph; and by amending the second, third, fourth, and fifth sentences of such paragraph to read as follows:

such paragraph to read as follows:

"(d) (1) The Civil Service Commission, after consultation with departments and agencies, shall prepare and publish standards for placing positions in their proper classes and grades. The Commission is authorized to make such inquiries or investigations of the duties and responsibilities and qualification requirements of positions as it deems necessary for this purpose. Such standards shall, in terms of duties, responsibilities, and qualification requirements, define the various classes of positions that exist in the service; shall establish the official class titles; shall show the grades in which such classes have been placed by the Commission; and shall be published in such form as the Commission shall determine. At the request of the Commission, departments and agencies shall furnish information and cooperate in the preparation of such standards.

"(2) The Commission shall keep such standards up to date. From time to time, after consultation with the departments and agencies to the extent deemed necessary, it may revise, supplement, amend, abolish, merge, or divide existing standards, or prepare new standards, so that, as nearly as may be practicable, positions existing at any given time within the service will be covered by covered turblished standards.

by current published standards.

"(3) The official class titles so established shall be used for personnel, budget, and fiscal purposes to the extent deemed necessary by the Commission, but this shall not prevent the use of organizational or other titles for internal administration, public convenience, law enforcement, or similar purposes."

AUTHORITY AND PROCEDURE

SEC. 205. Section 4 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 4. (a) In conformity with standards issued pursuant to the provisions of section 3 (d) of this act, departments and agencies (1) shall place all positions in their departmental and field services in their respective classes and grades and (2) shall review the determination of the class and grade of a position whenever it materially changes with respect to its duties, responsibilities, or qualication requirements and shall revise such determination when the facts warrant.

"(b) Action taken under the authority of subsection (a) of this section shall be final unless and until changed by certification of the Commission: Provided, That departments and agencies shall refer to the Commission for final action such positions in the departmental service as are not at the time covered by standards published by the Commission.

"(c) The Commission shall postaudit actions taken under the authority of subsection (a) of this section, and shall have authority on its own motion, or at the request of the employee occupying the position, or otherwise to ascertain currently the facts as to the duties, responsibilities, and qualification requirements of any position. In connection with such postaudits, departments and agencies shall provide the Commission with information regarding the duties and responsibilities of positions, reasons for placing individual positions in the respective classes and grades, and related information requested by the Commission.

"(d) Whenever the Commission, after investigation and after affording the department or agency concerned an opportunity for explanation and for submitting further information, shall determine that any position subject to this act (1) has not been placed in its proper class and grade, or (2) has not been placed in any class and grade, the Commission shall place such position in its proper class and grade and shall certify its findings and a statement of the necessary corrections to the department or agency concerned and to the General Accounting Office.

"(e) Departments and agencies shall take action in accordance with such certificates of the Commission. The Commission's certificates shall be binding on all certifying, pay-roll, disbursing, and accounting officers of the Government. Any pay adjustment shall be effective at the beginning of the pay period in which the Commission's certificate is received in the appropriate administrative office.

"(f) The rate of basic compensation to which an officer's or employee's existing rate shall be adjusted when (1) the standards issued under section 3 (d) of this act are first applied to his position or (2) an error in placing his position in a class and grade corrected, shall be in accordance the compensation schedule established by section 201 (a) of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1948 and shall be governed by regulations issued by the Commission: Provided, That if such rate is lower than the rate at which he has theretofore been receiving compensation, or at which he was hired, and the Commission finds that the circumstances of the individual case warrant (A) con-tinuance of the rate at which he has theretofore been receiving compensation or at which he was hired, or (B) adjustment to any standard rate falling between the rate specified in (A) and the appropriate rate as set out in such compensation schedule; it may authorize such continuance or adjustment. If any officer or employee of long and efficient service is transferred or reassigned, not for delinquency or misconduct, to a position in a lower class or grade, and the Commission finds that the circumstances of the individual case warrant (i) continuance of the rate at which he has theretofore been receiving compensation, or (ii) adjustment to any standard rate falling between the rate specified in (i) and the appropriate rate as set out in the com-pensation schedule, it shall so notify the employing agency and such continuance or adjustment shall be made accordingly.

'(g) Whenever the Commission finds that the actions of any department or agency in placing positions in classes and grades are not in accordance with standards issued pursuant to section 3 (d) of this act and that the errors or failure in applying such standards are sufficiently serious to warrant immediate supervision by the Commission of future action, the Commission may, in its discretion, after affording the department or agency an opportunity for consultation and explanation, withdraw or suspend in whole or in part the authority of the department or agency to take final action and require approval of such actions by the Commission prior to their becoming effective. After any such withdrawal or suspension, the Commission may restore such authority when, in its judgment, such restoration is warranted by the corrective steps taken by the department or agency to prevent future errors or failures. The Commission shall promptly notify the General Accounting Office of any such withdrawal, suspension, or restoration.

"(h) In determining the rate of compensation which an employee shall receive, the principle of equal compensation for equal work irrespective of sex shall be followed."

WITHIN-GRADE SALARY ADVANCEMENTS

SEC. 206. Subsection (b) of section 7 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is hereby further amended by striking out "12 months" and substituting "52 weeks" therefor; and by striking out "18 months" and substituting "78" weeks" therefor.

ADDITIONAL SALARY ADVANCEMENTS

SEC. 207. Subsection (f) of section 7 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is amended by inserting before the words "this subsection" wherever they appear therein the words "the first sentence of," and by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Within the limit of available appropriations, as a reward for long, faithful, and outstanding service, under standards to be issued by the Commission, and subject to prior approval by the Commission, or delegation of authority as provided in subsection (g), the head of any department or agency is authorized to award additional salary advancements to an employee beyond the maximum rate of the grade in which the employee's position is placed, but no employee's salary shall be increased beyond the maximum rate for his position by more than three such additional salary advancements, and no employee shall receive more than one such advancement during any 3-year period. Each such additional salary advancement shall be equal to the highest increment between any two consecutive rates of the grade in which the employee's position is placed, and shall be subject to the following conditions:

"(1) The employee shall have completed at least 3 years of continuous service, certified by his department or agency as being of outstanding value to the Government, at the maximum rate of his position, or at such rate in excess thereof as is authorized by this subsection, without change of grade or rate of basic compensation except that due to an act of Congress of general application.

"(2) He shall have had, in the aggregate, not less than 10 years of service in the position which he then occupies, or in positions of equivalent or higher class or grade.

"(3) The performance of an employee who is receiving additional salary advancement beyond the maximum rate shall be reviewed annually, and if this review reflects a failure to render outstanding service the employee's rate of pay shall revert to the rate which he received immediately prior to his last advancement."

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 208. Rule 6 of section 6 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "except that appointments or other assignments to positions in grades 11 and 12 may, with the prior approval of the Civil Service Commission, be made at, or subsequently adjusted to, any rate of the grade."

SEC. 209. Whenever the Civil Service Commission shall find (a) that a sufficient number of qualified eligibles for positions of a given class cannot be secured in one or more areas or locations at the existing minimum rate for such class, and (b) that a sufficient number of such eligibles can be secured by increasing the minimum rate for such class in such areas or locations to a rate not higher than the middle rate of the grade in which such class is placed, the Commission may, by regulation, establish such higher rate as the minimum rate for that class in the areas or locations concerned. Each such regulation shall specify the date, not more than 1 year from the date of issuance, when it shall cease to be effective unless extended by another such regulation.

SEC. 210. The Civil Service Commission is hereby authorized to issue such regulations as may be necessary for the administration of the foregoing provisions of this title in the departmental and field services and to identify the positions falling under section 211 of this title.

SEC. 211. Section 5 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. (a) This act shall not be applicable to positions and employees in recognized trades or crafts, or other skilled mechanical crafts, or in unskilled, cemiskilled, or skilled manual-labor occupations; and the rates of basic compensation of such positions and employees shall be fixed and adjusted from time to time as nearly as is consistent with the public interest in accordance with prevailing rates by wage boards or similar administrative authority serving the same purpose.

"(b) This act shall not be applicable to employees of the Transportation Corps of the Army of the United States on vessels operated by the United States, vessel employees of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, vessel employees of the Department of the Interior, vessel employees of the Panama Rallroad Co., or other vessel employees of the United States; and the rates of basic compensation of such employees shall be fixed and adjusted from time to time as nearly as is consistent with the public interest in accordance with wage practices of the maritime industry."

(c) The rates of basic compensation of the heads of the component parts of the Executive Office of the President (other than the Bureau of the Budget), and of such secretaries, administrative or executive assistants, and other immediate staff assistants to the President in the White House Office as the President may designate shall be $18,000 per annum, $16,500 per annum, or $15,000 per annum, to be determined by the President of the United States.

(d) The rate of basic compensation of the Architect of the Capitol shall be $15,000 per annum; and that of the Commissioners of the Court of Claims shall be $11,270 per annum.

(e) The provisions of this section shall not apply in the case of any position with respect to which the Congress shall hereafter fix the rate of basic compensation,

TITLE IV—INCREASES IN PAY RATES OF LEGIS-LATIVE, JUDICIAL, AND CERTAIN OTHER EM-PLOYEES

INCREASE IN PAY RATES OF EMPLOYEES IN LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

SEC. 401. (a) Section 501 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence of such section the following: "thereby, plus, except as hereinafter provided, (1) 18 percent of his rate of compensation (including the additions thereto provided by the foregoing portion of this sentence), or (2) $360 per annum, whichever is the lesser. No employee in the office of a Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, and no clerical or professional staff member of a committee of the Senate or House of Representatives shall be paid, with respect to any pay period, any additional compensation under the provisions of clause (1) or (2) of the preceding sentence, or any compensation at a rate in excess of $10,000 per annum, unless such Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, or the chairman of such committee, shall so certify in writing to the appropriate disbursing office, and in such event payment of such compensation shall begin on the first regular pay day following such certification, or following the effective date of title IV of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1948, whichever is later. Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or laws, the basic compensation of any employee, other than an administrative assistant, in the office of a Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner may be fixed by such Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner at any multiple of $5 per month which is not in excess of $5,700 per annum. Any such increase shall be made by certification in writing to the appropriate disbursing officer before the first day on which compensation at such in-creased rate is to be effective."

(b) The annual compensation of each of the elected officers of the Senate and the House of Representatives (not including the Presiding Officers of the two Houses), as fixed by section 201 (a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, shall be increased by $360.

INCREASE IN PAY RATES OF EMPLOYEES IN JUDICIAL BRANCH

SEC. 402. Section 521 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence of such section the following: "thereby, plus (1) 18 percent of his rate of compensation (including the additions thereto provided by the foregoing portion of this sentence), or (2) $360 per annum, whichever is the lesser."

INCREASE IN PAY RATES OF CUSTOMS CLERKS, IMMIGRANT INSPECTORS, AND CERTAIN OTHER EMPLOYEES IN THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH WHOSE RATES ARE FIXED BY STATUTES OTHER THAN THE CLASSIFICATION ACT

SEC. 403. (a) Each of the existing rates of basic compensation provided by the act entitled "An act to adjust the compensation of certain employees in the Customs Service," approved May 29, 1928, as amended and supplemented, and those provided by the second paragraph of section 24 of the Immigration Act of 1917, as amended and supplemented, are hereby increased by (1) 18 percent of such rate, or (2) $360 per annum, whichever is the lesser. Such augmented rates shall be considered to be the regular rates of basic compensation.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, rates of basic compensation specifically provided by statute (including any increases therein computed in accordance with section 602 (b) of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945 and section 4 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946), for positions in the executive branch or the District of Columbia municipal government which are not included in section 102, as amended, of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945 or in the District of Columbia Teachers' Salary Act of 1947, and are not increased by any other provisions of this act, are hereby increased by (1) 18 percent of such rate, or (2) $360 per annum, whichever is the lesser. Such augmented rates shall be considered to be the regular rates of compensation.

(c) The rates of basic compensation of officers and employees who, on the effective date of this act, are receiving basic compensation at the rate of $9,975 or more per annum in positions not subject to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, or to the provisions of title III of this act, but in organizations subject generally to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and for which a single or maximum rate of basic compensation has heretofore been fixed by statute at $9,975 or more, shall, upon recommendation by the head of the department or agency concerned and approval by the Civil Service Commission, be fixed in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

MINIMUM RATE OF COMPENSATION

SEC. 404. If any rate, as increased by section 402 or 403 of this act, except a rate provided for a foreign service staff officer or employee is insufficient to provide compensation of $2,070 for each 2,080 hours required to be devoted exclusively to the service of the United States by any worker who has attained his 18th birthday anniversary, such rate shall be adjusted by the head of the employing agency so as to provide such compensation. Such adjusted rate shall be considered to be the regular rate of compensation. For the purpose of this section, the number of hours required in the case of any position to be devoted exclusively to the service of the United States, if not determined by law, shall be determined, from time to time, by the head of the employing agency.

MAXIMUM RATE OF COMPENSATION

SEC. 405. (a) Section 603 (b) of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended, is amended by striking out "$10,000" where it first appears in such section and inserting in lieu thereof "$11,270."

- (b) Section 7 (b) of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1946 is amended by striking out "$10,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$11,270."
- (c) No officer or employee shall, by reason of any provision of this title, except section 401 (b) or 403 (c), be paid with respect to any pay period, basic compensation, or basic compensation plus any additional compensation provided by the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, as amended, at a rate in excess of $11,270 per diem.

INCREASE IN MAXIMUM PER DIEM RATES FOR TEMPORARY OR INTERMITTENT SERVICES

Sec. 406. (a) As to departments and agencies subject to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, expert and consultant personnel employed by contract in accordance with section 15 of Public Law 600, Seventyninth Congress, may, notwithstanding provisions of other laws, be compensated at any rates of compensation not in excess of the daily rate equivalent of the highest annual rate provided for grade 11 by section 201 of this act.

(b) Section 15 of Public Law 600, Seventyninth Congress, is amended by striking out "payable under the Classification Act", and inserting in lieu thereof "provided for grade 11 by section 201 of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1948."

TITLE V-GENERAL PROVISIONS

RATES OF PRESENT INCUMBENTS NOT TO BE REDUCED

SEC, 501. In no case shall the rate of basic compensation, authorized by law, being received by the incumbent of any position subject to this act on the date of enaetment of this act be decreased as a result of the enactment of this act so long as he continues to occupy the position occupied by him on the date of enactment of this act. other than by reason of action of the Civil Service Commission pursuant to the provisions of section 203, 204, or 205, or by reason of the provisions of section 211; but when the position becomes vacant, the basic rate of compensation of any new appointee shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of this act.

APPROPRIATION AUTHORIZED

SEC. 502. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, The additional amounts required by any agency for that purpose shall not be subject to any limitations now imposed by law (other than appropriation acts) on the amount that may be appropriated for the salaries of its officers and employees.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Sec. 503. This act shall take effect with respect to any officer or employee on the first day of the first pay period which begins after the date of enactment of this act.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I did not quite understand the Senator's reply to the question of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrn]. Roughly there is a $523,000,000 increased expenditure, but how much will the increased postal rates carried by the House bill return as compared to the present rate?

Mr. TAFT. Approximately $125,-000,000. So they fail by about $80,000,-000 to pay for the increase in postal salaries. I may say that there should be a further increase in postal rates, but the House committee apparently prepared these figures for increases very rapidly, and our committee thinks with some lack of discrimination, which we should like to consider in conference. I think next year there should undoubtedly be a much larger increase, to pay not only for these increases, but also the deficit which already exists in postal receipts.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yeld?

Mr. TAFT. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. FLANDERS. I may say for the information of the Senate that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service yesterday approved a Senate resolution authorizing a study of the whole question of postal receipts and postal rates by a management engineering firm, unspecified in the resolution, the report to be made the middle of next January. We are satisfied that only a scientific investigation will determine what these rates ought to be. We have had a perfect hail-storm of letters, telegrams, and objections by telephone and verbally, over the proposals in the House bill, indicating that it is most unwise to undertake to make changes in postal rates quickly and without real study. That real study the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service desires to make.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CAIN. Would it be in order for me to offer at this time an amendment to the proposed substitute for the House bill?

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I should like to suggest that there is an amendment which has priority over the Senator's amendment. It will be offered by the junior Senator from Delaware.

Mr. TAFT. Is the Senator from Washington willing to defer offering his amendment?

Mr. CAIN. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Amendments to the original bill and amendments to the substitute are in order. Amendments to the original bill will take precedence.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Delaware will be stated.

The Legislative Clerk. On page 19, beginning with line 14, it is proposed to strike out all through line 16, and insert the following:

SEC. 214. This title, except section 204, shall take effect on the first day of the second calendar month following the calendar month in which it is enacted. Section 204 shall take effect on January 1, 1949.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, briefly, let me state what the amendment proposes to do. Section 204, as thus amended, will be effective January 1, instead of 60 days following the enactment of this bill.

The purpose is to give the mail-order houses and nurserymen a chance to change their catalogs and revise their price schedules

I do not think there are objections from the committee to this amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I should like to know how much revenue is expected from this amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The increased postal rates are supposed to provide approximately $125,000,000 additional revenue annually. I do not know how much this amendment will remove from that amount, but only a percentage of the total amount since the effective date is only being delayed 6 months on part of the authorized increase. Perhaps the

Senator from Vermont can give you the

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, my guess would be approximately $16,000,-000. If the House proposal for an increase in the postage is to be retained, I feel that this amendment is an excellent one, because so many price lists include postage, as in the case of nurserymen and mail-order houses, and so forth, that they would be completely upset if the increased postage were installed now.

So it seems to me that this is an appropriate amendment to the original bill.

I must say that I hope the original bill will not pass; but this is an appropriate amendment to it, and is in order, and I would suggest that we adopt it by a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Delaware.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I offer, and ask to have stated. It is an amendment to the substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. amendment to the substitute will be

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the substitute, it is proposed to add the following new section:

Sec. -. The provisions of this act granting an increase in compensation to employees of the United States and of the District of Columbia shall not apply to any employee in or under the municipal government of the District of Columbia prior to the time that legislation providing a sales tax in the District of Columbia is enacted by the Congress and becomes effective.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

Senator will state it.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I did not understand the answer to the inquiry of the Senator from Washington. Is it in order to offer amendments now to the original House bill or to the substitute, or both?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is in order to offer amendments to both, but amendments to the original bill take precedence.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Then, Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I shall offer to both, and at the proper time I shall ask to have the amendment called up.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I wish to inquire whether my understanding is correct. I understand that the amendment just being offered is to the substitute, for it refers to the classified employees of the District of Columbia rather than to postal employees of the District of Columbia.

I would make only one comment about this amendment. Certainly I am but one of many who wish we did not have to offer such an amendment, for the amendment says in effect that the pay raises intended within this bill shall go to every one throughout the country except 7,000 employees who are classified employees within the District of Columbia. But we cannot very well, within this District, sponsor or approve of deficit financing; nor can we, without much more study than has been given to the problem, take automatically out of the real property within the District of Columbia sufficient revenues with which to meet this obligation. The District of Columbia has approximately 18,000 employees, about 8,000 of whom are classified. If this amendment did not prevail, those 8,000 would benefit from these wage and salary increases, while 10,000 other employees within the District of Columbia would receive no increase at all.

Over a period of months the fiscal subcommittees of the District of Columbia Committees of both the House and the Senate have wrestled with our local District of Columbia problem of how to obtain sufficient revenues to meet justifiable demands for services within the District of Columbia. Our coordinated and agreed-upon program was a salestax and a revised income-tax program.

As is known to nearly everyone in the Senate, opposition has been taken to that program. The program represents the moneys and revenues out of which we could meet such an obligation as will be incurred by the passage of this proposed legislation.

In the absence of having moneys with which to meet our obligations, it becomes necessary to adopt an amendment of the kind in question, which would deny to 7,000 people what hundreds of thousands are to receive throughout the rest of the land.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, we hope later in the evening to put the District of Columbia sales tax on the agenda.

In the meantime, I shall accept the amendment of the Senator from Washington. I have a right to modify my amendment to include the amendment of the Senator from Washington, and I do

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be modified accordingly.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President. should like to address the Senate briefly on this pay-increase bill.

The committee has been at great pains to try to work out this matter. It has not been an easy thing to do, because the members of the Senate committee had different views on it, as compared to the views of the House committee. could say that our committee reported two bills, one which I introduced-being Senate bill 1949-and another which was introduced by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Flanders] and myself, being Senate bill 1531.

This proposed amendment is a combination of the terms and provisions of both those bills, with a substantial reduction in amount.

I should like to present a matter for consideration by the Senate in connection with the differential between $450. as provided for the Federal postal employees, and the amount to be provided for the regular Federal employees

An examination of the chart introduced by the senior Senator from Ohio will demonstrate that for some period of time the postal employees have lagged behind the Federal employees, so far as salaries are concerned. I only need to state that the average annual wage of the Federal employees in 1939 was $1,993, and presently it is $3,006, as compared with $1,894 for the postal employees in the earlier period, and $2,857 presently, on the average. That explains the differential.

I, for one, would like to see the postal employees, particularly, receive a larger increase than is provided here.

The House reported a bill carrying an increase which would be effective, as I recall, for only 1 year. It provided a larger amount than this measure does. This amount, however-$450-is stated in that bill as a permanent increase.

I hope, Mr. President, that this bill will pass as amended by the Senate so that we can take it into conference and come out with a bill that will grant these substantial increases to the postal employees, and also a substantial increase to the Federal workers.

I might say also that in this bill there are some very salutary provisions. We have heard criticism for a long time to the effect that the heads of departments and agencies in the Government have their compensation fixed on the basis of how many workers they employ in their particular department—the more workers, the higher their pay. That provision, Mr. President, is eliminated in the pending bill. The bill also contains a new classification of the Federal service, a simplification of it. I think it also furnishes a good foundation upon which the Post Office and Civil Service Committee in succeeding sessions can work out a real, sensible, and sane reorganization of Federal employment and Federal pay.

As the matter now stands, it seems to be in great confusion, with a great number of classifications and rates that are highly complicated. There is an effort in this bill to reduce that complication and to bring greater simplification into the system.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BALDWIN. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. I should like to ask the Senator to explain the increases made in the various grades. Is that in addition to the $360?

There are some in-Mr. BALDWIN. creases made in the grades, but those increases in most instances are less than $100. I think there are none over. But the bill also provides that the increases resulting from the changes in classification will not be added to the $360 increase. In other words, under the terms of the bill, the most a Federal employee outside the postal service can get is the $360. If by reason of the reclassification he gets an increased amount, that will be deducted from $360.

Mr. BYRD. The total is $360, is it? Mr. BALDWIN. That is correct. Mr. FLANDERS. Just a moment.

I may say so, I think there is a slight mistake.

Mr. BALDWIN. I am glad to be corrected by my friend.

Mr. FLANDERS. The average is $360. with some around $44, as an extreme, and some $44 less, as an extreme. average is $360.

Mr. BYRD. That is, up to what grade? Ther are larger increases to certain officials, I see.

Mr. FLANDERS. I would say to the Senator from Virginia that it is carried clear up to and through grade 11. One of the things which has been out of order has been that the lower grades have been pressing up against the $10,000 limit. The reclassification also takes care of that. We have had many cases in which the boss was getting less than the men under him.

Mr. BYRD. I do not think the Sen-ator has got the answer to the question in regard to the higher officials.

Mr. FLANDERS. Does the Senator mean the Cabinet officers?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. Cabinet and under-Cabinet officers, the heads of boards, bureaus, and commissions.

Mr. FLANDERS. I can give the Senator from Virginia a summary of it.

Mr. BYRD. As I understand, up to grade 10 the average increase is $360, is that correct?

Mr. FLANDERS. That is correct. Mr. BYRD. Then what about grade

112

FLANDERS. It also includes Mr. grade 11. There is a new grade 12 which is included to take care of the flock of special bills we have had coming in which call for higher salary increases for scientists and similar special employees.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator explain the increases above grade 11?

Mr. FLANDERS. Let us start at the top. Cabinet members are increased from $15,000 to $20,000, under secretaries are increased from $10,000 to $18,000, and assistant secretaries from $10,000 to $15,000. Heads of the seven largest agencies, which includes the Federal Security Administrator, Federal Works Administrator, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, Administrator of Housing and Home Finance Agency, Comptroller General, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, whose present salaries range from $10,000 in the case of the Bureau of the Budget, up to $17,-500 in the case of the Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission; are all raised to $18,000. Those are the heads of boards, commissions, and other independent agencies.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, could we have order? We canot hear what is being said by Senators. It is a private discussion. We cannot tell what is going on. May we have order in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. FLANDERS. The heads of boards and commissions and other independent agencies and deputy heads of the above are raised from $10,000 or $12,000 to $16,500. Assistant heads are raised from $10,000 to $15,000. One interesting thing for instance is that the Federal Trade Commission members had their $10,000 salaries set back before World War I. If the salary was right then, it is dead wrong now, and this remedies the thirtyfive-odd-years increase in the cost of living with which all of us who are over 35 years of age have had some experience.

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield. Mr. BALDWIN. As I understand, under this particular bill and classifications about which the Senator from Vermont has just been talking affecting those in the higher bracket, the total over-all of all those increases will amount to about $1,000,000. Is that correct?

Mr. FLANDERS. That is correct.
Mr. BALDWIN. That is the addition it would make to the Federal pay roll?

Mr. BYRD. Does the proposal of the Senator from Connecticut raise them $5,000 each? Is that the approximate amount?

Mr. FLANDERS. It would not be possible to raise them a given amount over their base because their base is scattered all over the lot.

Mr. BYRD. What is the largest raise made?

Mr. FLANDERS. Under Secretaries are raised from $10,000 to $18,000. That is the largest raise.

Mr. BYRD. Cabinet members are raised from $15,000 to $20,000, are they not?

Mr. FLANDERS. From $15,000 to $20,000, and the final result is an even gradation from the $20,000 of the Cabinet members down through to the old $10,000 flat.

Mr. BYRD. That is a pretty heavy raise for Under Secretaries-$10,000. It is nearly doubled.

Mr. FLANDERS. We have been losing Under Secretaries very heavily of late. There is a hole in the bag in which Under Secretaries are kept, and this is intended to stop up that hole.
Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. Was any consideration given to increasing the salaries of the Indian Claims Commission, which has now been appointed and which is a very important Government organization? It is comparable to the Court of Claims, which formerly handled these

Mr. FLANDERS. I can get that information for the Senator shortly. I do not have it right at hand.

Mr. CONNALLY. I want to say to the Senator that that is a Commission performing duties which were formerly performed by the Court of Claims. The salaries of the Commissioners of the Court of Claims have all been vastly increased.

Mr. FLANDERS. I may say to the Senator from Texas they have been raised to $16,500.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Indian Claims Commission?

Mr. FLANDERS. The Indian Claims Commission.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is, the members of it. There are three members of it.

Mr. FLANDERS. All the members of It is set on a level comparable with others with similar responsibilities and similar experience.

Mr. CONNALLY. Under the pending bill, then, the salaries of the Indian Claims Commissioners will be $16,500?

Mr. FLANDERS. That is correct. Mr. CONNALLY. I do not want it to be confused with any other commission.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. Is that the Commission which was just recently created?

Mr. FLANDERS, The Indian Claims

Commission? I do not know how old the Commission is, sir.

Mr. CONNALLY. It is not very old. It was created only about 2 years ago. Mr. HATCH. About 2 years.

salaries of the Commissioners are being increased from $10,000 to $16,500.

Mr. FLANDERS. That is the comparable figure for other officers of the Government having comparable responsibility, and requiring comparable ability. The present salary scheme, I will say to the Senator from New Mexico, in the upper ranges, is a crazy patchwork. Some have been far out of line and some have furnished standards to which the rest should be brought.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, if the Senator will further yield, let me say that a short time ago the salary was based at $10,000 per year, and inside of 2 years' time an increase of $6,500 seems rather unusual, to me. I have no objection to it, but I was wondering why that quick jump in salary was made.

Mr. FLANDERS. Even though 2 years old, the salary could have been set a bit too low, as is the case with the Federal Trade Commissioners, whose salaries were set too low in 1912. The salary is far too low now.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield.

Mr. O'CONOR. I should like to ask the Senator from Vermont whether, in the fixation of the amounts the committee or the subcommittee had the benefit of expert advice from the Civil Service Commission, or whether it was the result of extensive study, or otherwise.

Mr. FLANDERS. I would say to the Senator from Maryland that he is asking questions which he is perfectly competent to answer, since the Senator from Maryland, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BALDWIN] and the junior Senator from Vermont spent many months working on this reclassification of salaries. We had the advantage of nearly 2 years of work previously carried on by the Civil Service Commission in a more or less easygoing way, which we brought to a head. so that we could do our work on the basis of that work. We have also held hearings with the personnel services involved in the Government, including personnel men from as far away as the Pacific coast. We have had hearings which involved the organized groups in the Federal service, and we have taken into account every possible means of gaining information

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. MAYBANK. I intend to vote for this bill, of course, but I am disappointed that the original Senate bill is not the bill which we are considering. I appeared before the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, months ago, which committee is under the chairmanship of the distinguished Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer].

Mr. FLANDERS. I should like, if I may, to say a word to the Senator from South Carolina. His disappointment is easy to understand, but we are faced with the hard choice of having a bill which can be enacted into law, or having a bill which cannot be enacted. I am satisfied that we can enact into law at this session nothing more favorable than what is in this bill.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. I shall vote for the bill. I was here and voted for the bill providing increases for the postal employees some years ago.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. The bill refers to basic compensation for the heads of departments, and so forth. Is their overtime to be added to that, or is that the total compensation?

Mr. FLANDERS. That is the total compensation.

Mr. BYRD. The executive assistants to the President and his staff assistants are listed in the bill at $18,000 a year. Do they receive $10,000 at this time?

Mr. FLANDERS. Not all of them. I think that is the lowest salary, if I remember correctly. It is not set at $18,-000. There are three rates from which the President may choose. One assistant now receives $15,000, one receives $12,000, and the rest receive $10,000.

Mr. BYRD. Referring to page 26, what is the present salary of employees in that category?

Mr. FLANDERS. That is section 303. I will get the Senator the figures in a They range all over the lot. The Comptroller General now receives $12,000. The Senator will recall that an exceedingly competent and faithful public servant in the Bureau of the Budget had to resign because of his low salary. The Director of the Bureau of the Budget now receives $10,000.

Mr. BYRD. Under the bill he is increased to $18,000?

Mr. FLANDERS. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Would it be a fair statement to say that in the higher brackets there will be an increase of approximately 50 percent?

Mr. FLANDERS. That is correct. Mr. BYRD. In some instances, as much as 80 percent?

Mr. FLANDERS. That salary was correspondingly low.

Mr. BYRD. I am speaking of the average. Some of them are increased 80 percent and none of them less than 50 percent. Is that correct?
Mr. FLANDERS. It is approximately 50 percent, yes.

Mr. BYRD. Some have been increased 80 percent, from $10,000 to $18,-000. Is that correct?

Mr. FLANDERS. At the top, which is the Cabinet, they have been raised only 33 1/3 percent.

Mr. BYRD. But others have been raised 80 percent, have they not?

Mr. FLANDERS. Some have been,

Mr. BYRD. Has the salary of any of them been doubled?

Mr. FLANDERS. I do not remember an instance of any salary having been

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield. Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Is it not true that in the lower salaried positions the employees are raised $350. but the $10,000 men will receive $18,000, or an increase of 80 percent.

Mr. FLANDERS. I would say to the Senator from South Carolina that in the latter case we are in an entirely different situation. Instead of gathering employees from thousands of possible applicants, the head of the administration of the Federal Government is looking around the country and picking out the best man here, and the best man over here, and the best man there. I will say that I picked out the Senator from Texas [Mr. O'DANIEL] that time.

Mr. O'DANIEL. I thank the Senator from Vermont for his generous offer but I must respectfully decline to accept it.

Mr. FLANDERS. The administrative head is picking out individually the best men he can find for the purpose, and that is a far different thing from running an employment agency.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. I have been here for a number of years and I have always heard that the Federal Government could not secure enough personnel. Through restrictions, and through the Civil Service Commission's ratings they are treated more or less unfairly, in my judgment. But when we raise the salary of a man from $10,000 to $18,000, and then tell the postmasters and the poor Government workers that all we can do for them is to give them a few meager hundreds of dollars to balance their food bill only, it is rather disappointing. I shall vote for the bill, but under the most trying circumstances, knowing that it is wrong.

Mr. FLANDERS. I would again call the Senator's attention— and I think the Senator from South Carolina knows that I have a great deal of respect and affection for him-I call his attention to the fact that of the $523,000,000 only $1,000,-000 goes to the higher officials and I think it is a good investment.

Mr. MAYBANK. I have the deepest affection for the Senator from Vermont, and my association with him has been most pleasant. Of course only $1,000,-000 goes for that purpose, but I am interested in the masses of the employees.

Mr. FLANDERS. They are getting a total of $523,000,000.

Mr. MAYBANK. But we are dividing the money among 2,000,000 of them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, is my amendment in the nature of a substitute in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

amendment is in order.
Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I may say that I am very much in favor of the bill. I agree with what the Senator from Ohio said about the necessity of raising the pay of these employees due to the increase in the cost of living. I believe that the bill certainly should be

My amendment is also designed to increase the real incomes of the employees included, in addition to the relief of everyone else in the United States. I believe we should make such a contribution. All the amendment does is remove a tax upon a basic article of food. hope the sponsor of the substitute will accept the amendment. As has already been demonstrated, I believe the majority of both the Senate and the House of Representatives have already approved the amendment, which I offer to the bill. In other words, the amendment is certainly appropriate to the bill, being a revenue measure. I ask for the consideration of the amendment.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The

Senate will be in order.

Mr. WHERRY. I am satisfied that most of the Senators on the floor do not know the substance of the amendment. Mr. FULBRIGHT. I thought the Senator understood it.

Mr. WHERRY. We cannot hear.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators will cease conversation so that the speakers can be heard.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I thought the Senator from Nebraska understood. This amendment is designed, like the bill, to increase the real wages and incomes of Federal workers and postal workers. All it does is remove a tax from a basic food in which they are all interested as consumers.

Mr. WHERRY. What is the food?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. It is legally known as oleomargarine. [Laughter.] It is sometimes known as margarine.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I yield.

Mr. FLANDERS. I should like to call to the attention of the Senator from Arkansas, for whom likewise I have a great deal of respect and affection, that the purpose of the bill is to have the legislation in such form and with such content that it can be enacted into law within the next few minutes. While I sympathize with the desire to reduce the cost of living by the reduction of any tax on any necessity of life, yet I fear that the Senator's amendment would interfere with the possibility of getting the bill passed within the next few minutes, which seems to be necessary.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I am unable to follow the Senator's reasoning, in view of the fact that the House of Representatives voted 260 to 106—nearly 2½ to 1—in favor of this very amendment only about a month ago. also remind the Senator of the fact that the Senate voted, in the only way it could vote-that is, on a motion to bring the bill up-57 to 26 only within the week. Last night this body voted to remove the restriction from the military appropri-

Since I mention that, I should like to call the attention of the Senate to what I consider a very arrogant and petty act on the part of the conferees. Last night they removed that very slight restriction upon the sale of this article to the armed forces, in spite of the fact that the House had approved it, and also in spite of the further fact that the Committee on Armed Services of the House had reported unanimously a bill removing by direct legislative action the same restriction that was in the appropriation bill

In other words, it comes down to this, I submit to the Senator from Vermont, that both Houses overwhelmingly have approved the removal of this tax, as well as the removal of the restriction on the purchase of the article by the armed forces. Yet, due to the supposed crises of passing the pending bill and another, we cannot get a direct vote in the Senate. This measure was reported by the Committee on Finance I think on June 2, with a unanimous vote, with a statement that it was in the public welfare, and the committee recommended its immediate passage. I submit it is quite as important to the people of this country, by and large, as any other bill that has been acted on today.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, obviously if we begin to offer irrelevant amendments on bills, we will simply block the passage of any more bills whatsoever. I think it is fair in this case to move to lay the amendment on the table. Therefore, because of the fact that I think it is irrelevant, and that the time has come when we have to dispose of irrelevant amendments, I move that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas be laid on the table.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken Baldwin Murray Myers O'Conor Hatch Hawkes Ball Havden Hickenlooper Hill O'Daniel O'Mahoney Barkley Brewster Bricker Hoey Holland Pepper Reed Bridges Revercomb Brooks Ives Robertson, Va. Russell Jenner Butler Johnson, Colo. Saltonstall Byrd Cain Johnston, S. C. Kem Kilgore Smith Sparkman Capehart Chavez Connally Knowland Langer Stennis Stewart Cooper Cordon Lucas McCarthy Taft Taylor Thomas, Okla. McClellan Donnell Downey Dworshak McFarland McGrath Thye Tobey Eastland McKellar Tydings Ecton Ellender McMahon Umstead Vandenberg Magnuson Malone Watkins Wherry Ferguson Maybank White Flanders Millikin Wiley Williams Fulbright Green Moore Young Morse

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eightyseven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion of the Senator from Ohio.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] to lay the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT] on the table. The motion is not debatable.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, some time ago I accepted the amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN] relating to the District of Columbia. I now modify that amendment. The amendment provided that the increase should not apply prior to the time the legislation providing a sales tax in the District is enacted by Congress. I am proposing to strike out the words "a sales tax," and insert the words "adequate revenues to meet the obligation," so as to read "prior to the time that legislation providing adequate revenues to meet the obligation in the District of Columbia is enacted by the Congress and becomes effective."

So that it is not necessary that the revenue be provided in that particular way. I so modify my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. amendment will be modified accordingly.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of the Senator from Vermont to page 21, section 207, line 17. Apparently by the language there the head of a department has the right to increase the salaries of the employees of his department. I think that is a very remarkable procedure, which will result in getting an uneven scale of salaries, and then the demand will be made that all should be raised to the high standard. Is it correct that the head of a department can increase salaries in his own department?

Mr. FLANDERS. I should be glad to give to the Senator from Virginia an explanation of that section. It provides that employees who have given long, faithful, and outstanding service and have for a period of 3 years been at the top of their grade shall, with and by the appproval by the Commission, receive an additional salary advancement equal to the highest salary increment of their grade. An employee may receive not more than three such advancements, and the 3-year period must elapse between each of these advancements. tially that is to reward exceptionally long and faithful service for which the more or less mechanical provisions of civil-service grades do not provide.

Mr. BYRD. It is absolutely with the head of the department, is it?

Mr. FLANDERS. No; with the approval of the Commission.

Mr. BYRD. The head of any department or agency can increase salaries in his department.

Mr. FLANDERS. Yes; but he must have the approval of the Commission.

Mr. BYRD. Yes; but the Commission has never yet failed to approve an increase in salary. I have been dealing with the Civil Service Commission for a long time, and it has never failed to favor an increase. If it has, I do not know when it was.

Mr. FLANDERS. The Senator's experience may be largely unfortunate. But we ran into many cases in which advances have been refused. I could not give the ratio.

Mr. BYRD. Under some standard as established by the Civil Service Commission, the head of the department, then, is the final arbiter as to whether the salaries shall be increased?

Mr. FLANDERS. The Commission is the final arbiter. I shall try to explain the situation briefly. Let us say that the Senator from Virginia had on his beautiful apple farm a man of a degree of intelligence and manual dexterity that made him excellent for certain particular operations on the Senator's farm. The employee has worked for years. He is faithful. The Senator cannot advance him to an executive activity of some sort. because he just is not made that way. But he has worked very long and very faithfully, and I am sure the Senator would want to give him small advances over a long period of time.

Mr. BYRD. The law already provides for that. There are in-grade promotions at a certain date all through the civil service, and employees are promoted and increased periodically. The Senator from Vermont knows that. Mr. FLANDERS. This is for those who over long years have reached the limit. Mr. BYRD. But if they work over a long period of years they get the increase that goes with the length of service. The point I make is that if it is left to the head of the department it will result in an uneven scale of wages, and then the demand will come to Congress to increase all employees up to the increases that have been made by a head authority should be given. Mr. FLANDERS. We do have to depend on the administration of the Commission, and in this case the final authority goes back to the Commission.

of a department. I do not think that Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield.
Mr. O'MAHONEY. May I invite the attention of the junior Senator from Vermont to the following sentence which I find beginning in line 19 of page 29. I desire to ask the interpretation of the committee of the meaning of the sentence, which reads as follows:

Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or laws, the basic compensation of any employee, other than an administrative assistant, in the office of a Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner may be fixed by such Senator, Representa-tive, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner at any multiple of $5 per month which is not in excess of $5,700 per annum.

Now if I understand the English language, that is an authorization to any Senator, Representative, Delegate, or the rest, to fix the salaries of all the employees of his office at not to exceed $5,700 per year, because it says "any employee"; not any single employee, or any two employees, or any three, "any employee." Is it intended to mean any single employee?

Mr. FLANDERS. The distinction, I will say to the Senator from Wyoming, is not between single and married employees.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, now the Senator is indulging in his usual good humor. Mr. FLANDERS. The provision in question simply permits the Senator to do what he is already doing now within the present ceiling. It simply raises the ceiling by the same amount that the average ceiling of the average Federal employee is raised. It gives him the benefit of the same increase.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But is it not said here that the increase is in multiples of $5 per month, and the only limitation is $5,700, but it affects every employee in the office. There is nothing in the sentence to make the present ceilings apply. And there is nothing in the paragraph to make them apply.

Mr. FLANDERS. The present ceiling applies to every employee in the Senator's office.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But there is a schedule for the various employees.

Mr. FLANDERS. There still would be, but they would be in multiples of $5 a month.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Apparently I have not made myself clear to the Senator. This sentence, if it should be enacted into law as part of the bill, and the bill should be approved, would have the effect of repealing every other law dealing with this subject. This will be the latest expression of legislative intent governing these positions. I am sure that it is not the intention of the Senator or of the committee to repeal the various classifications and categories, but merely to one employee in the office. Am I mistaken about that?

Mr. FLANDERS. The only effect that this provision has on existing law or laws is that it modifies such other law or laws in one respect only.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It does not say so.
Mr. FLANDERS. That would seem to me to be inherent in the English in which it is stated. That certainly is the pur-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am glad to have the expression of the purpose. In my opinion it certainly needs a legislative explanation.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. I understood a few minutes ago, after I made a brief statement, that the distinguished Senator from Vermont, for whom I have the greatest respect, made the statement that salaries would be raised 33½ percent. Am I correct?

Mr. FLANDERS. What I said was that in the case of Cabinet officers the salaries are raised 33½ percent.

Mr. MAYBANK. I should like to say this: I supported this bill from the day it went to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. I testified before that committee. I understood that the Federal pay raise bill for postmasters and various other Government employees was in the Congress of the United States because of the increased cost of living. If we raise the salary of someone who makes $10,000 a year by 33½ percent, that does not make sense to the poor fellow who makes $1,200. While I am still going to stand by my friend and vote for the bill, because I understand from him that this is the only thing we can get through, I want the Record to show that I do not believe that the $10,000 people ought to be raised to $18,000, and the poor people three or four or five hundred dollars a year. The poor man pays the same for beefsteak as the fellow who has money, and the poor man pays the same for other things he needs in this life, as does the rich man.

I do not believe that a 33½-percent increase in salary is justified in the higher brackets. I supported the bill and testified before the committee. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] gave me that privilege. I was acting upon the theory that we would adjust salaries in line with the cost of living, and do something to help the poor people. My good friend the Senator from Virginia says that some salaries are raised 80 percent. Is that correct? That does not make sense.

Mr. FLANDERS. Let me say briefly to the Senator from South Carolina that this part of the bill was drawn to meet the recommendations of the present President of the United States, transmitted to this body in a message.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will

the Senator yield?

Mr. FLANDERS. Just a moment. Mr. MAYBANK. The President of the

Mr. MAYBANK. The President of the United States sent a civil-rights message down here, too.

Mr. FLANDERS. I should also like to say to the Senator from South Carolina that any future Democratic President, or any future Republican President, or any future President of the third party, the name of which I do not at the moment remember, will ask for this consideration for the higher salaries.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I simply wish to invite the attention of the Senate to what it is voting for. I have a list of these increases. Some of the salaries are doubled. Others are increased 80 percent. I believe that the officials who hold the higher positions should perhaps have an increase; but when we talk about increasing the average employee 10 percent, and then increasing salaries in the higher brackets 80 percent—

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, I do

Mr. BALDWIN. Mr. President, I do not recall any legislation in this Congress since 1939 which has increased the salary of Cabinet officers or others included in this bracket.

Mr. BYRD. It makes no difference.

Mr. BALDWIN. On the other hand, Federal employees, and some post office employees, industrial employees, and retail workers, have had very substantial increases, all the way from 65 percent to 100 percent.

Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator know of many persons who refuse Cabinet positions?

Mr. BALDWIN. I do not.

Mr. BYRD. They are increased from $15,000 to $20,000. I do not say that there should not be an increase, but I say that the increase is entirely out of proportion to the increase given to the postal employees and the average employee of the Federal Government.

Mr. BALDWIN. I can only respond by saying the same thing my friend from Vermont said, that these men fall into an entirely different classification. They are all specialists of one kind and another. I do not doubt that it would be extremely easy to find anyone to take a Cabinet position in the Government of the United States; but I did not suppose that we lacked applicants for such a position. I supposed that we wanted men who were peculiarly and specially qualified for a particular job.

Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator believe that there are now able men in the Cabinet?

Mr. BALDWIN. I think there are some who are able, and I think there are some who are not so able; but I hope that we shall be able to attract extremely able ones. [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRD. That is the reason the Senator is proposing to increase the salaries.

Mr. BALDWIN. That has nothing to do with it. If that were the case, we would have had a provision in the bill which would not be effective until the 1st of January, but we are generous. We are willing to have this go into effect right now.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I should like to point out one thing, and that is that every Senator and every Member of the House is receiving about $16,500, or between $16,000 and $16,500. That is not as large a salary as it seems when written out expressly in so many words.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator enumerate the perquisites? The salary is $12,500.

Mr. TAFT. There is an allowance of $2,500 for expenses, which is tax-free. That is equivalent to another $3,500, making about $16,000. So when we give the head of a department $16,500 we do not pay him anything very different from what we are paying Members of Congress.

Mr. BYRD. Some of them are being paid $20,000. Under secretaries receive $18,000.

Mr. TAFT. They have always received more than Members of Congress. We have increased our salaries more than 50 percent. I do not believe that these increases are out of line with what we have done for ourselves.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I wish to make this statement: So far as the Senator from Virginia is concerned, I am willing to vote for the $360 increase to the classified civil service and $450 to postal employees, but I am not willing to vote for the schedule of high salaries in the higher brackets. I do not believe that the schedule has been coordinated and put together in a uniform manner. From time to time Congress has fixed salaries by legislation. This bill changes act after act which Congress has passed fixing salaries. I submit that in the closing hours of the session we ought not to take as drastic a step as this without knowing more about it.

Furthermore, the bill changes the classification in a way that needs careful study.

Mr. President, I shall vote for that part of the bill which gives the classified employees and postal employees an increase, but I am not at this time going to vote for these very high increases, some of them as much as 100 percent, and others 80 percent, for higher officials in the Government.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may we have a vote? We have several conference reports ready, and they are privileged.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the substitute as amended.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to strike out all of title III, which relates to increases in salaries in the higher brackets. That would leave the increases to apply to the classified service and to the postal employees. Then when Congress reconvenes, if, as the Senator from Connecticut says, we have a Republican President, perhaps we can go into the question further and see what can be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd]. [Putting the question.]

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

On a division the motion was agreed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the substitute bill, as amended, which is offered as an amendment to the bill.

The substitute as amended was agreed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, request a conference thereon with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Langer, Mr. Flanders, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Johnston of South Carolina, and Mr. O'Conor conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. IVES in the chair). Does the Senator from Ohio desire to have the two Senate bills indefinitely postponed?

Mr. TAFT. Yes; I ask that the two Senate bills be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objections, the bills will be indefinitely postponed.

SENATOR MCKELLAR AND THE TVA

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a letter which I send to the desk.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23, 1942. Senator Kenneth McKellar, United States Senate,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR MCKELLAR: We have been informed that some unadvised people of Tennessee have challenged your loyalty to the Tennessee Valley Authority. Such people certainly are misinformed.

We who have served with you on the Appropriations Committee of the Senate venture the statement that but for you the dams along the Tennessee River and its tributaries never would have been built. We know that this is true concerning the Pickwick, Guntersville, Chickamauga, Hiwassee, Gilbertsville, Watts Bar, Fort Loudon, Holston River, and Watauga Dams. As to all of these dams, we know that the Budget Director did not recommend them, but all were built through amendments offered by you, first in the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations and then in the full committee, of which you are a member. We know that none of these dams, except Douglas, had the approval of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and that the members of the Authority not only disapproved all of them, except Douglas, but came to Washington and lobbied with us not to appropriate the money with which to build them. We know that your amendments providing for these dams were vigor-ously fought, the late Senator Adams, of Colorado, taking the lead in a fight against them. The dams were approved by the committee by the closest kinds of votes, sometimes the vote in the subcommittee or in the full committee was a tie, but by your vigorous support of the dams and your untiring energy in their favor the bills were finally assed by the Senate and sent to conference. You were one of the conferees on each and every one of these bills, and it was due to your skillful management and untiring devotion to these matters that the House Members of the conferences finally yielded and the bills were passed and the dams built. If ever a man was beset with difficulties you had them in the building of these dams

We are informed by the clerk of the Senate Committee on Appropriations that $667,-969,270 has been spent on these dams. Every dollar of that money was invested in the dams through your efforts. Some of us who are signing this letter were strongly for you and some of us were just as strongly opposed to you in the building of these dams, but we unite in saying that the amendments providing for the building of the dams never would have been reported out of our com-mittee and the dams never would have been built but for you. The committee was almost evenly divided in every case. It was well known to the members of the committee that the Tennessee Valley Authority wanted to build only three dams as a "yardstick" and that they did not want to build a system of dams for the purpose of going into com-petition with the private-power companies. You wanted just what has finally been accomplished.

We wish to say, also, that when the proposal was made to buy most of the private power companies of Tennessee, all except those in northeast Tennessee, you piloted that measure through the Senate over just the same kind of Senate opposition that you had before, and this proposal, in our judgment, would not have been passed but for your support.

We wish to add that Douglas Dam, when it did not have your approval, was twice beaten in the committee and in the Senate. It would not have passed the last time, except for your support and vote. The amendment passed the subcommittee by one vote, and that was your vote.

We take pleasure in assuring you that, in our opinion, there would have been no Tennessee Valley Authority such as you now have but for your untiring and vigorous support of the Authority and the dams.

Very sincerely yours,

LETTER FROM THE COMMISSIONER OF THE IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZA-TION SERVICE

Mr. WHERRY obtained the floor.

Mr. REVERCOMB. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for an insertion?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. REVERCOMB. I have received a letter from the Honorable Watson B. Miller, Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which I desire to call to the attention of the Senate. Senators who are sponsors of special bills for the relief of immigration cases will be especially interested in this matter. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the letter be printed at this point in the Record.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,

IMMIGRATION AND

NATURALIZATION SERVICE,

Washington, D. C., June 18, 1948.

HON. CHAPMAN REVERCOMB,

United States Senate,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: This refers to your telephonic request of Wednesday concerning the resolution of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, the substance of which is set forth in the letter dated June 16, 1948, from Mr. Arens, staff director of the committee.

I shall be glad to comply with the suggestions made that:

1. In the case of any allen concerning whom a private bill is pending in the Senate, but concerning which bill unfavorable action shall not have been taken by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary by the end of the present session of the Congress, deportation should be stayed until April 1, 1949; and

2. In the case of any alien concerning whom a private bill has been introduced in the Senate, but concerning which bill unfavorable action has been taken by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary prior to the end of the present session of the Congress, deportation should be carried out.

It will be appreciated if you will have Mr. Arens send me a list giving the names of the aliens in both categories as well as the immigration file numbers if the numbers are available.

Sincerely,

WATSON B. MILLER.

THE HOUSING ACT

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, may I inquire as to the status of House bill 6959? It is a housing bill which I think has been sent over from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the subject of a message from the House.

Mr. WHERRY. Let me ask whether the House bill has been sent to the Senate; and if so, has it had its second reading? What is the status of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has not been read at all in the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Therefore, if it is to be brought to the attention of the Senate, for consideration, unanimous consent to that effect will be required; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of House bill 6959.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, may the title of the bill be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The title will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6959) to amend the National Housing Act, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ELLENDER. I object. Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask the Senator please to withhold his objection until I can present an explanation of the bill. The explanation will take only approximately 5 minutes.

Mr. President, this bill was passed in the House of Representatives by a vote of approximately 317 to 90.

As I understand the amendments to title I of the National Housing Act, they provide that the limit on FHA title I insurance is raised by an amount of $35,000,000, to a total of $200,000,000.

The maximum mortgage amount for title I, class 3 loans is raised from $3,000 to $4.500.

Insurance is provided up to $10,000 limit for loans for repair or conversion to provide additional housing for two or more families in existing structures, with occupance preference given to vet-

TITLE II—DISPOSAL OF GOVERNMENT-OWNED PERMANENT WAR-HOUSING ACCOMMODATIONS

All permanent, Government-owned war housing must "be sold for cash as expeditiously as possible and not later than December 31, 1949," at a price not less than value as determined by an FHA appraisal.

War housing may be transferred to the Army, Navy, or Air Force if such transfer had been requested prior to April 15, 1947.

Preference for sale to veterans is provided both as to individuals buying separate houses and as to cooperative groups buying whole projects. After the preference period has expired, there is no restriction on the sale except that it must be for cash.

TITLE III-AMENDMENTS TO TITLE III OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

This title is a complete revision of title III of the National Housing Act, and provides for a greatly restricted secondary market operation by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The FNMA is authorized to buy FHA loans under sections 203 and 603 and VA loans under section 505 of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act-second loans. This precludes purchase of FHA loans on rental housing under either section 207 or section 608, as well as purchase of VA loans under section 501 of the GI bill of rights. Purchase of loans from public agencies is prohibited.

The purchase price may not exceed 98 percent of the unpaid loan balance, and purchases are limited to mortgages not exceeding an original principal of $10,000. Loans must be offered by the original mortgagee and must be dated after June 19, 1948. Purchases from any single mortgagee are limited to 25 percent of eligible loans made by the lender after June 19, 1948.

The capital stock of FNMA is increased by $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. Its obligations may not exceed 40 times capital and surplus. The bill specifically continues the present FNMA as an RFC subsidiary under the supervision of the FHA Commissioner and empowers the latter to liquidate the FNMA when the need for it no longer exists.

TITLE IV—TAX INCENTIVE FOR THE PRODUCTION OF ADDITIONAL RENTAL HOUSING ACCOMMO-

The title amends the Internal Revenue Code by permitting an amortization deduction for income-tax purposes of 10 percent per year for the first 5 years for new rental housing and new rental units created by conversion of existing structures. This deduction would be in lieu of the present amortization deduction. The taxpayer may elect to discontinue the special deduction at any time within the 5-year period.

To be eligible for the special deduction, construction of the rental-housing facilities must be started on or after July 1, 1948, and before the close of July 1, 1950, and the FHA must certify (a) that there is a shortage of rental housing in the area, and (b) that the units will be "of such character and will be rented and at such rentals" as will tend to relieve the shortage.

Excise tax in sales of trailer coaches are removed until July 1950.

TITLE V-GI HOME-LOAN INCONTESTABILITY CLAUSE

This title simply adds to the Servicemen's Readjustment Act a clause making the mortgage guaranty incontestable in the hands of a secondary purchaser.

TITLE VI-AMENDMENTS TO TITLE VI OF THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

Title VI of FHA is extended until March 31, 1949, and the insurance authorization is raised by $1,600,000,000 to $6,950,000,000, of which $800,000,000 is reserved for rental housing under section 608 and $200,000,000 for multifamily dwellings under section 603. The maximum mortgage amount under section 603 may be raised to $9,100 at the direction of the Administrator.

The new feature of this title is an authorization of FHA to insure, under section 603, individual house loans up to 95 percent of value provided the mortgage does not exceed $6,000. The bill also permits 95-percent loans for rental housing under section 608 if the mortgagor is a veterans' nonprofit housing cooperative

The title raises the maximum interest rate from 4 to 5 percent if the FHA Commissioner finds that "in certain areas or under special circumstances the mortgage market demands it." This applies to both section 603 and 608 loans.

Amendments to section 609 provide for more liberal insurance of loans to house manufacturers, and a new section 611 authorizes insurance of construction loans for mass producers of housing.

TITLE VII-EQUITY INVESTMENT AIDS

This is the yield-insurance plan and is identical with section 402 of the T-E-W

TITLE VIII-MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS

This title increases the lending authority of RFC from $1,500,000,000 to $2,-000,000,000 and authorized RFC to subscribe to FNMA stock to the extent of $20,000,000.

Mr. President, that very briefly sketches the high lights of the bill, which finally came out of the House by the vote

I mentioned, of 317 to 90.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. President, I do not quite understand the parliamentary situation which requires unanimous consent, but I think that a piece of legislation of the importance of housing would seem to require that the political party blocking a vote should do it in the open. Within a very few days it is my guess that we are going to have a call from the President of the United States for a special session of this Congress on housing, and those who are responsible for defeating this bill, and the political party responsible, should make themselves known at this time, so that all may know where to place the responsibility for the special session. Throughout the fall campaign we are going to hear speech after speech from every rostrum in the country and from every schoolhouse in the country with respect to the failure of Congress to enact housing legislation. I want to know who is responsible, what Senator is responsible for defeating the bill the majority leader seeks to lay before us. make it plain that housing is the most vital domestic issue today. Make no mistake about that.

Mr. MAYBANK and Mr. ELLENDER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. WHERRY. I shall answer the distinguished Senator from Colorado first, after which I shall yield to the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. FLLENDER. I thought I yielded to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] after the Senator from Nebraska concludes.

Mr. WHERRY. To be perfectly frank. the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLEN-DER I objected to a unanimous-consent request, making his position very plain. I requested him to withdraw his objection in order that I might explain the bill, thinking that possibly after an explanation, we might be able to get the bill up for consideration.

I may say to the Senator from Colorado that, as he well knows, under the rules, it is necessary that we have unanimous consent. The bill has not yet gone to committee. I believe it has not had its second reading yet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Therefore, it will be necessary to move to discharge the committee, which would require that the motion lie over for 1 day. If we intend to adjourn tonight, the only way we can get it up for consideration is by means of unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. MAYBANK and Mr. ELLENDER addressed the Chair.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not yield to anybody except the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I understood the bill had come over from the

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I cannot understand why it requires a unanimous consent agreement before this body, but I shall not argue the point.

Mr. WHERRY. I yield first to the Senator from Louisiana, because he was so kind as to withhold his objection a little while ago.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I regret to have to renew objection to the consideration of this bill at this time. Let me say to the Senate that for the past 4 years the Senate has been working on over-all housing bills. During the Seventy-ninth Congress the so-called Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill was passed by the Senate without objection. During the Seventy-ninth Congress that bill was sent to the House, and there it was pigeonholed. During this Congress the Senate passed Senate bill 866, after full hearings. That bill was recommended not only by the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate and the House Committee on Banking and Currency, but by a joint committee of the House and Senate. Notwithstanding all that, there is a little czar over in the House who heads the Banking and Currency Committee, and he has seen fit again to stymie the passage or even the presentation of our bill before the House of Representatives. Senate bill 866 was passed by this body and was considered by the House Banking and Currency Committee. It is now before the Rules Committee of the House. When House bill 6959 came before us it received little or no committee hearings. Instead of using Senate bill 866 as a vehicle to place before us the contents of this bill, the House saw fit not to do that, so what we have today is almost a brand-new bill with a few of the titles from the so-called Taft-Ellender bill, and we are now asked to pass that bill.

Mr. WHERRY. The bill will be open for amendment.

Mr. ELLENDER. I understand that. I understand we can offer a substitute, amend it, and all that. But let me say to the Senate that if the little czar who heads the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, has been able to prevent the House from voting on Senate bill 866, my guess is that he will be in equally as good a position to prevent a vote on Senate bill 866 if we attached it to the House bill. As I see it, there is no chance for the House of Representatives to consider Senate bill 866, which they have had before them for some time.

Mr. President, I renew my objection. Mr. WHERRY. Will the Senator withhold his objection long enough for me to yield to other Senators?

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, I want to make the RECORD clear. Seven times, as a member of the Banking and Currency Committee over a period of years, I voted for the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. I voted for it on the Senate floor. I voted against substitution. I want to call to the attention of the disfinguished Senator from Nebraska tonight the fact that we are discussing a bill which has been sent over from the House. I feel certain that the chairman of the committee, with whom I have always had the pleasure of working and supporting housing for the GI's, is interested in this matter. I have a letter from my attorney who says that the only GI loans covered by the secondary market provisions of the Wolcott bill are second mortgage loans guaranteed by the Veterans' Administration under section 505. These are the cases where first mortgage loans are insured by the FHA. They amount to only 15 or 20 percent of the GI loans, while section 501 loans amount to 80 to 85 percent of the GI loans. So, again, Mr. President, they have left out the GI loans.

ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks, a more detailed statement on the secondary market for home mortgages.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECONDARY MARKET FOR HOME MORTGAGES UNDER THE WOLCOTT BILL, H. R. 6959

One of the most urgent needs in the current home financing picture is a Govern-ment-sponsored secondary market for home mortgages insured by the FHA or guaranteed under the GI Act.

Through the Federal National Mortgage Association we have had such a market for FHA mortgages, on both sale and rental housing until last June. We also had such a market for GI home loans. The Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill as passed by the Senate would have continued the secondary market which we now have for FHA mortgages on both sale and rental housing, and would leave also provided a secondary market for all GI home mortgage loans. It would have provided a half billion dollar revolving fund for this purpose.

Last week there were many complaints by lenders that the Federal National Mortgage Association had suddenly issued a order to prevent further purchase of FHA mortgages.

The reason for this was the introduction of the Wolcott so-called housing bill-H. R. 6959. That bill changes even the present secondary market for FHA mortgages. It that no mortgage may be purchased for more than 98 percent of the unpaid principal plus accrued interest. In other words, banks and other lenders could sell such mortgages only at 2-percent discount. The reason for the stop order thus becomes apparent. Had it not been issued the Federal National Mortgage Association would have had millions of dollars of mortgages dumped on it the next morning, and its present funds would have been exhausted immediately.

But that is only one of the completely unsound and unworkable provisions of the secondary market provisions of this Wolcott

It prohibits further purchases of FHA mortgages for urgently needed rental housing under sections 207 or 608 of the National Housing Act. It prohibits the purchase of FHA mortgages on veterans cooperative

Unlike the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill which made provision for the purchase of both section 501 and section 505 GI mortgages, the Wolcott bill limits such purchases only to section 505 GI mortgages. are the second mortgages guaranteed by the Veterans' Administration where the first mortgage is insured by the FHA. They amount to only 15 to 20 percent of the GI loans, while the section 501 loans amount to about 80 to 85 percent of the GI loans.

So the Wolcott bill would exclude 80 to 85 percent of GI loans from the secondary market. It would exclude from the second-ary market all mortgages on veterans cooperatives insured by the FHA. It would require all banks and other lenders to sell their mortgages in the secondary market at a 2 percent discount.

It is therefore perfectly apparent that the secondary market provisions of the Wolcott bill are wholly inadequate. They would not meet the needs of the banks and other lenders, and would discriminate against rental housing loans, loans guaranteed under the GI Act, and FHA insured mortgage loans to veterans cooperatives.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, when the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Johnson] rises to his feet, propounds an inquiry, and shows an honest doubt in his mind. I have a very sympathetic interest in relieving his apprehension and improving his understanding. I want to include in the scope of my remarks every Senator in the Chamber. This bill which has come before us this afternoon is a snare and a delusion; it is a hollow shell; it is a phony housing bill. It is put up to deceive the American people and to deceive the Senate. It is the result of the machinations of a group of men in the real-estate business and the real-estate lobby operating with certain men on Capitol Hill. It is a hollow sham. the Senator from Louisiana truthfully said, four times this deliberative body has passed the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill containing public-housing provisions. We passed it again this year. It went to the House, and the House committee passed it, but the real-estate crowd would not recognize the action of the House committee. So this monstrosity was produced. The men in the House who sent this bill here are denying the right of the representatives of the American people in the House of Representatives to cast their votes for or against public housing, and slum clearance, and farm housing. I say as to that sort of action. "It shall not pass."

All over this country there are millions of little people who have been seeking homes; veterans of the last war who are hungry for a home. The point I make is that they have been looking with hope and encouragement toward Capitol Hill. It was my privilege to address a veterans' convention in the auditorium of the Labor Department 3 months ago. I never saw a body of men so enthusiastic as they were about the Taft-Ellender-

This bill which is now before us would never be signed by my friend from Colorado. There is a tax depreciation scheme of tremendous magnitude involved which is interesting only to the millionaire real-estate owners of the country. So I ask the Senate to reject this House bill and pass the bill which has received years of preparation and hard work by a committee headed by my friend and old colleague, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], who put into it honest-to-God effort to produce an honest-to-God housing bill, to remove the menacing slums, to give public housing to the little people of the country. 500,000 homes in a 5-year program.

Now we are handed this monstrosity. It is a miscarriage of justice in the housing field. It is not a housing bill of the kind which the Senator of Colorado has in his heart and mind. This is a scheme, a circumlocution process. Give us the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, or no bill at all, because that is the only bill which has provided for public housing and slum clearance and farm housing.

Millionaires are behind this monstrosity sent over from the House, I say again, it shall not pass. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] objected to the consideration of the bill. We fought for the Senate bill, but a little group of men got together and turned thumbs down.

So I say to the Senate, support the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Do not make a mockery of our years of effort for the people of the country who need public housing.

Mr. MAYBANK and Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor. To whom does he yield?

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator from Colorado asked me to yield first.

Mr. MAYBANK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. MAYBANK. I merely wish to remind the Senator from New Hampshire that, according to the testimony, in addition to cutting out the public housing and cutting out the slum clearance and cutting out the farm housing, 80 to 85 percent of veterans' loans guaranteed under the GI act would be cut out in this House bill. But in the bill which our committee, of which the Senator is chairman, reported out and which the Senate passed all these would be covered.

Mr. TOBEY. That is correct. Mr. MAYBANK. It knocks out help to veterans.

Mr. TOBEY. The veterans have been flimflammed by this legislation.

Mr. MAYBANK. Of course.
Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr.
President—

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I trust that the distinguished Senator from Louisiana will still withhold his objection because I think that, now that we have brought the question up, there should be a chance given to those who want to ask questions on the bill to say something about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. To whom does the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The question before the Senate is: Shall we consider this matter?

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator is correct.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The question is not at all on the merits or demerits of the bill as it came from the House, or the merits of Taft-Wagner-Ellender bill, or the other way around. Those bills are not before us.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator is cor-

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. The only way in which we can enact a bill which the Senate likes is by bringing this measure up and amending it and sending it back to the House, proceeding in such a routine legislative manner.

Mr. TOBEY. Let me enlighten the Senator. When it goes back, the Senator may as well know that the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency has said he will not take it to conference. It is a dead smelt.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the Senator from Colorado desire to have me yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I should like to give the House a chance to kill housing if that is what they want to do. Let the House assume full responsibility.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President— The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I am yielding to the Senator from Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One Senator at a time, please. The Senator from

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. I am very anxious to establish responsibility. I want to know who killed cock robin. If we act upon this bill, if we amend it, if we send it back to the House, if it is killed back there, the country will know whom to blame, and that is what I am seeking.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President— Mr. WHERRY. Please let me make one observation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor.

Mr. WHERRY. I should like to explain the reason why we have brought the bill forward now. I am not saying that this bill has all the merits the House says it has. I am not saying it has all the bad qualities my distinguished colleagues, and the chairman of the committee, who has done so much work on the subject, says it has. I suggest to Senators that this is the mechanical parliamentary situation. The House passed this bill and sent it to the Senate. If the bill is taken up tonight by unanimous consent and amended in any way Senators desire to amend it, even putting in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, then it will go back to the House and will go to conference.

Mr. TOBEY. The Senator knows that the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency has said he will not take it to conference.

Mr. WHERRY. I am not acquainted with that.

Mr. TOBEY. He said that just within 24 hours.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not know anything about what that man said.

Mr. TOBEY. I give the Senator my word for it.

Mr. WHERRY. I take it. (Laughter.)
I have the highest regard for the Senator from New Hampshire, and he knows it. I still think, however, that it is impossible, in the present situation, to get a housing bill, because there was no chance to get a conference on a housing bill, until this bill was passed. This bill has been passed. The Senate can put on as an amendment the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill and send it to the House, and then if they do not send it to a conference, it seems to me the responsibility will be entirely upon the House of Representatives. Do not Senators agree with me? That is the mechanical situation.

Mr. ELLENDER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. Just one moment. am not saying that this bill is one that should go back to the House. The Senate is going to amend it in any way it desires to amend it. But the unfortunate situation is-and I respectfully call this to the attention of my colleague from New Hampshire, and I pay him a compliment and a tribute for the work he has done on housing-I can see it in no other way, if we recess or adjourn tonight or before next week, or whenever we do finally terminate this session of Congress, to get a bill into conference except by taking the House bill and amending it as the Senate desires to amend it, and sending it back to the House of Representatives.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. May I say to my good friend from Nebraska that if we were to follow the suggestion he has made, one objection from the House side would make it impossible for the matter to go to conference.

Mr. WHERRY. Very well; let us send it over there.

Mr. ELLENDER. Let me suggest a way by which this could be done more easily. Let the Rules Committee in the House—

Mr. WHERRY. We have no control of the House

Mr. ELLENDER. But one objection will block it, and the way to do it is to let the Rules Committee of the House simply permit, as it were, the House Members to vote on the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, and we can have a bill passed within the next 2 hours.

Mr. WHERRY. May I propound a question to my distinguished friend?

Mr. ELLENDER. Certainly.

Mr. WHERRY. The Senator does not deny that the procedure I suggested would accomplish the purpose, does he?

Mr. ELLENDER. If I thought it would, I would not object, but I know it will not.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not know what the conferees would do, but the only thing we can do is to give them a chance to turn it down.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. McCARTHY. Frankly, Mr. President, it makes me rather sick away down deep inside to see the Senate arguing tonight, not over whether we should have housing legislation, but over whose name that housing legislation should contain. Much of the controversy here tonight is not over the question of what the bill should contain, but rather whose name should appear as sponsor of the bill. So that we will have it crystal clear as to what the Senator from Louisiana is vetoing if he persists in his objection, he is vetoing, not the bill the House passed, for he knows as well as I do that we can amend that bill in any way we see fit. He knows we can amend it by substituting practically every section of what he sees fit to call the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. Rather than do that he is vetoing the right of this body to pass any housing legislation.

If the Senator from Louisiana-and I weigh my words well when I say this-if the Senator from Louisiana persists in this privilege which unfortunately he enjoys here tonight, then he will be doing a number of things.

First, he will be freezing in the present public-housing units tenants who are making as high as $22,000 a year. He will be making it impossible for the Congress to do with the public-housing units, 190,-000 of them, which are in existence, what it could do, so that they would be available to the men who really need those units. He will be saying, "I, myself, one Senator from Louisiana, want you to see that in the city of Detroit, for example, men making $22,000, or $14,000, or $12,-000, a year shall continue to occupy these subsidized places which some low-income veteran with a wife and two or three children could have occupied.'

Second. If the Senator from Louisiana persists in his objection, he will be absolutely vetoing any right for the veterans of this Nation to form veterans' cooperatives, the type of housing cooperative which the Joint Housing Committee, on which were men representing every line of thought-the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN]unanimously agreed that we should provide for in housing legislation. If the Senator from Louisiana persists in insisting upon the privilege which, I say, unfortunately he has tonight—a privilege upon which he can insist-he will be vetoing the work which our Housing Committee has done.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. Does the Senator from Wisconsin mind if I ask him a question? It is not quite germane, but what the Senator is saying now brought something to my mind like a flash. Has the Senator talked with the chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee about this legislation?

Mr. McCARTHY. I have.

Mr. TOBEY. And was not the conversation the Senator had with the chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee the subject of whether or not this bill would be taken up in conference with the House if it is sent back to the House?

Mr. McCARTHY. It was.

Mr. TOBEY. Did the chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee say he would take it to conference, or did he say he would not take it to conference?

Mr. McCARTHY. I discussed with him what I thought were the necessary amendments. I told him I thought the bill was incomplete without having some research section-not the setting up of a laboratory within the Housing and Home Finance Agency, but the provision for a section within that Agency, to work with the municipalities to secure some semblance of standardization of building codes and to work with the industry to attempt to obtain standardization of measurements. Mr. Wolcott said he had no objection whatsoever to such amend-I suggested to him what I ments. thought with respect to salaries of the heads of the housing agencies. Take Mr. Foley, for example. He has dropped from $12,000 to $10,000 a year since he was promoted. I said I thought the salaries were entirely inadequate, and that we could not expect to obtain competent men to run fifteen- or eighteen- or twentybillion-dollar empires on salaries of $10,-000 a year. I told him I expected to submit an amendment providing for salary increases. He consented to that. Since that time, however, the Senate has passed a wage increase which takes care of that problem.

I suggested to him that the bill would be incomplete unless we had the type of slum-clearance provision which our Housing Committee wrote. Incidentally, that is not the provision in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner original bill. It is in the bill which the 14 men of the Joint Housing Committee studied during the whole of the summer and recommended.

I suggested to him further that we should have some type of public housing, not of the type which we have had in the past, which allows the housing authorities to skim the cream off the lower income group, but a public housing measure which would start down at the bottom. He said he was heartily opposed to any public housing. I did get the impression, however, that he would take it to conference. Even though I have tremendous respect for the gentleman from Michigan, Representative Wolcott-I believe he is a very sincere, honest and able man-I do not believe the Senate should be guided by what one Representative says. If the majority of the Senate still feels that public housing is necessary, obviously the answer is not to kill all the housing legislation, but, rather, to take the House bill and amend it so as to put the best possible provisions for public housing in the bill and then go to conference with it. Perhaps the presently proposed five-year plan may not be adopted in conference, but it is entirely possible that a compromise can be made on a oneyear plan or a two-year plan. After all, we shall be back in session next year.

Mr. President, I hope that one Senator will not take it upon himself to vetonot the House bill, because by his objection he would not be vetoing the House Housing bill; he would be vetoing the right of every young veteran, every young man who is desirous of getting a home within a reasonable time, to get such a home. I would hesitate a long time before I would take it upon myself to veto the right of the American people because I might happen to dislike some part of a

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield. Mr. TOBEY. The Senator from Wisconsin and I have labored together in this matter. The fact is that the chairman of the House Banking and Currency refuses to give the peoples' Representatives in the House of Representatives a chance to vote on these salient measures of public housing and slum clearance. He has told the Senator from Wisconsin that he would not bring the bill to conference if public housing and slum clearance were contained in it. He has told others the same thing. There, Mr. President, we see the die cast. There we see the position, and we are meeting tonight to do the best we can in view of the situation.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask Members of the Senate if we cannot suspend what we are discussing for a while in order to take up a number of conference reports on which action is very necessary.

Mr. ELLENDER. How long does the Senator think it will take to do what he has in mind? I have been on the floor of the Senate now for 4 hours waiting for this occasion. I have not had anything to eat.

Mr. WHERRY. I believe some others of us are in the same situation as the Senator from Louisiana is in. We have been in session now for 2 days and 1 night and are entering into the second night. I should like to get a number of privileged matters out of the way. It will take only a few minutes to do so.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5882) to authorize the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force to donate excess and surplus property for educational purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2877) to amend the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6481) making appropriations for Government corporations and independent executive agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes; that the House receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 7, 13, 16, 24, and 26 to the bill and concurred therein severally with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate, and that the House insisted upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 1, 2, and 3 to the bill.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6935) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Taber, Mr. Wiggles-worth, Mr. Engel of Michigan, Mr. Stefan, Mr. Case of South Dakota, Mr. Keefe, Mr. Cannon, Mr. Kerr, and Mr. Mahon were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further anounced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6527) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with war-incurred, or postwar national-defense-incurred, enrollments; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. McCowen, Mr. Landis, Mr. BREHM, Mr. KEARNS, Mr. BARDEN, and Mr. Lucas were appointed managers on the part of the House at the con-

R. 6829) making supplemental appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus. boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, and that the House re-ceded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4 and 8 to the bill and concurred therein.

ASSISTANCE TO CERTAIN SCHOOL AGEN-CIES

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6527) to provide assistance to certain local school agencies overburdened with war-incurred, or postwar national-defense-incurred, enrollments, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. TAFT. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. SMITH, Mr. DONNELL, Mr. MORSE, Mr. MURRAY, and Mr. HILL conferees on the part of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF PHILIPPINE REHABILI-TATION ACT OF 1946

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1969) to amend the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 in connection with the training of Filipinos as provided for in title III, which was, on page 1, beginning with line 3, to strike out all over to and including line 10, page 2, and insert:

That section 302 (b) of the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 (Public Law 370, 79th Cong.) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The Commissioner of Public Roads is authorized, under such regulations as he may adopt, to provide training for not to exceed 10 Filipino engineers, to be designated by the President of the Philippines from the regularly employed staff of the Philippine Public Works Department and the engineer officers of the armed forces of the Philippines subject to the provisions of section 311 (c), in the construction, maintenance, and high-way traffic engineering and control necessary the continued maintenance and for the efficient and safe operation of highway trans-port facilities."

SEC. 2. Section 305 (b) of the Philippine Rehabilitation Act of 1946 is amended to read as follows:

"(b) To accomplish such purposes the Public Health Service shall at the earliest practicable time survey the health situation in the Philippines, and is authorized to replace, expand, or install such health services and facilities in the Philippines as are deemed essential to preservation of health, and may assist in the rehabilitation and development of a Philippine quarantine service for pre-vention of introduction of disease from abroad or from one island to another. Public Health Service may set up demon-strations and establish training centers in the Philippines; may establish and maintain in the Philippines a school or schools for the purpose of providing practical instruction in public health; and may, at any time prior to July 1, 1950, provide not to exceed I year of training in public-health methods and administration, through study at appropriate schools or colleges in the United States and supplementary field work and observa-tion of public-health work, to not more than 90 Filipinos, to be designated by the President of the Philippines subject to the provisions of section 311 (c), and not to exceed 5 months of training in such methods and administration, through field work and observation of public-health work, to not more than 10 additional Filipinos, to be so designated. It may replace equipment and supply reasonably necessary additional equipment, utilizing for this purpose, so far as possible, surplus property, and may recom-mend to the Commission the repair or construction under the provisions of section 304, at any time prior to July 1, 1950, of buildings deemed essential to the rehabilitation of public health and quarantine functions."

Mr. TAFT. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House. The motion was agreed to.

APPROPRIATIONS OF GOVERNMENT COR-PORATIONS AND INDEPENDENT EXECU-TIVE AGENCIES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. FERGUSON. I submit a conference report on House bill 6481, making appropriations for the Government corporations and independent executive agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be read.

The conference report was read, as

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6481) making appropriations for the Government corporations and independent executive agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949 and for other purposes having met,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 6481, which was read as fol-

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U.S. June 19, 1948.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7 to the bill (H. R. 6481) making appropriations for Government corporations and independent agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: Before the period at the end thereof, insert: ": Provided further, That section 304 (b) of the Government Corpora-tion Control Act, as amended (Public Law 248, approved December 6, 1945), shall not be applicable with respect to the Panama Railroad Company until after June 30, 1949."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: After "plus accrued dividends thereon" insert: "which, notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall be computed at a rate approximating the average interest cost incurred by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation on its total borrowings during each respective fiscal thereof)."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24 to said bill and concur therein with amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the said amendment, insert the following: ": Provided further, That notwithstanding pro-visions of law to the contrary, in addition to the foregoing the Corporation is authorized to utilize, from the revolving fund created by section 84 of the Farm Credit Act of 1933 (12 U. S. C. 1148a), such sums as may be necessary (a) to make loans, during a period of five years, to bona fide fur farmers in accordance with the provisions of section 201 (e) of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, as amended (12 U. S. C. 1148), all such loans to carry full personal liability of the borrowers and to be secured by such collateral as is deemed by the Corporation to be necessary to afford reasonable assurance of repayment, the aggregate principal amount of which loans shall not exceed $4,000,000 outstanding at any one time, and (b) not to exceed $25,000 for administrative expenses of the Corpora-tion and the Farm Credit Administration in connection with such loans, which amount and the aforesaid item of $146,800 may be combined for accounting purposes.'

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 26 to said bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the said amendment, insert the following:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

"VIRGIN ISLANDS COMPANY

"Section 304 (b) of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended (Public Law 248, approved Dec. 6, 1945), shall not be applicable with respect to the Virgin Islands Company until after June 30, 1949.

"The Virgin Islands Company is authorized to borrow from the Treasury of the United States not to exceed $500,000, for which purpose there is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated $500,000. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make such loans to the Company for repayment not later than 1 year after the making thereof, at rates of interest determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the making of any such loan to the Company.

"Not to exceed $97,880 of the funds available to the Company shall be available for administrative expenses (to be computed on an acc.ual basis), including salaries of officers, Washington office personnel, and the accounting, purchasing, and pay-roll depart-ments; clerical services; traveling, automobile, office, and sundries expenses; stationery and office supplies; telephone and telegraph; postage; dues and subscriptions; repairs, and maintenance of office buildings and equipment; employees' welfare; and public relations: Provided, That such total sum shall be inclusive of the gross amounts of the foregoing categories of expenses before apportionment of any part thereof to manufacturing or other expenses: Provided further, That such administrative expenses shall be exclusive of salaries of the engineering and shipping departments, storekeepers, and plant clerical personnel; interest ex-pense; bank service charges; audit fees; and depreciation."

That the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, and 3 to said bill

Mr. FERGUSON. I move that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 7, 13, 16, 24, and 26.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FERGUSON. I now move that the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, and 3.

The motion was agreed to.

SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR EXECUTIVE OFFICE AND SUNDRY IN-DEPENDENT EXECUTIVE BUREAUS, ETC.—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. REED. I submit a conference report on House bill 6829, making supplemental appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be read.

The conference report was read.

(For conference report, see House proceedings of today's RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT RELATING TO CERTAIN WAR CLAIMS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on House bill 4044, to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act, as amended; to create a commission to make an inquiry and report with respect to war claims; and to provide for relief for internees in certain cases, and I ask unanimous consent for immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

PENSACOLA NATIONAL MONUMENT-REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, from the Committee on Armed Services, I ask unanimous consent to report favorably with amendments the bill (H. R. 3416) to provide for the establishment of the Pensacola National Monument, and I submit a report (No. 1771) thereon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill and report will be received, and the report will be printed.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, there is at the desk House bill 3416, which is a bill unanimously approved by the Armed Services Committee. It seeks to create a national monument at Pensacola, Fla. It requires the addition of some amendments. I now ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 3416, so that it may be sent to the House as proposed to be amended. I am confident that there will be no objection to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 3416) to provide for the establishment of the Pensacola National Monument.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after "authorized" to strike out "and directed to acquire on" and to insert "to receive on"; in line 4, after "United States", to strike out "by transfer, gift, purchase, condemnation, or otherwise"; in line 8, to strike out "War Department" and insert "Department of the Army."; in line 9, after "Navy Department", to insert "and transferred in accordance with existing law."

The amendments were agreed to. The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time

The bill was read the third time and passed.

THE HOUSING ACT

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I am a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, which handles housing matters. I have been through the housing question for approximately 3 years. I do not wish to argue the merits of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. I do not wish to argue the merits of the House bill, but I do wish to make one observation, and I make it because I feel that we should do something here tonight in respect to housing.

It seems to me that some of us in the Senate are taking the same position that we accuse certain Members of the House of taking. We accuse certain Members in the House of denying the House the right to vote upon the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. It seems to me that tonight we are likewise denying the Senate the right to consider the housing bill, knowing that any Senator can offer the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill as a complete substitute for the House bill. I do not know whether the chairman of the House

Banking and Currency Committee would take the bill to conference or not. I have no way of knowing. But we are acting in the same way that we are accusing the chairman of the Housing Banking and Currency Committee of acting. That is, we are bowing our necks and saying, "Unless we can have our way we will not take anything."

I believe in all fairness that we should permit the unanimous-consent agreement, and if some Senator wishes to offer the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill as a complete substitute, put it up to the Senate and let the Senate vote on it and send it back to the House. If the House does not care to consider it, it seems to me that the responsibility will be upon the House, and not upon us.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I be-lieve that we have exhausted the patience of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. He has been very patient about withholding his objection. I should like to ask him once again, in the light of what has been said, the mechanical situation, and the parliamentary procedure through which we must go, if he does not feel that we might take up the House bill, let the Senate do what it pleases so far as amendments are concerned, and send it back to the House for consideration.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I renew my objection.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6959; that all of that bill after the enacting clause be stricken out and that there be inserted the provisions of Senate bill 866, heretofore passed by the Senate; that the Senate insist upon its amendments and ask for a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. President, we passed a housing bill. It was considered for months in the House. Instead of taking that bill, as the House should have done, and substituting what it wished and sending it to conference, it refused to consider the Senate bill. It put the Senate bill aside and wrote a bill of its own and now sends it over here on the last day of the session.

I have not been able to read all of the provisions of the House bill. As we know, if we debate the question of whether or not to adopt a substitute for the House bill, and the various provisions of the bill, it will require another week, as it did before. It seems to me that the proper way to do is to say, "We passed a bill. We will substitute that bill for the House bill and send it to conference.' Then we shall have an opportunity, for example, to correct the provision which was pointed out by the FHA, in which the GI-loan provision does not cover 80 percent of the GI loans in the secondary market. I believe that the most important single thing we can do to keep up the flow of housing is to provide that secondary market. A small committee can consider the two bills and try to reconcile them in some way that may be satisfactory to both Houses.

The suggestion I have made, to take up the bill in one unanimous request, substitute the Senate bill and send it to conference, is the reasonable thing to do at this time.

It has been said that the chairman of the House committee will not agree to a conference. I cannot believe that any such arbitrary position could be taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. ELLENDER. I object. Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, I think the record should be absolutely clear at this time, in the closing hours of the session, as to just who is blocking housing.

First, I thank the Senator from Ohio for the attitude he has taken and congratulate him. He is always a reasonable man. He has demonstrated it again.

The only way we can get housing legislation of any kind-and the Senator from Louisiana, who is blocking this housing legislation, knows it—is by taking up the House bill in the manner suggested by the Senator from Ohio. We all know that there are many things about the bill which the Senate has passed that we do not like. There is also much debris in the House bill. But the only way we can get sensible housing legislation is to have the conferees get together tonight and reconcile the differences.

I know that the Senator from Louisiana is not worried for fear that the Senate conference committee will be loaded with men who take a position opposite to that which he takes. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey] who takes the same position on public housing that the Senator from Louisiana does, would have the job of selecting the conferees. So there is no conceivable possibility of having the conference loaded with Senators who are opposed to public Again, Mr. President, so that the REC-ORD may be absolutely clear-and I know this matter will be brought up again and again this year-let me say that the Senator from Louisiana, by exercising a privilege which unfortunately is his tonight, is doing several things. First, he is making it impossible for the veterans to get the 100-percent guaranteed loans which the entire Congress has decided the veterans have a right to have. If the Senator from Louisiana persists in his objection, that will mean that he will have absolutely vetoed the right of nearly 15,-000,000 young Americans to take advantage of the type of loans which the Congress has decided they have a right to have.

If the Senator from Louisiana persists in his one-man veto, which is of a type which we have seen all too often, not only in the Congress but in the Presidency, it will mean that we shall not have liberal loan guaranties for low-cost housing, and that will be particularly at the expense of the young men who have been in the service, and who have large families, families who really need low-cost housing. If the Senator from Louisiana persists in his objection-and this matter is of tremendous importance; we held hearings on it, all the way from San Francisco to New York, and from New Orleans to St. Paul; and every veterans' organization which came before us urged that we pass some workable and sensible veterans' cooperative housing legislation-so if the Senator persists in his one-man veto, that will mean that he will have vetoed the desires of all the veterans' organizations and the desires of the entire Senate and House to give the veterans who fought the war a right to get together and build some cheap housing. It will also mean that the Senator from Louisiana will have stopped cold the operations of a great number of prefabricated-housing manufacturers.

Mr. President, I do not desire to take up any more of the time of the Senate tonight, for there are a number of other measures which must be passed before we adjourn: but I think the RECORD should be clear that tonight we have seen the unintelligent exercise of a veto privilege which one man should not have. During the past 2 years we have seen the veto privilege abused by the President, and six times the measures have been passed over his vetoes by a majority of the Congress. Mr. President, the only other President of the United States who had thus abused this veto power and had so many vetoes overridden was Andrew Johnson-and Andrew Johnson was impeached.

But tonight we see the use of a veto by a Member of the Senate to prevent the veterans from getting reasonably priced housing this year.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, has a ruling been made to the effect that objection is made?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

OCEAN TRANSPORTATION SERVICE TO ALASKA

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 219, Calendar 1817, relating to ocean transportation to Alaska, and I ask that the joint resolution be read by title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be read by title, for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 219) to continue until December 31, 1949, the authority of the United States Maritime Commission to make provision for certain ocean transportation service to, from, and within Alaska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. LANGER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection temporarily, to permit an explanation and a statement? I should like to call attention to a certain matter.

Mr. LANGER. Very well.

Mr. CAIN. I wish to call the attention of the Senate, in the presence of the Senator from North Dakota, to the fact that yesterday when this measure was reached during the call of the calendar, the Senator from North Dakota was moved to object for the reason, as he said, that he had been advised that the Governor of Alaska was in opposition to this proposed legislation. The Senator from North Dakota told me and my colleague, the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. Magnuson], and the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Capehart]—that subcommittee having jurisdiction over the proposed legislation—that he would endeavor to get in touch by telephone with the Governor of Alaska.

I do not know whether the Senator from North Dakota has had opportunity to do so; but I was able to contact the Governor of Alaska late yesterday afternoon at Oakland, Calif., and I was authorized and encouraged by the Governor of Alaska to say to the Senate and to say to individual Senators-I refer particularly to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER], who objected to the consideration of this measure yesterday during the call of the calendar-that in the considered opinion of the Governor of Alaska, the very best interests of the citizens of that great Territory would be adversely affected and prejudiced unless this proposed legislation is passed.

Inasmuch as yesterday my very good friend the Senator from North Dakota said that his only objection to the measure was that the Governor of Alaska was opposed to it, and inasmuch as the Senator now knows, as I was able to advise him last night, that the Governor of Alaska no longer objects, therefore I hope that the Senator from North Dakota will find it convenient to go along with the desire to have the Senate pass this proposed piece of legislation, which will properly protect the interests of a great Territory belonging to this country.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I wonder whether the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Capehart] will agree to an amendment changing the date from December 31, 1949, to October 1, 1948.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I shall be very happy to accept that amendment, if it is agreeable to the author of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I should like to say to the Senator from North Dakota that this measure proposes an extension of the public law here involved for the short period of 8 months, according to a proposed change in the date. The chairman of the House committee, whose committee is waiting to see what action the Senate will take, tells me that he will accept the Senate joint resolution word for word as it is, with its present date.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if objection has been made—

Mr. LANGER. The objection is withdrawn.

Mr. President, in my humble judgment, this is a very very bad measure. Under its provisions the Government will lease a ship for $1 to three private companies, and then will pay a subsidy of $3,500,000.

In view of the fact that Alaska may be hurt, I am perfectly willing, if the chairman of the subcommittee will accept the amendment I have proposed—making the date October 1, 1948—not to object, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, all we propose to do here is to extend a law which the Congress passed a year ago. The law expires on June 30. Many of us feel that we should not continue the law except for a limited period of time. We picked the date February 28, 1949—that is the present proposal, under an amendment to the date appearing on the face of the joint resolution as printed, which is December 31, 1949—in order to give the operators of the ship and the Maritime Commission time to get together and work out a new arrangement.

I am fearful that a hardship would be worked upon the people of Alaska if this measure were killed tonight, because then there would be only the time between the present and June 30 in which to work out the new arrangement, and possibly that would not provide sufficient time for the new arrangement to be worked out and for the problem to be handled.

For that reason, if the Senator from North Dakota will not go along with the February 28, 1949 date—which I believe the Senator from North Dakota should do in all fairness to the people of Alaska and the Maritime Commission and the ship operators—I shall accept the October 1, 1948 date.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I should like to ask a question of the Senator from North Dakota, who, of course, not only wishes to have good legislation enacted, but wishes to be of as much assistance as he can to the people of Alaska in their problems and troubles. The measure, as we would have it considered, would call for the date to be March 1, 1949, but the suggestion of the Senator from North Dakota is October, I believe.

Mr. LANGER. October 1, 1948.

Mr. LANGER. October 1, 1948. Mr. CAIN. And the date under the

Mr. CAIN. And the date under the committee recommendation is March 1, 1949.

I should like to request the serious consideration of the Senator from North Dakota of this matter, because we think the latter date is important. Yet we recognize the seriousness and sincerity of the Senator's opposition.

Would the Senator consider splitting the difference between the two dates?

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I have made it a habit never to split the difference. I do not believe in compromises.

The Senator from Indiana said that the October 1, 1948, date would be satisfactory, so that is my position.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, does the Senator refer to October of this year? Mr. LANGER. Yes

Mr. LANGER. Yes.
Mr. MAGNUSON. I hope the Senator from North Dakota will split the difference, as it were.

Mr. CAPEHART. The Senator is splitting it, all right.

Mr. MAGNUSON. May I have the attention of the Senator from North Dakota?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I am reserving the right to object. On February 28 next year, all the maritime authority will expire, all the wartime authority previously given to the Maritime Commission. We moved the Alaskan contracts up to that time. At that time it will be necessary to review the whole maritime situation. I hope the Senator from North Dakota will agree to February 28, and then we will review the maritime situation, including the Alaskan situation.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. May I say that my distinguished friend, the author of the bill, has said October 1 is entirely agreeable.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Whether it is February 28, March 28, or October 1, what is the difference.

Mr. LANGER. The Senator has already said he would agree.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Why does not the Senator agree?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest that if Senators cannot agree, the bill will be passed over.

Mr. CAIN. That is the very worst thing we could do, Mr. President.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I still have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Washington has the floor. Is there objection?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I am sorry this is Saturday night and we have to have this preliminary discussion on the floor. The Senator from New York, who is now in the chair, understands these situations, I hope.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York has a good idea.
Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, may I ask what is the parliamentary situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The parliamentary situation is the unanimous-consent request to take up Calendar No. 1817, the joint resolution—Senate Joint Resolution 219.

Mr. BREWSTER. I understood the objection had been withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection has not been withdrawn.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar 1817, the joint resolution—Senate Joint Resolution 219.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nebraska. [Putting the question.]

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, what is Calendar 1817?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The title has been read. The clerk will again read the title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 219) to continue until December 31, 1949, the authority of the United States Maritime Commission to make provision for certain ocean transportation service to, from, and within Alaska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nebraska.

The motion was agreed to and the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 219) to continue until December 31, 1949, the authority of the United States Maritime Commission to make provision for certain ocean transportation service to, from, and within Alaska, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with amendments, on page 1, line 8, after the word "in", to strike out "securing effective, efficient, and reasonably competitive ocean transportation services, by common carriers so far as may be practicable, for Alaska, to encourage the economic development of the Territory and growth of its population, and to increase the Territory's civilian strength and services in support of the national defense" and insert "providing essential water transportation service for the Territory of Alaska pending the determination of a long-range policy with respect to such transportation"; on page 2, line 15, after the word 'vessels", to insert "made available to the Commission for such purposes and vessels"; in line 18, strike out "December 31, 1949" and insert "March 1, 1949"; on page 5, line 13, strike out "(1)"; in line 19, after the word "determination" strike out "and (2) the unconditional right to cancel any such contract, charter, or other arrangement, effective as of April 1 of any year, provided written notice of such cancellation be given to the Commission on or before January 1 of such year"; on page 6, after line 14, strike out "SEC. 4. All agencies of the Federal Government shall cooperate to the end that, to the maximum extent practicable, traffic by water to, from, and within Alaska, which such agencies control, either directly or as a contracting agency or otherwise, be transported on vessels of the common carriers operating in the Alaska service"; in line 21, strike out "5" and insert "4"; and in line 23, after the word "vessels", strike out "tugs and barges to be employed in combined operation" and insert "tugs, barges", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the joint resolution of March 7, 1947, entitled "Joint resolution to authorize the United States Maritime Commission to make provision for certain ocean transportation service to and from Alaska until July 1, 1948, and for other purposes", is amended to read as follows: "That it is the intention of the Congress to assist in providing essential water transportation service for the Territory of Alaska pending the determination of a long-range policy with respect to such transportation.

"SEC. 2. (a) The United States Maritime Commission is authorized to enter into contracts, charters, and other arrangements deemed by it to be appropriate, with American citizens, deemed by the Commission to be qualified, to supply ocean transportation service with American-flag vessels to, from, and within Alaska. Such contracts, charters, or arrangements may include provisions for making available to such operators Government-owned vessels made available to the Commission for such purposes and vessels under the control or jurisdiction of the Commission for operation on voyages commencing not later than March 1, 1949. Such provisions may include (1) charter hire at a nominal rate; (2) such marine insurance to be provided by the Commission, as the Commission may determine to be necessary or appropriate as to vessels made available by the Commission and other vessels operated in the Alaska service under contracts, charters, or arrangements with the Commission; (3) requirements that the operators shall operate such vessels to secure the most economical transportation adequate for the Alaska service; and (4) such other requirements, terms, and conditions as the Commission may deem appropriate.

"(b) Each such contract, charter, or arrangement shall provide that, as of the end of each accounting period, the cumulative gross profit, before overhead expenses, from the operation of vessels thereunder, as approved by the Commission, shall be allocated as follows and in the following order:

"(1) To provide for the operator's proportionate share of the expenses of all operators of maintaining a survey of Alaska ocean transportation services and of the costs and methods of operation of operators in said services, in accordance with a program approved by the Commission:

proved by the Commission;

"(2) To allow compensation to the operator for working capital, use of facilities other than operator-owned vessels, and overhead expenses, on such bases as the Commission may determine; and such bases may be fixed in terms of a percentage or percentages, deemed by the Commission to be reasonable, of vessel operating revenues;

"(3) To allow the operator a return at the rate of 10 percent per annum, before Federal income taxes, on the fair value of operator-owned vessels used in the Alaska service;

"(4) Any profit remaining thereafter, at the conclusion of each accounting period, shall be held in a special account. At the end of the second and each succeeding accounting period, if any, such account shall be available for paying any then cumulative deficiency (covering the period from the commencement of operations hereunder) with respect to any amounts which, if earned, would have theretofore been allocated pursuant to the previous paragraphs of this subsection;

"(5) At the conclusion of operations under any such contract, charter, or other arrangement, any balance in said special account shall be promptly divided and paid 75 percent to the Commission and 25 percent to the operator."

"(c) The Commission may incorporate in each such contract, charter, or arrangement such definitions and formulas for the determinations of vessel-operating revenue, gross profit before overhead expenses, overhead expenses, accounting periods, fair value, and depreciation, as it may deem necessary or appropriate to carry out the other provisions of this subsection and of this resolution. The Commission's determination of the value of operator-owned vessels, for the purposes of such contract, charter, or other arrangement, shall be for the purposes of this joint resolution only and shall not be relevant evidence in any regulatory proceeding before the Commission.

"SEC 3. (a) Every contract, charter, or arrangement made under this joint resolution shall expressly reserve to the Commission, after reasonable notice to the operator and affording him opportunity for hearing if the Commission determines that it is in the public interest so to do, the right to cancel the same upon reasonable notice of such cancellation but not less than 90 days. Such contract, charter, or arrangement shall also reserve to the operator the right to request the Commission to modify or cancel the same for good cause shown, and if the Commission shall determine that the operator's claim is justified, it may make such modification or shall permit such cancellation at such time thereafter as it may consider reasonable but not more than 90 days after such determination. "(b) Whenever the President shall pro-

"(b) Whenever the President shall proclaim that the security of the national defense makes it advisable, or during any national emergency declared by proclamation of the President, the Commission may terminate any contract, charter, or arrangement hereunder, without cost to the United States, upon such notice to the operator as the President shall determine.

"(c) Nothing contained in this joint resolution shall be construed to limit the right of the Commission to enter into other contracts, charters, or arrangements with new or other operators, if after such notice, investigation, or consultation as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate in the particular case, but without the necessity of hearings, the Commission shall determine such action to be in the interest of the economy of the Territory of Alaska or of the national defense.

"SEC. 4. The word 'vessels' as used in the joint resolution shall include such passenger vessels, freight vessels, combination freight and passenger vessels, tugs, barges, and other watercraft, as shall, in the discretion of the Commission, be deemed suitable for us in ocean transportation to, from, and within Alaska.

"Sec. 5. The provisions of this joint resolution, as amended, shall not, prior to July 1, 1948, affect the operation of contracts, charters, or other arrangements in accordance with their terms in effect on the date of enactment of this amendatory section, unless superseded before July 1, 1948, by contracts, charters, or arrangements entered into under this joint resolution, as amended."

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution to continue until March 1, 1949, the authority of the United States Maritime Commission to make provision for certain ocean transportation service to, from, and within Alaska."

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a letter from the United States Maritime Commission under date of June 18, 1948, referring to the joint resolution which has just been passed.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

United States Maritime Commission,

Washington, June 18, 1948.
The Honorable Harry P. Cain,

United States Senate.

Dear Senator Cain: This is in reference to your telephone conversations this afternoon with Commissioner Mellen and Commissioner Carson. You related that Senator Langer interposed, through Senator Johnston, an objection to consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 219 on the ground that someone representing himself to be an attorney informed Senator Langer that the United States Maritime Commission was opposed to Senate Joint Resolution 219.

The representation to Senator Langer was false. It was without authority from the Maritime Commission.

Senate Joint Resolution 219 is obviously a temporary expedient to authorize operations on a preferable basis than under Public Law 12 and to afford an opportunity to effect a transition to another and better form of operation.

Failure to pass this legislation now will result in an abrupt and drastic disruption of transportation to and from Alaska for at least 90 days following the 30th of this month. This disruption will take place during the very peak of the Alaskan shipping season. If adequate transportation can season. If thereafter be restored it necessarily will be at substantially higher costs with resulting substantial increases in freight rates.

The Maritime Commission unanimously favors the passage of Senate Joint Resolution 219 as reported by Mr. Capehart, with amendments, on June 17 (legislative day June 15), 1948, as a temporary measure to facilitate developing a sounder transportation system for the Territory of Alaska. Sincerely, GRENVILLE MELLEN. Commissioner.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, would the Senator from Nebraska be willing to yield to me for a statement which would require about 8 or 10 minutes, on an important matter?

Mr. WHERRY. I would suggest to the Senator that we first proceed to the consideration of the next business on the Calendar.

Mr. DONNELL. I am perfectly willing to do that.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to take up for immediate consideration Calendar No. 1421, joint resolution (S. J. Res. 162).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 162) to rescind certain orders of the Secretary of the Interior establishing Indian reservations in the Territory of Alaska which had been reported from the Committee on Interior with amendments.

LIABILITY FOR FAILURE TO PAY OVER-TIME COMPENSATION

Mr. DONNELL, Mr. President, will the Senator now yield for the purpose indicated?

Mr. WHERRY. I yield to the Sena-

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I desire to make a statement with respect to an important subject and to present information concerning certain hearings.

On May 24, 1948, the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] introduced, and on the same day there was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill S. 2728.

Lines 1 to 9, both inclusive, of page 1, of the printed copy of said bill, read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no court of the United States or of any State shall have jurisdiction of any action or proceeding, whether instituted prior to or on or after the date of the enactment of this act, to enforce liability or impose punishment for or on account of the failure of the employer to pay an employee overtime compensation for which the employer is not liable under Section 2 of said bill reads:

SEC. 2. No employer shall be subject to any liability or punishment under any law of the United States, in any action or proceeding commenced prior to or on or after the date of the enactment of this act, on account of the failure of such employer to pay an employee overtime compensation on any claim therefor that is inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

The chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary on May 25, 1948, appointed to consider said bill a subcommittee consisting of the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Cooper], the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Eastland], and the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. Don-NELL], the last named being designated chairman of subcommittee.

In the case of Bay Ridge Operating Co., Inc., petitioner, against James Aaron and others, who were respondents, to wit, case No. 366, and in the case of Huron Stevedoring Corp., petitioner, against Leo Blue and others, who were respondents, to wit, case No. 367, each of said cases being in the October term, 1947, of the Supreme Court of the United States. said Court considered what it characterized as-

Another aspect of the perplexing problem of what constitutes the regular rate of pay which the Fair Labor Standards Act requires to be used in computing the proper payment for work in excess of 40 hours.

Those two cases were decided by the Court on June 7, 1948.

To quote the Court further:

The problem posed is the method of computing the regular rate of pay for longshoremen who work in foreign and interstate commerce varying and irregular hours throughout the workweek under a collec-tive-bargaining agreement for handling cargo which provides contract straight time hourly rates for work done within a prescribed 44-hour time schedule and contract overtime rates for all work done outside the straight time hours.

The agreement, in the two cases mentioned, established, to quote again the Court:

A basic working day of 8 hours and a basic working week, that is, workweek, of 44 hours.

Further, the Court said:

Hourly rates for different types of cargo were specified for work between 8 a. m. and 12 noon and between 1 p. m. and 5 p. m. during five working days of the week, Monday through Friday, and from 8 a. m. to 12 noon on Saturday, and a different schedule of rates for work during all other hours in the workweek.

Continuing, the Court said:

The first schedule was called straight-time rates, and the second schedule was entitled overtime rates.

The opinion of the Court designated these rates as contract straight time and contract overtime.

The court, referring to section 7 (a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act as section 7 (a), stated the respective claims of the parties to the suits as follows, namely:

Respondents claim that their regular rate of pay under the contract for any workweek, within the meaning of section 7 (a), is the average hourly rate computed by dividing the total number of hours worked in any workweek for any single employer into the total compensation received from that employer during that week; and that in those workweeks in which they worked more than 40 hours for any one employer they were entitled by section 7 (a) to statutory excess compensation for all such excess hours computed on the basis of that rate. The petitioners claim that the straight-time rates are the regular rates, and that they have, therefore. with minor exceptions not presented by this review, complied with the require-ments of section 7 (a). That is, no rates except straight-time rates are to be taken into consideration in computing the regular

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit which reversed the judgment of the district court had held-to quote again the Supreme Court—"that the regular rate must be determined as an 'actual fact' and could not be arranged through a collective-bar-gaining agreement." Said Circuit Court of Appeals, so the Supreme Court said, "therefore concluded that on the basis of the findings below the regular rate must be computed by dividing the total number of hours worked into the total compensation received.'

The Supreme Court agreed with the conclusion reached by said Circuit Court of Appeals. Three Justices of the Supreme Court dissented. One Justice of said Court took no part in the consideration or decision of the case. Said cases, Nos. 363 and 367, had been consolidated for trial.

On June 8, 1948, the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER] introduced, and on the same day there was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill No. S. 2832, the printed copy of which bill is, except as to one punctuation, identical with S. 2728.

On June 9, 1948, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary appointed, to consider said S. 2832, a subcommittee, the members of which are the Senators who constitute the subcommittee which said chairman appointed, as aforesaid, to consider said Senate bill 2728.

Excerpt from the minutes of June 14, 1948, of the Committee on the Judiciary, reads as quoted by me as follows:

S. 2728, Document 1386 was discussed be-for the full committee. After further discussion on the bill which involves overtime on overtime payments, it was ordered that the subcommittee on the bill, consisting of Senator Donnell, chairman, Senator Cooper, and Senator EASTLAND, be authorized to hold hearings during the recess period between adjournment and January 1949, with a view to preparing a record for use in the Eightyfirst Congress.

Said last-mentioned subcommittee will, accordingly, at times and place or places to be hereafter determined, hold said hearings if funds therefor be provided. Persons who shall have the desire to be informed of such times and place or places should promptly communicate that desire to Robert Barnes Young, clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary, 424 Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.

Said last-mentioned subcommittee will, in my opinion, reserve the right to limit the number of witnesses to such number as it shall deem reasonable and to accept or call as witnesses only such persons as, in order that said subcommittee may obtain a clear and fair understanding of the facts, it shall deem advisable to hear.

INDIAN RESERVATIONS IN ALASKA

The Senate resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 162) to rescind certain orders of the Secretary of the Interior establishing Indian reservations in the Territory of Alaska.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, before proceeding to make a few brief remarks regarding the pending joint resolution, which I consider one of the important resolutions to be discussed this evening, let me say that I am sorry that the proponents of the resolution had to wait until the last minute to discuss the rights of American people. Senate Joint Resolution 162 affects the very lives and the livelihood of Indians who cannot defend themselves and are at the mercy of those who exploit them.

Mr. President, only today this body and the House of Representatives have agreed on an appropriation which has for its purpose an attempt to bring relief in Europe and elsewhere. sorry for the people of Europe. We try to show the world that we are charitable. But when it comes to a question of doing what is right by those we actually control we would by law in the last minute of the Congress take away the basic rights of poor people who cannot defend themselves.

Mr. President, it would be a calamity if Congress passed this joint resolution at this time. It is true the committee held hearings, but the hearings and the witnesses were confined to those who would deprive the Indian of Alaska of what belongs to him. Are we proud of our history in dealing with the Indians? Are we proud of the way we have treated them? Are we proud of the action we are about to take tonight so that without having his day in court or coming before a committee and expressing his views, in the last minute of the session of Congress this body, without consideration of what is involved, would pass a law which would deprive innocent people, fine people, harmless people, people who cannot defend themselves, out of what belongs to

What is the hurry? I ask any Senator within the hearing of my voice what he knows about the purport of the resolution, what effect it will have on the Indians of Alaska, what effect it will have on our so-called good will, what effect it will have on our doing what is right for the suffering people throughout the world?

Mr. President, the Senate can pass this resolution, but it will go down in history as being one of the greatest exploitations of harmless and inoffensive people in the history of this body. The Indians and the natives of Alaska will be the ones who will suffer as a consequence of the enactment of the resolution, if it becomes law.

In all sincerity, I ask those here who took an oath to support the Constitution, and who are so desirous and anxious to help people, to consider this case carefully. I know that about a year ago today I submitted finally to the passing of another law which was supposed to help the Indians of Alaska. It was going to develop the pulp of Alaska. The law was passed, but to this day nothing has been done, not an Indian has been given a bit of work, and he has not got his property. That is all that is hap-

When we are taking care of all the peoples of the world, why is it not fair to wait 6 or 7 months so that a real investigation can be made of the basic rights involved, and not let a group of exploiters from continental United States go there and deprive those poor people out of their property and their rights? The joint resolution can be passed, but it is indecent, to say the least, to take from the Indians of Alaska what little they have without an investigation of the matter. Oh, yes, we brag about how good we are, we brag about what we do about communism. We want to save the Jews, the Greeks, the Chinese, and everybody else, but can we here in the last minutes of the Congress, with clear consciences, deprive Indians, for whom we assumed the responsibility, who canont defend themselves, of some of their property rights.

Mr. President, in my opinion this resolution as reported is inadequate to the needs of Alaska, and extremely unfair to the Indians and the Eskimos. It would withdraw from the Interior Department authority granted in 1936 to create reservations in Alaska, except for village sites, smokehouses, and things of that sort. It would extinguish claims of the Indians and other natives, taking away their right to seek redress in court, wining away completely whatever rights the Indians may have, without their having their day in court, without their being allowed to at least defend themselves, in their ignorant, meek, humble way.

The Indians of Alaska and the Eskimos will suffer what the Indian in continental United States has suffered throughout the years. They will be done away with as were the Cherokees, they will be done away with as were the Indians of New York, New England, and the other States. I ask in all sincerity that this terrible exploitation be stopped.

The President, in his Alaska message, suggested that negotiations be undertaken with the natives by the Interior Department to provide the Indians and the Eskimos with sufficient lands for their livelihood, and that their claims to the other lands be extinguished.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, what is the Senator reading from?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am reading from some notes I made.

I see. Mr. MAGNUSON.

Mr. CHAVEZ. There is a great difference between provisions of sufficient land for their livelihood and the provisions of Senate Joint Resolution 162.

There has been submitted to the Congress a very carefully worked out suggestion with regard to the settlement of native claims in Alaska. I understand this suggestion reached the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate yesterday. I am certain that it should be considered by the Congress before any action is taken. This suggestion has exactly the same objective as is proclaimed by Senate Resolution 162, and it would fill the needs of the President, the Senate committee, and others for correction of the present situation with regard to the occupation of lands in Alaska.

If it is practicable to substitute the language which has been suggested in the letter from the Acting Secretary, which I understand has been received by the Senate and by the House of Representatives, I should have no objection to action now on this question; but it is impracticable.

Mr. President, it is a terrible thing to take away from a human being basic rights because we have the power to do it. Action is up to the Senate.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, as one of the sponsors of the joint resolution, I think the Senator from New Mexico, who has spoken so feelingly and so sincerely, has nonetheless very sadly misjudged the intent and the effect and the result of the proposed legislation. So far as I know, there is not any intention on the part of anyone who hopes that this legislation will pass tonight to usurp or take away or destroy or abuse the right of any Indian in the Territory of Alaska to any property or human right which the Indian may possess.

On the other hand, Mr. President, a good many of us who hope that Alaska will develop at an accelerated pace in the next few years are of the considered opinion that the time has come when we must no longer take it for granted that people possess large rights to which, on examination, they may not be entitled. All the joint resolution does is to instruct the Secretary of the Interior to determine the individual rights of Indians, and of groups and tribes of Indians, and once his determination has been established, if he can secure concurrence from the Secretary of Agriculture the wish and the decision and the determination of the Secretary of the Interior shall become fact.

Admittedly this is by no means an easy problem to solve. Certainly we might hope that it were possible for every Indian claiming a right in Alaska to have a full opportunity to have his day in court or to be heard in that field. But outside the realm of the law, if we cannot in this Congress place our reliance for the doing of a good and fair and competent job in two of the Cabinet positions of the Government, I for one do not know where we could place any reliance or any faith.

Congress during the closing hours of the last session passed a bill which was intended to make available some of the excess surplus forests of Alaska for the production of pulp out of which there might come an industry so progressive and so healthy that the very Indians to whom the Senator from New Mexico has rightfully given his support and allegiance might be the better qualified to make livings and become other than public charges.

One last word about this measure, Mr. President. It says in no uncertain language that the Secretary of the Interior shall make it his business to protect and save for the Indians the lands which they actually possess and areas which are presently used or occupied for town sites. That takes in quite a good deal of territory which they use for villages, smokehouses, gardens, burial grounds or missionary stations. It seems very clear to me if the Indians claim rights to such facilities and such areas, that everyone will be protected, and no one will be taking an unfair advantage of the Indians in the Territory called Alaska.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I hope that in the closing hours of the session we will not be unduly alarmed about this joint resolution. As a matter of fact, it does but two things. There are Indian reservations in Alaska, and I am more cognizant of them, I know more about them than perhaps any other Senator, and I am just as considerate of them as any other Member of this body. There are some reservations that have a square mile per Indian. At the most, there are only 35,000 natives in Alaska. There are more Indian reservations in Alaska per capita and per square mile than any place in the whole of the United States. This measure does not affect them at all. All it provides is that we shall keep these reservations with which Indians in Alaska are happy, but with which I am not so sure some Indian lawyers downtown are happy. They make their living off these Indians. They have an Indian bar association downtown. They meet about every month and discuss what the next move is to be to make a charge against Indians. I am quite tired of that.

The measure does nothing but maintain the Indian reservation in Alaska and provides that no Secretary of the Interior shall extend those Indian reservations for somebody who would make an in-

As I said the other day on the floor, the joint resolution involves the economy of Alaska. It does not hurt the Indians at all But every time a bill is brought up in Congress and the word "Indian" is mentioned, Members of Congress will hear from some Indian lawyers downtown who make their living by exploiting the Indians. They tell us why the bill should not pass, or why we should amend it, or something else.

I know as much about Alaska as any other man on this floor, and I am as appreciative of the rights of the Indian as any other man on this floor. The measure does not hurt the Alaska Indians one single bit. It would allow Alaska to progress. It would allow somebody to go up there and make an investment in pulp and papers, in mines or in salmon or any other industry. No one is going to make an investment if he thinks the Secretary of the Interior can extend an Indian reservation over the land in which he has invested.

One thing more. I do not like to talk about Indian lawyers, but it is high time someone did.

Let me mention the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior. They have had an opportunity, as the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Butler] will say, to testify and present their case. They have been before the committee and said all they had to say, and the committee unanimously said they were wrong. So when the bill comes up in the Senate under unanimous consent they write to everyone in the Senate. They get some Senator to object after they have had their day in court.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President-Mr. MAGNUSON. I did not mean the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Will the Senator yield to me anyway?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Yes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I dislike the Indian lawyers as much as does the Senator from Washington, and I know what he is talking about.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator from New Mexico knows more about the Indian lawyers than I do.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am not worrying about the Indian lawyers, but I am concerned about the Indians in Alaska who do not have any lawyers.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I am very much concerned about the Indians in Alaska. As a matter of fact, if the joint resolution is passed the Indians in Alaska will be better off than they have ever been in their whole history. I believe that sincerely.

Mr. President, I say again as I said the other day, that this measure means the economy of Alaska. Its adoption will mean that men can go up there and develop pulp and paper, salmon, and minerals.

I am sure the Senator from Nebraska knows that everyone has had his day in court, that everyone has had an opportunity to testify, but the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the Department of the Interior, even after its representatives have been in court, after they have testified, write letters to Senators to object This is a good measure. It will help Alaska. If it would not help Alaska I would not be standing on the floor advocating it, and neither would my junior colleague.

Mr. BUTLER. I am not certain whether my good friend the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] was directing his remarks against the original bill which was introduced. Much of his comment was more or less applicable to the bill as originally introduced. The bill as now proposed will be of benefit, to the people of Alaska, including the natives as well as the whites.

Mr. President, I ask that the committee amendments be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2 after the resolving clause it is proposed to strike out the following:

That the orders of the Secretary of the Interior issued under authority of the act of May 1, 1936 (49 Stat. 1250), establishing the Akutan, Karluk, Wales, Unalakleet, and Venetie, or any other Indian reservations in the Territory of Alaska, are hereby rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2 line 8, to strike out "Sec. 2. Section 2 of such act of May 1, 1936, is hereby re-pealed" and insert "that section 2 of the act of May 1, 1936 (49 Stat. 1250), is hereby repealed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was on page 3 to insert a new section 2 as follows:

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior, in the Territory of Alaska, is authorized to issue patents to the appropriate native tribes and villages or individuals for the lands actually possessed, used or occupied for town sites, villages, smoke houses, gardens, burial grounds, or missionary stations: Provided, however, That the Secretary of the Interior, prior to issuing patents to any such lands within the exterior boundaries of a national forest, shall obtain the concurrence of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, the measure does not take away from any single Indian reservation one single foot of land that has been declared an Indian reservation today. It does place some limit upon the creation of additional reservations in the future.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was stricken out. The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution to repeal section 2 of the act of May 1, 1936 (49 Stat. 1250), and for other purposes."

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Swanson, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2830) to extend for 5 years the authority to provide for the maintenance of a domestic tin-smelting industry.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2798) to amend section 5. Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to the bill (S. 1322) to provide a Federal charter for the Commodity Credit Corporation, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Wol-COTT, Mr. GAMBLE, Mr. SMITH of Ohio, Mr. KUNKEL, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. BROWN of Georgia, and Mr. PATMAN were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 190) authorizing the printing and binding of a revised edition of Cannon's Procedure in the House of Representatives and providing that the same shall be subject to copyright by the author,

ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE EIGHTIETH CONGRESS

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the final edition of the RECORD a statement which I am preparing, on the accomplishments of the Eightieth Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. out objection, it is so ordered.

AUTHORIZATION TO SUBCOMMITTEE OF COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS TO FILE INTERIM REPORTS DURING ADJOURN-MENT PERIOD

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate investigating subcommittee of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, or the full committee, be authorized to file interim reports during the adjourned period of the Eightieth Congress, and that they be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PERMISSION FOR INSERTION OF MATERIAL IN APPENDIX

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the final issue of the Congressional Record of the Eightieth Congress certain material which I now have in the process of preparation

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR INVESTIGA-TION OF APPOINTMENT OF POST-MASTERS

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Resolution 264. which corrects an error in a date in the last paragraph of Senate Resolution 81, of the Eightieth Congress, agreed to June 17, 1947, authorizing an investigation of the appointment of postmasters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 264) was read. as follows:

Resolved, That the last paragraph of Senate Resolution 81, Eightieth Congress, agreed to June 17, 1947 (authorizing an investigation of the appointment of postmasters) is hereby further amended by striking out the date "June 30, 1948" and inserting in lieu thereof the date "June 15, 1949."

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, it is obvious that no investigation could be made and a report received as early as June 30, 1948. I therefore ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

FREE ENTRY OF CERTAIN ARTICLES IM-PORTED TO PROMOTE INTERNATIONAL GOOD WILL

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, the House has passed House Joint Resolution 433, permitting the free entry of certain articles to promote international good will, and for other purposes. Normally it would be referred to the Senate Committee on Finance. Obviously there is no time to process the joint resolution. I have a message from the executive department of the Government urging that the joint resolution be acted upon, if that is at all possible. I send it to the desk and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 433) permitting the free entry of certain articles imported to promote international good will, and for other purposes, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That any articles, including approximately 48 railroad cars and incidental equipment, certified by the Secretary of State as being donated in promotion of international good will by the people or Government of the Republic of France for sale for charitable purposes in the United States or for presentation, in the case of the railroad equipment, to noncommercial organizations in the United States may be entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption free of customs duties, fees, or charges, internal-revenue taxes, and marking or other import requirements or restrictions.

SEC. 2. This act shall be effective as to articles entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption on or after the date of its enactment and prior to the close of December 31, 1948.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Colorado if he knows of any objection to the joint resolution.

Mr. MILLIKIN. I know of no objection to it. If there is objection, I shall immediately withdraw the request.

The purpose of the joint resolution is to permit the Republic of France to send some railroad equipment into this country and some incidental equipment which ultimately will either be given away or sold for charity in this country as a gesture of good will from the Republic of France to this country. I know of no objection to the joint resolution, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REVOLVING FUND FOR PURCHASE OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES AND RAW MATERIALS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2376) for the purchase of agricultural commodities and raw materials to be processed in occupied areas and sold, which were, on page 1, to strike out lines 3 to 10, inclusive, and insert "That, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the Secretary of the Army is authorized to issue notes from time to time for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury, not to exceed in the aggregate outstanding at any time $150,000 -000. Each such note shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of the note. Payment of the purchase price of such notes and repayments thereof by the Secretary of the Army shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States. The proceeds of these notes shall be used by the Secretary of the Army, or his duly authorized representatives, as a revolving fund for the purpose of (a) purchasing natural fibers (including"; on page 3, line 18, after "report", to insert "to the Congress", and on the same page, line 21, after "Congress", to insert "by concurrent resolution."

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, the House amendment provides a different means by which the Treasury will furnish the Army the money which is called for in the bill. I understand that the amendment will not permit the Army to secure this money at less than the actual cost to the United States. Therefore I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, is this the bill about which the Senator spoke to me?

Mr. AIKEN. Yes; this is the revolving fund for the purchase of fibers within the United States to be sold in Japan and other occupied countries.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I join in the request of the Senator from Vermont that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. AIKEN. I asked to have it held a little while this morning until I could get the opinion of the Comptroller General, but the amendment seems to be satisfactory.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the Senator's action.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, are hides included in the amendment?

Mr. AIKEN. No. The bill is not changed otherwise than as indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Aiken] to concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL REVENUE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1515, Senate bill 843, being a bill concerning the revenue of the District of Columbia.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. SALTONSTALL, Mr. President, I have made a motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is in order.

The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 843) to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I hope the Senate will now consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, this is a bill imposing a 2-percent sales tax on the people of the District of Columbia. It also exempts from income taxes the first $8,000 of income. In addition, there are personal exemptions. I want Senators to know that this is a Republican bill, out and out, for the big man. The little fellow pays the price. That is it, in a nutshell.

Let us see what is going to happen when we impose a sales tax in a congested district such as the District of Columbia. I know what I would do if I owned a store like Hecht's in the District. I would move over to Virginia, and sell over there, and save 2 percent on everything I sold. Hecht's now has a store in Maryland.

The main question is, Is it right in principle? It is claimed that additional revenue is needed for the District of Columbia. I intend to read the entire bill. I want Senators to know just what is in it, and I shall read it all. Then I shall read the report, to let Senators know what they are facing.

Mr. President, I will yield to no one, even for a question. Senators can sit here and listen. I now read from the bill:

That this act divided into titles and sections may be cited as the "District of Columbia Sales and Compensating Use Tax of 1948."

TITLE I-SALES TAX

SEC. 1. Definitions.—When used in this title the following terms shall mean or include:

(a) "Person".—Includes an individual, partnership, society, association, joint-stock company, corporation, estate, receiver, trustee, assignee, referee, or any other person acting in a fiduciary or representative capacity, whether appointed by a court or otherwise, and any combination of individuals

(b) "Vendor".—Includes a person selling property or rendering services upon the receipts from which a tax is imposed under section 2 of this title.

cepts from which a text is imposed the section 2 of this title.

(c) "Purchaser".—Includes a person who purchases property or to whom are rendered services, receipts from which are taxable under section 2 of this title.

(d) "Receipt".—The amount of the sale price of any property or the charge for any service specified in section 2 of this title, valued in money, whether received in money or otherwise, including all receipts, cash, credits and property of any kind or nature, and also any amount for which credit is allowed by the vendor to the purchaser, without any deduction therefrom on account of the cost of the property sold, the cost of materials used, labor, transportation or service cost, interest or discount paid, taxes paid, or any other expense whatsoever.

(e) "Sale" or "selling".—Any transfer of title or possession or both, exchange or barter, license to use, license to consume, conditional or otherwise, in any manner or by any means whatsoever for a consideration, or any agreement therefor, and shall include the rendering of any service specified in section 2 of this title.

tion 2 of this title.

(1) "Tangible personal property".—Corporeal personal property of any nature.

(g) "Retail sale" or "sale at retail".—A

(g) "Retail sale" or "sale at retail".—A sale to any person for any purpose other than for resale in the form of tangible personal property. A "sale or purchase at retail of tangible personal property" shall also be deemed to include the sale of the services of producing, fabricating, processing, printing, or imprinting tangible personal property, to a person who directly or indirectly furnishes the tangible personal property, not purchased by him for resale, upon which such services are performed; other than the rendering of services in connection with the repair, alteration, or reconditioning of tangible personal property on behalf of the owner thereof to refit it for the use for which it was originally produced.

Mr. President, I am reading this bill because I want the people here tonight to know just what it is, and because it has so many details that will affect the people within the District of Columbia. The people will find that this bill will tax the little fellow every time. On small sales the proposed sales tax will sometimes run very high-not just 2 percent, but probably it will run as high as 8 or 10 percent, on small sales, catching the little fellow at every turn more and more, but letting out the big taxpayers. Of course, it will make no difference how big they are; they will get the $8,000 exemption to begin with. That is the Republican way of doing things.

I continue to read from the bill:

(h) "Semipublic institution" - Those charitable, educational, and religious institutions which are supported principally by public subscriptions or endowment or by appropriation made by the Congress of the United States and are not organized or operated for private gain.

(i) "Return".—Includes any return filed or required to be filed as herein provided.
(j) "District".—The District of Columbia.
(k) "Commissioners".—The Commissioners of the District or their duly authorized representatives.

(1) "Assessor".-The Assessor of the District or his duly authorized representatives.

(m) "Collector".—The Collector of Taxes of the District or his duly authorized representatives.

(n) "Food".-Cereals and cereal products; milk and milk products; candy and confectionery; ice cream and ice-cream products; meat and meat products; fish and fish products; eggs and egg products; vegetables and vegetable products; fruits, fruit products, and fruit juices; flavoring extracts, condiments, spices, and salt; sugar and sugar products; coffee and coffee substitutes; tea, cocoa and cocoa products; and ice when used for household consumption. "Food" shall not include spiritous or malt liquors, beer, soft drinks, and sodas and beverages such as are ordinarily dispensed at bars and soda fountains or in connection therewith, other than coffee, coffee substitutes, tea and cocoa.

Mr. President, I notice that something is said about whisky here. I wonder if Senators know that in the District of Columbia there is a tax of only 50 cents a gallon on whisky and 50 cents a barrel on beer. Still we are told that it is impossible to find any way by which to raise additional revenue for the District of Columbia, except by placing this proposed sales tax on the people who go out to buy clothes and shoes for little babies.

I continue to read:

Sec. 2. Imposition of tax.—Beginning 60 days after approval of this act but not prior to July 1, 1948, for the privilege of selling certain tangible personal property at retail as defined in this title and for the privilege of dispensing certain services as defined in this title, there is hereby imposed and there shall be paid a tax upon the amount of receipts from every sale of tangible personal property sold at retail in the District, including services rendered in connection therewith, computed as follows:

(a) On each sale where the price is from 14 cents to 50 cents, both inclusive, 1 cent; (b) On each sale where the price is from 51 cents to $1, both inclusive, 2 cents; (c) On each 50 cents of price or fraction thereof in excess of $1, 1 cent.

The tax imposed by this section shall be paid by the purchaser.

The man who collects the tax should be prepared for an emergency. He should get a little box and put it by the cash register, so that every time he collects the tax he can put in in a box. He is going to have to pay that to the city. He must pay to the city the same amount he collects, otherwise he might be accused of taking something that does not belong to him.

SEC. 3. Exemptions.—Receipts from sales of the following and services rendered in connection therewith shall be exempt from the taxes imposed by this title:

(a) Sales to the United States or the District or any instrumentality thereof.

(b) Sales to a State or any of its political subdivisions if such State grants a similar exemption to the District. As used in this subsection, the term "State" means the several States, Territories, and possessions of the United States.

(c) Sales to a semipublic institution.

(d) Sales of food for human consumption in the home or residence. It is not intended by this subsection to exempt from the tax sales of food for human consumption in restaurants, cafes, hotel dining rooms, taverns, night clubs, and similar establishments.
(e) Sales of drugs and medicines.

(f) Sales of motor-vehicle fuels upon the sale of which a tax is imposed by the act entitled "An act to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved April 23, 1924, as amended or as may be hereafter amended.

(g) Sales of tickets for admission to places of amusements and sports.

(h) Sales of gas and electricity and serves rendered incident therto: Provided Provided, That the receipts from such sales and services are subject to a gross-receipts tax in force in the District during or for the period of time covered by any return required to be filed by the provisions of this title.

(i) Sales of transportation and telephone and telegraph service.

(1) Sales of property purchased by a utility or public-service company for use or consumption in furnishing a commodity or service: Provided, That the receipts from furnishing such commodity or service are subject to a gross-receipts tax in force in the District during or for the period of time covered by any return required to be filed by the provisions of this title.

(k) Sales of newspapers and magazines. Casual and isolated sales by a vendor who is not regularly engaged in the business of selling tangible personal property.

(m) Sales of livestock, poultry, seeds, feeds for livestock and poultry, fertilizers, lime, and land plaster used for agricultural purposes.

(n) Sales of advertising space and sales of radio advertising.

(o) Sales of food or beverages of any nature if made in any car composing a part of any train or in any aircraft or boat operat-ing within the District in the course of interstate commerce.

(p) Sales of goods made pursuant to bona fide contracts entered into before the date of approval of this act: Provided. That there is a contract in writing signed by the buyer and seller which imposes an unconditional liability on the part of the buyer to purchase goods covered thereby, and an unconditional liability on the part of the seller to deliver a definite quantity of such goods at the contract price.

Sales of natural or artificial gas, oil, electricity, solid fuel, or steam, to any pur-chaser for use in manufacturing, assembling, processing, or refining.

(r) Sales which the States would be with out power to tax under the limitations of the Constitution of the United States.

(s) Sales of motor vehicles and trailers. SEC. 4. Upon each taxable sale or service the tax to be collected shall be stated and charged separately from the sale price or charge for service and shown separately on any record thereof—

Just imagine what a time they are going to have keeping records-at the time when the sale is made or evidence of sale issued or employed by the vendor and shall be paid by the purchaser to the vendor as trustee for and on account of the District, and the vendor shall be liable for the collection thereof and for the tax. vendor shall be personally liable for the tax collected or required to be collected under this title, and the vendor shall have the same right in respect to collecting the tax from the purchaser, or in respect to nonpayment of the tax by the purchaser, as if the tax were a part of the purchase price of the property or service and payable at the time of the sale: Provided, however, That the Collector shall be joined as a party plaintiff in any action or proceeding brought by the vendor to collect the tax.

SEC. 5. The tax imposed by this title shall be paid upon all sales made and services rendered beginning 60 days after approval of this act but not prior to July 1, 1948, although made or rendered under a contract dated prior thereto. Where a service is billed on either a monthly or other term basis, the payment of such bill for such month or other period of time shall be a receipt subject to the tax herein imposed. The Commissioners may provide by regulation that the tax upon receipts from sales on the installment plan may be paid in full at the time the agreement therefor is made or on the account of each installment and upon the date when such installment is due.

Poor little fellows. The tax is collected before they get paid. This is a regular Republican bill. I think the Republicans should write it into their platform. I imagine they will do that. How well I remember when we were debating the income-tax bill. We had a hard time getting any exemptions for the little fellows. But the big boys got some reductions in their taxes. There will be much said about the income taxes after the conventions. That shows definitely the principles of the two parties. One looks after the rich, and other looks after the poor, the people who are struggling to make a living. I predict that if the Republicans capture the Presidency of the United States, we shall have a new kind of tax throughout the United States-a sales tax, something that will hit all the little people, and then the Republicans will take the income taxes off entirely.

The Commissioners may provide by regulation for the exclusion of amounts representing sales where the contract of sales has been canceled, or the property returned, or the receipt has been ascertained to be worthless or, in case the tax has been paid upon such receipt, for a credit or refund of the amount of the tax upon such receipt upon application therefor as provided in section 13 of this title.

SEC. 6. Presumptions.—For the purpose of the proper administration of this title and to prevent evasion of the tax hereby imposed, it shall be presumed that all receipts for property and services mentioned in this title are subject to tax until the contrary is established, and the burden of proving that a receipt is not taxable hereunder shall be upon the vendor or the purchaser. Unless the vendor shall have taken from the purchaser a certificate signed by and bearing the name and address of the purchaser and the number of his registration certificate to the effect that the property or service was purchased for resale, the sale shall be deemed to be a taxable sale at retail.

SEC. 7. No person engaged in the business of selling property or services the receipts from which are subject to tax under this title shall advertise or hold out to the public in any manner directly or indirectly that the tax imposed by this title is not considered as an element in the price to the purchaser.

SEC. 8. Collection of tax from purchaser.— The tax shall be paid by the purchaser to the vendor as trustee for and on account of the District, and the vendor shall be liable for the collection thereof for and on account of the District.

SEC. 9. Every vendor shall keep records of receipts and of the tax payable thereon in form as the Commissioners may regulation require. Such records shall be offered for inspection and examination at any time upon demand by the Assessor and shall be preserved for a period of 3 years.

SEC. 10. Returns.—(a) Every vendor shall file with the Assessor a return of his receipts and of the taxes payable thereon for monthly, quarterly, or other periods as the Commissioner may by regulation prescribe, or as the Assessor may require as provided in subsection (b) of this section.

(b) Such returns shall be filed within 20 days from the expiration of the period covered thereby. The Assessor may permit or require returns to be made by other periods and upon such dates as he may specify: Provided. That the receipts during any year shall be included in returns covering such year and no other. If the Assessor deems it necessary in order to insure the payment of the tax imposed by this title, he may require returns to be made for shorter periods than those prescribed pursuant to the foregoing provisions of this section, and upon such dates as he may specify.

(c) The form of returns shall be prescribed by the Assessor and shall contain such information as he may deem necessary for the proper administration of this title. ssor may require amended returns to be filed within 20 days after notice and to contain the information specified in the notice.

SEC. 11. Payment of tax.—(a) At the time of filing a return of receipts each vendor to the Collector the taxes imposed by this title upon the receipts required to be included in such return, as well as all other moneys collected by the vendor acting or purporting to act under the provisions of this title even though it be judicially determined that the tax collected is invalidly imposed. All the taxes for the period for which a return is required to be filed shall be due from the vendor and payable to the Collector on the date limited for the filing of the return for such period, without regard to whether a return is filed or whether the return which is filed shows correctly the amount of receipts and the taxes due thereon.

(b) The vendor shall be entitled to apply and credit against the amount of tax payable by him an amount equal to 3 percent of the gross tax to the remitted by him to the Collector in payment for the vendor's expense in the collection and remittance of said tax: Provided, however, That the credit allowed by this subsection shall be denied to any vendor who shall fail or refuse to file his return within the time prescribed by regula-tion or as required by the Assessor as provided in section 10 of this title.

Some of these people will have to employ a bookkeeper to keep their accounts in some little business in which they are engaged in order to keep them correctly. If they do not do that they will probably lose their 3 percent, and also they will be penalized by heavy fines. I will read the penalty provision in a little while.

SEC. 12. Determination of tax.—If a return required by this title is not filed, or if a re-turn when filed is incorrect or insufficient, the amount of tax due shall be determined by the Assessor from such information as may be obtainable. Notice of such determination shall be given to the person liable for the collection of the tax from the purchaser and payment thereof to the Collector. Such determination shall finally and irrevocably fix the tax unless the person against whom it is assessed, within 30 days after the giving of notice of such determination, shall apply in writing to the Assessor for a hearing, or unless the Assessor of his own motion shall redetermine the same. After such hearing or redetermination the Assessor shall give notice of his final determination to the person against whom the tax is assessed.

SEC. 13. Refunds .- (a) Except as to any tax finally determined as provided in section 12, where any tax has been erroneously or illegally collected the tax shall be refunded if application is filed with the Assessor for such refund within 1 year from the payment thereof. For like cause and within the same period a refund may be made upon the certificates of the Assessor and the Collector. Whenever a refund is made upon the certificates of the Assessor and the Collector, the Assessor and Collector shall state their reasons therefor in writing. Such application may be made by the person upon whom such tax was imposed and who has actually paid the tax. Such application may also be made by a vendor who has collected and paid such tax to the Collector: Provided, That the application is made within 1 year of the payment by the purchaser to the vendor, but no actual refund of moneys shall be made to such vendor until he shall first establish to the satisfaction of the Assessor, under such regulations as the Commissioners may prescribe, that the vendor has repaid to the purchaser the amount for which the application for refund is made. In lieu of any refund required to be made, a credit may be allowed therefor on payment due from the applicant.

(b) Application for a refund or credit made as herein provided shall be deemed an application for a revision of any tax, penalty, or interest complained of and the Assessor may receive evidence with respect thereto. After making his determination of whether any refund shall be made, the Assessor shall give notice thereof to the applicant.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. IVES in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield, provided it does not count on my time.

Mr. LUCAS. May I inquire of the able Senator as to how long he expects to speak on the tax bill?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. do not know how long it is going to take me to speak. I am going to try to speak long enough so that there will not be a sales tax in the District. That is my object. I think one of the most outrageous things would be to put this tax on under the circumstances.

Mr. LUCAS. I am against the sales tax. I was just making inquiry of the

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I will do anything to keep this bill from becoming a law.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Provided it does not take me off the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. It has been rumored that there are some people who have in mind the adoption of a sales tax for the District of Columbia with a view to making that the spearhead for the national sales tax. Would the Senator from South Carolina care to comment on that?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I am glad the Senator from Florida brought that subject up. This is our Capital City, the Capital of the Government of the United States, and the object now, as I understand it, is that if they can get a sales tax here within the District of Columbia within the Capital of the United States, then the Federal Government, the Republican Party, if they capture the Presidency and also the Congress

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator does not expect them to do that, does he?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I do not expect them to do that, but they have in view, as I understand, to use this as a spearhead to put on a sales tax in the entire Nation. That is one reason why I am fighting this so hard. I do not want it in the District, although I live right over in Maryland. I do not live in the District at the present time, but I do sympathize with the people who live in the District, and will have to purchase things in the District, especially the little man who earns probably $2,000 or $2,500 a year.

As will be seen from a reading of the bill it is proposed to give an $8,000 exemption from the income tax. An individual making from $4,000 to $8,000 would not pay any income tax, but he may have a house full of children, and every time he bought his children shoes he would have to pay a sales tax. Every time he bought a pair of socks at 15 cents he would have to pay 1 cent more to cover the sales tax. If one were to count up all the purchases large and small it would be found that they would amount to about 61/2 cents on every dollarmore than 6 percent. It is expected that in all there would be collected $17,000,-000 by the imposition of the sales tax. I cannot see any fairness in such a tax. Show me one who favors the tax and I will immediately say that he must be a Republican, because only Republicans would believe in such taxation.

I begin to read section 14:

SEC. 14. Any person aggrieved by a final determination of tax as provided in section 12 or denial of an application for refund of any tax under section 13 may, within 90 days from the date of the final determination of the tax or from the date of the denial of an application for refund, as the case may be, appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals for the District of Columbia in the same manner and to the same extent as set forth in sections 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 of title IX of the act entitled "An act to amend the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937, and for other purposes", approved May 16, 1938, as amended, and as the same may hereafter be amended. The remedy provided in this section shall not be deemed to take away from the taxpayer any remedy which he might have under any other provision of law, but no suit by the taxpayer for the recovery of any part of any tax shall be instituted in any court if the taxpayer has elected to file an appeal with respect to such tax with the Board of Tax Appeals for the District of Columbia.

SEC. 15. The taxes imposed by this title and penalties and interest thereon may be col-lected by the Collector—

Mr. SALTONSTALL, Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a ques-

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I will yield for a question, provided I do not lose the floor thereby.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be understood.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I agree to that condition. My question is whether the Senator from South Carolina would yield to permit the Senator from Illinois to make a few remarks, with the understanding that if the motion is again brought up the Senator from South Carolina will have the floor.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. do not want my yielding, even with the understanding that I may regain the floor, to count against me as one of the speeches which I am entitled to make.

I want that understood.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. The Senator from South Carolina is speaking on a motion to take up a bill. He has not yet made one speech.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the motion should prevail, the Senator would be entitled to about four speeches in all.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I realize that, Mr. President. The reason I secured the floor now was so I could make two speeches on each motion.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield for that purpose?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield, if I do not lose the floor thereby. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator from Oregon will proceed.

Mr. MORSE. I make my parliamentary inquiry with the understanding that it will in no way change the present position of the Senator from South Carolina respecting his rights or position on the floor with regard to the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. present occupant of the chair may not be the occupant of the chair when the matter arises again, and the present occupant of the chair, therefore, is unable to make any guaranty respecting the matter.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a parliamentary inquiry? Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. will yield, providing I do not lose the floor thereby.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator yields for a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. PEPPER. Would it not be possible to accomplish the purpose by unanimous-consent agreement, which would be binding upon any occupant of the chair?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes: assuming the unanimous consent is forthcoming.

Mr. PEPPER. I think the acting majority leader might propound a unanimous-consent request.

Mr. SALTONSTALL, Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from South Carolina may yield the floor for the time being in order that the Senator from Illinois may make a few remarks, and that at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Illinois the Senator from South Carolina may regain the floor without losing any rights.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is that agreeable to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I

Mr. CAIN. In order that we may understand what the situation may be, I should like to inquire of the Senator from South Carolina how long he proposes to discuss the motion.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I do not know how long I may be able to continue. I was in the same clothes I now have on all of last night. I did not get to bed last night. I wish I was fresh; then the Senator from Washington would be here until Monday morning, when the convention opens in Phila-

Mr. CAIN. One further question, so I may try to reconcile my right to object. Is the Senator from Washington to understand that the Senator from South Carolina, who in my considered opinion is a very healthy, strong person, is going to speak for as long as he has strength to stand on his feet?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. It is my purpose to attempt to explain the bill in every detail before I finish. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois will proceed with that understanding.

CARL A. HATCH, OF NEW MEXICO

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I desire to express my deep sense of appreciation for the kindness on the part of the acting majority leader, as well as my appreciation to my dear friend from South Carolina for yielding to me. He will not lose any rights by doing so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator from Illinois suspend while we have a little order for this very important speech?

Mr. LUCAS. I thank the Chair for obtaining order, and for his compliment. Before I begin reading the manuscript and making a few remarks as I go along, I wish at this time to pay my respects to an individual Member of this body who is about to say farewell.

I speak, of course, of the distinguished and able Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], whom we all know. He will not be with us next year because some time ago he issued a statement in which he told the people of his State that he would not be a candidate for reelection. In my service in the United States Senate I have learned to know the distinguished Senator from New Mexico very well. I say without fear of successful contradiction that the Senator from New Mexico has proved himself to be one of the most constructive, able, sincere, and trustworthy legislators I have ever had the good fortune to serve with in my 13 years in Congress. I regret, as I am sure all other Senators do, that he is leaving the service of the United States Senate. I wish for him every success in his new undertaking, whatever it may be. I am sure I speak for all Members of the Senate when I pay this inadequate tribute to our beloved colleague and friend.

McFARLAND. Mr. President, Mr. will the Senator yield for a brief observation?

Mr. LUCAS. I am delighted to yield. Mr. McFARLAND. I am happy to hear the comments of the senior Senator from Illinois in regard to our distinguished colleague.

Mr. President, with the utmost regret I realize that when we reconvene next January 3, we shall not have with us one of our most able and respected Members, who has highly distinguished himself while in the Senate.

He has stood unswervingly for the rights and welfare of the mass of our people: he has fought for the purity of our governmental processes and of the practices of politics. The act which bears his name was his major tangible effort to foster and assure fair and honest elections. He has established an enviable reputation as a student and practitioner of the constitutional operations of government.

It has been my pleasure to serve with him on the floor, in committees, and elsewhere. I have observed him under the wide variety of acid tests which bring out the true character, spirit, and honor of a man. I know from personal knowledge of his ability, his energy, his continuing desire to be helpful, and his willingness to understand and to work with

He has elsewhere distinguished himself as assistant attorney general of his State, as collector of internal revenue, and as district judge. His proved ability as lawyer and jurist has been repeatedly recognized by all who worked with him, whether members of the bench, bar, or laitv.

Mr. President, I shall miss my close friend and colleague from my neighboring State, the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH].

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I very sincerely join with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas] and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. McFarland] in his remarks commending the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] for the exceptional and outstanding service he has rendered as ranking member of the minority group on the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

As chairman of the committee I wish to state that it has been a very pleasant and memorable experience to serve with the distinguished senior Senator from New Mexico. I can say the same about each member of this committee. Not once do I recall that personal or partisan matters were permitted to mar the hearings or discussions of the committee. The Senator, Mr. HATCH, is voluntarily not a candidate for reelection, a rather unusual situation, especially with one in his physical and mental prime, as is the case with the distinguished Senator.

Mr. President, each member of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs joins with me, as I am sure do all other Members of the Senate, in expressing our appreciation of his friendly association and cooperation in the work of this great legislative body. Mr. President, likewise, we all join in wishing him health and happiness on through the many years of useful service we see ahead for him.

ILLINOIS POSTMASTERS—PERSONAL STATEMENT

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, these are the closing hours of this Republican-controlled Congress, which has distinguished itself, not only by its inept handling of its heavy legislative responsibilities, but also by its shabby and insolent treatment of individuals who have had the misfortune to become the subject of its abuse.

It is most distasteful to me to be forced to reply to vicious and malicious charges made by one of the less eminent Members of this body on the floor of the Senate in the early hours of this day. Yet, I cannot under any circumstances permit the record to stand as the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Langer] has left it. In order to justify and defend his dictatorial and partisan handling of postmasters' nominations in the State of Illinois, the senior Senator from North Dakota saw fit to attack me through the members of my family. How characteristic the action, and how typical the reaction.

The chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service has seen fit, after his committee reported the nominations in question, to take it upon himself to hold up these nominations in defiance of the will of his committee.

Mr. President, I seriously contend that the time has arrived when a rule must be adopted in the United States Senate making it mandatory that any clerk of any committee report to the Senate the favorable action of that committee upon any bill, resolution, or appointment, and that there should be a penalty on the clerk for failure to do so, thereby enjoining dictatorial and totalitarian methods of chairmen of committees who have no regard for proper and orderly procedure.

Mr. President, because I would not stoop to the tactics used by the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, I followed parliamentary procedure and filed resolutions for the purpose of discharging the committee from the further consideration of some 40 nomination; 28 of them being veterans of World War I and World War II, hoping to achieve by regular and parliamentary procedure what the committee had tried to accomplish and failed because of the pocket veto of the chairman of the committee.

It is apparent, Mr. President, that this parliamentary procedure antagonized the Senator from North Dakota when he was confronted with the necessity of obeying the rules of the Senate instead of following his own rules. The Senator from North Dakota descended to a cheap, partisan, low, and personal attack on two members of my family who had been appointed postmasters in Illinois in 1943 and 1946 and duly confirmed by the Senate.

He charges in one of the statements, "dirty politics in the appointment of postmasters in Illinois," thereby, through innuendo, condemning the Senator from Illinois and defaming the good name of that great State. If I were the Senator from North Dakota, I believe I would be the last man in the Senate to talk about dirty politics anywhere, at any time.

The Senator from North Dakota chose not to discuss the nominations of the veterans from whom he is withholding employment, and whose cause is the point at issue. He did not mention one disabled veteran after another who had placed as No. 1 on the eligible register, and are still waiting for an opportunity to serve their communities. But, in order to throw up a smoke screen and in order to make a personal attack on me, the Senator went back into history for the subject of his challenge.

Mr. President, I recall Senate Resolu-tion 81, under which the Senator from North Dakota got $35,000 to make an investigation as to political activities in civil service; to determine whether any postmasters, under threat of losing their positions, were forced to contribute to political funds: whether there was any attempt to compel civil-service employees to violate the Hatch Act; but I never understood that the spirit or the letter of that resolution permitted the Senator from North Dakota to send his political, partisan, prejudicial snoopers to investigate members of the family of a United States Senator serving in the same body with him. I never realized that the Sen-ator from North Dakota was setting up a little gestapo to spy and snoop on cases that were settled long before the Republicans came into power.

In his discussion of my brother-in-law and brother, respectively holding post offices in Illinois, he made many queer, unsupported, and outrageous statements.

In connection with the appointment of Hardy E. Altig as postmaster at Cullom. Ill., the chairman stated flatly that he tried to get the files but could not get them; then he proceeded to quote facts and figures, and grades which, from his own admission, must have been made up from some other source than the official files on the case. He made specific charges of upgrading and downgrading of applicants at Cullom, and quoted numerical ratings in his harangue, and, yet, from his own admission, he was unable to obtain any files on this case from the Civil Service Commission and the Post Office Department, and the query is-How did the political snoopers of Senator Langer get this information? Where did it come from? I have my own ideas. Mr. President.

But, this so-called upgrading and downgrading is an amazing and amusing thing. The records of the Cullom post office show that the Commission certified an eligible register from an examination held February 15, 1941. The register shows that Jerome W. Kiley had 80.63; LaVern Floyd Haag had 78.75; J. Virgil Fraher, 78.13; Sylvester J. Kiley was given a rating of 77.38; H. E. Altig, present postmaster, had a grade of 76.25; Grover C. Stucker, veteran, had a grade of 75.

In other words, when the list was established, there were four applicants with a higher grade than Mr. Altig. Is it not a rather strange phenomenon that if someone manipulated the rating of Mr. Altig, as the Senator from North Dakota would want the Senate to believe, that manipulator would place Mr. Altig fifth on the eligible register when, under the law, only the first three on the eligible register are within reach for appointment? The so-called manipulators were certainly poor manipulators if they could not get Mr. Altig above the fifth spot on the register.

But, Mr. President, this is all tommyrot, balderdash, and utterly without any foundation. Today I communicated with the Civil Service Commission, and they advised me that Mr. Altig was rated 80 on experience and was rated 72.50 on the written examination. These two ratings, added together, gave him a gross rating of 152.50, which when divided by two gave him a final rating of 76.25. This was the original, the final, and the only rating ever given him by the Civil Service Commission. The Commission advised that there was absolutely no juggling of his rating. It was never changed from beginning to end. Mr. President, I am sure that the majority of the United States Senate believe the word of the Civil Service Commission on this so-called fantastic juggling of ratings as disclosed by the Senator from North Dakota. It appears that the snoopers of the Civil Service Committee were the real jugglers in this case.

The Senator from North Dakota stated that while Mr. Altig was upgraded, the Commission downgraded the veteran, Mr. Stucker, 10 points. I checked that also, and this is what the Civil Service Commission said: Mr. Stucker received a grade of 70 on the written examination. and a grade of 70 on experience. These, added together, gave him a gross rating of 140, which, when divided by two, gave him a general average of 70, barely a passing grade. However, his 5 points for veteran's preference brought him up to 75. They state emphatically that there never was any attempt to downgrade him; 75 was his first, final, and only rating. Again, Mr. President, can it be the snoopers of the Civil Service Committee who are doing the juggling?

It may be interesting to know how Mr. Altig became postmaster, since he was fifth on the list. The facts are these: Sylvester J. Kiley, the postmaster, was disqualified after a long investigation by the Civil Service Commission; Mr. Haag went into the military service, and Mr. Fraher withdrew, placing Mr. Altig sec-ond on the list. Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois was very, very happy to appoint his brother-in-law; but he was appointed honestly; he was appointed fairly, notwithstanding the inferences and the innuendoes of the Senator from North Dakota to the contrary. Of course, I am sure that the Senator from North Dakota has never at any time shown the slightest partiality in the selection of members of his family for a political appointment under any political office that he has held throughout his stormy political career.

Mr. President, let us see what kind of a postmaster Mr. Altig has been, in view of the scurrilous and scandalous statements made about a man whom the Senator from North Dakota does not even know.

On March 20, 1945, the Post Office Department rated Mr. Hardy E. Altig 84.4. In July 1946, they gave him a rating of 94.5. On the last inspection of his office, he was rated 98. That was on May 19, 1948. He has shown consistent improvement, and all of the inspector's reports show that he is an excellent postmaster, giving satisfactory service. There have been no complaints from the patrons of the office. The only complaints—political, prejudicial, partisan, captious, and cheap—come from the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. President, in discussing the appointment of a postmaster at Abingdon, where my brother, Dr. J. Wiley Lucas, serves, the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service resorted to the worst kind of double-talk and trickery in order to confuse United States Senators. I quote him as follows:

Now we come to another post office in the town of Abingdon, Ill. The postmaster is J. Wiley Lucas, I believe his name is. In this case, an examination for postmaster, second-class office, was held in December 1944. There being no eligible, a second examination was held in March 1946. Only one eligible was secured, the acting postmaster, with a rating of 81.70, including 10 points for being a veteran's widow. She was appointed in that town, which was not Abingdon; but in Abingdon an examination for postmaster, second-class office, was held in August 1945.

In that language of utter confusion and chaos, the Senator from North Dakota left the impression that somehow a veteran's widow had been mistreated in this case. Mr. President, no examination for postmaster at Abingdon was held in December 1944. No veteran's widow ever took an examination at that time in Abingdon for postmaster. In the examination for postmaster at Abingdon in August of 1945, no veteran's widow made application for the position, and no failure on the part of my brother to pass the examination appears in any of the official documents in my files on this case. The Senator from North Dakota indirectly charged in his speech this morning that Dr. Lucas' grades were rerated. I called the Civil Service Commission on that matter, and this is what they told me: Dr. Lucas took a civil-service examination on August 23, 1945. It was the only examination he was ever given. He made grade of 70.23, which was passing. That was the only rating and the final rating he was assigned, and it was never changed upwards or downwards. Let me give a few more facts: In 1939, I recom-mended to the Post Office Department that Arthur L. Knable, who had been serving as postmaster there, be reappointed when his term expired. Mr. Knable continued to serve until the time of his death in 1945.

After Knable's death, Dr. J. Wiley Lucas was installed as acting postmaster at Abingdon on April 1, 1945. On August 23, 1945, the Civil Service Commission held an examination, and Dr. Lucas was the only applicant who had filed and who took the examination. On February 12, 1946, the Civil Service Commission certified Dr. Lucas as the only eligible for that position, and he was appointed permanent postmaster at Abingdon.

Since the Senator from North Dakota insulted the intelligence of my good brother, I think the record should show the ratings assigned to Dr. Lucas by the post-office inspectors since the beginning of his service as postmaster in Abingdon:

His ratings have shown consistent improvement, and all of the inspector's reports indicate that he is a good postmaster, conversant with his duties, and pleasing to the public. There have been no complaints whatever about his services as postmaster.

Mr. President, Mr. Altig and Dr. Lucas are honorable men. They are honest men. There are no ugly scars on their records. They are efficient postmasters. They are a credit to the communities in which they reside.

They have not been hurt by this attack, because they are guilty of nothing for which they could be attacked. But let me remind the Senator from North Dakota of the wise old adage that he who lives in a glass house should not throw stones.

Mr. President, let us get back to the postmaster nominations the Senate should be discussing—the postmaster nominations that should be on the calendar now, instead of in the pocket of the Senator from North Dakota. These are the ones certain Senators do not want to talk about, because it does not make a very pretty picture.

I realize that the matter I discuss is only one small defect among the mass of faults which comprise the record by which this Republican Congress will be known—a record on domestic issues that is so clumsy and reactionary that it would be ludicrous, were it not for the fact that it dealt with critical national problems, the solution of which are indispensable to a successful foreign policy.

It is indeed tragic that among those who have suffered at the hands of the Eightieth Congress is a group of American citizens, the majority of them veterans or their widows, who have done nothing to deserve the ill-treatment they have received. They have engaged in no activities for which they could be called on the carpet and persecuted for political reasons, as was Howard Hughes. There is nothing in their records which would justify their being dragged before the Un-American Activities Committee. No; their exposure to the misuse this Republican Congress is capable of applying to individuals is indeed an anomaly, for it came about because of their sincere desire to serve their Government. One and all, they aspired to become employees of the Government, and, what is more, they proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that they were fully qualified and competent to discharge the duties sought. The only crime of these good American citizens, who are conscientious, useful members of their communities, hundreds of miles from the whirlpool of Washington politics, is that they wanted to become postmasters under a Democratic administration.

I say to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, I heard the colloquy on the floor this afternoon, learning what happened to good men in the Senator's State.

Many of these unfortunate citizens of my State, and of other States, have had prior service with the Government-in But let it be said they had no such difficulties in getting into uniform as they are now experiencing in going to work for Uncle Sam as civilians. One applicant after another, wounded and disabled in fighting for the Stars and Stripes, fighting for freedom and independence, fighting for the continuation of a free and untrammeled Senate, finds his rights as a free American citizen jeopardized, and even nullified, by the dictatorial and totalitarian methods of the Republican chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. STEWART. Will it be the purpose of the Senator to press his motion tonight to discharge the committee, which motion was filed last night?

Mr. LUCAS. I may say to my able friend, I do not know what the parliamentary situation is. I doubt that it could be done tonight. There has not been another legislative day or another executive session since I filed the motion to discharge, and unless it is done by unanimous consent, I doubt that it could be done, if we adjourn tonight.

Others in this group have been serving the Government as civil-service employees, and the question now is whether or not they are to be promoted in the service. All of them have met the high standards set by the Federal Government as prerequisites for entering its service. They have taken and passed examinations, and in this open competition many of them have proved themselves better qualified than all other applicants by placing first on the eligible register.

But, strange as it may seem, all this has been ignored by the Republican-controlled Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service which theoretically is the guardian of civil service, and protector of the merit system. What a travesty on justice. What a mockery of civil service under the leadership of the Senator from North Dakota.

Stranger still, this action has been taken after the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service conducted an investigation through its own highly paid and partisan employees into the lives, the records, and the qualifications of these nominees I am discussing. Mr. President, this is the first time in the history of the Congress that a committee handling nominations of this type has sent out its own private snoopers, and acted on their partisan, prejudiced recommendations, rather than on the recommendations of the Civil Service Commendations of the Civil Service Commission and of the citizens of the communities in which the applicants reside. But, despite this political witch hunt, the committee itself says it can find nothing wrong with the background, the education, the patriotism, or the ability of more than 40 Illinois men and women whose economic future it would like to destroy, solely for political pelf and gain. Shame on you, my Republican brethren,

What can be the reason for this unconventional action on the part of a committee whose duty it is to see to it that the Federal Government obtains the very best in the way of personnel? Thereby hangs a tale. I have been informed, and on the reliable authority of the membership of the committee, that at a meeting some days ago these postmaster nominations were reported out by vote of the committee. What happened after that is obscure. The nominations failed to appear on the Senate Calendar. I made inquiry and ran into a maze of political chicanery which would challenge the ingenuity of even the best investigators of this notoriously famous investigating Congress. Out of the labyrinth through which the nominations have traveled since the committee action, I have been able to trace only a few definite paths. I am told that subsequent to the committee action of which I have spoken, the committee met again and voted to report out all postmaster nominations to which no objection has been made. Up to that point I had been able to ascertain definitely that no objection had been made to the postmaster nominees of whom I speak. No objection, that is, from their communities, or from the committee itself.

Casting about for what possible objections could prevent these patriotic and splendid Illinoisans from having their nominations placed on the Executive Calendar, I asked my colleague from Illinois [Mr. Brooks] on the floor of the Senate if he had objected. His reply was, "I do not know who they are and to that extent I have not approved them."

Mr. President, I had every reason to believe that all of these applicants for postmaster jobs would be confirmed when they were passed by the committee. Senator Johnston of South Carolina, a member of the committee, called and gave me the names of those that had been favorably reported. Obviously, I was very happy. Later when these applicants failed to reach the Executive Calendar I again interviewed Senator JOHNSTON of South Carolina to determine what was wrong. He advised me that Senator Langer told him that Senator Brooks, of Illinois, was objecting. I did, however, take the matter up with Senator Langer and the statement of Senator Johnston was corroborated by him. However, on the next evening the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service completely reversed himself and took the full and complete responsibility for their failure to be reported from the committee.

I should like to ask my friend from South Carolina whether the statement I made is true and correct.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. The statement is entirely correct.

Mr. LUCAS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I sincerely hope that from the eligible lists of the departments and information spread upon the records about these applicants that my colleague will join me in protesting the obvious discrimination being practiced against our Illinois veterans and comrades by the chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I shall be glad to yield to my friend.
